PLAYERS GIVE JAMES FORBES' COMEDY TONIGHT

Open General Sale of Tickets for "The Famous Mrs. Fair" Today

Tonight at eight o'clock Prof. E. C. Mabie, director of the University theatre, presents the class in dramatic production in "The Famous Mrs. Fair", an American comedy by James Forbes.

Mr. Forbes, a playwright of considerable note, says that after he has become acquainted with his characters and has found out what their story is, he is extremely unhappy and dissatisfied if he cannot put that story into a sentence. The preliminary sentence which summed up for him "The Famous Mrs. Fair" was, he says, something as follows: "A woman actuated by duty engages in war work, winning honors and the loving admiration and encouragement of her family; but when on her return she, actuated by selfish vanity, again leaves them, the realization is brought home to her tragically that a wife and mother can have a career but not the expense of her obligations to her home and family."

By the new plan adopted for applications for season ticket holders, reservations were held at the Iowa Supply company up until 7 p. m. last evening. The general ticket sale opens this morning, and all tickets which have not been called for will be thrown into the general sale. Season ticket holders who failed to make applications for reservations may secure tickets this morning at the general sale at the Iowa Supply company.

Annual Concert By Clapp, Leon, and Kendrie To Be Given January 23

The annual concert given by Prof. Philip G. Clapp, Prof. Frank E. Kendrie and Prof. Walter Leon, of the department of music, which was erroneously scheduled in Sunday's Iowan to be held last night, will be given on the evening of Tuesday, January 23, at 8 o'clock in the natural science auditorium.

These annual concerts given by the staff of the department of music are among the most enjoyable given in Iowa City during the year. Last year's concert was attended by one of the largest audiences that ever crowded and jammed its way into the natural science auditorium. The program will open with Cesar Franck's sonata for violin and piano, Professor Kendrie playing the violin and Professor Clapp the piano. This will be followed by an operatic selection which is to be sung by Professor Leon.

Cesar Franck, although a Belgian by birth, is the founder of the modern French school of composition. This sonata is one of the most significant modern works of its type.

The remainder of the concert will be made up of a number of selections played by Professor Clapp, a group of songs sung by Professor Leon and a group of violin selections played by Professor Kendrie. The selection of has not been completed, but will be announced at a later date. The same performers will give the same or a similar performance at the Kiwanis club in Cedar Rapids the following night.

Doctor Baldwin will speak on the question, "What Is a Normal Child?" Saturday, January 20, when he appears before the Cedar Rapids college club.

WILLIAMS WILL ADDRESS IOWA DOCTORS TODAY

Iowa Graduate of '82 Who Is At Annual Clinic Practiced for Forty-One Years

Registration at the medical clinic today is expected to near the two hundred mark. Attendance last evening totaled around 150. The fact that this year's registration has not exceeded last year's number is due to the fact that the time of the meeting was placed ahead three months earlier this year than last.

Forty-one years of active service in the cause of human suffering is the record of Dr. A. R. Leith of Wilton Junction, '82, who is a member of the oldest class of graduate Iowa State university doctors represented at the medical clinic. Sessions of the clinic began yesterday morning and will continue until this evening.

The University of Iowa's medical college is the alma mater of most of the registrants at the clinic and Iowa is the professional home of most of the doctors. Dr. Alfred Stocker of Rock Island, who is one of the University's guests, is an exception to both. He is a graduate of Illinois, and is practicing in Rock Island, Ill. Up until late yesterday afternoon he was the only out-of-the-state doctor to register. Dr. Arthur Steindler, of Perkins hospital, is the only graduate of a foreign medical school who is registered at the clinic. He took his medical degree in Vienna, Austria.

A headliner of today's program is Dr. John Whitridge Williams, professor of obstetrics of Johns Hopkins medical school, who will deliver an address at 11:10 o'clock this morning in the natural science auditorium. Dr. Williams arrived from Baltimore, Md., yesterday morning.

Today's program includes:

Morning
8:10-10:00 o'clock—Clinic in Internal Medicine—Drs. C. P. Howard, F. J. Rohner, A. C. Davis and W. E. Gatewood—surgical amphitheatre.

10:00-11:00 o'clock—Clinic in Genito-Urinary Surgery—Dr. N. G. Alcock, surgical amphitheatre.

11:10 o'clock—Address—Prof. John Whitridge Williams, of Baltimore, Md., natural science auditorium.

Afternoon
1:30-3:00—Obstetrical Clinic, lantern slide demonstration—Dr. F. H. Falls, medical amphitheatre.

3:30-5:00—Visit to psychopathic hospital—Dr. S. T. Orton and staff.

Junior and senior medical students of the University have been excused from classes during the clinic in order that they might attend the sessions and assist in welcoming the visitors.

Faculty members, students and visiting doctors mingled last evening at the men's gymnasium at the annual smoker which is, by precedent, the entertainment always planned for the first evening of the clinic. Dinner guests at the Hotel Jefferson last evening included all former Dean internes. The dinner was scheduled for 6 o'clock and the smoker for 7:45 o'clock.

FRENCH FAIL TO INCREASE COAL OUTPUT IN RUHR

Economic Minister Of Germany Warns Of Impending Disaster

Berlin, Jan. 16—The Reichsbank is printing twenty-five billion new bank notes a day and is still unable to meet the country's need because of the increasing depreciation. The mark closed on the Bourse Tuesday 16,600 to the dollar.

By Ferdinand Jahn

Berlin, Jan. 16—French occupation of the Ruhr has resulted in a 15 to 20 per cent reduction in the coal output, Herr Becker, economic minister declares. Becker addressing the national economic council, warned that Germany is facing an economic crisis, as the result of the French Ruhr policy.

Many factories will be shut down and this will increase unemployment and enhance cost of living, Becker stated.

