Morgan Says German Loan Is Impossible

IOWA CITY MAY BE LOCATION OF CHILDREN'S HOME

Yeomen Officials Will Inspect Site Here On Jan. 8; Will Decorate City

The Commercial club is cooperating with a University committee in the task of decorating the city for the reception of George N. Frink, supreme president of the Brotherhood of American Yeomen, and A. N. Farmer, chairman of the board appointed to find a location for the new children's home, who will be guests of the Iowa City chapter of Yeomenry on Jan. 8.

Members of the supreme board will be present from Oskaloosa, Missouri, Michigan and South Dakota. The Des Moines degree team will put on an initiation session at the new quarters in the K. of P. rooms on Duquesne street on the night of Jan. 26. Cedar Rapids Yeomen will come as guests of honor.

At the last meetings addresses were given by State Deputy J. W. McIntosh of Des Moines, and Mrs. Ralph Boyles, also of Des Moines, supervisor of Junior Yeomanry.

A number of student archers in the University plan to take part in the degree work.

Mercury Falls To 14° Below Mark; Sunday Coldest

The coldest weather this winter was recorded Sunday night when the thermometer dropped to 14 degrees below zero. Previous to this the record had been 6 degrees below last Friday.

These cold winds Iowa City is feeling, start around Medicine Hat, in Canada and sweep the length of the continent in a southeasterly direction, according to Professor John F. Reilly, professor of mathematics and official weather observer. The cause of their rise there is not exactly known, but may be due to the topography of the country.

The coldest city of the state is Charles City and the hottest in summer is probably Clarinda. It does not follow from this, however, said Professor Reilly, that the hottest in summer is also the warmest in winter.

Weather predicting will soon be more scientific, he said, because of the placing of stations in the arctic circle, and communication by radio instead of the telegraph.

Varsity Takes But Light Workout On Eve of Cornell Scrap

Although the first team did not scrimmage, the second team had a game with some of the old Iowa basketball players, who are for the most part still in school. Swenson played center for the seconds, McGovney and Barton, forwards, and Voltmer and Duhm, guards. Duhm, with five baskets, made most of the points for the second team. The other team had Potter at center, Jenkins and Frohwein as forwards, and Wallen and Shimek as guards. The seconds won 18 to 5.

A new system of parking will be tried for the game tonight. No cars will be allowed to use the cinder road running west from the Burlington street bridge. Cars parked on the south side of the cinder road at the armory must face south and leave by the south road. Those on the north side must face north and leave by the north road.

ASK $5,027,254 APPROPRIATION FOR UNIVERSITY

Despite Million Dollar Increase Iowa May Receive Less Than Ames

(By United News)
Des Moines, Dec. 18.—Appropriations of $12,446,494 for support, maintenance, extensions, experiments and specials for state educational institutions for the next biennial period will be made if the recommendations of the state board of education made public today are granted.

This is an increase of $1,997,000 over the biennial grant of two years ago, although it is not as much as the increase asked for 1921.

The board's request for appropriations for additional buildings and lands will be made later. The thirty-ninth general assembly granted $676,000 for that purpose.

Increase Near Million
As of the $12,446,494, expected, $8,984,200 is always granted for additional needs, the appropriation bill as urged by the board would ask for $8,462,294.

The bulk of the money is to go to the State University of Iowa at Iowa City, Iowa State College, Ames and the Iowa State Teachers' college, Cedar Falls.

The University of Iowa for the biennial period is to receive $5,027,294 an increase of $974,000; Iowa State college is to receive $5,311,000, an increase of $859,000; Iowa State Teachers college, $1,504,000, an increase of $138,000; the college for the blind, $189,000, a decrease of $2,000; school for the deaf $375,000, a decrease of $12,000.

Attendance Sets Record
Citing increases of 2,356 students at Iowa City, Ames and Cedar Falls, the board declared that since the demand of the institutions in its control comes solely from the people, it will be adequately met by representatives of the people.

"This additional enrollment," the board said, "exceeds the attendance at such famous institutions as Leeland Stanford, jr., Princeton, Amherst and Dartmouth. At the present time all indications are that the attendance will increase annually."

KNOX SCHEDULED FOR ANOTHER MIX

Siwash Will Give Opposition In Opener of 1923 Grid Season On Oct. 6

October 6 is the date which has been difficult set for the Iowa-Knox football game next fall. This will be the first game of the season and will be played on Saturday one week before the Iowa-Purdue game on October 13.

This game, as formerly, will serve as a practice game for the Hawkeye squad. In the season just closed, Iowa defeated the Siwash eleven by a score of 61-0, but the team from Galesburg put up a strong fight. As to whether the team will afford any stiffer competition for next year's team, Coach Howard H. Jones stated that nothing was known.

LAW JUBILEE MARCH 13

The date for the Law Jubilee has been finally set for Tuesday, March 13, according to Robert L. Block L2 of Davenport.

New Grade System Not Retroactive To Former Years

Students of advanced standing in the college of liberal arts will be interested to know that the new rules adopted in regard to the marking system do not affect work done previous to their enrollment for the present collegiate year.

Students who have previously earned some of their credit at other colleges and universities will be equally interested in the stipulation that as heretofore the record of credits in other institutions will not be subject to the new method of "grade point" marking; but that the system will be applied to the remaining amount of credit necessary for graduation.

All other students however will be required to earn one and one-half times as many "grade-points" as the number of semester hours required for the degree.

The exact wording of the new rules as regards students of advanced standing follows.

"With reference to students who have already completed a portion of the requirements for graduation, it should be said that if a student, for example, had completed exactly 60 (or more or less) semester hours of credit in this college, prior to September, 1922, these 60 (or more or less) semester hours will be judged on the basis of the marking system and graduation requirements prevailing prior to the adoption of the new marking system and the "grade-points"; but to the new marking system with the "grade-points" will be applied to the remaining 60 (correspondingly less or more) semester hours which such a student may earn after September, 1922."

With reference to the latter of these two groups of students it should be said that, as heretofore, the record of credits accepted from the institutions from which they are transferred to the University will be made only in terms of amounts of credit, without any indication as to their grades; and that the new marking system, with its "grade-points," will be applied only to the remaining amount of credit necessary for graduation.

Skating Proves Popular Sport Among Students

The fate of old Iowa river at Iowa City seems to be ever a playground for University of Iowa students. In the summer it is the mecca for the lover of the canoe and paddle, the swimmer and the angler. In the winter, its frozen, glassy surface calls to the ice skater. Just now, the skating season is at its height.

