Mamma Urges Students to Give Freely

Washington, D. C., November 10, 1917

To the Students of the Iowa State University:

One more voice has been brought to this lamentable crowd. I warn you that this is only the beginning. Once more the student of old gold will give to those who give, to those who give by the will of the people, and in the name of the people. We are working to keep the American culture alive, and we are working to keep the American culture alive.

The College World

The ratio of women to men students at the University of Kansas this year is three to one, whereas last year the men outnumbered the women two to one.

The Patriotic League of the University of Nebraska has decided to send Christmas to every soldier who has gone from the university.

The libraries at Kansas no longer have to do careful parent work to keep the students from talking. The students' attitudes is consistently business-like and earnest. The work of the libraries is comparatively light because of the decrease in the number of students.

The abolition of entrance fees is now being considered at the university of Texas. Should favorable aspects be taken on this proposition, students will no longer be required to pay matriculation fees, laboratory fees, etc., but only library and other refundable fees, thereby saving from $3 to forty-five dollars a semester per student.

We saw him the other evening when the classes were over for the day, taking a walk in the square of Kansas, in the quiet of the evening. He walked with a pride and a sense of purpose. He seemed to be enjoying his walk alone. He didn't have that tired look that we had noted on his face the other evening as he dragged himself home. He didn't have the attitude of irresponsibility at times. He told us that he was going to buy him a little drink because of the decrease in the number of students.

A course in knitting for women is being offered by the extension division of the University of California. The reason for this course is to take the place of men forced to leave the business field for the battle.

FRESHMAN MEETING

Grimmell Faculty Man Says That Present Day Education Has Failings.

Being thrust into an entirely strange environment with memory of every college diploma and a crying necessity of earning his own living with no means, the man was the bewildering experience of which Prof. C. F. Lavell of Grinnell college told in a talk Tuesday night before the Philosophical club in the literal sort drawing room.

During his three years' term of service from 1913 to 1916, Dr. Lavell stayed his earning as an unemployed laborer in and about Colorado Springs.

In his handling of the idea from one to another and handling the employment services, he became convicited of the inability of a present-day education to help a man earn his living. Although the course of philosophy at the Grinnell college was designed to fit his needs.

While in this state, "the man who has walked," as Lavell has been called, had an unusual opportunity to study at first hand and from a first-hand source, the sort of man that had not found his place in the world, being knocked about, living for the day only, lacking a few cents, and rolling in wealth with, "six in six.

The whole philosophy was expressed by one of his fellow non-students who, at the prospect of being paid $25 which was coming to him, remarked that "he was going to buy him a little knock in town and a meal ticket and then wait for an attractive proposition to turn up."

He himself held to this point of view at times. He told of one experience when, with only a dollar between him and starvation, he spent ten cents for a fashionable concoction called a "Toppy Bag." Again and again when his job came to an end and he had about $19.00 in his pocket, he would "lay up" for a while, get an arsenal of books from the library, and live in contentment until his money gave out.

In the diary which he kept at that time, Dr. Lavell tells of one of his co-searchers for work, who, being without a coat and an overcoat, went out with a sick wife to care for, had come to the point of desperation. At the time, Dr. Lavell had a dime in his pocket and afterwards expected heavily that he had not "split it," for, a nickel would have at least bought the hungry day three rolls and a cup of coffee.

As a conclusion drawn from personal contact with these fellows, these men at "the bottom of the social trap," Dr. Lavell stated that he firmly believed that an equal and real man must aim at the point of view of the demi-end-forer. He also vituperated the present educational system which gives mainly information and fails utterly to develop initiative, the ability to make quick decisions, and the utmost utility and efficiency.

Before his lapse of memory Dr. Lavell was a professor of philosophy at Grinnell.