"The nation must be prepared for great sacrifices", he said. The minister scolded France for "defying America and said the United States removed the troops from Coblenz as a protest.

The German government confiscated the coal of Berlin retailers and wholesalers. The supplies will be used to heat municipal buildings and hospitals. It is anticipated that German concerns will have to purchase their coal supplies abroad. Large orders are known to have been placed in England. In view of an incident at Bochum where one German was killed and several wounded when French soldiers fired into a crowd, the authorities ordered the population to cease provocative songs and to halt when challenged by the French.

It was expected that a state of seige will be declared by the French in Bochum Tuesday night and that the occupation would be extended to include Hamm.

FRIVOL ENTERS JUDGE CONTEST

Humorous Magazines of Leading Colleges and Universities Compete for Cup

Along with Iowa's humbling the eastern colleges in the athletic world comes the chance to prove her superiority in the intellectual or humorous line as well. Frivol has accepted a special invitation issued by the Judge to enter its big annual College Wit contest this spring. The humorous publications of all the leading colleges and universities in the United States are to enter material in competition for a silver cup offered by Judge to the university or college sending the best features, both art or literary. Only the publications of recognized worth are advanced the talents of Iowa as shown in the contest and in consequence Frivol will be matched against the wits of all the eastern as well as a number of the big western colleges. The school winning the silver cup three years is allowed to keep it and as the contests now stands the Cornell Widow has carried it two years while the Columbia Jester has been victorious once.

For the two best individual contributions published, Judge is offering two small silver cups and all material published will be paid according to the regular rates for con-

GERMANS FACE COURT MARTIAL IF THEY REFUSE

Gen. Degoutte Issues An Ultimatum To Coal Operators In Ruhr

(By United News)

Dusseldorf, Jan. 17—(Wednesday)—German industrialists must resume coal deliveries to France and Belgium this morning or be tried before a court martial, Gen. Simon, French commander here informed representatives of the Ruhr operators.

Dusseldorf, Germany, Jan. 16—General Degoutte, French commander in chief has issued an ultimatum to Ruhr industrialists stating that coal deliveries must be resumed Thursday or further reprisals will be exacted by France.

The order—and threat—was delivered to the Ruhr mine operators who were summoned to a conference with the general Tuesday. His ultimatum went over the head of the government of Chancellor Cuno. It was Cuno's fuel administrator, Herr Stutz who forbade the industrialists to make further deliveries of coal to the French and Belgians as long as these two nations continued the occupation of the Ruhr.

There was no explanation of what Gen. Degoutte meant by "further reprisals" but any one of the following steps may be taken:

1. Confiscation of coal already mined.
2. Arrest of the rich coal barons of Ruhr.
3. Importation of French miners into the Ruhr if German workmen refuse to cooperate.
4. Occupation of more German territory.

The Germans are freely predicting that the French Ruhr plan will result in military glory and economic failure. Gen. Degoutte informed industrialists that occupation of Dortmund was the first reprisal for the Germans refusal to deliver coal and that further steps were ready for immediate enforcement if operators persisted in attitude.

The general brusquely closed the conference when the industrialists attempted to reply to him. Dortmund, Jan. 16—The French occupied Dortmund Tuesday thus almost completing the military operations in the Ruhr valley.

Paris, Jan. 16—France armed with another technicality is now in a position to exact further penalties of Germany. The Allied reparations commission at the suggestion of Pres. Lewis Barthelemy voted Germany in "voluntary default" of deliveries in coal and kind since the first of the year. France, Italy and Belgium sided together in the decision while Sir Kemball Cook, who represented Sir John Bradbury, British member, did not vote.

Premier Poincare welcomed the decision of the commission because he may now within the law of Versailles Treaty requisition coal that has already been due from the Ruhr pits.

BUSH TO CONDUCT TOURS IN FRANCE

Iowa Professor Plans Foreign Trips for Students During Summer

The second annual session of the College of the Seine, a combination of travel and study in France, will be conducted this year by Prof. Stephen H. Bush, head of the department of romance languages, and Prof. Rene Talamon, of the University of Michigan. The purpose of the arrangement is to bring students into closer contact with French art and life.

Two itineraries are offered, one covering the period June 20 to September 6, the other beginning June 28 and ending August 17. Those who choose the longer will sail from Montreal on the S. S. Melita, arrive in Paris on July 30, and spend a month there attending the courses of the Alliance Francaise, the summer school of the university. Following this the party will travel during the month of August.

The schedule includes such cities as Rouen, Poitiers, Avignon, Bordeaux, Nice, Geneva and Monte Carlo. Automobile trips through Brittany, the Pyrenees and the Alps will be made. The shorter trip consists of the month at the College of the Seine and an eight-day automobile trip through Normandy, Brittany and Touraine.

Last year Professor Bush took a party of ten through Europe and the near East. Lue Prentiss G of Iowa City and Mary E. Thompson A4 of Iowa City have signified their intention of going this year.

Prices for the trips are $935 for the longer and $710 for the shorter. The conductors of the trips are particularly well qualified. Professor Bush has traveled much in France and saw twenty months of service there during the war. After the armistice he helped organize the course taken for a semester by 2,000 officers and men at the University of Paris. He also lectured at the university and acted as dean of the detachment.

Professor Talamon is a native of France and served in the French army.

Spatula Publishes 2 Articles From Iowa Instructor

Miss Zada M. Cooper, assistant in the college of pharmacy, has written two articles for the November and December "Spatula," a pharmacy magazine published in Boston. One article entitled "The Pharmacist in Literature" deals with a few side lights on the character of different predecessors and associates in the pharmacy profession and how they appear to literary people. She also shows something of the evolutionary stages through which the pharmacists have passed, by quoting different men and women who have already written articles concerning pharmacy and pharmacists in literature.

