Thronging Crowd Hears Jessup at First Assembly

Summer Work Is Not Picnic But Real Work

Paddock and Chorus Appear for First Time

The unusually large gathering which was present at the first of the weekly assemblies held in the Natural Science auditorium yesterday morning bore witness to the appeal which such an assembly makes to the summer session student.

President Jessup, in making his welcoming address to the summer students, said that the summer session work of the University is dedicated to the task of making use of the equipment, buildings, research laboratories and teaching facilities so that they will benefit the student to the highest degree.

"Summer school," he continued, "is not a picnic. It is dedicated to the serious-minded. The attitude of the summer student is not the same as that of the university student who has a year or more to accomplish his results. The entire atmosphere of the University is changed."

The president compared the growth of the University to that of a child, who, as he grows to manhood, gradually has new interests, new resources and new desires.

"The University," he said, "is a creation, a realization of a dream. It embraces all sorts of colleges and activities. The common element of interest tends to do away with discouragement and creates a desire for even more development.

"This solidarity," he continued, "is maintained during the scholastic year by athletics, plays and the other campus activities. In the summer it may be maintained by excursions, student plays and lectures."

In conclusion, he welcomed the summer students to the University saying, "The University of Iowa welcomes you to its resources and opportunities."

The entire program for this first assembly was as follows:

Doxology

Prayer—Rev. Walter Shaffer, student pastor of the Congregational church

"Praise the Name of the Lord"—Ivanoff — University chorus of over fifty members

Welcome Address—President Walter A. Jessup

"America"

The singing was lead by Mrs. Mildred B. Paddock, director of the chorus.

Baldwin's Tables Widely Published

Cable Order Received From Munich This Week

Iowa athletes have set world records in the low hurdles and the quarter-mile, but today, the Iowa Child Welfare station is announcing new world standards of physical growth for girls and boys. The new weight-heighth, age tables, worked out at the University of Iowa by Dr. Bird T. Baldwin, and printed in the form previously used by Dr. T. D. Wood, of Teacher's college, New York, have been published and distributed by the American Child Health association, the United States bureau of education, the Federal Child's bureau, the National Tuberculosis association, the National Parent's-Teacher's association, the American Medical association, and a score of books and magazines.

Dr. Baldwin received a cablegram this week from Dr. Rudolph Martin of Munich, the leading anthropologist of Germany, requesting that the original 300 standards for nude measurements for boys and girls, between the ages of 5 and 19 years, be forwarded immediately in order that the physical status of the German children may be accurately compared with the best American standards. Professor Baldwin is now engaged in translating the tables into the metric, or French units, to supply the demand for tables in England, Canada, and France.

Haugen Will Speak at Polk County Farm Picnic June 19

DES MOINES, Iowa, June 11—(AP)—Gilbert N. Haugen, United States congressman from the fourth Iowa district, co-author of the ill-fated McNary-Haugen farm export bill, will be the principal speaker at the annual picnic of the Polk County Farm bureau, to be held at the Iowa state fair grounds June 19.

It was declared Mr. Haugen would touch only lightly upon the defeated farm aid bill but would stress proposed forms of legislative relief for the farmer.

Outdoor Players Organize At N.S. Hall at 5 Today

For Faculty, Students And Iowa City People

Variety of Parts in "Boomerang" and "The Piper"

Out of Door Players will organize tonight in the natural science auditorium at 5 p. m. Officers will be elected and committees will be appointed. This organization and the class in dramatic production will serve as nuclei from which the directors will select most of the talent for the seven plays.

Membership in the organization is not restricted to students, but is open to faculty members and townspeople as well. It includes both actors and audience. Past groups of Out of Door Players have indulged in at least one picnic a term, according to George O. Hurley, and at this time, one-act plays are frequently given.

Sponsor Summer Plays

An entrance fee of 50 cents is required to defray expenses, and serves to finance the annual frolic, as well as promote the summer productions.

The dramatic production class contains several players of talent. Among them are Burton L. Conkling of Indiana. He has played in four Shakespearean plays under the direction of Prof. Erwing C. Stove who was professor of dramatic speeech and director of oratory in the J. B. Stetson University of DeLand Florida. Thus he comes to Iowa with considerable dramatic experience.

Work Hard on Plays

The work on the plays is progressing rapidly. Tryouts are being held for the first three plays. Prof. E. C. Mabie is holding tryouts for the Shakespearean play, "The Taming of the Shrew". Prof. Mabie expects to select his cast for this play in the very near future. Miss Helen Langworthy is working in earnest selecting a cast for "The Piper". According to Miss Langworthy, the part of the piper will be a difficult one and she is finding it difficult to choose one from the many who have tried out for the part.

The "Boomerang" and the "Piper", the first two plays to be presented by the department of speech during the summer session, are an unusual contrast in plot. There is such a modern theme and popular appeal to the first that the New York City press criticised its proportions as "light and meaningless" when it was produced there in 1915. However, this light treatment was the goal of the playwrights, Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes, for the theme itself is light and would not permit heavy handling.

The plot features a doctor who prescribes absent treatment for jealousy but in the cure he becomes innoculated, whereupon he applies the same remedy to himself.

An excellent quality of dialogue, a kind of inherent humor, not just hitched on for the sake of comic effect, characterization that really contributes to the progress of the play makes this drama one that will surpass the good opinion which the theatergoer has formed of it before seeing the stage production.

