Opium Conference Discusses Ways to Stop Smuggling

GENEVA, Nov. 7. (AP)—The difficulty of forming a general plan to prohibit opium smoking in the far east while the production of opium continues high in China was the subject of discussion among powers having far eastern possessions during the session today of the international opium conference. It was contended that so much opium is smuggled out of China into other far eastern countries that any plan the powers themselves might frame would be made in effective by contraband activities.

China's annual production of opium was estimated between 8 and 15,000 tons. The leading delegates said tonight they would endeavor to draft a plan restricting the use of opium in the far eastern countries, but they insisted it would never work unless China stopped growing the product and an end was brought to opium's illicit exportation.

How World War Leaders Look Today

What roles are leading war figures in the World War playing now? Gen. John J. Pershing, commander of the A. E. F. is a civilian, having been retired from the army only a few months ago. The former Kaiser is living in obscurity in Holland. His "lion," Von Hindenburg, still wears a uniform, but has no army to command. The deposed king of Bulgaria is in retirement in Switzerland. Marshal Foch, generalissimo of the allied armies, is still an active figure in the French army, but not a conspicuous one. Gen. Douglas Haig, now Earl Haig, British commander, is living the life of a retired English gentleman. They are seen as they look today. Above (left to right): Pershing, the former Kaiser, von Hindenburg, Foch. Below: Haig and Bulgaria's ex-king.

San Francisco, Nov. 7. (AP)—Calvin Coolidge carried California with well over a quarter of a million votes to spare.

Tabulation by the Associated Press tonight of returns from Tuesday's election in 7,286 of the 7,456 in the state gave: Coolidge 706,021; LaFollette 415,195; Davis 101,574; Paris 13,075.

Only four sets of electors appeared on the California ballots, as only four parties—Republican, Democrat, Socialist and Prohibition—are recognized in the state. LaFollette had received the pledges of the socialist electors before the balloting, through an understanding with the state socialist party after efforts of LaFollette supporters to get an independent set of electors in the ballot had failed.

Color Screams and Small Ankle Illusions Dominate Fall Styles

Pale flesh or deep sunburn. The tint of a blushing ghost or the shade of a well-broiled lobster. The first soft flush of dawn or a rioting crimson sunset. The waxen pink of a Dresden china doll or the copper cheek of a Cairo dancing girl. It matters not to those who make your hose—they call it nude!

Suspicion is abroad that many of the patterns are created with malice and aforethought in psychological designs. Shapely ankles, thus, might be achieved by small angle illusions, and by the skillful use of shades it might be possible to avoid negative after-images altogether.

Is It Elly Ney Or Nigh or Naw Or Even Nee-I?

The advent of a visiting celebrity is always marked by the appearance of a group of people who are certain just exactly how the King of Spain pronounced her name on a certain occasion or what pronunciation is most favored by the best people of Paris.

A clue is offered by Frank Warren, music critic of the New York Evening World, who wrote a ditty to the effect that "Oh, you charming Elly Ney, you have taken with your play."

On the other hand, Miss Ruth Abeling, another critic, in a widely copied article announced that the name was pronounced "Nige."

A specialist in the matter has collected variations of these pronunciations. This collection includes every possible version from "knee" to "nah". Even "naw" and "neh" has been construed from the simple three letter name.

There are even those who would bestow an extra syllable that is entirely unmerited by such a short word. Thus we have such things as "nee-ee", "nigh-ee", and even "knee high."

Even the lady herself seems a bit uncertain. "In Europe," she said, "I am known as Madame Nigh, but here many people seem to prefer Madame Nay. Nay, I suppose, is also a correct pronunciation, so you may pronounce it either way."

And that is how a great artist disposed of a long dispute about a short name.

Rushing

ONE by one colleges and universities are coming to realize the advisability of postponing the sorority rushing season until late in the school year.

The general effect of early rushing on all freshmen and new women is detrimental. The rushers, placed in unfamiliar surroundings and confronted with the intricacies of registration, are hurried from one party to another in such a fashion that they are naturally bewildered.

Meanwhile those not being rushed, although they do not realize fully what the fuss is all about, feel that they are being left out. Discouragement and homesickness are the results.

