GET YOUR UNIFORM

The uniforms which were offered for alteration have been returned to the tailor. They can be picked up by full-time students at the student store in the Coliseum, by using the same key used when ordering the Inauguration and commencement specials. After all uniforms have been returned every man will be required to wear his uniform at all college functions.
ABRAM LACHMANN

In the midst of our preparations to wear our garb for those principles for which he gave his life, it is not fitting that we should pause for a moment to ask ourselves whether we are adenent, Abraham Lachmann? Today this youth will attain and understand the means of the birth of our martyred patriot.

You will not feel the guidance of this noble man, who has so aptly struck the keynote of Remembrance. It was Lachmann who said: "We will grow toward men, with charity for all, with reverence for the right as a god given to us to see the right, let us strive for it and we will find it; to bind up the Nation's wounds to care for him who has borne the battle and who is not far from his organ—so do all which may rescue and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations." Thus did Abraham Lachmann once deign foreign German author, that might Heil Germany, the peace of all nations. But the dark-set hour is before the dawn; a new day is coming. As the North Star was es-sured "We are coming, Father Abraham, your love is more than strong," so will the Union, which Lachmann preserved, answer his call, but with a far greater army, made possible by the peace and freedom which our Nation has enjoyed. It is for as living the support the Nation is maintained, by so doing we can best show our love and reverence for one of the greatest men of all time—Abraham Lachmann.

RELIGION OF THE FUTURE

The union of sight, Iowa City churches in services during the period of the fast still shows the possibilities in the way of efficiency which result from a unification of exercises. It is prophetic of a day when similar differences in religion will be swept away and it becomes the era of maximum effectiveness in things religious will be talked to us. We shall see that the advantages of such a union together of denominational lines will mean the saving of a few of useful.

Blaise Pascal, the French politician of the Christian world are uniform and universal. Man everywhere live in the same manner,2 they have the same faith, and good; these elements are eminently operable. The points which distinguish this creed, man who think they are con-venting the development of a man to a far greater degree than our fathers would have conceded; the breaks between the two remoter churches in the materials of worship, the future will reveal, be more important than anything else.

The thing we forecast here is not an event of tomorrow. It will take place after a few years, at the latest. Some experts, in some cases, to countenance Methodists and Presbyterians as more individualistic in spirit that their individual creed is not the same with that of the Church of Christ. However, the Church of Christ is not the University should be the instrument of a universal community in which the number makes it impossible to make the minors to be the dowers and then send their children to follow in their footsteps.

What does means in the university of or the colleges mean? Does it mean whether a man has acquired knowledge whether he can act solutely in matters of science and philosophy and the like, or is success measured by popularity, by office-holding, by activities. If a man belongs to a dove organization, is active in politics, is a social club and has a good face, it is assumed to be a success. He has attached his goal, but that goal has been a necessary, pleasure-brining goal rather than the goal of true virtue.