Browning's "Pied Piper"

On the other hand, "The Piper", being a fantasy, attracts those who prefer more delicate themes and artistic treatment in drama. Its plot is based on Browning's poem, "The Pied Piper", at "Hamlin town in Brunswick by famous Hanover city", the play beginning where the poem concludes with abduction of the children by the piper.

Mr. George O. Hurley will coach the "Boomerang", which will be presented on Friday evening, June 27. "The Piper" will be given on Thursday and Friday, July 3 and 4, and will be coached by Miss Helen Langworthy.

Former Lieutenant-Governor Is Elected To Head Iowa Masons

DES MOINES, June 11—(AP)—Special: E. R. Moore of Cedar Rapids, former lieutenant governor of Iowa, today was elected grand master of Iowa Masons for 1925. Other officers elected included Newton R. Parvin, Cedar Rapids, grand secretary, and F. B. Parker, Rock Rapids, grand treasurer.

City Water Tastes Bad But Is Really Harmless for Use

"What's the matter with the water?" is the question which has been most frequently asked of Chief Engineer John Evers at the city water works during the last week. Whenever anyone appears at the door with this question, they usually get no farther than "What's the—," when Mr. Evers interrupts them by saying briskly, "Come this way." Then he leads them to a water spout and invites them to imbibe a few drops at their own risk of getting their faces washed in the attempt. When they do so, they find to their surprise that the water is deliciously cool and highly pleasing in taste.

This is the suprprising thing about the situation. Although city water in the business and residence sections has had an unpleasant taste for several days, the water at the pumping station has remained satisfactory during this time. The water is tested every day, however, and, according to Jack J. Hinman, associate professor of Sanitation, is pure. There is no danger in using it. Mr. Hinman expects that the bad tastse will be removed in a few days.

Shambaugh Radios Governme't Speech

Hold Six Round Table Conferences Here

"The Electorate and the Government" was the subject of a talk by Prof. Benjamin F. Shambaugh given from radio station WHAA yesterday noon between 12:30 and 1 o'clock. This is the second of a series of short talks on the Commonwealth conference which will be held in the Old Stone Capitol, Tuesday, June 30, to Wednesday, July 2.

The general theme of the conference will be" The Problems of the American Electorate". Six round tables will be held during the three days, at which some specific problem of the general subject will be discussed. The round table on "The Electorate and the Government" will be held on Monday afternoon, June 30, at 2 o'clock.

"It is anticipated that the relation of the voter to the government will be presented from a new angle," said Professor Shambaugh, who will preside over the round table. "The electorate will be regarded as constituting a department of the government and the electors—that is, the voters—will be referred to as public officers.

"Heretofore," he continued, "the voters have been looked upon as a body of citizens outside of the organization of the government. More recently, however, they are coming to be viewed as an organ of the government with an organization, personnel, and functions as clearly defined as those of the legislature, the executive, or the judiciary."

On Friday, between 12:30 and 1 o'clock, Professor Shambaugh will broadcast a short talk on "The Electorate and Political Parties."

Seven Plans for Bonus Upset by Lack of Funds

WASHINGTON, June 11—(AP)—Seven plans for distribution of the soldiers bonus upset by the failure of congress to appropriate needed funds were hung up tonight on the legal question whether the war and navy departments and the veterans bureau may use money appropriated for general purposes.

President Coolidge has ordered Director Lord of the Budget to use every possible means of carrying out the plans and the director had various conferences today with officials of the three arms of the government which have charge of the work. The discussions apparently left the problem unsolved.

Three More Names Added to Roll of Prominent Iowans

DES MOINES, Iowa, June 11—(AP)—Three more names this month were added to the roll of Iowans or former Iowans who attained public prominence. They are C. W. Hunt, Des Moines, appointed member of the Federal Trade comission by President Coolidge; Marion LeRoy Burton, president of the University of Michigan, born at Brooklyn, Iowa, appointed to place President Coolidge in nomination at Cleveland tomorrow; and Frank W. Mondell, former Iowan, now of Wyoming, who was designated the permanent chairman of the republican convention.

1000 Extra Copies of Today's Iowan Distributed as Samples

A thousand extra copies of the Iowan were printed this morning and distributed before and after the seven, eight and nine o'clock classes. If one of these copies failed to reach you, the same is awaiting you at the business office, 112 Iowa Avenue.

For the first time in its history the Iowan will be published daily throughout the entire summer and at a reduced price from that charged last year. Each edition contains a wire service from the Associated Press, the Iowan being the only college daily to continue such a service through June, July and August. Other distinctive features are its city page covering important happenings in the city, as well as detailed accounts of all University activities, and Barney Google.

In the past year the Iowan has increased in size from a six column to an eight column sheet and will continue its eight column display throughout the summer. Its summer wire service is two hours later than that carried in any morning paper which reaches Iowa City.

The cost of the Iowan delivered anywhere in the city is a trifle more than one cent a day, one dollar for the whole summer.

Wisconsin Holds Out in Approval Of Party Platform

LaFollette Plank Is Presented by Representative Cooper

Good, of Iowa, Has Strong Boom for Short While

(By the Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, June 11—Convention Hall: The roaring multitude that stands about convention hall tonight shouting for Coolidge staged a scene the like of which has not been seen in a republican convention since 1896.

