A GREAT ARCHAEOLOGICAL DISCOVERY

With anthropologists saying it is the greatest discovery in the history of Egyptian art, the University of California has announced that it has uncovered a new tomb in the Valley of the Kings on the site of the ancient Thebes, near Luxor. Photo experts have been called in for seven years with little success until last week, when the burial vault of King Tutankhamen, one of the holy kings of the eighteenth dynasty beginning about 1550 B.C., was discovered.

Later dispatches from Cairo state the value of the contents of the two chambers uncovered has been reliably estimated at more than $521,000,000. The objects found are too precious to be removed or sold, and the excavation has been suspended, according to Dr. Johan J. Smertenk, of the University of California. According to Dr. Smertenk, the contents of the tombs are likely to be the most important of all the discoveries made in the Valley of the Kings. These tombs are the most important of all the discoveries made in the Valley of the Kings.

THE SOUNDBOARD

In the past, the soundboard was a device used to enhance the quality of sound, typically in music halls and theaters. Today, the term is often used to refer to a part of a recording studio where sound is mixed and the final product is produced. The soundboard is a critical component in the creation of high-quality audio recordings, allowing producers to manipulate and sculpt the sound to achieve the desired effect.

NEW YORK

THE PASSING OF GREEK AND LATIN

The decline of student interest in Greek and Latin is not uncommon in Princeton and Columbia. Universities do not set course discontinue new con disciplines. In the classical languages have been ground for more than a generation, and that perhaps there is an interest in these the accelerated rate of the students' waning tone. At Princeton this fall only 150 students registered, in a year a decrease to approximately 20 per cent. At Columbia, while Latin is reported, "barely holding its own," with 336 students in the classroom, Greek has suffered something in the nature of a depression, the number of students registering declining from thirty-six in 1920 to seventy in 1923. What would they have thought of that one? A colleague referred to this apparent lack of interest in the Greek and Latin languages as a "loss of the old moorings."

Certainly, the kishmash and highly seasoned graduates of the modern university courses do not reproduce the old substantiates. The simpler proaduc curriculum nowadays or classic ones may have had their initiations in at least some of the natural sciences of education and it did not prove the contagious interests which are now directed at the quality of the higher education in this country.
