Naval Holiday Does Not Touch Eastern Border

The reason of the disagreeable program, proposed by secretary of the treasury, was the same as in the case of two yearly holiday among the nation, which is known by the name of "Naval Holiday," which is the name of the day on which the nation will have no frolics in the city, at least in the view of the treasury. The treasor declared that the reason for this was to give the people a time to rest from their labors.

The people were pleased with the reason given, and said that they would glad to have a holiday of this kind. The treasurer also stated that the day would be called "Naval Holiday," in order that the people might be able to remember the reason for it.

The treasurer further stated that the day would be called "Naval Holiday," in order that the people might be able to remember the reason for it.

The Hawkeyes will play the final game of the year. This is well known and it is hoped that many will attend the game. It has been a successful season and it is to be hoped that the enthusiasm shown by the students will continue. The game is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. at the Men's Gymnasium.

PROF. MAX FARRAND TALKS TO GRADUATE STUDENTS YESTERDAY

"The art of history is really the art of giving correctly," said Max Farrand, professor of History at Yale, in an informal talk before the liberal arts and graduate students of the departments of history, political science, economics and sociological study yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

Professor Farrand dwelt principally upon the fundamental rules to be followed by the students of history in order to give the truth, the clear, and that is accurate for, by minimizing errors, he is able to show how the experiences of a football player, lower or the experiences of the player knowing the rules, and the true in the opportunity the player by means of his feet of the player knowing the fundamental rules for a winning play; Professor Farrand said that that thing applies in history, the student must handle the work in a critical manner, which involves close and conscientious study.

He continued his talk by stating and illustrating certain rules to be applied by the student of history until he is necessarily accurate in their use. A few of the rules which he mentioned and that particular to love, place and comparison, placing special emphasis on the sub­ ject of time. Professor Farrand said, "History is the study of human actions, of the ways in which they happen, for the reasons that we know the actions of time there are many factors that是有, and sometimes changes are made for one reason or another." The first of these subjects related to truth, of which Professor Farrand said, "Is a person's ability to record events? It is the person necessarily equip­ ped to tell the truth?" The student of history must always be on the guard for fraud and error.

His entire talk related to the striving for truth, the endeavor of accurate historians. Professor Farrand closed his speech by impressing upon his audience the importance of observing the rules which he described, so that they would be to us un­ neglected.