Fitzgerald's boathouse is the pivot of activities, and it is here that University men and women gather around the old block stove in the boathouse to put on skates, bundle up and swap jokes about the number of falls on the last venture. It seems as if the whole University has suddenly decided to go skating.

Party In Suicide Pact Guilty of Murder—Hewit

(By United News)
London, Dec. 18.—A party who enters into a suicide pact, which results in the death of the second party is guilty of murder.

This decision was made Monday by Lord Hewit, a chief justice, who refused to dismiss the appeal from a death sentence which was imposed on Lionel Symonds.

FIND NO TRAIL OF GANG WHICH ROBBED MINT

Federal Agents Search Mountains; Guard, Shot In Battle, Is Dead

(United News)
Denver, Colo., Dec. 18.—Secret service agents combined with police and county officers throughout the Rocky Mountain states and Southwest Monday night in feverish search for the bandits who escaped with $200,000 of federal reserve currency after a desperate gun battle in front of the United States mint here, in which Charles T. Linton, 60 year old bank guard, was mortally wounded.

At a late hour no trace of the bandits nor any clue to their identity or road of escape had been obtained, but the Denver police are working on a theory that the guiding genius of the robbery may have been a woman.

Failing to find a hot scent here, they have begun a search for Eva Lewis, former member of the notorious Lewis gang, which once operated near Kansas City.

Eva was released from the Colorado state prison three weeks ago after serving a sentence of her part in a gun battle and robbery near Colorado Springs two years ago.

The serial numbers in entire $200,000 which consisted of forty thousand five dollar bills, is known to officials, and are being sent broadcast. The bandits, it is hoped, will be captured when they try to dispose of some of their loot. Bank officials declare they will be unable to put it into circulation.

The gun battle occurred before scores of frightened spectators. Volleys of shots were exchanged by the bandits and employees of the mint but only two casualties resulted. Several mint windows were smashed. The money was taken as it was transferred from the mint to an auto of the federal reserve bank.

Four bandits did the actual work while three others stood by to guard their operators. Federal reserve guards had no time to draw guns, being taken completely by surprise. Linton was shot without warning and died a few hours later.

Havner, driver of the car, escaped uninjured, diving under the machine as the gun battle began.

"LOAFERS FRIVOL" AFTER VACATION

Students who return from loafing after the Christmas vacation will find the "Loafers" issue of "Frivol" waiting for them. This does not signify that the contributors and illustrators have been loafing, however.

Following are the contributors for the number: Sherman J. McNally A4 of Marshalltown, Anne M. Lichty A4 of Des Moines, Orville B. Weis A4 of Mason City, Laurence Williams, and W. Gordon Johnston A2 of Des Moines.

Illustrators for the "Loafers Frivol" are: William B. Baird A1 of Mason City, Alma Held, instructor in the department of graphic and plastic arts, Irma Bratton A1 of Des Moines, Robert O. Barkley A4 of Des Moines, John F. Sunstrum A2 of Oskaloosa, Harry E. Stinson of the art department, and Jane Coventry of the art department.

PROHIBITION IS HERE TO STAY

Governors Confer with Harding On Anti-Volstead Activities

(By United States)
Washington, Dec. 18.—Prohibition is here to stay in the opinion of fifteen governors who have assured President Harding of their earnest co-operation in enforcing the Volstead law.

But the governors believe there are two things that ought to be recommended in an "earnest official appeal" in the form of a presidential proclamation.

1. That the press desist from publishing prohibition jokes and from undermining the moral support of prohibition by treating the subject with levity.

2. That judges impose heavier sentences on dry law violators.

These are the fundamental conclusions reached at the informal luncheon conference between President Harding, Vice-President Coolidge, Secretary Mellon, Attorney General Daugherty, prohibition commissioner Haynes and the governors at the White House Monday.

Railroad Men Favor One Big Organization

Chicago, Dec. 18.—Sentiment among railroad employes for a gigantic amalgamation of all organized railroad labor is believed to be manifesting itself more strongly every week. While spurred on particularly at this time through the unsatisfactory outcome of shopmen's strike last summer, the amalgamation movement is gradually gaining strength according to some of the most reliable authorities in contact with the railroad situation, who declared the only big stumbling block in the way of a general merger program is a mutual jealousy between various union leaders.

"PASSES BUCK" TO PREMIER'S CONFERENCE

French Think "American Plan" was "Made In Germany"

(By Robert J. Bender)
(United News Staff Correspondent)
New York, Dec. 18.—J. P. Morgan has put it flatly to all parties concerned in the European financial and economic upheaval that there can be no loan to Germany until the allies and Germany have settled the reparations question.

He has informed allied spokesmen of this fact, reiterated it to officials of American government, and repeated it to Dr. Otto Wiedfeldt, German ambassador to the United States, who called upon him in New York Saturday.

Must Settle Reparations
"Whatever may be the activities of other bankers in Wall street, the great firm of Morgan & Co. "passed the buck" squarely to the allied premiers' meeting in Paris on January 2. If they settle the reparations question then Morgan is willing to be of service to the general situation.

Ambassador Wiedfeldt, according to a statement given out at Morgan's office Monday, called to make inquiry as to the possibility of our undertaking to assist in floating the so-called international loan.

Paris Skeptical
(By United News)
Paris, Dec. 18.—The French are inclined to place the "made in Germany" label on stories that the United States is on the eve of interventions in Europe.

The press, which used to believe stories that America planned to probably the reports were of shrdn float a loan of 1,500,000,000 dollars for Germany frankly stated that probably the reports were of German origin.

Believe Loan Story Fake
French official opinion is hardening against the idea that there will be any American intervention at this juncture. If America, it was stated in official circles, has any plans to enable Germany to meet her reparations payment, the matter should be taken up with Germany direct; furthermore it is intimated that the reputed plan of the United States was put forward merely to prevent French from invading the Ruhr Valley. Some in French officialdom state that it is the business of the allies to discuss reparations with Germany and not with a third party—America.

Europe Discouraged
By Ralph Turner
(United News Staff Correspondent)
London, Dec. 18.—Europe may be likened to a man who, after enjoying a pleasant dream, was rudely awakened. Despatches from Washington which in the past few days have heralded the re-entrance of America in Europe now emphasize that the reported plan of the United States was largely without foundation.

It developed with the bursting of the "American bubble" that the British foreign office never took seriously despatches from the United States which detailed a project to aid the Old World. No official communication concerning the rumored program of America was ever received by Ambassador George Harvey or Sir Auckland Geddes, British ambassador to the United States.