The La Follette delegates from Wisconsin, refusing to join in demonstrations, remained silently seated while the milling, howling throng reeled and surged about them calling upon them to join.

Finally, surrounded by groups of delegates singing the National Anthem and the Star Spangled Banner, the La Follette delegates were forced to their seats but they only stood silent at attention and then sat down again. Old timers, from veterans of many a fight and demonstration, in the heat and furor of a convention fight, compared the scene to that in the convention of 1896 when Senator Teller and his fellows of the Colorado delegation sat silently under the jeers and jibes of delegates who urged the venerable senator to join with the majority in upholding the gold standard.

On that memorable occasion, which went down as one of the gripping scenes of republican party history, Teller, broken-hearted and weeping, led his delegation from the hall saying through his sobs: "I part with you on a matter of principles."

Read Platform Tonight

Tonight's business was the reading and discussion of the platform.

Plunging into consideration of the platform, the convention heard the document as presented by its resolutions committee with the approval of every state except Wisconsin and then listened to a presentation of the La Follette planks by Representative Cooper of Wisconsin. The night session was given over solely to consideration of the platform with adoption as it came from the resolution committee forecast after some debate.

Warren Starts Boom

Charles C. Warren, chairman of the platform committee, ambassador to Mexico, former ambassador to Japan, and general go-getter of the republican administrations, presented the report of the resolutions committee and without efforts on his part, started a boom for the vice presidential nomination. His friends in the convention said they expected him to show considerable strength among the puzzled delegates who did not know which way to turn.

Good's Name Booms

CLEVELAND, June 11—A suddenly appearing boom for former Representative Good of Iowa, Coolidge's western campaign manager, made great speed for a short time and then as suddenly as it appeared, hung in mid air and descended.

Mr. Good's name came out of conferences which were participated in by the cabinet members and officials close to the administration. At one time, one official, very close to the president, said Mr. Good's selection as vice presidential candidate "seemed about as good as settled."

Good Boom Drops

As others were brought to the conference, however, the word came out that the Good boom was losing its momentum and a little later the word passed out that it had stopped.

The intimate details of the launching and withdrawal of Good's name were not revealed.

The subsidence of the Good boom left the vice president situation once more in almost complete uncertainty and in much the same form as when the conference began three days ago.

Democrat Withdraws From Race as Wayne Co. Representative

DES MOINES, June 11—(AP)—Special: J. L. Stark, democrat nominee for state representative from Wayne county, today withdrew from the field, it was announced here. This action insures election of D. E. Williams of Allerton for seat in the state house.

Frederick Expects To Complete Novel On Michigan Farm

Prof. John T. Frederick of the English department, with his wife and three boys, John, Joseph, and James, will leave this morning for their farm at Glennie, Michigan, where Mr. Frederick expects to complete another novel.

His farm consists of 960 acres surrounded by miles of uncleared land which was once lumber country, but which is now covered with old stumps and a new growth of Michigan trees.

Last summer, Mr. Frederick cleared and developed over thirty acres of his land. This summer, his recreation will probably be pulling stumps and repairing his picturesque water wheel. In this atmosphere his new novel is to be born.

Adjoining Mr. Frederick's farm are farms owned by Prof. Edwin Ford Piper, author of "Barbed Wire and Other Short Poems" and Walter J. Bullenburg, member of the department of English.

fed with the same food, and hurt

Mr. Frederick is visited at his farm by some of the authors whose stories have appeared in the Midland Magazine. Two years ago, Raymond Knister and George Stout spent the summer at Glennie. Mr. Frederic expects some of the writers to visit him again this summer.

Traced History of Early Sculpturing

Prof. Weller Delivers First of Lecture Series

Covering in its scope the earlier period of Grecian sculpture up to a transition period, which marked the beginning of the greater Greek artistic productions, Prof. Charles H. Weller, director of the summer session, gave an illustrated lecture last evening on the subject of "Early Greek Sculpture".

Professor Weller first considered the earliest and most primitive Greek statues, and then showed how the Greeeks, by a process of development, improved their earlier attempts until they finally succeeded in producing some of their later magnificent statues.

Mr. Weller showed that historical facts influenced a style of sculpture, by pointing out that the invasion of Greece by the Persians had influenced their work, to an extent. The details of the Greek statues were clearly brought out by the lantern slides. Each slide was explained in detail.

In his later lectures, Professor Weller will take the work of the Greeks, following this primitive period, and will discuss in chronological order the later Greek sculptures and their productions.

Leopold and Loeb Plead Not Guilty

Attorneys Say That Popular Excitement Hurt Their Cause

CHICAGO, June 11—(AP)—Before an impetuous crowd that broke the court room door upon its hinges in an effort to see the confessed kidnapers and slayers of 13-year-old Robert Franks, Nathan Leopold, jr., and Richard Loeb, millionaire's sons, today pleaded not guilty to charges of kidnaping for ransom and murder. August 4 was fixed as date of their trial.

The youths, handcuffed, each answered, "Not guilty, sir," to each of the indictments, their only part in the proceedings.

The defense attorneys, headed by Clarence Darow, pleaded that popular excitement has embarrassed their cause but accepted the trial date set without objection, except to stipulate that they will ask for continuance if impossible for them to be ready by that time.