In her other article "Drugs and Medicines of the Bible," she tells about the drugs and medicines mentioned in the Bible and the remedies used in the ancient history of pharmacy.

STEINER TALKS OF DEMOCRACY AND FREEDOM

Grinnell Educator In Vespers Address Says Unrest Is Caused By Repression

"Democracy is a passion for right relationships. Democracy in America must be spiritualized. Biologically this making of a race in America is the most dangerous experiment ever tried. We are a mongrel race. Nations are made, not of blood, but of spirit. Unfortunately in America we are trying to standardize people by pressure. There is a supreme value in personality. We shall never have a spiritualized race until society shall have a bigger meaning than business or industry." This was the keynote of the Vesper address of Prof. Edward A. Steiner of Grinnell college, speaking on "The Making of a Great Race," before an audience which filled every seat in the natural science auditorium by 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

with the glasses and high, full brow of a scholar, hair, grizzled a jaw of purpose, and smiling teeth below his moustache, conversed with his audience, illustrating his points with witty anecdote, quick turns of expression, and a background of scholarly maturity and human understanding.

"I have tried now for thirty years to save the world by talking to it, and the blooming thing won't be saved," he began. We use history to confirm our desires, not to check our passions. The Rocky Mountains are the children of geology; in their slow dying, nations emerge like butterflies from the chrysalis. We are the children of the pioneers. We are a young people. Peaceful burghers and patient peasants have come to us from the insecurity of the Old World. In Jugoslavia, that self-decided and undecided state, I saw a group which had evidently been in America. The men carried bundles; they wore American shoes—by their shoes ye shall know them; and the girls chewed gum. One man told me, 'We from Pittsburg. American boss there said, 'Hello Mike! how's the family. No boss here say 'Hello Mike.' we're going back to Pittsburg.'

"A Mongrel Race"
"I am quite sure none of us want to go to a heaven interrupted by telephone and traffic regulations like that of this autobilious civilization. America was the Indian country. I have studied American history, and I have nowhere found where the Indian chief sent an engraved invitation to Columbus to come over and discover them. We brought to the Indian rifles, rum, and real estate agents. We came to the redman's country, brought over the negro, and imported the Mediterranean and Alpine people. The European immigrant did the hard and difficult work on which civilization is built.

"We are a mongrel race. At a reception in Cleveland—at a reception, one isn't received, he is passed on—I met a woman whom I tried to judge by the shape of her head and by her complexion. I couldn't, for her head was hidden by her hair a la omelet," he made a comprehensive gesture, "and I couldn't see her complexion. She said she was of fourteen different nationalities, and she was very well put together. At a dinner at the White House, with sixteen present, I was the only unmongrelized American there. President Roosevelt confessed to be Dutch, French Huguenot, Irish, Scotch, Revolutionary Yankee, and German. We shall never be sane enough to practice national eugenics. 'Patriotism is not enough; religion must enlarge the conception.

"Democracy must be spiritualized. The few must govern and lead. Under this idea of Nordic dominance, there is danger that the brunettes will survive only by use of peroxide. The leader must go out with a faith to lead, and must teach the mass how to govern.

"I saw the goddess of liberty the other day, and she looked anemic and tired. In our own Des Moines, it was said that men who criticized the Bible were formerly burned; now they are fired. It is the same thing. To blame the Bolsheviks for the red rack and ruin in Russia is like blaming the undertaker for the funeral. It is really due to repression. Men must be free to write and free to teach. All men should have the chance to express themselves.

"When the Stars and Stripes grows dim and meaningless, the faith of mankind grows bankrupt. The difficulty in singing our national anthem is because we are not emphasizing the same words. We must sing together, stressing not 'father's but 'God' in the line,

"Our father's God to Thee Author of liberty."

Professor Steiner is an Austrian-born. He was educated at the universities of Heidleburg, Gottingen, and Berlin. After coming to the United States, he studied at Oberlin college, Oberlin, Ohio, and then entered the ministry. Since 1903, he has been the professor of applied Christianity at Grinnell college. He has devoted much time to lecturing and writing, and is recognized as an authority in the field of sociology. He has specialized on immigration. Among his books are: "The Trail of the Immigrant," "The Broken Wall," "The Immigrant Tide," "Against the Current," "The Mediator," "The Parable of the Cherries," "From Alien to Citizen," "Introducing the American Spirit," "Nationalizing America," "My Doctor's Door," "Sanctus Spiritus and Company," and "Tolstoy the Man."

Introductory to the address on the program were:

Prelude—"Priests' March" from the "Magic Flute" (Mozart) by the University Orchestra; invocation by Rev. Walter C. Shafer; overture—"Lord God of Abraham" and "Elijah" (Mendelssohn) by the orchestra; scripture reading from the third chapter of Ephesians; soprano solo—"When Thou Comest," (Rossini) by Jean Wolfe and the Vesper Choir. President Walter A. Jessup introduced the speaker and Reverend Shafer gave the benediction.

QUINTET TAKES LIGHT WORKOUT

Meet Ohio State Here Saturday Night In Third Conference Game of the Season

The Old Gold team eased up last night after their Michigan victory and had a light workout. The second string trounced on Coach Albert Jenkin's frosh team for two ten-minute periods.

After administering defeat to the strongest team in the conference in a game in which the Hawkeyes outplayed and outfought the Wolverines and one which was anyone's game until the whistle blew, the Iowa team were given a much earned rest. Captain Hicks' playing overshadowed his team-mates although all played brilliant basketball.

