ENLISTED MEN WILL BE SENT TO AMES
Five Hundred Soldiers To Be Trained by Engineers at State College.

Ames, April 1—Special. A dispatch received today from the war department in Washington indicates that the army will send 500 enlisted men to Iowa State college about the middle of April for special studies and technical training for the engineering division of the college. "Please rush preparations," says the telegram. "We are proceeding with enlisting men and present martial general orders that they may be ready so early as April 15 or 16." "Negotiations for this special war emergency work by the colleges have been underway for a considerable time," says Acting President E. F. Babcock. "The arrangement between the war department and the state board of education will cover a period of 6 months, although it may be renewed later. During this period we will provide all the necessary instruction and shop equipment for training these 500 men, the regular department relinquishing the college on an agreed basis. The college also undertakes to arrange for the proper housing and feeding of the men.

Facts About the World War
Prepared By The Department of History of the University

Russia and the Balkan Problem
One of Russia's most critical problems she faces now has been to find an outlet to the sea. In the early months of the war she pushed her border to the North and the White Sea only to find a harsh chain of ice for nearly half the year. Peter the Great secured the eastern Baltic only to find it is a Russian sea as later czars have found it is a German sea. The same sort of time as Russia have in vain to secure the Black Sea and the Bosphorus and harbor with their sacred blood and gold to find a way to India and the Persian Gulf. In the last years of the century the Russian ambitions in the east held the foundations of Rus- sia's war with Japan just as her re- pressed interest in the Balkans has failed to bring in on the present world war.

In her efforts to secure the Balkan routes to the sea she found with the war conflict with Great Britain, Austria, and Germany considerably. Down to the close of the eighteenth century Austria and Russia were defeated to save the coast of Galicia, Russia taking the eastern portion of Austria and Austria the lands heading her to the Baltic. From 1844 Great Britain and Austria joined hands to oppose Russian's progress southwest and in 1878, after the congress of Berlin, when Russia found herself bottled in Europe, she turned her attention to the old dream of Naxos, an inheritance of the ancient Persians.

Russia's progress to the southeast was continuous until she reached the borders of Afghanistan. This province and Persia were the only areas between the almost unbound- ed possessions of Russia in Central Asia and the Indian empire of Great Britain. From 1845 to 1878 the struggle in these provinces was con- stant. In the latter years Russia ad- mitted her failure and entered the Triple Entente by a treaty with Austria and Great Britain which left Afghanistan intact while dividing most of Persia between them.

From 1897 to 1912 the two pow- ers joined hands to crush Germany which had become a menace to southeast Asia. In 1911 Russia and Germany agreed upon a division of interests. Germany agreeing to keep out of Persia while reserving the right to exploit Asia Minor. When the war opened in 1914 England and Germany had been negotiating for two years without reaching a settlement as to the Persian Gulf and the Dardanelles.

and, while Frank advanced to third.

The Cow catcher proceeded to fill the bases by getting Beldin. Beldin drove out his second hit, and Frank and Connor scored. Von Lackum singled to left, and Mcgrath scored. Von taking second on the throw-in and hitting a third. Brown lifted a pop-up in front of the plates, but the Cow catcher failed to get his hands on it as well. The bases were now full again. Kruse was caught on an infield hit and bunting grounded to the shortstop.

Von, Cow, Fistner comes.

The third hit saw the appearance of a fresh Cow catcher, and for three innings he held the Hawkeyes in check. He drove away any score, but could only get one run to first base until the sixth inning.

In the sixth, McGrath drew another hit, and Von Lackum drove in Brown. Happen. single brought home the third run for the Cow catcher. Kruse was caught in the plate, Von Lackum drove in the second run, and Van Dunker, second to first, drove in the third. These errors, followed by a move, resulted in three runs for Coos.

Ehred, Von Lackum, and Brown made the heavy sink work for the Iowa boys, the former getting three of the four out at first.

The Cow catcher scored, and on the plate, Von Lackum; Beldin, and Brown Each of these. Three times, HIGH out, and Brown lifted a pop-up to shortstop, and the game is over. News from two pages have been received by the high school for inspection but not yet defined details have been arranged.