Young Loeb made his appearance in court to answer two crimes "each punishable by death." It was his nineteenth birthday and he had planned to sail for Europe today with Leopold. Standing near the young man was a brown-haired girl who smiled at them repeatedly. They did not glance at her. She is the girl who went to the state's attorney's office yesterday and asked to see the boys but left when they asked her name. Jacob Franks, father of the slain boy, was also a spectator in the court room.

Committee Gives G.O.P. Platform To Convention

Elect Men Who Will Acknowledge Party Responsibility

Adhere to World Court As Proposed by Coolidge

(By the Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, June 11—Election of senators and representatives who believe in republican principles and acknowledge party responsibility is urged in the republican party platform presented tonight to the convention.

Other high spots in the platform are:

No Dating, Dancing or Dallying In Life at French Universities

American universities are much superior to the French institutions as a means of popular education, declared Prof. P. Cambiaire of the University of Missouri, Tuesday. M. Cambiaire is a native of Rodez, France, and has lived in America since 1919. He is taking graduate work here this summer.

Education in France is a serious business, according to the French professor. Not only is there little contact of faculty and students and of students with each other, but athletics, dancing, socials, college periodicals, and many other phases of student activities which are regarded as essential in American institutions are not a part of college life.

"Only graduate students attend the universities there, and as education is a stiff affair, they concentrate on their studies," M. Cambiaire asserted.

The fact that impressed M. Cambiaire first about our universities was the large number of women in attendance. In France, women are not so much interested in higher education.

Education in France is so expensive that only the privileged classes get the opportunity to attend universities. Students range in age from 20 to 25 and the extremes of age so often seen on the American campus are very rare in the Frenchman's country.

"You don't see a man of 65 and a girl of 16 sitting side by side in the same class room," the professor said.

"Only a limited number of Ph. D. degrees, the number determined by the government, are awarded each year. The candidate receives the degree, not by fulfilling certain requirements as in the United States, but by proving himself superior to the other candidates. Thus a degree is secured by elimination through fierce competition."

If the French institutions were carried on along the lines of the American colleges, M. Cambiaire estimates that the enrollment would probably reach 50,000 in most of the universities.

"The students of the University of Iowa who are studying French speak the language intelligently and with a certain degree of fluency," he added, after conversing with several students of French.

"Miss Josephine Daus and Miss Josephine Davis, with whom I talked for some time, showed that they have large vocabularies. They also spoke with a reasonably pleasant and accurate accent."

Tax Payers From North End Oppose Car Officials' Stand

Think Street Railway Company Should Pay Share

"Tax Busses To Provide for Street Deterioration

The people of the north end who are most affected by the change of the transportation system are far from being completely satisfied with the new order. This in substance seems to be the opinion of several well known and influential people in that part of town.

When interviewed this afternoon, former Alderman Charles Chansky said: "Inasmuch as the company has had their tracks laid I do not believe they were right in taking them out when improvement was to be done. The franchise they hold was granted by the old council and gave them every concession within reason. Of course it doesn't say just what kind of power they should use but I don't believe that if the case went to law that they would win out in the stand they have taken. As far as the busses are concerned, I think that it is possible for the bus to give better service than the car and if so it ought to continue. However, I think that the company, since it has utilized the streets before, should pay their part, either in paying for the pavement, or as a tax, now, that improvements are to be made by which they will be benefited.

Aldous Opposed to Plan

Mr. James Aldous, jr., stated his attitude towards the paving as follows: "As a man to man proposition, the paving contract was in the nature of an agreement between the property owners, the street car company and the construction company. The contract being let, the street car company withdrew by tearing up their tracks. This I believe is unfair and unjust, both to the property owners and the construction company. Mr. Schulze's figures show that the maintenance for tracks and paving amounts to $375 a year per block. If the company is released from this assessment I think it only fair that they pay some proportion of it as a tax for the maintenance of the paving over which their busses are running. There is no doubt that the heavy busses are injurious to the pavement. When the property owners put in the pavement, the street car company should do their share towards their upkeep, when they contribute so much to their deterioration."

"Car Company Should Know"

As a stockholder in the street car company and a prominent resident of the north end, Mr. Frank Mezik's opinion is interesting. "I am sorrry for the way things have happened," he said. "I believe that the street car line ought to grow, but instead, it is decreasing. I do not like the busses. I am afraid they are more dangerous and will never be as popular as the streeet car. Just the same I think that the street car company knows its own business. They have beeen under great expense and will be under more so that this addition to their expenses seemed impossible. I still hope that there will be some agreement so that we can have the street car but if not, we will have to do the best we can and put up with the inconvenience.

Busses Better Than Nothing

Mrs. Emma Havlick, who has been employed at the court house for many years, and has interested herself in public affairs, said: "For my part, I hate to see the car tracks being torn up because I think the street car was an improvement to the north end. In my work, I must ride at least twice a day, and the street car was handier for me. Just the same I am not going to object or say anything one way or the other. I am satisfied with the busses since it seems we couldn't have the street car and paving too. I hope they manage to settle things soon."

Independents Play Blue Grass Sunday

Entire Town to Come Here to Support Home Team

The Iowa City Independents will face a strong team from Blue Grass, Ia., at the City park Sunday in a game which was scheduled last week but postponed on account of wet grounds.

