MICHIGAN TO PLAY FINAL GAME WITH HAWKEYES TOMORROW

Today is a day of rest for the Iowa baseball squad following their disastrous series with Indiana. Tomorrow Michigan comes for the second game with Iowa, the first being in favor of the former at Ann Arbor 9 to 4. Michigan is in the thick of the conference race and running on even terms with Illinois with no games lost so far this season. For that reason they are expected to play their best against the seemingly weak Iowa team.

Michigan has lost many of their stars of last year but have won all their Big Ten games regardless. Their pitching staff has but recently rounded into form and, with Dixon their best and Ruzicka and Liverance to fall back on, they present a formidable appearance against their opponents. They are coached by Ray Fisher who until this spring belonged to the Cincinnati National league team.

Becker will no doubt be the selection of Coach Ashmore for the twirling job while the remainder of the lineup will be unchanged. Iowa's chief failing has been in the hitting part of the playing, a fact which may account for their poor record in games won. All the men have hit better and if "being due" has anything to do with it Michigan may find themselves facing an avalanche of hits tomorrow.

The Athletic Board has decided to call the games at 4 o'clock starting tomorrow instead of at 4:10 as formerly. This has been arranged so that the crowd will not begin leaving while the game is on; then too, a lack of "pepper" has been evident in the team's playing when they see the crowd quitting and it is hoped that the new time schedule will help eliminate this trouble.

PLAY IS GIVEN FINAL TOUCHES

Tickets for Senior Play Tomorrow Night to be Reserved at 9 o'clock

The senior class play, "The Successful Calamity", to be staged tomorrow evening at the Englert theater promises to be a successful close to the year's dramatic performances, according to Miss Gladys Powers, director of the play. Final rehearsals will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock and tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock.

Tickets for the play may be secured at the Englert tomorrow morning where seat reservations will be made beginning at 9 o'clock. So far the ticket sale has not met expectations, but it is believed that tomorrow's sale will guarantee a full house, according to Harold D. Keeley, advertising manager of the play.

"The play in itself is a screaming comedy," said Miss Powers, "and it has the advantage of an all star cast. Nearly all of the twelve persons who make up the cast have taken prominent parts in dramatic productions on the campus and their work is top notch in this play which is for many of them the last appearance in college dramatics."

The scenery which arrived Friday from the Twin Cities Scenic studios, contains attractive panels of blue and nut brown combined in tapestry effect. Stage accessories including the thirteen-foot arch to be placed at the back of the stage and the stair case to be used are being made by four seniors.

One selection will be played by the orchestra between the first and second acts. The delay between the other acts will be but time enough for a change of costumes as the scenery will be the same throughout the play.

"This will be positively the last chance to see the senior play because it will not be given again during commencement week as has been rumored," said Craig M. Arbuckle L3 of Waterloo, chairman of the senior play committee. The early date for giving this year's play was deemed advisable because it will give more persons a chance to see the play than would be possible if it was given during commencement.

2000 ENROLLMENT IS EXPECTED FOR SUMMER SESSION

It is estimated that 2000 or more students will enroll for the summer school this summer, according to a statement made by Prof. Charles H. Weller, director of the summer session, yesterday. More than 100 inquiries have been received from forty-two states and countries, not counting Iowa, up to the first of this month, and as a general rule students who have attended the University during the regular year form fifty per cent or more of the total attendance at the summer session. Many prominent instructors will be present during the summer, and one superintendent of state instruction has signified his intention of spending the entire eleven weeks at Iowa.

434 courses will be offered during the summer session, one course less than was offered in the regular year course ten years ago, and two thirds as many as offered in the regular course five years ago. It is the great number of courses offered which has interested such a number of people from outside the state of Iowa, it is believed.

Many students are enrolling in the summer session in order to shorten their time in the University, and in some cases to make up work lost during the regular year.

CONCERT GIVEN AS SIXTH SERIES

Tri-City Symphony Organized Six Years Ago With Becker as Their Director

The Tri-City Symphony orchestra, which will give concerts May 31 at men's gymnasium, is one of the few orchestras in the Middle West and the only one of its kind between Chicago and San Francisco, with the exception of the Minneapolis and St. Louis orchestras. This orchestra started about six years ago when fifty or more musicians of the tri-cities who were interested in forming an organization of this kind asked Ludwig Becker, now their director, to help them. In order to make it financial success the members paid for the rehearsals themselves.

After the first concert, which was financed by several interested private individuals, the public was so pleased with the orchestra that a guarantee fund was raised to finance the concert series for the following season. Out of this fund grew the Tri-City Symphony association which stands back of the concerts given by the orchestra.

At the time that Mr. Becker consented to direct the new orchestra which was being organized he was coming from Chicago to give music lessons in the tri-cities. His home is still Chicago where he is on the faculty of the Columbia School of Music but he comes to the tri-cities for the rehearsals of the symphony orchestra. Through his efforts and the cooperation of the members and the citizens, the concert series by the Tri-City orchestra has become a regular event of the musical season.