The sororities in a majority of cases do not know the rushers personally and the rushers as a rule do not know the sorority girls nor even the standing of the various organizations. Is it any wonder that mistakes on both sides are made every year?

We venture to say that if this University would introduce second semester rushing the number of broken pledges during the year would decrease materially and, at the same time, the general standing of the sororities would rise to a higher level.

Eighty-four Years

OUR grandfathers waited two days before they knew for certain that Lincoln was elected, following the fiercely fought presidential contest of 1860.

But on Tuesday night at 9 o'clock the nation was aware that President Coolidge had been re-elected. This is the change that 84 years has brought.

Returns from rural districts, from far-flung hamlets, from wilderness and prairie straggled in for days before the nation was assured that Abraham Lincoln was elected. Crackling over a thousand telegraph wires, hurtling over myriad ether waves, flashed by gigantic lights against the sky, thrown upon mammoth screen boards, tabulated by electric machines, the reports of the past election reached one hundred million persons early on Tuesday night.

Radio carried the news to the lonely settlements of Alaska, to the barren deserts of the west, to forest reserves high in the mountains. The telephone and radio carried the news to our very firesides. New York newspapers conceded the election of President Coolidge at 9 p. m. A Chicago paper, with the aid of gigantic search lights that cast rays for a distance of 70 miles, flashed the news against the sky at 8:30 p. m. "What will the next 84 years bring?"

A Challenge

CLEAR cut and cold on a velvet sky stands the cross of St. Mary's. Its steady blue arms catch the light from the air mail field which flashes across the sky. They stand erect in its gleam with a glint of defiance and pride.

Not matter how dark the night, that cross pulls itself nearer the sky. The beam of light always finds it there—breathlessly waiting for a touch from the Infinite.

To the person on the street below it casts a mute challenge. Its simple outline traces anew the beautiful Christian tragedy. There is a bitter serenity about it as it towers above the city of men.

For only a moment is it lighted, then the sky wraps it in its heavy softness. Perhaps it is then that "heaven tries earth if it be in tune." Perhaps it has come a little closer to church spires all over the land.

Perhaps that is why St. Mary's gleams so in the searching light.

Illinois and Iowa Justice

GABE Simmons, convicted of the murder of Orton Ferguson in a tourist camp at West Liberty, has been sentenced to be hanged. Simmons murdered Ferguson for no gain. He took his life for it. The jury in district court at Davenport, after hearing the case, recommended the death penalty for Simmons and Judge Barker imposed it.

Last summer in Illinois Leopold and Loeb murdered Bobby Franks for a thrill. Their motives were similar to those of the duck hunter, who shoot ducks for sport. They apparently saw no difference. They were declared to be mentally abnormal, though not insane, and were given life imprisonment.

A man who will murder for $100 is certainly as diseased mentally as one who will murder for pleasure. Yet the penalties were different. Justice is an abstract principle. It should be the same in Illinois as it is in Iowa. As an abstract principle it should be the same whether the criminal is the petted son of a millionaire father, or a pauper.

As the court have acted in the two cases, justice was not given in Illinois last summer, or else it was not given in Iowa this fall. Where was justice given?

The London Times expected the English election returns to emphasize the country's "distaste for excessively rapid processes of social evolution." It was right, and less competent seers than the editor of the English Journal might have predicted the same emphasis in our own election.

Two hundred and ten pounds of mail made up one of three deliveries to the Daily Iowan one day recently. We are getting up into the class of spectators of all time and all existence in the newspaper world.

Did anyone believe the feminist movement strong in England let him note that more women went to the polls at the recent election than ever before with the result that half as many women were elected as had seats in the last parliament.

SORROWS OF A SUPER-SENSITIVE SOUL (Concluded)

Then Alices stood beside Otto and kicked him from behind as he lay in the grass, and they fought like that for some time. That was the second part of the fight. Then came the third and last part. Alexis picked up the easel and smashed the picture over Otto's head. It fastened itself like a collar around Otto's neck. Then Alexis picked Otto up and threw him in the river.

He floated! My paladin! He floated!

I could see his upturned face as he floated onward down the stream, through the meadow, past the lone Tchupvska. It was full of deep resignation.

