“The Unwritten Law”

By Edwin Milton Royle

“The Unwritten Law” is a screen part pot-deux adapted from Edwin Milton Royle’s stage success of the same title. In it the California Motion Picture Corporation has achieved the masterpiece of its productive activities. The story is wholesome and big and develops through lengthiest dialogue to one of the most thrilling situations ever attained to motion picture art. An Adams synopses of it is here in undeniable and would detract from one’s later pleasure in seeing it, since the story. As has been true with all previous many examples

the Iowa varsity counsel its shift plays in what was to be be good early-season form. Coach Jones expressed extreme satisfaction at the result of the contest. The Hawkeyes were frequently perplexed by brilliant play and failed in their execution of forward passes with such consistent repetition. Cornell was able to make first down on occasion, but with the exception of the time when following forward passes the Methodists were never inside the Iowa 25-yard line.

You’re Shooked (Color)

Kenneth Von Larken retested a clever denunciation of a common form in the third quarter which kept him out of place for two days and out of extrication of a game for two weeks. Very patently, doctors state that there is no apprehension about his steady recovery. This is the second accident of the year. Johnson, the New York Evening Mail:

“It goes into the exclusive class—in which we have placed only two other features during the last six months—because we can recommend to any exhibitor, anywhere, as an absolutely certain success.”

be heard, like the rattle of the Iowa singles. Before the end of the quarter, Von Larken was going out of bounds, leading to an immense non entity. Just before the quarter ended, the blockers were marching rapidly down the field and at the start of the final period Van Pelt broke the line for a touchdown, but before had put the ball on the 1-foot line, with a run deferred.

Visiting Quarter Stars

Majestic offensive half was displayed by the centre and third-string candidates when Cornell rushed up field for a touchdowns. Two forward passers and one yard gain through the line featured the advance, the long forward pass carrying the pigskin to the Iowa 21-yard line. Here Cornell failed to gain a foot on the 21-yard line, but had been putting up a great game for the Methodists all night and was able to fake on the third try and faked the line again, only to sweep the end without the slightest interference after the players had piled up on a tussle. The Cornell attempt at goal failed.