Although the Iowa five rested last night Coach Sam Barry has no intentions of letting his men ease up. Ohio State plays here Saturday, January 20. The Buckeyes have lost two of their conference games, one to Illinois and one to Northwestern. Although they have been beaten it took overtime for both games and they are much stronger than their percentage would show. Three of their men are veterans, and are experienced men. Their last game, the one with Northwestern, seasawed back and forth until Dudley, star forward, broke his leg and Northwestern finally won in two extra periods of play. Ohio will come from Chicago where they play Friday.

The team came through the game with no injuries and will be in good shape for the next contest. The freshman squad scrimmages with them daily and will size up with them physically. Practice will be in the new armory this afternoon at 4.

Three Teams Win Games In Race For Fraternity Trophies

Last night Beta Theta Pi won from Phi Epsilon Pi in the interfraternity basketball tournament 20-8. Reinecke playing forward for the Betas scored five baskets. Delta Sigma Delta took Theta Xi into camp by the score of 11 to 5.

Sigma Pi defeated Chi Kappa Pi 9-2, last Saturday afternoon, allowing them only one basket. Overland of the Sigma Pis was the high scorer with two baskets and three free throws to his credit.

Beta Theta Pi: Gibbs, RF; Reinecke, LF; Jeffrey, C; DeSilva, RG; Anderson, LG. Phi Epsilon Pi: Cohn RF; Lutz, LF; Kadesky, C; Urdangen, RG; Hockenberger, LG. Baskets: Gibbs 1, Reinecke 5, DeSilva 1, Anderson 2, Cohn 1, Sherman 1, Lutz 1, Urdangen 1. Free throws: Jeffrey 2.

Games tomorrow will be between Alpha Tau Omega and Phi Gamma Delta at 7:00 o'clock and Delta Theta Phi and Delta Tau Delta at 8:00 o'clock.

Track Squad Prepares for Dual Meet

The track squad under the direction of Coach Bresnahan is gradually rounding into shape. With the first indoor meet more than a month away indications are that the squad will be in the best of shape. Every man is working with determination to get in the best possible condition for the dual meet with Wisconsin on February 24. The Cardinal indoor men's practice started before Christmas and they should be ready to step out at a lively pace by the time the meet rolls around. The Wisconsin squad is reputed to have a strong team and it expects to give Iowa a royal battle. Last year they won the dual argument held at Madison by a comfortable score, and hope to do the same this year. The Hawkeyes, however, are of a different frame of mind. Several departments which Iowa was weak in last season have been strengthened by the return of several men who were not in the University last semester. With these men back they expect to make a better showing.

Last night the usual procedure of warming up was gone through and then the quarter and half milers were sent through their paces. Two easy laps and two laps with the watch with a final sprint of two more laps constituted their workout. They also practiced passing the baton for a few minutes. The milers and two milers loosened up with a few laps of jogging and then ran a half mile against time. After resting for several minutes they finished up by running another half mile with the watch. The sprinters and hurdlers started their evening with customary drill in calisthenics. That finished, they worked on starts and takeoffs. After a few snappy dashes they were sent to the showers.

The high jumpers spent the evening hopping the bar at five feet. They are working diligently to perfect their form, going over the bar and getting their takeoff. The weight men puffed through their "exercises" before tossing the brass pill around the sod enclosure. The coaches are spending much time with the shotputters as that was one of Iowa's weak events last year. Some good material is on hand for this season's team so Iowa should score in this department. The broad-jumpers bent their efforts to perfecting their form on the takeoff and to getting their distance for their run marked out. Only a short workout was held as the military classes had possession of the armory until five o'clock.

American Academy In Rome Offers 2 $3,000 Fellowships

Announcement has just been received here of the annual competition for prizes in painting and sculpturing offered by the school of fine arts of the American Academy in Rome. These fellowships which are to be awarded this year are each for $1000 a year for a special period of three years. So far as is known no student from this institution has ever received this honor.

The competition is open to any unmarried man who is a citizen of the United States and who is particularly qualified to take up work in these branches. The fellowship in painting is provided every third year by the Jacob H. Lazarus fund of the Metropolitan museum of art, while sculpturing fellowship is provided, every third year, by the Rinehart fund of the Peabody institute of Baltimore, Maryland.

The competition for either of these fellowships is not formal, involving the execution of work on prescribed subjects, as has been the case in previous years, but all candidates must submit such drawings, paintings, designs, or statements as are required in the specific subject in question. Fellows who shall marry, or in any other way depart from the procedure prescribed by the rules and regulations of the Academy, shall lose the fellowship.

All applications are to be filed before March 1, with letters of reference and any other documents or evidence of ability they desire. The more specific regulations for the fellowship in painting and that in sculpturing may be obtained from the Daily Iowan. A separate jury will pass judgment on the work submitted in all the various lines. After this examination not more than four candidates will be selected by each jury and referred to the committee on the school of fine arts, which will in turn select those from this number to whom the fellowships are to be awarded.

Apples Help To Finance Annual W. A. A. Vaudeville

"An apple a day keeps the doctor away," has quite decidedly become the most popular slogan at the women's gymnasium, according to Pauline Spencer A4 of Des Moines, and chairman of the W. A. A. finance committee.

The selling of apples was introduced at the women's gymnasium by W. A. A. about Homecoming time, and was primarily started for the benefit of the women taking part in field the department of physical education games. Because women majoring in have so few free hours, the idea of an apple table with a student attendant was abandoned, and the honor system of disposing of apples was tried. This has met with tremendous success, said Miss Spencer. Every day, with perhaps one or two exceptions, the accounts have balanced exactly. Occasionally it happens that we have a five per cent deficit, but the following day invariably shows a surplus to balance the previous day's deficit.