Red Klema, lanky twirler for the locals, will probably toil on the slab for the local team. He was utility pitcher last season and has developed into a reliable hurler this year. In his last start two weeks ago, he wielded the whitewash brush at the expense of the Bettendorf Bears, who were able to gather but five scattered hits off his offerings.

Blue Grass is said to have a strong team and should give the Independents a hard fight. The invading nine at least has the full support of its townspeople, for although there are but fifty persons in the little city, they are back of their team to the last man, and all will be in Iowa City Sunday, according to the manager of the team.

Engineer Makes Wood Articles for Display

Over Five Years Were Spent In Making Them

Articles ranging from candle sticks made out of wood from Old Capitol to an inlaid checker table and fancy floor lamps are being exhibited in room 3 of the engineering building today.

These articles, each ranging in value from a few dollars to several hundred, were all made by William L. Hunter, a manual training teacher in the engineering college. Over five years of unceasing labor were required to make these 150 pieces.

Mr. Hunter has also just published a book on woodwork finishings including over 110 blue prints of the various articles that he has made. The book is for the use of high school manual training instructors.

Priest Addresses Graduating Class At Saint Mary's

"Basis of Education a Strong Arm and a Brave Heart"

Advises Application of Lessons Taught While in School

"A strong arm, a clear head, and a brave heart are the basis of the best education," said the Rev. George Giglinger, D. D., of St. Mary's parish, Keokuk, Iowa, in his address last night to the graduate class of St. Mary's high school of Iowa City.

"The strong arm does not mean brute strength but an enduring vigor which goes hand in hand with a clean life. A clear head means to learn to concentrate the mind. Aim to do everything as well as you can.

"Education is the determination of always doing what is to be done at the right time and place. Unless you learn to think for yourself you are not educated. Life is not made up of memory lessons.

"Edison says, 'Genius is three per cent inspiration and ninety-seven per cent perspiration.' Education does not mean mere knowledge but must include the religious element. It must be both moral and social. Religion is found to be a lion of morality.

"A brave heart should be part of complete education. You have a brave heart if you have the courage to say 'no' when your conscience tells you what is demanded of you is wrong. The most difficult is that of control over oneself. Happiness, like charity, begins at home. Don't be pleasant to others and disagreeable to your parents.

"The Catholic Church is not opposed to the public school, but for it's own children it wants a religious school. There is rather commendable rivalry between these schools and no opposition."

Rev. Giglinger's parting advice to the class was, "Put into practice the lessons you were taught and the greatest success will then be yours. Choose well and then persevere in your calling. Never come to terms with defeat. You cannot be untaught but you can all climb higher and thus relieve congestion at the foot of the ladder.

"Much is expected of you but I am sure you will not only come up to expectations but bring exceptional honors on your Alma Mater. God bless and prosper you is my earnest wish and prayer."

The program follows:

THE VALUE OF "GOOD PAY"

Doubtless every one of the students who graduated a few days ago was asked a score of times what he or she would do after graduation. And it is a reasonably safe guess that following the perfunctory, "That's fine!" a majority of the questioners added, "It's good pay, too."

It is a national trait—this reverence for "good pay". The respect with which most people regard a man varies directly as his income. This is not without reason. Money alone makes possible many of the things that make life worth living. But to the American mind the getting of money becomes an object in itself, and the enjoyment of finer things that might result from its acquisition is a neglected consideration.

College students are by no means free of reverence for the golden god. But the cultural atmosphere about the college student is so pervading that only the dullest can fail to see things somewhat differently from those who think in terms of dollars and cents. Seldom and shamefacedly as his ideas on the subject are expressed in opposition to public opinion, he does realize that the increased earning ability given by the college education is of little importance compared to its broadening of character and sharpening of sensibilities, its opportunities for enduring friendships and contacts with greater personalities, the ability it gives to meet people of culture on their own ground, and the training it offers in desired lines of work. The student who is getting these things from his college life and who realizes that he is getting them, must sometimes weary a little of the optimistic assurance that he will make "good pay". He must sometimes reflect that the use of the almighty dollar as an eyeglass effectually blinds the eye to things more desirable.

BETTER AND BETTER
(New York Evening Post)

Now and then we have a flash that indicaes we are getting better and better every day in many ways. Stopping an ocean liner, filled with pleasure-seeking passengers, far out at sea, to transfer a suddenly stricken fireman on a freighter, is one of the best humanitarian acts of the day. Not so many years ago, when men were shanghaied, the sick were too often knocked in the head when they couldn't work. If they got worse—well, they were allowed to suffer until they got well—or died to be thrown overboard. Today a touch of the key and human suffering is brought home to those enjoying the ease and comfort of a great passenger steamer—and brought home in such a way as to bring assistance to those who need it most. Few discoveries have been greater blessings to mankind than the wireless.

There is now a cure for almost everything except the foolish habit of taking too much medicine.

Very few things in the world are beyond redemption except white flannel pants after a picnic.

"Young Felix"

By Frank Swinnerton

Reviewed by Mercedes Dean

If books were people "Young Felix" would be one of these easy-going, tolerant individuals who go through life without ever giving or receiving a black eye. He would have no credo he would die at the stake for, nor would he ever wax argumentative or violent. All of which is to sdy that "Young Felix" is a pleasant, good-natured, easy-reading book, but entirely without a great theme, and Mr. Swinnerton is a clever, good-humored writer, but entirely without an irrepressible urge.

