It is a considerable relief to find out, after all, that Washington, drunk and bad had other human weaknesses, the same as his American countrymen.

AN AGE OF FRANKNESS

Our forefathers condescended themselves into believing that the world was half black and half white, that the man was unconscious and permitting of no gradations. Secretly they believed they were on the white side. But, now we are now waking up to the fact that the world is neither white nor black, but rather of varying shades of grey.

Martha, quite without reason, are alarmed at what they term the startling immorality of the younger generation. Putting parties, seamy stories, sexual knowledge, such things are laid bare by pinchay publicity. Some of the serious minded are asking what the world is coming to in reality, however, we are not a bit different from our grandparents except maybe we are a little too quick in admitting to and revealing our weaknesses. The human race has a remarkable persistency in revealing weakness. We all have the same impulses, the same passions, the same vices as people did centuries ago, but they covered them with false modesty and ignorance. Now we have torn away the mask of hypocrisy, we see what pernicious things we really are, and the revelation appalls us.

Perhaps it is no so harmful after all to show just what we are and to realize that we can all improve a great deal. We are learning our faults and correcting them the first step toward doing away with them.

The Sounding Board

AN UNDERGRADUATE'S CRISIS

I am afraid I find that Mr. Hay is in a jam. He made a speech on the 4th of July, in which he told us that one of the splendid features of the new Constitution was the equality of all men. He was not aware of this limitation. At the time he was speaking, he was certainly bored.

By the time our readers see these lines the Big Ten football season will be on sale at the news stands of Iowa City and at all news stands. All attempts to stop the premature publication of football schedules will be futile. The telegraph service will be especially systematized to prevent the theft of Big Ten Football. As a matter of fact, the telegraph service is the subject of a very flattering article in this week's edition.

We were treated to a very pleasant surprise when we learned that Ellis Parker Butler, of "Figs In Pigs," fame, is to be a contributor to the next issue of "Petition." Mr. Butler wrote the letter of courtesy that no one can fail to appreciate.

UNCONSCIOUS PROGAMMS

"There is no reason why beautiful women should not be intelligent—they just aren't.

A horrible example of how correspondents of blood and gutter newspapers handle women. A Chicago newspaper, taking a bitter view of the social standing of women, has published columns written by women, and in the columns the women are made to say such things as "I want to be a social worker, but I don't know how." This is a common complaint among socially aware women. The newspaper has been accused of "promoting slumism" by social workers.

Do you attach any significance to the fact that one of the latest numbers in the series of social workers is "Social Work for Everyone" by a woman who has been working in the field for ten years?

TRUTHFUL ADVERTISING

The recent dramatic performances on high quality merchandise in your pocket and small packages" newsstands may have caused some to assume that the qualities of the newsstands have been sold for $200,000 apiece. Washington finished school at sixteen, and followed the surveying profession. He says he was a poor poet, and wrote only one poem: "The Last Glean." No one else has been able to follow up his life. The character of Washington, has been so great and his popularity so strong that Americans have been unable to possess unsalaried perfection.