Dr. Henry van Dyke, Author-Diplomat, Resigns Professorship at Princeton

Dr. Henry van Dyke, author and diplomat and Murray professor of English Literature at Princeton University since 1899, tendered his resignation to President Hibben Monday. His only, and rather unique reason for resigning from his position was that he wished to leave a place for a younger man. He recently had passed his seventieth birthday, and in his letter of resignation stated his intentions to find other useful work.

Dr. van Dyke emphatically denied that his resignation was caused by illness or fatigue. He said that he expected his time to be very fully occupied by reading and writing. "There are always half a dozen stories that I want to write," said Dr. van Dyke in his explanation. His course in nineteenth century prose was one of the most popular at Princeton and his loss will be most keenly felt by the English Department. Dr. van Dyke graduated from Princeton in 1876 and was one of the editors of the Princeton Book of Verse and a contributor to the Nassau Literary Magazine.

Dr. van Dyke's career as author and statesman has made him a prominent figure in public life and one of the noted men of the day. After his graduation from Princeton in 1876 he studied in the Princeton Graduate School, Princeton Theological Seminary and the University of Berlin. In 1879 he was ordained as a Presbyterian minister and held pastorates in Newport, R. I., and in New York city. He returned to Princeton in 1899 as Murray, professor of English and with but two breaks has held this post ever since. From 1913 to 1917 Dr. van Dyke acted as United States minister to the Netherlands.

Indian Medicine Man Travels To Sell His Remedies

Two very different schools of medicine have their followers in Iowa City today. One is represented by the college of medicine of the University of Iowa; the other has its follower in the person of Dr. William Deerfoot, Indian medicine man.

Doctor Deerfoot is a native of the Cherokee tribe of Oklahoma. Early in life he was taken from his parents and grew up with a family of white people. He attended Carlyle Indian school in Pennsylvania, where he learned the Indian methods of making medicine from herbs. Since then he has traveled every state in the union, where he has sold his own medicine, "Ton-ka-wah," which means "good medicine."

The office of Doctor Deerfoot presents a combination of modern ideas and Indian customs. On the walls he has an eagle's wing and the skins of animals. In a case hangs a bead vest made by the son of Sitting Bull's squaw, on which are small figures representing each of the battles of Sitting Bull. It looks much like the type of vest the co-eds have adopted.

The medicine man himself wears a bead band around his felt hat. He has many presents which were given him at the annual "pow-wow" of the Indians at the reservation at Tama, Iowa. He dresses in ordinary civilian clothes, but wears his straight, black hair long.

The medicine man's remedy, "Ton-ka-wah," is made from herbs gathered by the Indians of Oklahoma, under the direction of Deerfoot.

Almeda Cutting Receives Points for Seal Emblem

Almeda Cutting A4 of Decorah was awarded her seal emblem at the last meeting of the Seals club. Miss Cutting is the first woman to receive the emblem this year. Seven other women are now on probation and are working for the points necessary for membership in the club.

In order to become a member a woman must pass the American life saving test, attend practice and meetings regularly, and keep training rules. Being able to use the side stroke in swimming counts six points; any other stroke seven points; front dive seven points; running dive seven points; and back dive seven points. A woman must also be able to swim 100 yards in less than three minutes before becoming a member of the club.

The Seals club selected two women, Catherine T. Wright A4 of Des Moines and Amy Benner A3 of Keokuk, to take part in the forty-yard dash for women at the swimming meet which is to be held at Omaha, Neb. January 18. Catherine Wright was the individual point winner in the state, intercollegiate women's swimming meet which was held here last year.

Every Thursday at 5 o'clock women interested in Seals club work on the life saving tests. On Saturday at 11 o'clock Coach Armbruster gives instructions in swimming at the women's gymnasium.

BETHANY CIRCLE INITIATES

Bethany is a national organization for college women who belong to the Christian Church.

Forfeits Cause of Changed Standing In Fraternity Tourney

Phi Gamma Delta continues to lead section one in the interfraternity basketball tournament and Alpha Tau Omega has dropped from second to third for a tie with Sigma Nu which was in fifth place last week. Beta Theta Pi in section two holds second place in a tie with Phi Delta Chi and Phi Epsilon Pi, having come down from a tie for first by reason of a trouncing at the hands of Phi Delta Chi.

Delta Tau Delta still retains a hold on first place in section three. Phi Kappa Sigma and Sigma Phi Epsilon have traded second and third places respectively. Delta Chi has moved from sixth to fourth place, having defeated Acacia and Delta Theta Pi during the week. Xi Psi Phi has strengthened its hold on third place in section four by winning from Theta Xi.

Send the Iowan home. See that the folks get the news.

THE EUROPEAN CRISIS

That the European situation is fast approaching a dangerous climax can not be doubted. France seems determined to exact her pound of flesh, and in the meanwhile, her allies will await the crucial moment, undecided on just what policy to follow.

By the terms of the treaty of Versailles, France is justified in occupying German territory. She warned Germany of the action she would take in the event the Germans failed to comply with the reparation clause, and because they failed, was forced to carry out her threat by occupying the Ruhr valley. Under the circumstances this seems to have been the proper action.

Germany is not in a position to offer armed resistance, and therefore the likelihood of a war between the two countries seems remote. Perhaps France made a mistake; she undoubtedly will spend more money in trying to collect the debt of the Germans than she will realize from the confiscation of coal and wood supplies in the Ruhr. And there is little doubt that France's action at the same time will strengthen Germany. Torn by a half dozen dissenting parties a few days ago, Germany is now a unified country; a strong national sentiment is growing and it is probable that if France retains her grip on the Ruhr, a war may be generated within the next two years which will involve the whole of Europe.

But France had no alternative. She was morally bound to carry out the terms of the treaty,—her allies were also—but rather than involve themselves in a rather embarrassing entanglement, they balked, giving as their reason, the inordinate demands of France. Our own government gave no satisfactory reason for the retirement of the American forces from France. True they were not actively engaged in upirring a settlement nor helping in a constructive way to recognize Europe, still that was America's fault and not France's.