Should some Omnipotence with the preservation of the paper supply and the eyesight of the literate fraction of the human race at heart require every author to give an excuse for writing his books, Mr. Swinnerton would be hard put to find one for "Young Felix". It takes a very sympathetic imagination to agree that the book has a theme at all. Mr. Swinnerton tries hard enough; tries to make one attenuated idea last through the book. He shows a young man who is continually pursued by bad luck and who is always able to achieve a "bon Mot" in the face of misfortune; who "triumphs from disaster to disaster". However, in so far as the troubles which beset the hero are only early poverty, illness in childhood, an unfaithful wife, and only fair ability in painting instead of genius, he seems not much worse off than the most of us. Better off, in fact, for having gone through the task of "raising" Felix, which, give him credit for it, he does with the thoroughness of nature, the author leaves him at last with a vaguely ideal girl, and the promise of a roseate future.

The book is written in that light, glib style in which the British are said so far to surpass American writers. In the best passages this is exhilerating; the rest of the time it reads like an exalted magazine supplement of a Sunday newspaper.

Perhaps one should not criticize adversely a book which does not attempt to wrestle with the world problems, or to give a purely artistic creation to the world, but merely to give a volume of easily digested reading matter to hungry readers.

What happens is that Swinnerton and his hero, the irrepressible, optimistic Felix, meander through life arm in arm, accepting without protest life's little disasters, and giving loving little glances now and then at the cosmic landscape. If any reader wishes to wander with them, well and good. Liberty is freedom to commit one's own indiscretions.

"Dean" Hogan No Longer Weilds Broom and Advice to Students

"Dean" John Hogan has been lost to his department. When the chemists recently completely removed themselves to their new home on North Capitol street, they lost a valued member of the staff. In the three years that the dean was connected with the department of chemistry in the capacity of janitor, he made himself indispensable by his ready and decidedly invaluable advice to his students and faculty.

At first sight of the dean, wielding his broom and dust pan, you might naturally decide his name to be McCarthy,—but it isn't, it's Hogan,—Dean John Hogan of the department of chemistry. Although his title was never officially confirmed, he was known by none other in the old chemistry building. As a self-made chemist, he deserved the title. How solicitously he would inquire of the freshmen concerning sulphates and chlorides in the distilled water, or, with true Irish dignity, consult the professors in the morning as he dusted out their offices, in regard to the proper manner to give examinations or handle new research problems.

But now the late exodus has changed everything. The dean recently paused long enough from his official sweeping to express himself concening the departure of his master's and doctor's candidates for new quarters.

"I don't mind," he said, "seeing the freshmen leave, but I hate to lose the major leaguers, the rookies that I've been training so long."

The old laboratories are quite deserted and apparently resigned toward being converted into nice, clean, and unexciting libraries. Gone are the antique stills and iron bric-a-brac that once adorned the acid stained benches, while the yawning shelves and emptied desks are quite desolate in appearance. A few lingering odors, slightly malignant but quite indefinite, remain to stir up memories of more hectic days.

"Here I've studied chemistry," said the dean, "and learned all about sulphates and chlorides in the water, but if I hold down this dean job for the new bunch coming in, I'll have to start all over and study abnormal psychology or something worse. I think I'll resign, wear a uniform, and be a library janitor. It don't carry so much responsibility."

Geologists Engage In Field Research

Faculty and Graduate Students Begin Summer Work

From the Black Hills of South Dakota and the fields of Ontario to the flaming craters of Hawaii will be the fields of work for members of the staff of instruction and the graduate students of the department of Geology during the coming summer months.

C. K. Wentworth, who has a Bishop Museum Fellowship from the Graduate College of Yale University and the Trustees of the Bishop Museum of Honolulu, is completing a full year's field work in the vacolnoes and ports of Hawaii. Professor Wentworth is continuing the study of sedimentation which he begun two years ago by experiments here at the University. He will return to Iowa University this fall where he will again be on the teaching staff.

The members of the staff of instruction and the graduate students of the department of Geology will be carrying forward geological work in various parts of the country during the summer. Prof. George F. Kay, the State Geologist, will do field work in various parts of Iowa. Prof. A. C. Trowbridge is in charge of a field class at Barboo, Wisconsin. Prof. J. J. Runner is conducting a field course in the Black Hills of South Dakota. Prof. A. O. Thomas will do work for the Iowa Geological Survey, but during part of the summer will visit some famous fossil localities in other states. Dr. C. K. Wentworth will be carrying forward investigations on the Hawaiian Islands with headquarters at Honolulu. Mr. B. B. Cox will be connected with the Illinois Geological Survey.