PHILLIPS FAILS TO SIDE WITH EDISON IN CHARGES AGAINST COLLEGE MEN

Chester A. Phillips, dean of the college of commerce, fails to agree with Thomas A. Edison's statements that the college man is lazy, dislikes work, dirty work in particular, and lacks ingenuity, initiative and resourcefulness. Mr. Edison remarked in part concerning college graduates: "The college graduate objects to work, especially if it is dirty. When he gets a position he expects to be appointed foreman at the end of six weeks. He lacks imagination, and scarcely has any suggestions. Colleges is a good place for the man who wants to work, but unfortunately there are very few of that type nowadays."

Dean Phillips has had much experience with college men and when interviewed concerning Edison's charges made these statements:

"Most persons dislike dirty work and dirty environment. College men, it seems to me, would have a greater aversion to such work and such environment than would men whose most formative years had been spent in industrial rather than academic surroundings. The college course, whether at the endowed institutions of the east or the state supported school of the west, has been designed to train men to live rather than make a living. The traditional aim is not being widely departed from today even among American colleges of business administration. Under the circumstances, college men are supposed to have developed appreciation of the things that afford enduring satisfactions rather than to have become insensitive to disagreeable aspects of work."

"My belief is that the college man is more energetic and industrious than the non-college man. The college graduate is also more ambitious. He has his heart set on a high position the very day he enters the employment of a firm or corporation. He expects to attain that position and his familiarity with the personnel and historical aspects of industry leads him to a conviction of ability. There can be no objection to ambition as long as it is coupled with a high sense of loyalty, justice and service. Moreover, the tendency to 'spot' the sluggards and the failures among college men as also the individuals who achieve great success without college training is natural and inevitable."

"The pre-eminent success of the college man in politics attests his resourcefulness. Human relationships and inter-relationships are so complex that business success hinges heavily on ability to co-operate with others and ability to secure such cooperation. Power to vitalize a business enterprise can scarcely exist apart from an undertaking of men and motives. The growing prominence of college men in business can be traced in no small measure to an understanding of practical psychology. Ability to pierce through the mists of human nature vies with a knowledge of business facts and principles and their ardent utilization for first place among the factors responsible for commercial success. Conditions prevailing at our colleges and universities highly favor social contacts and experiences that look toward the understanding of men."

"The modern business executive has to rely more often upon the qualities that go to make up good salesmanship than upon such qualities as imagination, inventive genius and mechanical ingenuity."

"An inventor's view and interpretation of the business world must differ widely from that of the ordinary successful business executive. For example, it is possible that Mr. Edison does not fully appreciate the extent to which the outstanding executives in American industry are a kind of glorified salesman. Recently the president of the Baldwin locomotive works returned from Europe where his chief work had been to secure valuable orders."

There will be a called meeting of Hesperia literary society Tuesday noon in room 13. The meeting will be short and all members are urged to be present.

STARBUCK AND PATRICK ATTEND NEW YORK MEET

Prof. Edwin D. Starbuck, professor of philosophy, and Prof. George T. Patrick, professor of philosophy and psychology, will attend the joint meeting of the American Philosophical Association and the Western Division of the Philosophical Association at New York on December 27, 28, and 29.

Professor Patrick will present a paper "The Emergent Theory of Mind." A noteworthy feature of the meeting will be the Paul Carus Lectures by Professor John Dewey, noted lecturer on psychology, on the subject of "Pragmatism and Modern Metaphysics."

The meeting is unusual because it is the first time the two organizations have held a joint meeting.

GREAT HILARITY IS ON AT CHRISTMAS

Speakers at Young People's Meeting Show Manner of Celebrating Differs

Christmas in six different countries was described Sunday evening in the Young People's Meeting of the Congregational church. The manner of celebrating and the time varies quite perceptibly from country to country. Jose Hinojosa A2 of Bolivia, S. A., described the fine weather which prevails in Bolivia during the holiday season, it being summer there at that time of the year. This fact, led him to say the Christmas was celebrated in Bolivia with the greens instead of with the snow association that abides in the northern hemisphere. The upper class people there do much feasting on December 24, and sacrifice the next day to the indigestion pangs which invariably come as a result. In the big homes where they have altars and images of the Savior and the Virgin Mary, offerings and ritual form a part of the celebration. Mass lasts from 12 to 3 o'clock. The poor people make the occasion memorable by getting gloriously drunk.

Have Long Celebrations

Edo Van der Zee, a Hollander in the sixth grade in the University Elementary School, told about the children's celebration which begins December 5 in Holland. It is the custom there to always tell the story of Saint Nicholas to the children. They then leave their wooden shoes near the chimney together with some specially picked grass for the reindeer of Saint Nicholas.

Adolphe J. Dickham, graduate assistant in romance languages, described the manner of celebration in Belgium and France. The Protestants begin about December 5 and celebrate much the same as they do in Holland. The Catholics begin a little later.

James K. Sarkisian M1 of Iowa City told of Christmas in Armenia. There festivities start on December 24 and last for about thirteen days. He said that since it rains in Armenia most of this time one could almost say that they celebrate with mud as against the greens of Bolivia. The Armenians do not exchange presents, but its the custom to outfit the whole family with new clothes at this time.

Service Bulletin Deals With Modern Business Training

The question of theory or practice in business education, and a discussion of the growth and aims of business training in the United States, are the subjects treated in the latest service bulletin, which has just been sent out from the office of the University editor.

At the University of Iowa the theoretical method of teaching business courses has been maintained, and the success of the system has surely been established. The results show that the soundest training comes from the thorough understanding of business principles, and that practical experience can rapidly be gained "in the field." It is declared by Iowa authorities that the business training afforded here is being increasingly appreciated by business men, and is more and more resulting in opening business corners to students who attend college. There has been a great demand for men who were capable of managing various branches of business, and it is largely filled by graduates of some business experience. Opportunity has given the graduate of the "theoretical" business school a chance to train himself in practical application of his knowledge. The concluding article in the bulletin contains a resume of the work of the college of commerce.

PALIMPSEST, FINAL OF THIRD VOLUME, ISSUED

The December number of the Palimpsest has just been issued by Prof. John Ely Briggs, associate professor in the department of political science, and editor of the Palimpsest. This number of the Palimpsest is the last number of the third volume. The fourth volume will start in January.