Withdrawal of American troops cut the last tie which bound us with our war aims and policies. We were driven into war by German aggressiveness. We fought in the cause of international law and civilization. We were instrumental in defeating Germany and we intended her to pay for her misdeeds.

She has not paid. She has evaded her promise and defaulted on her obligations. She is still defiant and unrepentant. In 1914 our government ignored Germany's invasion of neutralized Belgium. Today America puts itself in the attitude of being morally outraged by a simple expedient of treaty enforcement, hypocritically misnamed "the invasion of the Ruhr." Are we ready to reprove our former allies for trying to collect what Germany obstinately withholds from them?

RATING PERSONALITY

Dartmouth has come forward with a new selective process in the way of college entrance requirements. Beginning with next fall, this college will rate its candidates not only on intellectual ability but upon character and personality. It is the belief of Dartmouth that "positive qualities of character, wide range of interests and capable performance in school activities should operate as determining factors in selection."

This requirement is sufficiently flexible to keep out undesirable or unworthy students and represents a great advance over the old system of selecting by references from school principles and from friends. It does not, however, solve the problem which confronts the universities of the country.

Personality and character, in a young man of freshman age, are hard to rate even by his most intimate friends. Furthermore it is one of the greatest duties of a college to develop these very things. Should it ever become imperative that institutions of higher learning limit their enrollment, and the present rapid growth would indicate such, a method as the one adopted by Dartmouth would be indefensible for it would strike at the very roots of the fundamental principle of this country—equal opportunity for all.

The Sounding Board

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN

Today is the anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin, by far the most versatile of early Americans. He was scientist, author, diplomat, publisher, statesman, patriot, philosopher and philanthropist all rolled into one. To our way of thinking he left quite some mark for future generations to shoot at.

A very interesting side of Franklin comes out in the fact that no matter what honors came to him, he considered himself first of all a printer, and took great pride in his chosen craft. His last will and testament begins with these significant words:

"I, Benjamin Franklin, printer, late minister Plenipotentiary from the United States of America to the Court of France," &c.

And the epitaph which he himself wrote for his tombstone states that here lies

"The body
Benjamin Franklin,
Printer"

Low: "Say, you can't see me, can you?"
"Why yes, I think I can."
"That's funny; I'm not here."

The subject of free seeds for constituents was debated loudly and at great length in the senate the other day. The argument waxed fierce among the solons, and Senator Heflin of Alabama made an eloquent plea in favor of a continuance of the good old custom of dishing out the embryonic vegetables.

Senator Lodge, who opposed him, was cast as the dark villain of the piece, whose misguided hand was to crush out the life of the little seeds. If he would only withdraw his opposition, alleged Senator Heflin, "millions of vegetables basking in the sun will rise up and call you blessed." Either someone was kidding somebody, or there's a screw loose somewhere.

Lovers of snappy literature who are "in the know" are cancelling their subscriptions to "Whiz Bang," we understand, and placing their names on the mailing list of "The Dial."

Sign: "Take No Chances—Use Alcohol."

We thought the use of alcohol involved the taking of a very considerable chance.

On the basis of his article on Iowa in Monday's Chicago Tribune, it is rumored, the University will confer an honorary B. S. degree on Hughie Fullerton.

Linotype operators or persons who know anything about linotypes might get a laugh out of the following sign which we saw on a type-setting machine:

"Linotype, modernized with Intertype parts."

A student we know always goes down to the gym and takes a cold shower just before a certain class—so he can keep awake.

A certain friend of ours decided upon an innovation (for him)—he would wear athletic underwear all winter—and lo, the wind is tempered to the shorn lamb. We are having the mildest winter in years.

The Tale of Triona

Reviewed by
Beatrice McGarvey

When new books by authors of established reputation are anxiously awaited, and expectantly tasted, it seems that nowadays the author has a way of disappointing his readers as in the case of Willa Cather in her new book "One of Ours," or Edith Wharton in her latest, "Glimpses of the Moon." This disappointment may be due to the authors' divergence from his old familiar fields, or it may be due to an over-anticipation on the part of the reader himself. But whatever may be the cause of this new and rather general complaint of critics against recent books, it cannot be applied to "The Tale of Triona," by William J. Locke, for in this, his latest book, we again get a true Locke tale—a romance with beautiful, chivalric characters and exciting, imaginary situations, all just as we expected. Locke's nimble wit and genial humor, together with his delightful method of keeping his reader in pleasant suspense, are all handled here with his usual skill and insight.

The plot, or basic idea, of the "Tale of Triona" is very similar to an earlier novel "Jaffrey" by the author in which he also untangled the intricacies that a literary imposter became involved in. However, in the "Tale of Triona" the plot is more deftly managed with a certain touch of precision and detail which is lacking in his earlier work. The hero of this story, Alexis Triona, alias John Briggs, is a successful author whose fame rests on borrowed or stolen material. All through the novel we hope that the punishment which is really due Triona will not be as bad as he deserves, for in spite of his dishonest use of stolen ideas, he is a peculiarly likable person. Not only is this man a literary imposter, but he is a deliberate liar with no end of nerve, and in spite of this, too, we like him.

We are not disappointed in hoping that for once wrong will not be avenged, for the hero meets with much kindness at the hands of a capricious Fate—a Fate which leads him into the life of a lovely girl, Olivia Gale. After a short and breathless courtship they are married "all of a sudden on the wings of adventure, and Triona hurries his bird wife away to a little dream nest in a cliff by the sea." And it is in this little sea nest that the seeds of mistrust are planted which lead to disillusionment, calamity, horror, forgiveness and finally reconciliation.