Mr. M. A. Harrell will be assistant to Dr. W. C. Alden of the United States Geological Survey, the field of work being Montana. Mr. Harry S. Ladd will do geological work in northeastern Iowa. Mr. A. L. Lugn will be connected with the Iowa Geological Survey, his special problem being the Investigations of the Coals of Lucas County. Mr. Earl T. Apfel will assist Doctor Kay in field work. Mr. W. V. Searight will assist Mr. Cox on the Illinois Geological Survey. Mr. Max Littlefield will be in charge of studies of Molding Sands of Illinois. Mr. A. S. Furcron will do work on the Iron Ranges of the Lake Superior region. Dean Cornwall will work in Wisconsin. Mr. Philip King has accepted a position in oil work in Oklahoma with Dr. J. V. Howell, a graduate of the University of Iowa and a former member of the staff of Geology. Mr. Marshall Kay will be a member of a field course which is being conducted in Missouri by Doctor Weller of the University of Chicago. Later in the summer he will go with Doctor Thomas to Indiana, Michigan, New York, and Ontaria to study certain type sections which have been described and which throw light upon certain problems of the Geology of Iowa.

Better be safe than sorry—The Daily Iowan Advertisers are offering exceptional bargains in student merchandise this summer.

Flesh and Blood Romans Existed

Pliny Is an Ancient "All-Around" Man

"Men of Rome were men of real flesh and blood," stated Prof. Berthold L. Ullman of the latin department in the liberal arts assembly hall in his lecture on "A Human Roman", last Tuesday.

In his introduction, Mr. Ullman said: "One of the first and greatest difficulties we students of the classics have is to realize that the men of 2,000 and more years ago were real flesh and blood human beings with the same means, warmed and cooled by the same winter and summer, as people today." Mr. Ullman chose Pliny as the real Roman. He said of Pliny, "He was not a genius but he was a good representative of the splendidly efficient Romans who developed the Roman empire."

Second Place Too Small for Lowden Friends Declare

Studes and Co-eds of '85 Don't Want Him Shelved

Porter Calls Him Man Of Presidential Timber

Ex-Governor Lowden's reluctance to accept the nomination to the vice presidency may be due to determination not to be "shelved". At least this is the opinion of those who knew him as an undergraduate and those who are familiar with his political record. This, they explain, is somewhat akin to the position in which Mr. Roosevelt found himself when offered the same position.

Miss Mira Troth, who graduated in the class of 1893, knew ex-Governor Lowden when he was "Frank to everybody and one of the most popular men on the campus". She believes that Mr. Lowden's influence is of such a type that he would be able to exert more power as a private citizen than in a figure head government position.

This power was evident even in his younger days, according to Miss Troth, where his force as a speaker and his brilliant scholarship marked him as a "promising young man". He took what was termed the classical course and though being "a poor farm boy who was obliged to work his way", he found time to participate in the social life of the campus.

Miss Troth mentioned Mr. Lowden's co-operation with the committee, of which she was a member, which procured the portraits of the presidents which are hung in the conference room of the Old Capitol building.

Dr. Bohumil Shimek remembers Mr. Lowden as a lad who mixed freely in student activities and in student mischief. He was lively, popular, and a leader in everything worth while in campus life. In Dr. Shimek's opinion, his popularity among the people of Iowa is due to his simple democracy and the fact that his sucesses have left him practically unchanged.

"He is still the good-natured, whole-souled Frank we know as a student," the professor said. "His popularity in campus circles may be attributed to the fact that though his interests have led him to other states, he has distinguished himself as one of the most loyal alumni which claim Iowa as an alma mater."

Prof. G. T. W. Patrick stated that he met Mr. Lowden when he delivered a commencement address here some years ago and considered him an able and interesting man.

"Ex-Governor Lowden was recognized as an administrative reorganizer when he became governor of Illinois. It had one of the worst organizations of any state in the union, but before the expiration of his term, it was considered one of the best." This is the statement of Mr. K. H. Porter of the political science department, who for some time has been in touch with the political situation in Illinois.

Mr. Porter called attention to the strong following Mr. Lowden had in the 1920 convention and to the fact that Mr. Lowden has consistently refused the many high governmental posts that might have been his. "He is distinctly a man of presidential timber who will never be satisfied to play second fiddle."

Interviews with other people who were associated with Mr. Lowden in social and scholastic activities were rich with reminiscences of the days when the student body was not so large and so elaborately organized as it is now, and a man like Mr. Lowden stood out on his own merits. All who knew him agree that he was distinguishd by his brilliancy, his popularity, and his remarkable capacity for work. They tell an interesting story of a rather crude farmer boy who rose to the high position he now holds by his own ability and effort.

St. Louis Cards Give Holm Chance

Has Perfect Day in Field; Gets Double And Single

Waddie Holm, former star freshman athlete at the University of Iowa, has made good with the St. Louis Nationals. Holm was given a chance to show his ability with the Cardinals at their spring trainins camp, and although Rickey was well stocked with backstops, he left Waddie on his roll.

Holm made good in the chances he got in the early games of the campaign, and started Tuesday's game behind the bat, and was then shifted to third base. In addition to having a perfect day in the field, he made a double and a single, being the only man on the team with the exception of Hornsby to get more than one single.

Holm was a freshman at Iowa in 1921-22, and won numerals in football, basketball, and baseball. He played professional baseball however during the summer of 1922 and was declared ineligible for Big Ten competition. He was one of the leading candidate for quarterback on the Hawkeye eleven and was without a peer, here in baseball as a shortstop.

The next spring he was picked by the Cards, but was farmed out to the Rochester club of the International league, where he was one of the leading second basemen in the circuit. This spring Branch Rickey thought him ripe for the big league and Waddie now bids fair to stick in the big show.