The Palimpsest contains an article by Bessie L. Lyon, on the "Passing of Homer," which tells of the little town of Homer, which was once the county seat of Webster county, and is now practically unknown.

Another article in this month's number is "Pilot Grove," written by O. A. Garretson. This tells of the little town of Pilot Grove which has also dwindled into obscurity, and is now merged into the surrounding farms. The last article is a "Comment by the Editor." The comment is divided into two essays. One is "A Commonwealth of Villagers," and the other "The Village in Literature."

Nurses Worried By Failure to Receive Examination Grades

The fifteen nurses who took the state board examination at Des Moines on October 26 have not yet been informed of their grades. The delay is unexplainable but is causing many of the Iowa nurses who took the examination considerable concern, as it marks the final step in their schooling, bringing to an end three years of work in the hospitals and in the classrooms as a student.

Barron To Engage In Business At Iowa City Soon

Tow "Stub" Barron, captain of the University of Iowa football team in 1915 and coach of the freshman teams here in 1916 and 1917, has located in Iowa City and will engage in the insurance business here. For the past three or four years he has been in that business in Cedar Rapids.

"Stub" is one of the most loyal of Iowa's alumni and he is probably one of the best known athletes who has ever played on an Iowa team. He was heavyweight wrestling champion of the University while here, played three years on the football team, captaining it in 1915 and the following two years coached the freshman football teams.

In 1918 he coached at the Colorado School of Mines at Golden, Colo. He then returned to Cedar Rapids and has been in the life insurance business there.

DOPING THE DOPE

BY "BUDAPEST"

The University of Texas must be a peculiar place. They carry a big story in the Daily Texan, their student paper, about the University losing a football game, and in the next column another little story something like this:

"Although the football team lost their game yesterday, the University chess team took the visitors into camp"

There must be some consolation in that. Chess, however, we have found, calls for a comfortable chair, lots of patience and lots of time. Then one can really enjoy himself.

Noticed in a paper the other day where the fraternities in an Eastern college were planning to conduct a billiard tournament, and a nice little cup had been donated for the winner.

The tournament terms were not outlined, but in thinking the idea over we have decided that it would be a good idea for Iowa when the thermometer is hovering around the cipher mark.

To be enjoyable, though, the tournament should include several kinds of billiards and should be mixed in with pool. After all, certain kinds of pool are entirely opposite from simple.

Suppose a tournament included some three cushion and some straight rail billiards for those who prefer that game. 18.1 and 18.2 would be a little difficult for the local boys, probably.

Along with this, there could be a little competition in line pool and rack pool. There are not very many rack pool players around the city who are in the University, but some of the more proficient could probably handle the game.

A tournament like this, or rather two tournaments conducted at the same time, would be a new and interesting pastime for the students at Iowa.

At McGill University, boxing tournaments are already under way with a nice bunch of fellows out for the game. By nice we mean fairly proficient.

Why, while we are on the idea of new things, could there not be arranged a boxing tournament between two universities?

We realize right off that there are a good many objections to the plan, and one of the foremost is the idea that there is not enough interest in the sport.

Boxing is getting to be more popular here every year, and there should be a nice turnout for a contest of this kind. It would be preferred, however, that the two Universities were on pretty good terms.

Midst the cheers of 1,000,000 excited co-eds, the interfraternity basketball teams are now fighting for the championship of the University.

The boxing tournament drew a good crowd last year, but not much joy was expressed at the rule that everyone had to keep quiet while the men were boxing. Coaching by seconds was prohibited.

Still, if that really helps the sport, the fans can keep quiet if they have to. But sometimes it is a hard pull.

Of course there isn't now. Who would want to go down and watch the football team battle the seconds when there was a chance to see them battle Illinois?

Sometimes one can see some pretty good stuff at an interfraternity game, but too often the scores are too one sided. Even at that it is probably physically better for the boys than bridge.

What has become of the old battle cry for uniforms for the band? Haven't heard anything about it for a long time. If the thing is going through, something should be started.

FIRST MIXED BOUT STAGED TONIGHT

Mike Howard, Wrestling Coach Ready for McCarthy, Ex-Partner of Dempsey

Jack McCarthy, heavy-weight boxer of Dallas, Texas, who is to meet Mike Howard, Iowa wrestling coach, at the American legion hall tonight in the first mixed bout to be staged in Iowa City, arrived here yesterday afternoon. The fighter, judging from outward appearances, is in shape for the bout. McCarthy has been training hard for the past two weeks as he considers this contest one of the most important in his career.

"Just one smash," says McCarthy, the husky Texan, "is all I want at that bird," in speaking of the way he is going to make Mike Howard bite dust tonight at the legion hall. McCarthy is a husky, standing well over six feet in his stockings, and weighing around 190 pounds in ring togs. Before entering the ring as a professional, McCarthy was the sparring partner of Jack Dempsey, heavy-weight champion of the world, and aided the champion in preparing for his bout with Georges Carpentier at Jersey City one year ago last fourth of July. Since entering the professional ranks, McCarthy has taken up the new idea of the mixed bout, in which he has been very successful, winning every encounter.

However, Mike Howard is no less optimistic in expressing his confidence in his ability to pin the fighter to the mat. Mike says, "Barring accidents, and with an even number of breaks in my favor, I expect to win inside of ten minutes," discussing his chances of victory in his mix with Jack Dempsey's ex-sparring partner. The wrestling instructor has been working out every day with the University wrestling squad, and is in the best of condition; he has also been working out with Dave Fidler, local boxer and fight promoter, in order to get on to grappling with a fighter.

Judging from the way the tickets have been going the past week there will be the largest crowd that ever attended a fight in Iowa City since the palmier days of the boxing game. This is the first mixed bout to be carded in the northern states, although there has been several of these wrestler-boxer affairs staged in the south. The idea, although an old one, was not brought to light again until a year ago last summer when "Strangler" Lewis, king of the wrestlers, challenged Jack Dempsey for the mixed heavy-weight championship of the world.

The main go between Howard and McCarthy will not start until after the Iowa-Cornell basketball game, which will enable the fans to witness both events. Dave Fidler, Iowa boxing instructor, is promoting the event which is only one of the many attractive cards he has signed up for the following winter. He has also arranged a good preliminary attraction for to-night.

SWIM AND MAT MEET SET FOR MARCH 23

Many High School Entrants Already Signed; Expect Success for Event

The date of Iowa's annual inter-scholastic wrestling and swimming meet has been set for March 23 and 24. Several enquiries have already been received from some high schools, particularly Ft. Dodge, Davenport, Cherokee, and all three of the Des Moines high schools, making certain a large entrance list.

