SEVENTY LATIN TEACHERS AT FIFTH CONCLAVE

Lord And Miller Head Speakers; 7 Colleges Are Represented At Convention

Seventy Latin teachers, representative of every part of Iowa, attended the Fifth Annual Conference of the Latin teachers of Iowa which was held here Friday and Saturday. Latin instructions from Drake University, Des Moines University, Grinnell, Cornell, Columbia College at Dubuque, and many high schools throughout the state included in the conference, were present at the conference.

Friday morning Mrs. Helen L. Hill of Des Moines University talked on "Paul Mathematicus of the Antiq. Romanus." Mrs. Hill demonstrated the modern society descended from Greek and Latin studies and brought out the fact that Latin teaching, which we consider the foundation of all the studies, is greater than the supply of Latin teachers.

The education department showed that Cicero's "De Ratione Dicendi" was given in many English schools in his day. He also mentioned the methods of teaching such as pronunciation and a method of reciting our floodless method.

Friday afternoon, Prof. Thomas J. Kirbey of the education department spoke on "Latins in the High Schools of Iowa." Prof. Kirbey noted the state superintendent of public instruction as to enrollment in various subjects in high schools of Iowa. He showed that when only one language was offered in a high school, Latin was the last great high school subject in Iowa. He saw that in 1920, seventy-nine per cent of the high schools offered Latin while forty-four per cent offered some other language. Taking the high schools as a whole, those who offer only one language as well as those who offer several languages, ninety-four per cent of the schools offer Latin and fifteen per cent offer French. Two years ago, the percentage of schools offering Latin was practically the same.

Prof. William S. Sloan of Iowa State University spoke on "The Influence of the Latin Teachers of Iowa." Prof. Sloan said that he was surprised by Aileen Johnston's book is being done by the magic of publishing.

Prof. Magnus of the Latin and Greek department in his talk on the enrollment in the Latin department, stated that enrollment was greater than the supply of Latin teachers. The education department showed that Cicero's "De Ratione Dicendi" was given in many English schools in his day. He also mentioned the methods of teaching such as pronunciation and a method of reciting our floodless method.

JANITOR AWAITS RECLAMATION OF YEAR'S CLEANSINGS OF UMBRELLAS

Brellas, hairpins, umbrellas and the house dressing of J. W. Fidler's janitor's supply room are the result of the daily gathering and collecting which the janitor's office is subject to. Therefore and his force of workmen.

Such articles are filed in the janitor's office. There is a system of keeping an account of each and every umbrella, purse, books, packages, bags of all kinds, gloves, caps and beating and reading the way to the janitor's office after the daily pick-up.  Mr. Thomas says that the daily average of calls for such articles is four or five. Sometimes they are found among the collection, but often they are not. In such cases, lost articles are picked up by other students on the campus and are turned in to the janitor's office. This is due to the number of students who occupy the former location of the Iowa News and Novelty company, which occupies the former location of the janitor's office. These are filed in the janitor's office never returned. The janitor's office is gathering the inconsiderate to their owners. The concentration of calls for such articles is considerable. The janitor's office has not taken and lost and very infrequently recovered. But they are inconsiderate in making better time than she has ever made. Miss Gladys Brooker swam the 109-yard breast stroke and made better time than she has ever made before. Finishing the event in 1:00.1. A. V. ABANDONING THE CLASS ROOM

Properly the most salutary change that has taken place in the field of education of late years is that brought by the isolated attitude taken toward class room work. Such personal instruction, to which the whole of the teacher imparted to his pupils is now held as over-masterful and not in keeping with the business administration of an institution of higher learning.

The stream of knowledge flowing from professor to student has been dammed by hundreds of reference books. The professor need not have any understanding of the particular field now, but it is essential that he be acquainted with the hundreds of books which deal with every portion of it. His work is that of the director, not the doer. He must know to whom his pupils may go for help.

The change has not come about through any conscious effort to introduce efficiency into the teaching, but rather from a struggle of self-preservation on the part of the professor, and a change of interest from academic pursuits, to the doing of the student.

Among members of the faculty it is common knowledge that to gain promotion a professor must devote a certain amount of research work. The importance placed on this extra-curricular work, if it can be called such, has advanced to such a point that the publishing of a book is regarded as the first rule of advancement. Instead of outside work in his field, he can give only superficial attention to his class room work.

Over 100 of them to choose from when you buy.

Floating College
To Travel Around World This Fall

By Don E. Evans (United Press Correspondent) With the advent of the United States, this would be the first opportunity to see the United States as a floating college, offering students a chance to study the world's major universities, at the same time visiting the world's major museums and historic sites.

The floating college, which is scheduled to depart from New York City on September 1, will tour Europe, the Mediterranean, the Middle East, the Far East, and the South Pacific, spending a total of 102 days at sea.

The college's curriculum will include courses on history, literature, art, music, and science, as well as lectures on current events and cultural life.

The college will also feature a lecture series on topics such as the history of the United States, the United Nations, and the United Nations' role in world affairs.

The college's instructors will be drawn from the faculty of the United States, the United States' principal universities, and other leading universities around the world.

STUDENT CONCERNS

Freshmen Announce Student Council Election

As the new semester approaches, students are preparing to select their student council representatives, who will be responsible for representing the students' interests. The student council is the main organizing body for student affairs, and its members will be involved in a wide range of activities, including planning events, organizing athletic activities, and representing the students in negotiations with the administration.

The student council election is an important opportunity for students to participate in the governance of their college, and to have a say in the decisions that affect their lives.

The election will be held in early March, and the results will be announced shortly thereafter. Students are encouraged to participate actively in the election process, and to consider running for a position in the student council.

CORNELL WALLACE PENNSYLVANIA 19-14

(United Press) News of the Cornell University basketball team's defeat of Ohio State University in the National Basketball Tournament has sparked excitement on campus.

The Cornell team, coached by Joe Luther, defeated Ohio State, 70-60, on March 22, 1914, in the Sweet Sixteen round of the tournament. The win was the Cornell team's first in the national tournament, and it was a major upset, as Ohio State was considered a favorite going into the game.

The Cornell team's victory was a significant moment in the history of the university, and it marked a turning point in the team's fortunes.

The team's success was due in part to the leadership of coach Joe Luther, who was known for his tough approach to the game and his ability to develop his players.

The team's victory also had a positive impact on the university, as it helped to boost attendance at Cornell basketball games, and the team's success helped to establish Cornell as a major basketball power.
