FOUNDER OF ROTARY CLUB IN IOWA MAN

Paul H. North, Chicago lawyer and founder of the Rotary club, graduated from the college of law of the University of Iowa in 1892. Before coming to Iowa he attended both the State University of Vermont and Princeton University.

After beginning the practice of law in Chicago, North founded a definite philosophy of business reformation and a series of meetings, with his friends gave rise to the first Rotary club. Other clubs sprang up in other cities and Harris organized the National Association of Rotary Clubs in 1916. The extension of the movement to other countries resulted in the organization of the International Association of Rotary clubs.

OFFICERS

WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION

OFFICERS WILL BE CHOSEN THIS WEEK

Next year's officers of the women's association, to be elected Tuesday and Wednesday of this week,

face the task of organizing all women's activities under one general head and of working out some scheme of cooperation with the student council. At present the association is in no way connected with the council. If all men's organizations could be organized under a similar head, they would be able to cooperate with the women's through a student council consisting of both men and women, and

Iowa would be well on the way to self-government.

"The women's association," says

Violet Blakely, assistant dean of women's association, "was organized some years ago with the purpose of securing self-government at the University.

Although the final goal will be reached gradually, a great deal of progress has already been made in this direction."

The present self-government machinery of the women's association consists of the executive council, the administrative board, and the district organization. The executive council is made up of presiding officer, secretary, treasurer, chairman of the point system, chairman of the sponsor system, and publicity chairman.