There will be nine weights in the wrestling meet, 95 pounds, 105 pounds, 115 pounds, 125 pounds, 135 pounds, 145 pounds, 155 pounds, 175 pounds, and heavyweight.

IOWA MEETS YALE IN SHOOT TODAY

Need High Score To Win; To Get Score From Yale
Tomorrow Night

A score of at least 497 out of a possible 500 will be needed for the Iowa rifle team to win in the match with Yale according to Captain Martin. The Yale Rifle team started their season the first part of November while this is the opening match for the Iowa team.

The match is scheduled for tomorrow but because of the nearness of vacation the Iowa team will shoot today at the new armory. Yale's score will be received by telegraph tomorrow evening before nine o'clock.

The rules specify that the men on each team shall fire ten record shots each from prone position. Besides this each man is allowed two shots for sighting. The highest possible score is 100. From the ten targets the five highest are picked to count for the score.

Because of the experience the Yale team has had, it is doubtful whether Iowa will win. In a national rifle tournament held in November, Yale in competition with teams from over the country took third place in the prone position with 497 points out of a possible 500.

George J. Fabricus A3 of Irwin is the captain of this year's rifle team. Last year he had the second highest aggregate score for the season. The other members of the team are J. F. Phillips G of Elk Point, S. Dakota; D. W. Bray Cm3 of Burnside, Ill.; W. J. Dehner A4 of Iowa City; F. W. DeKoltz S2 of Filer, Idaho; T. A. Hartman G of Cedar Rapids; L. F. Jahnke L1 of Muscatine; C. W. Smith A2 of Fairfield; R. C. Woods; F. D. Gibson S3 of Missouri Valley.

TRINIDAD YIELDS MOST OF ASPHALT

Geology Club Speaker Gives
Summary of Industry
In Trinidad

Seventy-five per cent of the world's supply of asphalt and enough to supply the world for at least 250 years is to be found on the island of Trinidad, which is twenty-five miles from the coast of Venezuela, in South America, according to Mr. N. E. Baker, A. '17, in a talk before the geology club yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the old science building. Mr. Baker spent three years in Trinidad working for the General Asphalt Company, of Philadelphia, Penn. He is now connected with the Standard Oil Company of New York.

Pitch Lake, a huge asphalt lake, 127 acres in area, and measuring 160 feet in depth yields the greatest amount of the black "tarry" substance. The beds are fairly soft and many negroes are employed to pick and dig out the black asphalt, bearing huge chunks of it on their heads to the dump which puts the material on cars. The natural asphalt is then heated to 175 degrees Fahrenheit for twelve hours in order to drive off twenty-four per cent of the water which is found in the substance; and run as a hot liquid into barrels where it cools and solidifies. In explaining the origin of asphalt, Mr. Baker said: "Asphalt may best be explained as a residue of petroleum. Oil bearing layers of rock have been exposed by weathering and erosion, leaving a residue of asphalt."

The products of asphalt are tar-paper, shingles, paints, lubricants, and inventors are trying to make phonograph records from this material, according to Mr. Baker.

In speaking of the animal life and vegetation of the island of Trinidad, Mr. Baker said, "There is much wild game. However monkeys, tiger cats and pumas are not common. Many large snakes are to be found on the island, chiefly of the boa constrictor type. They are often from ten to twenty feet in length."

Pharmacy College Receives Chinese Smoking Outfit

An opium smoking set of Chinese origin has recently been received by the college of pharmacy for exhibition purposes. The set is most curious in appearance. It consists of nine pieces. Two pipes are included. One is a cylindrical piece of polished briarwood, eighteen inches long, sealed at one end with a substance resembling common red sealing wax. About four inches from the end is an opening, surrounded by a piece of silver, highly carved and polished. The hole bored through the entire length of the pipe is about a quarter of an inch in diameter.

The other pipe is made from a hollow skull, carved from the same kind of wood, to which a black rubber hose is attached. At the other end of this hose is a mouthpiece very much like those found on pipes in use today. Two slender metal sticks, called Yen Hoks, are included. They are used in taking the opium from the capsule in which it is sent, and in heating it before placing it in the pipe. A black handled, crooked metal tool is sent with the explanation that by using it the pipe bowl is cleaned out.

The brass container, in which the opium is smuggled into the country, is found in the collection. The sides of it are all completely covered with Chinese characters. The lamp over which the opium is heated is a common spirit lamp but is mounted on a beautifully carved brass stand. An instrument very much like the mute used in a cornet, is sent in the set. This is used to smother out the flame of the opium burning in the pipe so that it can be relighted and used again.

Kameswar N. Kathju, of Bicher, India, a graduate student in botany, lectured at the regular meeting of the Botany club, which was held yesterday at 4:10 in room 202, old science building. Mr. Kathju illustrated his talk, which was on his home land which is located in the Himalaya mountains in North Hindustan, with a number of photographs which were taken in that country. He spoke in particular of the economic uses of the plants and forests.

The meetings of the club which are held every Monday at 4:10 in room 202 are open to all students in Botany and others who are interested. The programs are in the hands of the members of the staff, graduate students and students who are majoring in botany. The report of the schedule of assignments for programs during the winter months was read at the meeting yesterday.

The programs will be devoted almost entirely to lectures on, "Plant Life of the Tropics," which will be illustrated by lantern slides and plant material. Since every member of the staff of the department of botany has spent some time in the tropics, they are well prepared to lecture on the plants of that region.

THE GRADE POINT SYSTEM

The grade point system adopted by the faculty of the college of liberal arts at its last meeting means a higher educational standard not only for the liberal arts college but for the whole University. The new ruling will not work a serious handicap to any and it may spur the laggards on to greater efforts. Students who have the most extra-curricular work not infrequently are the best students. It will effect this group but little.

The new grade point system requires one to have an average grade of approximately C— for a degree, that is, if he wishes to graduate in the prescribed number of years. Since the average of all students in the University is approximately C—, and few will acknowledge that they are below the average in intelligence, the new ruling should cause little concern to the individual student.

There are always to be found in every college a comparatively large number of students who are capable of doing good work but who are content merely with "getting by." To raise the required standard for this group works no injustice and it does serve to make them apply themselves more diligently.

CONTEMPORARY OPINION

(New York World)

A PROMISE UNREDEEMED

Thus far the Washington Treaty for the limitation of naval armament is only a promise.