Season tickets for the concerts are on sale at the book and music stores and Whetstone's for $2.00 if bought by May 26, and $2.50 if purchased after that date. These tickets may be exchanged at the Johnson County Bank for reserved seats on May 27, 28, and 31.

Single tickets will cost $1.50 and may be bought May 27, 28, and 31 at the Johnson County Bank.

PLANS FOR SUMMER IOWAN TO BE CONSIDERED MONDAY

Plans for the Daily Iowan for the summer will probably be considered at a meeting of the board of trustees next Monday night, according to Professor Charles H. Weller, University editor. The most important now is the selection of a business manager and editor in chief for the summer.

There is no special qualification for either position for the summer session according to Prof. Weller, but ability to handle the job is the chief consideration. (Continued on page 4)

IOWA WINS FIRST IN STATE MEET INDIANA TAKES SECOND GAME 3-1

Hawkeyes Get Only Run in Ninth on Error, Balk and Two Hits

Iowa lost the second and final game of the series to Indiana yesterday by a 3 to 1 score. Indiana went into the lead in the first inning when Ruckelhaus took second on Draper's muff after hitting safely to left field. Dean stepped to the plate with two down and sent a two base hit to left scoring Ruckelhaus. Dyke set Rust down without further trouble but the early lead could not be overcome though the Iowa team had several chances to score in the early innings.

In the seventh the visitors got two more runs when Minton walked and took second on Walker's sacrifice. Schuler singled scoring Minton. Hendricks hit an easy one to Shimek but Cray dropped the throw and Schuler scored on the play. Iowa avoided a shutout by pushing a run across in the ninth when Locke was safe on first on Mathy's error and took second on Walker's balk. Voltmer, hitting for Shimek, advanced him to third with an infield roller. Hurlburt was the next man up and he delivered his second hit of the game on which Locke scored. Walker finished the inning and the game when he struck out Mead who was hitting for Dyke.

Dyke pitched a good game for his team but his support was not good in the pinches which accounts for the Indiana runs. Locke showed up in his hitting as is his custom in practice and got two hits. Draper made a pretty catch in the fifth when he went up the bank in left field for a long fly.

For Indiana Schuler was the leading man on the offense with three hits. Walker pitched a steady game throughout, allowing but six hits and striking out nine men. Dean played a good infield game for Indiana in both games.

AERO CLUBS OF BIG TEN WILL CONDUCT SERIES OF FLIGHTS

Aero clubs in the universities of the Big Ten conference have united in a Big Ten aero conference, and will conduct a series of flying exhibitions according to Lloyd E. Anderson S2 of Madrid, president of the Iowa Aero club. The first exhibition will be held on Chanut field, (near Champaign, Ill.) some time in October.

Planes will be furnished by the officials in charge of Chanut field, according to Lieutenant Carroll of the flying service who was in Iowa City last week, and any member of the reserve flying officers is eligible to compete in the events, providing he is a member of an aero club.

Five events will make up the first exhibition, and it is probable that these will be run off in one day. The first event will be landing for a mark with a dead engine, from the height of 3000 feet. The second event will be a twenty-five mile cross country flight and the third is a series of stunt flights, no limit being placed on the kind of stunts. A quick take-off will be the fourth event, and the last will be a sham battle with camera guns, and will probably include some formation flying. The camera gun takes a picture when the trigger is pulled, and shows the exact spot a bullet would have hit, had ammunition been used.

Fifteen days of flying will be allowed the reserve flying officers this summer, in case any of them wants to get in a little practice before the time for the exhibitions, according to Anderson. The Iowa Aero club will send a large number of representatives.

FRATERNITY VALUES

It is always depressing to the calm person who regards campus affairs with impartial judgment to listen to a fraternity man demean himself by referring slightly to the man on the outside. Even worse sounds the deprecating remarks of the man on the outside about the fraternity man, because it is well known that most persons become acid to those things from which they are kept.

The best thing that can be said about a fraternity or a fraternity man is that the non-fraternity man respects both. In many cases it is only a matter of having friends in a fraternity which assures the candidate of a bid. The fact that a man does not belong to a fraternity often means simply that the man does not belong to a fraternity.

The possession of a pin does not indicate that the possessor has any more brains, money, muscles, affability, or palship than any one else. Nor on the other hand does it mean that the pin possessor has not these qualities.

There is probably no such thing as the true democratic spirit in the sense in which some radicals conceive it, but at least we should be democratic enough to realize the difference between a fraternity man and a non-fraternity man is no considerable gap. The best way to bridge the gap is by the time tried method of friendly interest and regard.

PROPHETS AT HOME

That a prophet has no honor in his own land is never more true than of the university professor. His swaggering students encounter him daily in the familiar halls, they hear him lecture two or three times a week and fly into a panic of pandemonium at the moment that a lull announces the close of the hour, and even when his name is mentioned and his work lauded across the border, they still fall short of appreciation and still start the class bell stampede.

The Boston Transcript, one of the big eastern dailies, prints the following account of a lecture by Carl E. Seashore, dean of the graduate college and head of the department of philosophy and psychology at the University.