In "The Tale of Triona" Mr. Locke has measurably succeeded in telling a story, and in drawing striking descriptions. The action moves swiftly, and at no point is the reader's interest allowed to lag. Neither is there any accurate guessing as to the final outcome. Perhaps the happy ending is too Victorian for today's modern realists, but we forget that in the beauty of romance and the vividness of the descriptions. A particularly pleasing picture of Olivia Gale is drawn as on one occasion "when standing under the arlight she looked as fresh and young as a child on a May morning. The open theatre wrap revealed her slender, girlish figure sketchily clad in a flame-colored garment, and with the light in her eyes and her little dark head proudly poised, she stood before the man's fancy as the flame of youth." At another time (the author seems exceptionally pleased with Olivia's beauty) we see her "as a white fairy, slender, quivering, her delicate form draped in white fur, white gossamer, white what-not, crowned with dark glory of hair and eyes." The very extravagance of Mr. Locke's descriptions are in tune with the atmosphere of the book for throughout the entire story we are struck by the idealistic, imaginative note which threads so lightly through the pages.

Mr. Locke, true to form, has in this instance produced a most fanciful tale—a pure romance. The "Tale of Triona" is in no way a novel of the "newer fiction" as Floyd Dell styles "Erik Dorn" and "Gargoyles." Mr. Locke makes no pretense at keeping up to the pace set by the new school of realists. He still believes in the old-fashioned reticence concerning married life, in the beauty of staunch friendship, and in the existence of honest, holy love. A book of charm, delicious dramatic passages and imaginative characters, "The Tale of Triona" contains no pessimistic self-analysis to mar its surface beauty.

This novel is quite conventional in method; it leaves a pleasant feeling of orderliness and rightness, decidedly unlike the mixed-up world of real life. And in spite of its very correctness of style "The Tale of Triona" turns out to be a charming and complete story, much more satisfactory than the chaos or confusion which results from such books as the previously mentioned "Erik Dorn." As the publishers have quite conceivably put it, "After having read 'The Tale of Triona' one then remembers that there are such things as beautiful ideals, beautiful friendships, and beautiful, honest love still existent in this world."

THE CLASSIC AGE OF EGYPT

The world has so long regarded ancient Greece as the source of perfection in all the arts that the attitude of authorities toward the Tutankhamen discoveries is disconcerting to a layman. Sir Joseph Duveen speaks evidently for many whose opinions on the subject have weight when he states: "Egyptian art at its best is the best of all epochs of art. It is better than Greek art and better than any other art. And the Tutankhamen art is the best of Egyptian art."

A critic's estimate of what is great and what is only "an imitation of something still greater" is of course conditioned by the extent of his knowledge. Before the Renaissance Europe did not applaud the masterpieces of the classic period of Greece because they were unknown in Europe. Can it be that there was an age before Tutankhamen that would eclipse his own as much as in the opinion of so many moderns Tutankhamen eclipses Pericles? Was there more truth than the scientists would have us believe in the theory of a golden age? We imitate the Greeks, the Greeks imitated Egypt; did the Egyptians pattern after still greater predecessors?

Or are we only a bit weary of the Greeks imitated Egypt; did the Egyptian fashions? Perhaps the recognized classics have palled on us and we are preparing for another Renaissance based on the remains of an earlier civilization. If so, the age has never been luckier than in the finding of Tutankhamen's tomb.

Call Meeting for Discussion of Club for Winter Sports

With the idea in view of the formation of a club for the promotion of winter sports similar to what the Eels and Seals clubs mean to swimming, both men and women interested in winter sports are invited to meet in the office of E. G. Schroeder, director of physical education at the men's gymnasium tonight at 7 o'clock, January 17, at 7 o'clock.

The meeting is called primarily to discuss the possibility of organizing a club to promote winter sports at the University. In view of the fact that at this time there is no organization on the campus, a desire has been expressed that some action be taken to provide and promote outdoor, winter sporting events.

It is a recognized fact that there is talent among students in the University in the line of skating, as well as in other things associated with winter sports.

There are good skaters in the University among the men and women, and Mr. Schroeder believes that some races of general interest to the student body can be arranged.

Other universities of the Middle West take great interest in outdoor sports, and Mr. Schroeder sees no reason why such can not be the case here. By taking first steps in the matter this year, it is thought that successive years will bring greater expansion for the sport due to increasing interest in the student body.

200 Invitations Issued for Tea for Land Ladies

Two hundred invitations have been issued for a landladies' tea to be given tomorrow afternoon, January 18, by the Womens' association, in liberal arts drawing room. From 3:00 to 3:30, Mrs. Adelaide Burge, acting dean of women, will speak to the guests concerning certain year problems.

During the time when tea is being served there will be music and other entertainment.

Receiving with Mrs. Burge will be Mrs. Nellie S. Aurner, Miss Clare Daley and Womens' association council members.

"In sending out the invitations for the affair a few names were omitted because of the incomplete lists. The committee invites all Iowa City landladies whether they received formal invitations or not," Verda James A8 of Boone, chairman of the social committee, said.

PLAN GLEE CLUB PARTY

The men's and women's glee clubs will have a costume party on the evening of February 21 at the home of Carl G. Seashore 51 of Iowa City, who is a member of the men's glee club. Each year some kind of a social function is held by the glee clubs of the University.

MERCHANTS AND BUSINESS MEN SAY THEY FIND STUDENT HELP SATISFACTORY

Iowa City employers who make use of the help of students of the University who are working part or all of their way through school seem very well satisfied with the services that are being rendered. A score or more of these employers have been consulted and it is their almost unanimous verdict that the students of the University with whom they have had any connection in this respect have proven to be serious-minded and conscientious workers.