Know This Thrill

Do you dive? Nothing else can afford you that exhilaration of motion — that momentary freedom from gravity—which divers know.

And nothing else can give ease of diving movement and absolute confidence like a Jantzen!

The Jantzen keeps its perfect fit—doesn't bind or sag. The patented bow-trunk and non-rip crotch insure plenty of room for action, without straining its all-wool fabric. This year's Jantzen's are smart in appearance; the 1924 colors in men's and women's suits are distinctive—striking.

To Hold No Track Meet This Summer

Mid-West Cities Will Probably Attract Athletes

A track meet for summer students at the University during the first term will probably not be held, from present indications. Due to the activity of a group of Iowa track men who were anxious for athletic competition at meets helds in cities in the middlewest, no meet was held last summer.

Two years ago, a meet was held on the Iowa track which was hotly contested by more than fifty summer schoolers who competed as individuals. Among those who competed at that time were Aleck Johnstone, Iowa football player and a weight man during the past two years; R. G. Harding, "I2" man in football, and shot putter and discus man on the track team; Lyman Hoyt, dash man on the Iowa team for two seasons; and Fulton, former star track man at the State Teachers College at Cedar Falls.

Summer Golf Course Offered Proves Popular

Classes in golf instruction which have been added as a new feature in summer athletic work, are growing popular with students. The course is jammed daily with golfers with various grades of skill, ranging from the embryo class to the members of the University of Iowa team, who are now training for the conference meet to be held at Chicago, June 18 to 21, inclusive. Although this is the first year for golf here, it has already been established as a sport.

Dr. Scott, Frosh Coach, to Leave

Plans to Begin Practice of Medicine

Dr. Homer W. Scott, University of Iowa freshman football coach last fall, will not be in Iowa City next year. Dr. Scott starred on Iowa football teams several years ago as fullback. For the past few years he has been associated with the University, working in the medical department under Dr. N. G. Alcock.

He intends to start a practice, but has not decided where he will locate. He leaves next week for a visit in Detroit and Buffalo, and has planned a trip to the Pacific coast, stopping for a time in Seattle, Wash. One of the purposes of his trip is to look for a location.

Dr. Scott will be succeeded as freshman coach by Rollie Williams, former Badger star, who will direct yearling athletes in basketball and baseball as well as football.

Willard Leaves Ring For Real Estate in West

TOPEKA, June 11—(AP)—Jess Willard one time world champion pugilist has become a Los Angeles real estate man. "It's not a paying game like the prize ring," he said. "But it has its profit."

Jess is here on business and will go to Chicago and Kansas City in about ten days before rejoining his wife and five children in the California real estate movie city.

"Fighting is fascinating, movies are enjoyable, farming is monotonous, circus life is appealing but the real estate business beats them all" was the verdict of the former monarch of the heavy weight ring. Willard has engaged in each of these occupations since his retirement from prize fighting in 1913.

Mahan Conducts Tour to Amana

Famous Lotus Lilies And Mills Lure Students

Students of the summer session will be given an extraordinary opportunity next Saturday when they will go throught the common store, the bake shop, the community church and school of the Community of True Inspiration like any member of the Amana Colonies. Even the thought of tasting, perhaps, the famous Amana bread should be enough to entice anyone to join the party. The excursioners will pass the noted lily pond where the lotus blossoms allure the eye of the aesthete and which with the other charming scenery makes the feeling of being in a far-off country more complete.

Arrangements are rapidly progressing for the excurion which will be conducted by Bruce E. Mahan, associate editor of the State Historical Society. Mr. Mahan is particularly well fitted to lead the party. He is a special lecturer on Iowa history and is thoroughly qualified to conduct parties to places of local interest.

The party will leave the campus at 8 a. m., Saturday, June 14, in Fords rented from companies in the city. As many Fords will be provided as possible. Each car will contain four occupants besides the driver. People with private cars are welcome to join the party provided they assume all responsibility. Dinner will be provided in one of the towns, for which registration should be made in Room 11 L. A.

The excusion promises to be one of attraction especially to those interested in communism. From Iowa City the party will go to Homestead, the first of the Amana villages, and thence north to Old Amana where is situated the large and famous woolen mill which turns out the famous Amana blankets. The other points on the itinery include four other villages of the colonies, Middle Amana, High Amana, West Amana, and South Amana.

At South Amana the party will take dinner after which a brief talk on the various phases of the community will be given by Mr. Mahan. An opportunity will be given to ask questions.

Although the colonies are conducted on a communistic plan they are not as secluded as one might be led to think. It is not an uncommon thing for their members to enter the University to train for professions, especially doctors and pharmacists, among whom have been Dr. Noe and Dr. Marshall, graduates of the University.

When Seidenbecker's advertise a sale, you may rest assured that it is a real SALE in every sense of the word. It's a sale of our own high grade merchandise, personally selected items, bought in the regular way and intended to be sold in the regular way. A backward season finds us overstocked and because we haave planned extensive alterations, we are offering our entire stock of fine merchandise at considerably below former selling prices.

Half Must Go

Carpenters will be at work during the summer, making radical changes in the interior of our store. To make room for them to work, at least half of the present stock must be sold.

While, as you know, it never has been our policy to quote comparative prices, you may be certain that price cuts are drastic—and that sale prices are low enough to move all our merchandise quickly.