Neither France nor Italy has ratified it and the sentiment of the French Chamber of Deputies is frankly hostile. Both the British and the American Governments have halted the work of scrapping battleships, and now comes the House Appropriations Committee to complain that "competition is on again." The committee urges the President to call another conference to limit cruisers, submarines and aircraft, for the reason that if the new competition goes unchecked "the purse-strings again must be relaxed and this Government, like all others, will be constrained to launch a new program to the extent necessary to keep us at least abreast of the other powers."

The general opinion in Washington is that Mr. Harding will not adopt the committee's recommendation, which is another way of saying that the President is unwilling to finish the task that he assumed so reluctantly after Senator Borah had made the issue.

The House committee's report could just as well have been written last December as this December, because it was apparent then that the Washington Conference was dealing with only half a program at best. It takes longer for a nation to bankrupt its treasury by building cruisers and subsidiary craft than by building dreadnoughts, but given time, the thing can be done without difficulty, and the Washington Navy Treaty dealt only with the dreadnought aspects of competitive armament.

This was not difficult, because the British were no longer keen about big battleships, and so far as the United States was concerned size had already overtaken the capacity of the Panama canal. Japan, the only other country vitally interested in the dreadnought proposition, was ready to stop competition whenever the United States was ready to stop. Hence there were no serious obstacles to the 5-5-3 agreement, and the treaty in that respect would already be in effect if Italy and France had not been amde parties to the convention. When they were brought in new and needless complications were created, and because of those complications the treaty has never reached fulfillment.

Now comes the question of cruisers and auxiliary ships, and it is apparent that the people of no country have received the financial relief from the conference that they expected. The main reason is that the issue is so much greater than the conference. The Harding administration was not so much concerned with the limitation of armament as it was in trying to prove that it had found a substitute for the League of Nations and for Mr. Wilson's foreign policy, without involvements or commitments, as Mr. Harding calls them. It felt the necessity of doing something that would satisfy an insistent public demand and which would at the same time be consistent with the Old Guard record in the Senate which the administration inherited.

The thing was not so simple as it seemed to the best minds, and time had unravelled none of the tangle. The ostensible object of the Washington Conference, which was to make an end of competitive armament, has not yet been reached, and Mr. Harding will have to travel considerably further on the road before he reaches the goal that Mr. Hughes so eloquently described.

The report of the House committee may not be pleasant reading in the White House and the State Department, but it has the merit of truth and frankness. It is something for the administration to study, not to pigeonhole.

The Sounding Board

LIMPING LIMERICKS

There was a young freshman from Fertile
In love with a flapper named Myrtle.
They set out to skate,
Cut a mean figure eight—
When they came to they found they'd turned turtle.

Speaking of the unceasing search for the "bright, particular word," we read that twenty-two dogs have been received here and "installed" in their new kennels.

We can think of no more appropriate verb, unless perhaps "assembled."

PROFESSORS

The other evening when we had so much work to do that we decided not to do any of it, we found ourselves thinking about the various profs who have lectured us during our brief sojourn at the University. Just as we have a favorite undergraduate, a favorite billiard table, and a favorite co-ed, so we have favorite professors.

After some meditation we decided that they are seven in number, and apportioned among the departments in which we have studied as follows: Two from the department of English, two from the department of political science, one from the department of geology, one from the department of mathematics, and one from the college of commerce.

We are at a loss to know whether seven is an unusually large or an uncommonly small number. Perhaps some of our readers can orient us.

"How Co-eds Hunt," an article in the December Alumnus, will be eagerly read by those of us who always knew they hunted, but were unable to analyze their methods.

GOING HOME

Tomorrow 6,000 students will dash madly for two overcrowded railway stations, jam aboard an insufficient number of cars, and stand up (unless they were born under a lucky star) most of the way home. Personally—yes, we know that the use of "personally" was recently decried by "Common Errors"—personally we shall clutch a traveling bag by the handle and set out for Smalltown, Iowa.

And when we arrive at Smalltown (assuming that eventually we do arrive) we shall jump off without waiting for the train to come to a full stop, and fan for the parental abode with a glad cry. That's how glad we'll be to get home and park the dogs under the groaning board.

Human nature, as has often been said, is perversity itself. According to the Iowa geological survey, "if oil is to be found anywhere it will be found in the southwestern part of the state."

