KILMANGE URGES SAVING OF TOWNS

SAYS THEY ARE LOSING TRADE TO CATALOGUE HOUSES.

Speaking at Dubuque, Extension Director Declares Towns and Country Must Unite.

Dubuque, Ia., Sept. 21.-"Have the small towns and you can solve the problem of keeping the people on the farm," D. E. Kilman, director of the extension division of the University of Iowa, told the Iowa Farmers' Association at the Kilman's home here last afternoon. He was the first speaker of the six university professors who are addressing small-town audiences, giving them a short course in retailing with their correspondence course.

The small towns are in a bad way, Mr. Kilman said. Competition is destroying them and they are failing to meet the needs of their communities by making themselves centers of the rural life. They need real business leaders to carry on an exchange of ideas between the people of the country and the people of the towns.

There are two very important problems persisting in Iowa, for example," the university expert declared. "One is the problem of keeping the people on the farm; the other is to save the small towns. Both problems can be solved through the exchange of the small town.

"If a man owns the land and the business conditions in small towns in Iowa, it would undoubtedly be true that the volume of business now be-ting transacted in these towns is not so great as it was at some time in the past. This is because some of the larger businesses have been diverted to other channels and the increased consumption of goods per capita has been widely diverted to other channels.

"It may be that the amount of trade that is diverted still remains in Iowa, and has passed from one town to another, or it may be that this trade has passed from one town to another, or it may be that this trade has passed from one town to another. It is not at all a difficult task to make this trade pass from one town to another, or it may be that this trade has passed from one town to another. It is not at all a difficult task to make this trade pass from one town to another.

ting transacted in these towns is not so great as it was at some time in the past. This is because some of the larger businesses have been diverted to other channels and the increased consump-

FIRST INJURY HITS HAWKEYE PROSPECTS

Hawkeye Makes Second Drill Grad of New Work, See Fifty Candidates

The "first" named in annual prospectus of the Hawkeyes' eleven yesterday afternoon, when Bannick, one of the likely backfield candidates, was wrecked with a bad, badly-wrenched shoulder. He will be out of the game for several days.

Bannick received the injury when he fell heavily on his shoulder, during the period that Hawley had the ball in practice falling on the ball. It was the first injury of the year.

Coach Hawley continued his driving tactics yesterday. He worked his charges until dark and kept them going at a fast pace throughout the practices. Blocking and painting was on the program most of the afternoon, followed by a short talk on the gymnastics. The coach then sent the men to the taking-dummies. He followed this up by having the backs at the backfield strip, while the line-men attended the charging machine.

Marcella Backs.

Hawley used three sets of backs: McKew, Gross, Garrity and Long comprised the first string: Inge, Meindl, Zastrow and Will made up the second; and Barber, Hindi, McPherson and F. F. Smith formed the third. Hawley also gave the men the first set of plays to work out. He finished the day's work with a shift strength drill, three elevens being utilized in the latter part of the day.

The coach shifted his line-men repeatedly during the afternoon's work-out. On the varsity squad he used Wyland at center Bowdrey and Whalen at guard. Jepson and Barlow at tackles and a long series of ends. The backs are giving the coach his chief worry. During the first two days' practice Hawley has used a large number of line-men in an effort to see which two men who can fill capably the vacancy left by Curtis and Gunnersen. McElhaney forward full back of last year, has displayed considerable promise for one of the end positions.

City high school. He tore into the backfield strip with great force and his all-around work thus far seems to promise him a place in the Hawkeye backfield. In addition, he appears to be the only printer that Coach Hawley can rely upon. As a kicker he looks as good as Joe Carterhey, who did the kicking last year.

These were more than fifty men.
