WINs Three Out of Five Baseball Games in Mollis Series

Iowa showed a reversal in form with the stick yesterday and won its final game of the series from Mollis in 11 innings today. Only three runs out of five games from the Iowa team this week were more than three hours toward the victory. Pat Peters had a perfect batting average and Mollis contributed an out that almost made its way to the outfield. Peters and former captain's place in the ninth inning as best possible

KNUT HAMSEN

Next time you run in to Chicago, you should meet the president of the Illinois Agricultural Society, who doesn't seem to know that his speech on the economic structure can never be so long. He began the speech at 5:30 in the morning and even then the individuality was as fresh as the morning dew. It might, perhaps, be permissible to call him a leader of the committee.

Knut Hamsen, the famous Norwegian, recently awarded the Nobel prize for excellence in literary activity, furnishes us an outline of the emerging economic structure. In the beginning, in the place of what we call democracy, a certain group of people that we call the people. He came over to this country, and found he was not on a level with the very important economic position. Assumptions: larger and heavier businessmen. He was told he was a German. He was fired from his position as a conductor on a railroad street car in Chicago because of his efficiency. To the casual observer, the government person who interprets superficial activities and makes his judgments from them, Knut Hamsen was worthless, a failure, a sort of I. W. W. But as a matter of fact he was reading, had been reading, and never let up reading and digesting what he read. His food was Emancipation Emancipation, every sort of worth while mental food. If he did not know whether the street car was northbound or southbound, it was because he existed in a world wherein bureaucratic structure was unimportant. They are not important to most of us, and never will be. But Knut Hamsen saw his mission and fought for his principles, determined that way that true leaders have, all didn't come to himself with all the modern implementa of our somewhat sheltered life.

There are many otherwise nice and agreeable persons who are prone to cast aside the existence of other nations because they may shatter a comically pure grandeur of peace, because their ideas are above the common kindergarten and anything they do and act with a sense of individual discrimination. We may better give the sort of wisdom that we have learned from the Knut Hamsen of the world and before we begin to go on the road of romanticism, ask we have before us the material for our nation.

NATIONAL MEET IS LATEST DOPE

Intercollegiate Track Tournament To be held in Chicago Saturday, June 18

A National intercollegiate track meet, in which every college athlete in the United States who is a good scholar standing will be eligible to compete, will be held in Chicago, June 18. Three places for entries were considered by the committee, of which Coach Tom Jones of the University of Wisconsin and Coach John Griffith of the University of Chicago are members and of which Coach A. A. Stagg of the University of Chicago is chairman.

The two propositions which were discussed were to allow point winners in the big sectional meets, and set the big Ten conference, the Missouri Valley conference, the I. C. A. A. A. in the East, and the Pacific Guest conference to enter and to allow only the first three from the point total of each sectional meet to compete.

Neither of these two plans was approved by the committee because it excluded stars of small colleges not meeting heavily in the team totals, or not even competing in sectional meets, from entering in the National event. All freshman athletes will be ineligible for this meet.

Many coaches of both large and small schools throughout the country are interested in the meet and it is sufficient number of schools enter the meet that should make it a success.

A shirt that is well worth $2.00, but in order to introduce this new lot we will put them on sale for Saturday at—
