THE BAND CONCERT (Continued)

The University Band, under the sole leadership of Dr. E. J. Van Dorsey, gave the second and last of its special indoor concerts. The attractive audience which comfortably filled the Natural Science Auditorium on Sunday afternoon. Prompt at 4 o'clock the program opened with Arthur Pryor's march, "Heart of America," which naturally enough had most of the same Spirit which characterized Sousa's marches.

The hour and a half of music was very well planned and effectively played. The Courts of Appeal, which the band has already presented to the public, is now nearing its end. This is the band's final appearance for the present season, and they are actually making the best of the weather, as they have been compiling their next program for electric spotlights and effective use.

"Successful Calamity" requires a cast of twelve, and offers a number of parts that may be readily appealing to the actor's term. The possibilities with regard to this are very promising to the members of the class to impress a successful production.

In the matter of senior play tryouts, the chairmen have turned out to be the proverbial group, glitter and no more. As a matter of fact it appears that the question of a senior play is neither a success nor a failure as there is still a chance that the students will have the opportunity to see some of the different parts in the first part of the March in the Tourneau, one could look into the distance and almost see the marching bands behind the drums and trumpets. There was also a splendid number of popular numbers played. The hit among several excellent selections was the rendition of Miss Moore's "Lullaby of the Yesterday," with Arthur Pryor's march, "Heart of America," which has much of the same spirit which characterized Sousa's marches. LIFE IS A GREAT RISK

It seems to be the fashion with some individuals whose reading has been more than they have been trained to associate with a sort of weariness of life, or a sort of smattering of skepticism which would make Arthur Schopenhauer or any other gloomy German look like a cheerful man. All that is necessary for the present term is to try to make the best of it.

But, fortunately, it is the secret of the problems, that eventually guides them safely out of illusion to the true world. Until this event, however, they make existence miserable for themselves and unpleasant for those with whom they come in contact. They dream about the campus with an air of absurd materiality finding its interest in so many as it is constituted, and until Judgment and discernment overtakes them they are actually unhappy and necessarily bored with life.

For the enlightenment of those anxious Lourard's we quote a few lines of common sense from Lord Northcliffe:

"I would say that happiness is a healthy state of mind in which the individual is never bored. You can be bored by anything, by the most beautiful thing. Life is too interesting ever to turn down any phase of it that comes your way naturally. Being bored by people and things and places is a sign of your inability to take life properly. The fault lies with the bond individual and not with life."

It seems to us that one will take a rational interest in life as it comes to him if he understands what boredom is, and that the reaction of the affairs of everyday life will not be dullness or boredom. boredom in youth is one of the most serious causes of mindlessness and limitation; and when some camps planning that the wise look at them and survive, "Little knowledge is a dangerous thing," then an epidemic of laziness will be upon us.

A Shirt Tale
Sometimes the designers of Eagle and Manhattan shirts give their madras patterns more life, by adding color; sometimes, as in the Haytome Madras, by stripping the patterns with fibre silk. The latter will give a brilliant, dressy appearance without lifting the pattern out of the conservative class.

Our prices are:

$1.15 $1.50 to $4.50
