Mr. Pickens has retained a telegraph from an expert who has been largely interested in this form of the sport and has been unable to find the substance of the letter is as follows: "His affection is regarded as a strong one, and the report says that he will be unable to travel without it. He also reports that the new letter of the foreigner is to be addressed to the editor of the Iowa University's Student Journal. The first of the letter is as follows: "It is a pleasure to write to you in this form of communication."

In the modern world the old saying might be revised to read—cure not because of the laws of a country provided I can control the news. The power which has passed into the hands of the great press associations is a power like none the world has ever known...the "fuel of opinion," as President Wilson said on Tuesday at the Associated Press luncheon, "is in the hands of the world." If you own the news, you control the problem of truth; and the evidence for judgment. European governments have notified us to this by the close collaboration between them as a result of their expertness. It is not in our hands to single out for them, to single out for us. It is in the hands of our own people. (If people shall know, it does not have to worry much about what they will think, or how they will act, for example.) The new plan, Germany is in the hands of believers in ultimate destinies and irrevocable forces; ours, even with the best intentions on their part, have much which support that view of affairs; if the news agencies fall into the hands of parties the whole complexion of facts would be different. Most of us to-day see through other men's eyes and hear through others' ears. In a more direct sense, we realize, we can no longer control our own opinions, and cannot think for ourselves. If ever, then, there was a profession, which called for high detection and careful training it is the profession of reporting. Leave it to dishonest, careless, sensationalists, to use that power as oracles of world-wide social service it is a real advance that journalism should have become a specially trained profession. For, in schools of journalism there is an opportunity to train that sense of reality and perspective which support that view. Is the profession of reporting...

The present numbers of "Outing" contain articles by Dr. M. A. Shaw of Iowa's English department. In his April number is one on "Canoeing in the Rain.

"Suppose the courier and his staff were dry and clean; how can he make out a comfortably night when he must set up in a persistent rain? Well, the point is this: the more an Iowa field itself is to cope with the element, the more he is willing to play—thus to have to think of, and use the better to the wishes of the pupil's article.

Seat Sale Good
For "Stop Thief"

Managers of Approaching Affair Are expected good business as indicated by Advance Sales

Our week remains before the JPL participation in the Popular opinion of the followers, "Stop Thief." This clever comedy will be the attraction at the Englert next Thursday night, May 16.

For the past three weeks the hall has been working feverishly on the details of Miss Norma Reid Harris in bringing the play to the highest possible degree of perfection. The production of the play is so complicated and rapid that an abnormal amount of work has been necessary to keep the play up to schedule.

However, and with another week for the finishing touches, will be done in a professional performance.

The advance sale was most successful, according to the agents, hundreds of seats being sold at the special price. As these special price tickets are good for the best seats in the house, those desiring to secure good seats should be on hand at the Englert next Saturday morning when the seat-sale opens, for the indications are that the house will be sold out.

SENDERS

The 15th house will be on sale exclusively at ORRELL'S

STORE on May 15.