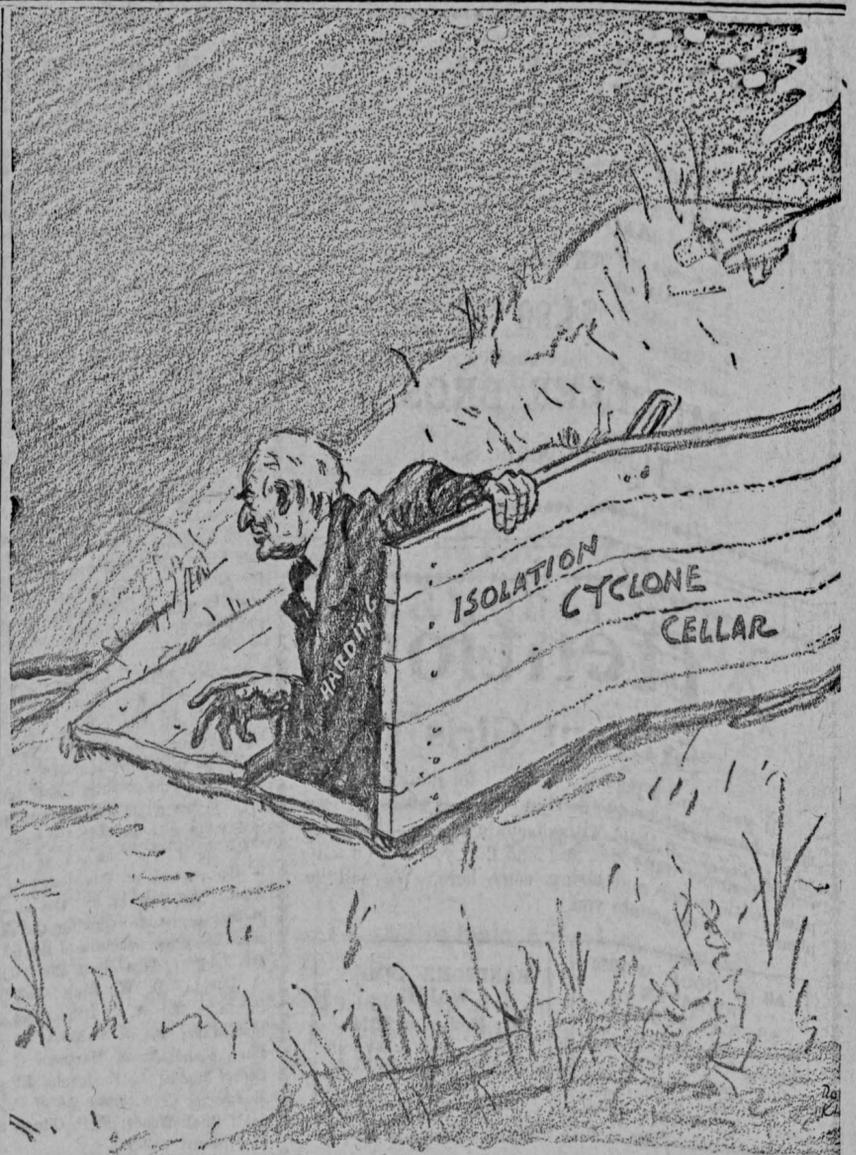

And so they're drilling night and day up at Decorah.

The Problem of American Colleges

Warning against reaction unfavorable to public education, both in this country and abroad, has been voiced by Dr. David Kinley, president of the University of Illinois, one of the great American state universities noted for their multifarious adaptation to the needs of democracy. Dr. Kinley believes he sees signs of a current counter to that which has carried education in America to its present vast expanse. He voiced his warning as follows:

It seems to me that I see signs of a reaction in this country as well as in the older countries against the development of public education. In various quarters people, alarmed at the tremendous influx of students into our colleges and universities, are telling us that we must educate the best and not the most, hereby implying that we have been doing the opposite. I do not believe that we have. Others are insisting that only a comparatively small number of people are fit for higher education, and that we must find means to pick them out in advance and give them the benefits, while leaving the rest of mankind in a state of intellectual darkness that will, in the minds of these people, insure their following their heaven-appointed leaders.

In short, I see signs of a tendency away from democratic ideas in education, and I do not think that the movement is justified or wise.

I do not believe that we are yet at the stage of knowledge where we can assuredly say that the so-called laws of heredity determine to a greater or less definite measure who shall or who shall not be primarily useful and eminent, or that the wisdom of experience may be set aside by the new-fangled fad of what is called psychological tests and theories for vocational guidance.

I believe that every son of the democracy should have the opportunity to show that he is competent to absorb and to use in the service of the public that complete and general education which in the noble words of Milton "fits a man to perform justly, skillfully and magnanimously all the offices, both private and public, of peace and war."

I have little sympathy with the discussion of which we have lately had so much, as to the relative advantages of alleged colleges of culture and other institutions of which the critics assume the universities to be the most sinful examples, supposedly devoted, according to the critics, to the useful and practical. I do not believe that such distinction can possibly be made.

I shall prefer to say that it is the purpose of every university to interpret the history of mankind for the purpose of the present, whether in terms of past conditions or of present conditions. The state university preferably desires to interpret that culture in terms of present conditions; but no less and no more than other universities does it attempt to repeat and interpret the culture and messages of the prophets of all the centuries.

The American state university of the twentieth century is an organism of the productive state striving to express in tangible realization the expressions of present democracy, and adjusts itself to the liberalities of a new humanism. I would say that the educational purpose of every university is to interpret for and into the lives of its students and people the aspirations of humanity, in terms of present as well as of past conditions, and to give effect to this interpretation in life. Such interpretation is the culture of the times.

The average level of intelligence in a democracy must be high enough for the people to understand, at least in a general way, the problems of the life of their society, even though the great mass of the people themselves offer no solution for problems in that life.

In its function of developing and sustaining the Nation, education operates in a two-fold way. In the first place it must give an education which will raise the general level of intelligence of all the people. It is idle to expect intelligent self-government from an uneducated people. The more complicated the life of society becomes, the more necessary is the education to understand its processes and to guide them intelligently.

The sustenance of the Nation through education requires that all people shall be educated in the great elemental principles, traditions and ideals that give character to the Nation and direction to its progress. This is the main purpose of the public schools, ordinarily so-called. It is to educate the children of the people in the common heritage, political and social, tradition, principle and idealism peculiar to the particular people. Without that education democracy cannot continue to exist. On that education, its continuance, and its emphasis, depends the continuance of our democratic republic.

In addition, however, our educational system must give opportunity for what we may call an elementary and middle education, for those who wish training for a practical life of service in a democratic republic, whether those lines be economical or cultural in the narrow sense, or what not; for this phase of education will make the members of the democracy more economically independent and therefore more contented and better members of a democratic society. Such education will enable them to add to its economic welfare and its social equilibrium.

A third phase of our educational system looks rather to the development than merely to sustenance of the Nation. Here enter the colleges and universities, which in a democratic republic should be open to all who can meet their requirements. The standards should be the same for all. The conditions for admission and education should be the real tests of intellectual competency. But that competency should be acknowledged in everyone who can meet those tests. Here we expect to discharge the educational duty of giving the higher and perhaps special training needed for those who can devote themselves in the service of the people more intensely to the special problems of civilization in which they are to live, and of which they are to be a part. This is the developing function of education so far as it concerns itself with the training of men and women.

If we choose to include under the term education that division of university work we call research, and we may fairly do so, we broaden the application of the phrase, development of the Nation, for by research we seek to add directly and indirectly to its economic, its political and its moral welfare—Christian Science Monitor.

IOWA DEBATERS WIN PRAISE FROM MANY

Negative, Despite Defeat, Shows Marked Ability; Affirmative Was Clearly Superior

The University of Iowa, by winning from Minnesota and losing to Illinois in the I-M-I debate last Friday night, completed the tie among the three universities, each of whom won one debate and lost one. The affirmative in every case defeated the negative. This is more surprising when it is considered that public sentiment in general leans towards the negative of the proposition, "Resolved: That Congress should have the power to override decisions of the Supreme Court by re-enacting laws after they have been declared unconstitutional."

Losers Show Real Ability

"The Iowa-Illinois debate at the University of Illinois last Friday night, which Illinois won, was very close," declared Prof. Genn N. Merry of the department of speech, who accompanied the Iowa debaters. "The judge himself, Prof. James M. O'Neil of the University of Wisconsin, declared that the debate turned in the last rebuttal speech of the affirmative. Up to that time, the Iowa negative had won. That the last rebuttal should turn the debate indicates how close it was. Members of the Iowa team, Paul C. Bucy A2 of Hubbard, Kenneth M. Dunlap L1 of Jefferson, and George O. Hurley L1 of Rolfe, represented the University of Iowa with credit to themselves and to their University."

