LETTERS FROM OUR SOLDIERS

Captain Wright, University of Iowa.

Dear Captain Wright:

The "Iowa" bench all seem to be in the running yet and fighting them in the death. I saw all of them yesterday when we were taking uproid innovations. Paul Rockwood agreed some time ago and breaks this regular "old timer" now. It was quite an adventure to shake hands with "Private" Rockwood. But I'm sure he won't be "private" very long. Give my best regards to all of the cadet officers of my acquaintance, and you might also inform them that if they ever expect to get condolences through the training camp route to know the I. D. paragraphs 1-851 includes absolutely certain. That's one of the minor grievances.

With best wishes for another blue regiment and the success of the military department at Iowa, I remain,

Respectfully yours,

Pvt. Louis J. Roberts

JUST SO IT'S DIFFERENT

What do you think of the system of examinations which came to our notice as practically last week? We address this query to students who are subject to the system in the schools.

The Daily Iowan is continued the more than more of times than that of students and is subject to the student. The system is a hybrid, incoherent in the extremes.

In support of our indictment we merely call up the observations which we made before Christmas when the faculty received this subject was considering the situation. A one-hour period is not long enough and it is useless to expect instructor to require preparation and attendance in the extreme.

All that we call for is a change.

The present system is almost universal in every secondary among students, we believe, and there is little possibility that any plan which might be devised could be more suited to conditions.

And if there are any faculty members who persist in thinking that The Daily Iowan is not speaking the voice of the student body, we suggest a referendum.

THREAT OF THE WAR

Contrary to all prophecy the wages and the living conditions of workers in England are better now than they were before the war. The men in the classes, which were very substantially before 1914 are now purchasing considerably more than would have been called luxuries for the middle classes herebefore. England, in the nation, has been one of the largest financial contributors to the war.

What is the outlook for this class of people in our own country? The government already has arranged to spend in the neighborhood of twenty-five billions for war purposes, which amount, according to a statement from the treasury department, is three times as great as the total amount of money in the United States treasury, oil-investment, and in general circulation. The immensity of the sum is staggering.

The men who are being enjoyed by the laboring classes in England, we believe, lies in stores for the American workers in the field, in the mines, and in the factories. The government is spending enormous sums of money and a large part of the expenditure from this source in the country. All the money in the United States will change hands in three or four times within the twenty-one billion dollar budget being spent.

In their new prosperity, however, American workers must not develop a mania for extravagance, as this class in England seem to have done. If we may believe reports, money should not be hoarded and put out of circulation, nor should it be spent for luxuries. We must learn the meaning of thrift, which is economy with wisdom in the expenditure of money.

MADE THEM SUCCESSFUL

With the abandonment of the period for recruitment, the all-university party, the last semblance of an end of course for students' failure to support the enterprise is gone. This feature was transitory to many students who preferred to attend all of the evening in dancing; it has no reflection on the quality of the freshmen or the services.

The last dance was moderately successful. It yielded a little more than enough to pay the bare expenses but the margin was not enough to cover the debt which resulted from the previous parties. But these affairs must be more than moderately successful; they must become an institution which will have an influence in uniting the student body of the University and foster the Iowa spirit.

Are you going to attend tonight?

OUR HOSPITAL

University folk are fortunate in having a hospital on the campus to care for their sick. The thought of being compelled to go to the great brick structure are not always the dressing part in the University we should be glad that we have the advantage of the hospital with its capable corps of doctors and nurses and the reassurance of the costs. The University is doing a great work for Iowa students.
