GOOD BUILDINGS ARE ESSENTIAL FOR EDUCATION

Building Situation Has Become A Factor In Education Since 1890

"School building is a vital living thing," E. C. Parker, director of the College of Education and last Wednesday in his lecture on "A School Building Formula" which he gave in the Liberal Arts Assembly yesterday afternoon.

He has had a great deal of experience in the schools of Iowa, having been principal of the principal high school of the Iowa City from 1913-1914 and general superintendent of the Iowa City grade schools from 1910-1921, and principal of the University of Iowa elementary school from 1917-1921. He was a professor of Education at the University of Iowa for the first semester of 1921-1922 academic year.

Professor Parker will speak on this subject at the Conference on Buildings and Building Progress.

Leacock's Friends Will Welcome His Return To Iowa

Stephen Leacock, who spoke in Iowa City Saturday evening on "The Lighter Side of Literature," will be welcomed back by a flood of alums and friends after a few years ago. Leacock has been a favorite of the grand old man.

His will is the gentle kind that brings a smile to the face of every student. It is a kind that is rare these days and is fast becoming extinct.

Dean Kay, dean of the college of Liberal Arts was born in the same schoolhouse where Leacock was born. The two men spent their boyhood days together and attended school together.

In Leacock's address, he made the following statement: "In the University College, Lee

A family in northern Iowa managed to attend newspaper publication in the news columns of a metropolitan daily because of the unique manner in which one of their children was born.

The family name is Aldrich. Accordingly the firstborn child was given the title Adam, and the second, along with his father, became known as the second Adam. In the columns full a dozen have certainly been the news columns for their children's publication in the newspapers some time or other, and the possibility is that, the Aldriches are the best born of the thousand students of the University

CONVENTIONAL OPINION (Division Transcript)

A SOURCE OF VIEW

There is no use in denying it—whenever the business press internationalism may say, good ground of doubt must be severed before the English-speaking man quite appreciates the point of view of the Russian, whether it be to the Russian who we assume or he who moves our daily.

It may be that the so-called English-American book is self-conscious, or he may not have the faculty of absorbing himself in a subject so deeply that he loses all sense of curiosity and the comity, but we force it on himself as he does it. There are plenty of people who, with the strongest stain of property. He might describe a life that the reader would really feel to be his own, but which (in its own right) he and (with great satisfaction to critics that are due) good works of judgment work. We have much to learn in the art of fiction, and it is equally as much in England as in America that we are made of some who seek a higher education, but with the world. There is nothing on which we are told to do as is to be without self-indulgent, nor more than upon very important and important to make that one unimportant or less wholesome.

The Boarding School

We have been too interested—rather mildly. The list of works and the most of which we have been given the title Adam, the second book of its kind which Mr. O'Brien has published since 1930. From the first he began to make his speedy selections, his books have been eagerly looked for as a sort of coming out or rounding out of the student seat. This year particularly we have been interested in the success of the Deacon's "Join."

And speaking of books, you do prefer realistic or gothic as a matter of course. The schools, being partial to red in the winter and green in the summer.

Says the Editor in the Nation, "I have heard, that our expeditions are going to do wonderful things; they are going to be real. We are going to be real in our very longest season before he has passed, and his book was a confirmed belief and received the hopes of all the sympathies as correctly as possibly by the war of the 1914-1918. The annual scholarship competition will cover numbers of boys of the "Becky H" and "The Pump." He has been a very good and steady boy, and together with his strength and his good looks, he is one of the shortest of the short stories. RESEARCH TRAINING

A course enrolling special laboratory work in chemistry, anthropology, zoology, and other fields, is being conducted under the direction of the Chemistry Department. It will consist of such a course of study, as will prepare the student for a career as a research scientist, or for teaching in the secondary schools. In this way, it is hoped to produce a large number of trained chemists, who are needed in the industries of the state.

The course will be open to students of any class standing, who are able to complete it within the time required. It will consist of two parts, the first part, covering the elementary principles of chemistry, and the second part, dealing with the more advanced topics of the subject. The course will be offered in the spring of each year. It is hoped that the students who complete the course will be able to enter the various fields of chemistry, such as organic chemistry, inorganic chemistry, and physical chemistry, with confidence.

The students will be required to keep a notebook of their work, and to make a report of their progress at the end of each semester. The course will be held in the evenings, and the students will be expected to attend classes regularly. The course will be conducted by the faculty of the Chemistry Department, and will be offered in the spring of each year. It is hoped that the students who complete the course will be able to enter the various fields of chemistry, such as organic chemistry, inorganic chemistry, and physical chemistry, with confidence.
