SAME OLD STORY.

The season will be seen at hand when the last of the men. The season of surface run-off, the city water supply will again have to be branded. The conditions which the average student knows to be injurious are improvable. If this is not improved, and the situation is not improved, it will be impossible to awaken the city council from its lethargy on the matter. Unless the student acts, things happen as well to give up hope of any re- peal of the law.

There is one thing that the student can do. He can be vaccinated for typhus. It will be done at the University hospital for a comparatively small charge, and with the assurance of the effectiveness of this preventive method. A small charge is a trifling price to pay for the preservation of human life.

ADVICE FOR HEALTH IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Medical Men Point Out Ways For Bettering the Health of Children

After an extended health survey of the public schools of Wapello by a group of experts from the University under the direction of the college of medicine, the following general recommendations and suggestions were made. Dr. M. P. Floyd, state epidemiologist, who directed the survey declares that many of the conditions observed at Wapello can be found in the Iowa schools and that the recommendations have a state-wide application.

Give each child a thorough physical and mental examination at the children’s entrance to school. Where children are found to be subnormal or backward, school authorities should stimulate the parents’ pride and love for their child so that proper measure are voluntarily taken to restore the child as nearly as possible to normal.

Where the parents of a defective child are willing but unable to provide for the correction of injuries detected, they should be directed to agencies where the necessary corrections may be made. The community should create an agency whereby the necessary work may be done.

Carefully supervise the daily health of the children, viewed in the light of community standards, in order to prevent the introduction of individuals having communicable diseases into the schools and to prevent the schools from becoming a center for the dissemination of such diseases.

Repeat the thorough physical and mental examination at least every four years during the child’s progress through the schools.

Give special attention and study to those proceeding defects in order that the school work may be especially adapted to their capabilities and needs.

Provide anything about the school buildings, grounds or methods of instruction from exercising an injurious influence upon the health of the children congregated therein.

Give the children adequate and proper instruction in the fundamentals of both individual and community health.

PROF. ERNEST HORN
SAYS "STUDY LABOR"

Authority in Education Thinks Study of Industrial Processes Should Receive More Attention.

A study of the principal industrial processes and related problems should receive more emphasis in the public schools of America than it does now, in the opinion of Prof. Ernest Horn, professor of education. This theory will be put into practice in an experimental school at Stor­ borough, N. Y., next year, for then this study of industries will be the front of such subjects as geography, civics, and manual training.

This will mean for the individual, boy or girl, a beginning in the study of industrial processes during the first year in school and a continu­ ation of this study during the entire elementary and high school course.

Both boys and girls will pursue the same subjects until the fifth or sixth grades, but the girls will study more particularly the domestic arts.

The scope of this education will be much wider than that of the training in manual arts as it exists today.

Less stress will be laid on the use of the hammer, the chisel, and the saw. It will be made almost entirely neglected up to this time. Not more than one out of four of the trades that is pertinent emphasized today, Professor Horn points out, which means minimized training.

The central purpose in this new education will be to make trained industrial arts men or carpenters; it is rather to give the pupil a general industrial insight. Emphasis will be placed upon making the child intelligent with regard to the work of others instead of making him a mere cog in the machine.

PROFESSOR KING SEES CAUSE OF INFIRMITY

University AuthorityBelieves Many Physical Defects and Diseases Are Due to Diet and Posture.

A surprisingly large part of the physical defects and diseases among the people of Iowa, and among Amer­ icans in general, can be traced direct­ ly or indirectly to two causes: poor diet and defective posture, according to Prof. Irving King of the depart­ ment of education, who has made a special study of the subject of pos­ iture with special reference to school children.

Dwight Favor Bad Posture

Very few people stand, sit, walk, or even lie in bed in the proper posi­ tion, Dr. King declares. This is true of school children, business men, professional men, farmers, day labor­ ers, and, in fact, practically every­ one of us.

The evil is enormous and especially menacing in the public schools, where little or no at­ tendance is given to the figure of pos­ ture. Nearly all occupations of both child and adult have a tendency to produce postural defects.

The gardener's work is such as to develop the right side of the body, by bending over the ditch cultivates a contracted chest; the porter, by car­ rying the mail packet in one shoulder, produces a curvature of the spine; the automobile by chopping forward, in the seat develops a rounded back and a contracted chest; school children by carrying books on their hips or down the sides of their chairs, develop a curvature; the teacher, by standing, or using a very weak posture, during the day. Many home conditions, as well as a"
