HORACK'S CLASS SURVEYS CITY

"there is to be held at the campus on the day before Wednesday. Professor H. H. Horack's class in political science is making a survey of Iowa City. Following an experiment prepared by Professor Horack, two students are assigned to visit each section of the city. A thorough work has been done. The professor was to prepare a list of the topics for the survey, and the students were to make the actual visitation. The survey was to be repeated every six months, and the results were to be reported to the professor and the city council.

The survey is to be conducted by two students, and the list of topics was to be prepared by the professor. The students were to visit each section of the city and collect data on various aspects of the city's social and economic life. The topics included education, housing, employment, and health. The survey was to be repeated every six months, and the results were to be reported to the professor and the city council.

THE LAST LAP

The last lap of the present school year has almost been reached. For some it is the last lap of their college days. Those are looking from the horizon with strained eyes. Some are crying in despair and wishing their college course had lasted in flawless. Others are wishing that they knew when they were freshmen what they know now.

But regardless of these things, this last lap is before us. We are, to a certain degree, starting over again. We are crowded department by remodeling and, in a certain degree, we can make the future, what we will. At the serious risk of appearing dated, or even sentimental, we would suggest that, in making this future of the next few months, we make it a happy future. "It is a time to forget the disagreeable part of the past, to forget the petty "impossibles," and to forge a better future. To reach a higher vision of life and its responsibilities, to work out a better training for these responsibilities and to create an atmosphere in which the conditioned by it will do—this is a working program.
