IOWA AND OHIO STATE
BIG TEN TITLE

Wisconsin Was Eliminated by Michigan in Game Yesterday

Iowa May Drop Out

Dope Indicates That Iowa Was Least Defeated Northwestern

With Wisconsin eliminated by Michigan, as a result of the tie game played yesterday, only Ohio State and Iowa are left in the big Ten conference, but neither of these has played four conference games, and Ohio State has every chance to be eliminated. Therefore, Ohio State will be eliminated by Northwestern.

Ohio Should Beat Illinois

If Ohio should beat Illinois, Northwestern will be eliminated, for Purdue has already eliminated Wisconsin and is said to and Illinois is poor enough to be eliminated. Northwestern must win to be in this game.

Purdue plays at home.

If Purdue wins at home, they will play Ohio State to win the Big Ten title. Northwestern will play at home if Purdue wins.

Iowa and Ohio State are the only two teams in the big Ten Conference that have not been defeated by other conference teams. Both the teams have played six games and both have played two conference games each.

HAWKESY DEFEAT HOOSIER ELEVEN BY 41-POINT LEAD

While three touchdowns in the second quarter made the difference, 41 points were scored by Iowa in the games played yesterday.

The original issue of the Transit was put out by the engineering society of the University in 1929, which is the organization of the students of the department of the University, which at that time included only the civil engineering course.

The issue of the Transit is a sixteen page publication, containing articles of interest and value to students of the collage of applied science and engineering.

IOWA HAS GOOD MUSICAL FIELD

Prof. Walter Less, New Head of Voice Department, Hopes to Develop It

Prof. Walter Less, new head of the voice department, is speaking of the possibilities of the subject at the University, said, "There is a perfectly wonderful field back. Perhaps the talent can be coaxed out and fostered into the right channels, this work should progress steadily. I am hoping to do a great deal with it.

Students in voice should feel very fortunate in having the opportunity to study under a man of such talent and of such repute as Prof. Less. The professor's training in Europe covered a period of eight years, during which he studied under several great masters.

His earliest training was in the Conservatory of Brussels. Later he studied under Liselli and then under Less. Prof. Less has given an interesting sketch of the study of music in that country. When preparing for special occasions, he said, Prof. Liselli would often have several pupils in the room at one time--Italian, American, a Frenchman, a Spaniard. De Reszke, a composer of operas, would say, 'if you would turn and interest in the most venturesome candidate in the most hopeless situation.'

At other times, however, the great singer would demand absolute silence, and allow only his own voice to be heard.

Prof. Less toured Europe with his American Institute Opera Company. He later toured Switzerland and spent a winter in London.

WELLER ON COMMITTEE FOR GIVING, ATTENDS SCABBARD'S

Two fellowships in Greek archeology, known as the school fellowships of the American Institute of Archaeology respectively, with a stipend of $250 each will be awarded at the next meeting of the association, it is understood. The committee will offer the fellowship of $250 each to the best candidate, based on the basis of excellence of achievement to March in both cases. External interest is not considered.

The American Institute of Archaeology is a scientific organization for the study and examination of archeological remains, either ancient, or historical, or artistically interesting, or of human interest, by scientific methods.