Hard Subject To Debate

Prof. J. P. Ryan of Grinnell college, who judged the Iowa-Minnesota debate last Friday night, which Iowa won, explained the reasons for his decision before a meeting of the debaters, Delta Sigma Rho, and the men's and women's forensic council in the Y. M. C. A. rooms after the debate. "In all my twenty-five years' experience," he declared, "I have never heard a harder proposition to debate. Personally I favor the negative of the proposition. The affirmative would have a hard time to win generally on the issue they presented in the debate. But on the basis of effective debating between the Iowa and Minnesota teams, the Iowa affirmative did win. The debate turned in rebuttal. The Minnesota debaters did not seize all their opportunities. They were onto the defensive instead of attacking. Their type of speaking was more polished than Iowa's, but, on the other hand, the Iowa debaters, Harold D. Read L1 of Des Moines, Max Livingston A2 of Waterloo, and Buel G. Beems A3 of Anamosa, set up the negative contentions and then effectively smashed them in rebuttal."

Dean Henry C. Jones of the college of law characterized the Iowa-Minnesota contest as the most interesting debate he had ever heard.

FINANCIAL EMBARRASSMENT AMONG STUDENTS EVIDENT AS DAY NEARS TO PULL OUT FOR THE HOME TOWN

With the beginning of Christmas vacation a day or two ahead, this is the traditional time to sell that old overcoat or suit, the sleeves of which have become noticeably worn. It is considered the logical, or perhaps ethical time, to "hock" that watch and then buy a railroad ticket to the village where the paternal mansion is located. It is the busy season for the "three-ball joints" such as are.

The advent of the buyer of old clothes, shoes, stick-pins, hats, jewelry and socks means that the students are about to depart from their scenes of labor to their paternal domiciles. It is the time of the year when the seller of new clothes to college men, and also men who stay in college, finds that his business is being infringed upon by the students anxious to make enough money to pay car fare home.

To say that this condition is a general one would undoubtedly be an exaggeration but nevertheless there are hundreds of students in this university at present trying to devise some method of getting home for the one season that home seems sweetest. The resourcefulness of these men, and also women, is remarkable. Nevertheless, unfortunately this resourcefulness often results in acts regretted later.

Clothes Are Sacrificed
Buyers of old clothes assert that students during the days immediately preceding a vacation, at Christmas time and before the summer vacation, are perfectly willing to sell their old clothes at almost any figure. The equity of the bargains arrived at between students and these dealers in many cases is dubious indeed. Surprising to men, at least, these old clothes buyers state that women are much harder to deal with and are less prone to selling their clothes at a figure lower than the one which they had decided on previously as being a proper one.

Not only are professionals in this line of business particularly active at this season, but many of the more fortunate students find it profitable to look for bargains among the possessions of their less fortunate fellows. Although there have been a number of cases of "fleeing", these cases are really exceptional.

Will They Ride Blinds
Further, after having tried all the means of raising carfare known to them, and in vain, how many students will there be who will ride other parts of the trains than the cushions? That there will be some is certain and the number will probably vary with the weather conditions. If mild weather prevails there will likely be many. A large share of these men often do not ride "the blinds" because they cannot afford to buy a ticket but because they desire to save the money if possible.

The best that can be hoped for in this matter is that no one will be forced to sell some one else's belonging or that he will be forced to sell so many of his own that he cannot protect himself sufficiently from the rigors of the Iowa climate. One such case was observed last week. A pledge of a prominent fraternity was seen returning from the Iowa-Knox basketball game attired in golf knickers and hose, sheep skin coat pulled high about his head but unfortunately he had been forced to sell his hats and caps. Whatever his dire necessity was is unknown, but at least he was not wearing a head dress of any kind and the temperature was not very high.

States it is pointed out. The press, which has been devoting whole columns to the "American plan", is now stating that the whole thing was premature. This has resulted in the feeling among the public that somebody has been "let down."

Germany, who under the reported plan of participation of the United States, would have been the chief beneficiary, is now the biggest sufferer because of false hopes that had arisen in the former enemy nation. The original Washington despatches, which greatly improved the exchange of the mark, upset industrial standards of wages and prices.

CHANGES COME IN GAGE TOURNAMENT

Phi Delta Thetas Beat Sigmas; Sigma Chis Forfeits To Delta Kappa Gams

In a one-sided game last night the Phi Delta Thetas defeated the Sigma Pis 14-3 in the interfraternity basketball league. Sigma Chi forfeited to Delta Kappa Gamma by failing to appear at 8 o'clock. A postponed game between Acacia and Delta Theta Phi was played yesterday afternoon, the latter winning 9-4.

These games have changed the relative standings of the teams in the four sections of the league. In section 1 Delta Kappa Gamma has advanced to fourth place. Phi Delta Chi in section 2 has dropped from a tie for first place to third and Phi Epsilon Pi moved from fifth to fourth in rank. Delta Theta Phi is now number 4 in section 3 by reason of its win over Acacia. Xi Psi Phi has climbed out of the cellar position and is now tied with Sigma Pi and Chi Kappa Pi for third place.

No games will be played tonight or tomorrow night on account of the approaching vacation.

Hawley Declares Viviani Lost Vote By Fake Illness

By Hudson Hawley
(United News Staff Correspondent)
Paris, Dec. 18—Among the French suffragettes, former Premier Viviani has lost his standing.

The distinguished statesman had to become ill right in the middle of the Senate's recent consideration of the suffrage bill. He remained ill right through to the end of it, when the project was rejected by 156 to 134. And you can never get those women to believe that he couldn't by sheer dint of his torrential oratory, have changed that adverse vote into a majority for the cause.

Now that the bill is dead and buried, Viviani can come out again. And seeing him out and about once more, wicked tongues are beginning to hint that his illness was of the variety known as "diplomatic." They say this:

Viviani, who has just been elected a senator after thirty years' service as a deputy, wants to get in right with his new legislative buddies. Why? He wants to succeed dear old Leon Bourgeois when he cordially detests as president of the senate. From that exalted position he believes he can jump even higher, at the 1927 election; that is to the presidency of the Republic. Consequently, the gossips say, he was careful not to affront the majority of the Senate, which has just proved its hostility to suffrage, and which he had good reason to know to be hostile before the vote was taken.