The work which students are performing may be placed in two classes, that work which requires no previous training or special skill, and that which requires previous training and a fair amount of good sense and judgment. An example of the former type of work is that which may be secured in restaurants and cafes, such as washing dishes or waiting on tables or acting as cashier for the establishment. The latter form is usually one of the trades or some form of office or clerical work which requires a fairly comprehensive knowledge of the worker is to be proficient.

The percentage of students who are working to pay their expenses through the University is probably much higher than the public suspects. Men find that they can be assured of a steady income each week by putting in part of their time as assistants in decorating shops, printing offices and clerking in stores. Women resort mainly to office and stenographical work, although many assist housewives of the city in doing their general housework, in cooking meals and in caring for small children.

Each employer consulted was very emphatic in his declaration that the majority of the student workers who had been in his employ were efficient and industrious. Although their statements varied somewhat in form and construction they were essentially the same in thought and a citation of one or two will serve as an illustration of the student employer's attitude.

Roland Smith, proprietor of Smith's cafe, 11 South Dubuque street, has had several students in his employ at mealtime ever since the opening of the school year. He has found them to be faithful and diligent in the performance of their duties and willing to take upon themselves any responsibility which they are required to assume. He says:

"I have found the five or six boys whom I have had in my employ this year to be fine young men. They are attentive to their duties and apply themselves very diligently to their work. They are prompt and reliable and they are always to be found here at the cafe when they are expected. So far I am very well satisfied with the services of the student help which I have hired."

Earl W. Kurtz, proprietor of the Athens Print Shop, 121-123 Iowa avenue, spoke at considerable length in answer to questions which were directed to him. It was evidently a subject in which he was deeply interested. The line of work which is to be found in his printing office is one which requires a great deal of training and skill to be done efficiently. In speaking of the percentage of competent workers as compared to those found after a trial to be incompetent, he said:

"I believe that between sixty-five and seventy-five per cent of the student printers whom I employ turn out to be at least second-rate men, that is, they are hardly first class printers but are able to do their work well enough to keep their jobs. Occasionally I find one who is really an expert and I know that they have had a great deal of previous experience."

"They all say that they have had lots of experience and are able to hold down a job. And they really believe that they have. They have always worked in some shop in a small town and were probably, according to the standards of the town, considered first class workmen. But the kind of work that I do in my office requires that anyone who works on it must have a thorough knowledge of printing. He must be both accurate and fast."

Y. W. Discussion Groups Will Be Held Each Week

Discussion groups directed by the Y. W. C. A. will be held one hour each week during February. In order to allow registration in more than one course, the schedule suggested is for Tuesday, Friday, or Sunday from 4:30 to 5:30 or on Wednesday night from 7:30 to 8:30.

The first course proposed deals with conceptions of God including such sub-topics as Christian spirit in daily life and the value of prayer. Another course is based on the question: Is Christianity better than other religions? Under this head denominational differences and internationalism are included. A third course concerns the meanings and beliefs of the bible with evolution, early religions, and miracles.

Leaders for these discussion groups will probably be selected from the Y. W. C. A. council. Any suggestions regarding these discussion-groups will be gladly accepted in the association office.

"The aim is not to enroll great numbers in each group but to accommodate those who are truly interested in the subjects offered," says Miss Alvida Buck, association secretary. "Women who care to join a discussion group may sign in this office."

Dean William F. Russell, of the college of education, will speak Wednesday afternoon at 4:15 in liberal arts drawing room on: "Education as a vocation." This will be the third of the series of vocational talks offered at the weekly Y. W. C. A. meetings.

FRIVOL ENTERS CONTEST PROMOTED BY JUDGE

tributors. The material is to be original work sent in by the student. His or her name, classification, and University should be stated in full. All art work, short sketches, jokes and poems may be submitted, an opportunity is also offered to send in the most artistic and original cover design.

The contest is to be judged by a point system in the same manner as a track meet. Each contribution of merit will receive a number of points according to its worth—the total number of points made by the contributors from each school will be added and the school receiving the largest number of points will receive the cup. All the material must be sent in to Judge by March 1. The limit set by Frivol for receiving contributions is February 20.

Margaret Wilson A3 of Iowa City, editor of Frivol said in speaking of the invitation of Judge, "I feel confident that Iowa will score high in the competition since our art work on Frivol ranks with the best magazines of its kind and is superior to any west of the Mississippi." Miss Wilson who will be the only woman editor in the competition making most elaborate plans for Frivol's entrance in the competition. Arrangements will be made for all the regular artists and several graduate artists who have been contributing particularly good drawings this year to send in their work. Literary contributors who have had work, of particular merit published in Frivol will be entered in the contest although it is open to every one.

G. Holbert Seigle A4 of Muscatine and head news editor for the Daily Iowan said of Frivol's chances in the Judge contest, "Even though Frivol is a new publication in comparison with the others entered in the contest it has a fighting chance and I'll be surprised if it doesn't rate among the best."

Lynn A. Saylor A4 of Waverly, assistant business manager of Frivol, also seemed to think that considering the samples of literary contributions which have been printed in Frivol this year it has a good chance to finish among the best.

The Best Business Career

Is what every ambitious senior is thinking about at the present time. Life insurance is one of the best, one of the most desirable, and one of the most satisfactory as a permanent calling.

In assets and volume of business, life insurance is one of the three leading businesses of this country, yet the field is comparatively under-developed. Only 7 per cent of the economic value of human life in the United States is covered by insurance. This gives an idea of the big field still to be worked, especially business insurance for firms and corporations.

As to remuneration: Reports of college graduates who have entered business indicate that life insurance is at the very top as a source of income. Now is the time for you to consider what you are going to do after graduation. If you are ambitious and willing to work hard and are interested to know about life insurance, address
