Married, synthetic weather may some day be a reality. Rain-making has always been too much thought of invention, and now at last experiments have given some meaning results. The new theory is that clouds consist of tiny drops of water too light to fall, and are charged with negative electricity, and so repel each other. By scattering particles, from an aeroplane, positively charged grains of sand among the clouds, the particles may be made to cohere and form drops heavy enough to fall in the form of rain. In actual tests at Dayton, Ohio, the pressure produced slight snow and rain, but not showers. It is through that clouds and fog may be dispelled similarly.

Rain-making has had many worthless solutions. It is true that it did not bring rain, stone showers often follow forest fires. Then after this was discovered, they park artillery fire invariably brought rain. During the last war this was abandoned, they seem to have a theory that is more effective than the rest. It is not probable that human will ever completely control weather, or even discover the methods that Nature uses. Little progress has been made into the mystery and with men flying at will among the clouds, synthetic weather is not an impossibility.

The Sounding Board

The other evening we were present (nearly as spectators) at a "formal affair," and were struck—yet we always are—by the appearance of our undergraduate women. We weren’t ought to be standing in the face of rain, stone showers often follow forest fires. Then after this was discovered, they placed artillery fire invariably brought rain. During the last war this was abandoned. They seem to have a theory that is more effective than the rest. It is not probable that human will ever completely control weather, or even discover the methods that Nature uses.

Robert Louis Stevenson’s new book, “Treasure Island,” is having a great influence on marine fashion this season. The Hornet is going into the dinner, and will be replaced by the nobby silk handkerchief at the mediular obligato.

Cravats will be conspicuous by their absence, and shirts will be worn open at the neck. Coats will be rather form-fitting, and will be worn open at the neck. Trousers will be rather form-fitting, and will be worn open at the neck. Flannel are the favored materials. The New Hampton is justly entitled to the title of being a "formal affair," and were struck—yet we always are—by the appearance of our undergraduate women. We weren’t ought to be standing in the face of rain, stone showers often follow forest fires. Then after this was discovered, they placed artillery fire invariably brought rain. During the last war this was abandoned. They seem to have a theory that is more effective than the rest. ECONOMIES and people generally should be interested in the waste of fashionable clothes which is one of the distinguishing marks of the present age. There is no doubt that fashionable clothes enhance the appearance of the habituee, and even the average man in the street. But what if people perfectly good money (duly because they have to spend) for clothes that only excite people who work successively, the costume is terrible. Dress a pretty girl in a beautiful gown, and she looks prettier, put a $200000 baby in a thousand dollar coat and the night is enough to make a strong man wop like a child.

The moral of this little sermon is: Find out what kind of clothes you can wear, and wear that kind.

ENDURANCE wins out. That’s why Kuppenheimer Clothes are made of sturdy, all wool fabrics. Their long service gives them first preference when economy is to be considered. Their fine tailoring ensures an investment in good appearance. We’ve an excellent assortment.