"That even the music teachers can not always detect the finer shades of notes or determine exactly the quality of pitch or consonance was demonstrated by Dr. Carl Seashore with the use of Victrola records at this morning's session of the Eastern Music Supervisors' Conference in Huntington Hall, Rogers building. In justice to the teachers, however, it was only on the almost infinitesimal differences that they became confused. Dr. Seashore's test is a simple one and is being used in a number of public schools to ascertain what ability, if any, pupils have in respect to music. The first record that Doctor Seashore played was a test for the sense of pitch, and consisted of two notes being sounded at intervals, the object being to tell whether the second note was higher or lower than the first. In the beginning the difference was easy to determine, but as the record progressed the notes became so similar in pitch that to the average ear they sounded as one. "Dr Seashore explained that by these records teachers could learn exactly the musical talents of students and discover latent abilities in pupils who have had no musical training."

It is probably to the credit of a professor that he does not make a very large or adequate impression on the somewhat sophisticated undergraduate. It appears to be a mark of an unassuming poise which may be seen and appreciated or not, with little difference one way or another so long as the work to be done is done. Sometime they will know, and if not, what of it?

THE LISTENING POST

The night editor orders a short and snappy column. How ungracious of him! It should be short, but how can one be snappy on such a sticky afternoon? Yesterday was no day of inspiration for us; while most of the boys were swimming we were cleaning the cellar.

May we disillusion you? Everybody on the campus hasn't been canoeing the past few days; every student we ran across was trying to finish reading either George Eliot's "Adam Bede", or Dorothy Canfield's, "The Bent Twig."

Coeds, so one of them tells us, think nothing of using each other's powder puffs. Men, she said in her sister's defense, smoke each other's cigarette ends.

This department is really in favor of banning the use of the exclamation point. It is the instrument of the weaklings in literature!!!

"The Art of Columning"

"Columning, as it is understood in America today," says an editorial in the Literary Review of the New York Evening Post, "is merely the art of informal, personal criticism, adapted to a democratic world, where publication is easy and frequent, and readers are numbered by the thousands instead of by tens. It is informal comment by critics who have more temper than system, more insight than abstract philosophy, more wit than leisure to reflect. And if it differs sharply in some respects from the obiter dicta of men who did not have to be journalists, it is the conditions of life in America, where the modern art has reached its prime, that are responsible. For ours is a lazy, good-natured public, always 'slumping' intellectually, ever slouching through life, and it needs tonics as well as correctives, soothing syrups as well as corrosives and counter-irritants."

Astonishing headline asserts, "Pollock to Lead Laws." To drink, or just to water?

"...Jack Leonard, pianist, has taken a three-year contract with Irving Berlin, calling for $20,000." Calling, calling, calling... "Oft in the stilly night."

"The Whispering Post"

Florence: How can we say anything nice about you in such a public place as this? Send self-addressed stamped envelope.

It takes an optimistic student to enjoy life with two-hour exams but two weeks away.

Summer isn't here yet. They are still holding Saturday afternoon dances.

A FRIEND FOR JACK

To the Editor:

I want to call your attention to two editorials which appeared in the Daily Iowan recently, with Jack Dempsey as their subject in both cases. The first dealt with his past history, with a few slams added for good measure and the second dealt with the publicity given him for what he did to show respect for his mother.

While I do not uphold the war record of Dempsey, I maintain that when a court says that man is not guilty of some alleged offense, all articles in regard to it should be refused publication. It was proved that Dempsey was not a slacker in the eyes of the law, so why say any more about it?

Although Dempsey is not a model man by any means, he made a man's fight in getting to the place he now holds, and he could not have done it without a great deal of grit and courage. As he is now one of the most prominent men in the eyes of the world, why should we care it a column or so was spent in telling of what he did on Mothers' Day? He has been panned enough in the newspaper columns, and it is now time to praise him a little. It is true that most men sent flowers to their mothers and nothing was said of it, but very few men who have been brought up surrounded by the same conditions as Dempsey would have thought of their mothers. His climb from the slums must be considered in all cases before he is criticized.

Dempsey has won a place in the hearts of every lover of boxing simply because of his sportmanship. He risks his title more often than any other of recent heavies and because of this he is loved by the boxing public. I believe that it is time to drop all criticism, and give him a sporting chance, the same as he gives all others.

Once upon a Time

—at a large mid-western university, six bachelors discovered an ad in the university daily that announced a splendid home cooked dinner at a quiet little tea room—The Mad Hatter's, by name. Now they were a little hesitant about the project, thinking that the place catered more especially to women. However, they decided to take a chance—and they were delighted. They had the little back room all to themselves and enjoyed an elegant dinner of chicken patties, mashed potatoes, June peas, olives, fresh strawberry meringue, parker house rolls (they were served an extra portion of rolls just because the proprietors thought that men had a capacity for more) and last came coffee. One of the very excellent features was the price, only 85c. If you really want an excellent dinner anytime between 12 and 2 today we can recommend this place most heartily.