How can I bear it? Aelxis is to take me to Petersburg, and he has bought a beautiful house, and I am to live in it with him, and we are to be rich, and I am to be presented at the court. Is it not dreadful?

And I can only think of Otto floating down the stream with the easel about his neck. From the little river he will float into the Dnieper, and from the Dnieper he will float into the Volga, and from the Volga into the Caspian Sea. And from the Caspian Sea there is no outlet, and Otto will float round and round in it forever.

Is it not terrible? (The End—Too Bad)

Why I Took Up Music

By Alice Ingham

This is the second of a series of articles to be published from time to time in The Daily Iowan. They are written by students now in attendance at the University, or by alumni, and deal with work in the various departments and colleges. The purpose of the articles is to give students an idea of the work in departments of the University other than their own, and of the reasons which influence young people to take up the various professions.

The course of music in the University is an extensive one. It may include a major in voice, violin, theory, appreciation, or public school music, any one of which is limitless in acquired experience. Students of music, in addition to the technical knowledge which they gain, have the great opportunity of giving enjoyment to others by making them learn to love music. Music is a fundamental subject, and also one which gives pleasure to every person, no matter how elementary or advanced a type of music he may require.

Those who sing or play any instrument can entertain audiences or groups of friends, and those who teach music in the public schools need not be told of the delight which their pupils take in that subject or what an extensive field for sewing the right kind of musical seed is theirs.

My freshman enrollment included voice and harmony, customary for those not taking a major in music. I found in this year, greatly to my surprise, that there existed a vast amount of musical theory of which I had seen blissfully unaware. Scales and names of keys existed so far in the past that I could not recall when I did not know them. But alas! what struggles I experienced that first year learning that V to I is a full cadence, and that to "tie what you can and move stepwise what you cannot" is a strong rock for many a wrecked shipman.

In my sophomore year in college I fully decided to earn the Bachelor of Music degree, and registered for voice, harmony, and music appreciation. My liking for appreciation had been strongly influenced by occasional strains of Beethoven's ninth, Tschakowsky's Fifth, Finlandia, or the Italian Concerto, which came drifting out of the windows of the appreciation class room. In this year we studied thoroughly the beginning of music, and the works of Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven. A thorough analysis of the works of Bach included recognition of themes and the separation of expositions from episodes in the fugues, and analysis of the theme and development of Toccatas, Suites, and Concertos. The symphonies of Mozart, Haydn, and Beethoven received thorough analysis; a great emphasis was laid upon the development of the sonata form as begun by Haydn and completed and glorified by Beethoven in his sonatas and symphonies. The knowledge which I gained in this class and the three years of music appreciation which followed it has given me many hours of happiness at symphony concerts and other musical meetings, when I was able to listen intelligently to the music which was being played. The classes in music appreciation are the backbone of the music course, and as such are indispensable for the student who will be well read in musical literature.

Voice, as approached scientifically in my sophomore year and thereafter, offered great opportunities for training my memory, stage presence, accuracy, intonation, and interpretation. No teacher who has not had training in voice can expect to teach public school music, for her pupils must learn to imitate her voice in learning to sing. A well trained voice is not only a valuable asset in teaching music, but well repays every hour of concentration practice with double the amount of progress. As now planned, the course in voice is most extensive, including the right kind of elementary and advanced training in the singing of art songs, and opera. I can safely say that had I not studied voice in my University course I could not have enjoyed so greatly the song recitals by famous singers that I have heard. Naturally, analysis of the voice leads to greater skill in listening to others sing as well as in the singing. It also develops a keener aural sense, an ability to concentrate on the lesson at hand, while practicing the specified time. I took voice in my freshman and sophomore years because I could not keep away from it, and continued it throughout my college course as my major.

Theory, as I advanced through my course in music, grew more complicated. Elementary harmony as followed by advanced harmony, and this in turn by composition, elementary and advanced counterpoint. Gradually, as the few rules that I used became mastered, I found that these courses required more and more originality until at last, in composition and advanced counterpoint, the task of writing the whole fugue, song or piano composition developed entirely upon me. In this way, the theory courses develop melodic and harmonic originality. After two years of work in the theory, voice, and piano, I found that I must take a course in music which would get me a position the year after I graduated. Accordingly, I took the first year of public music methods dealing with the teaching of the first six grades in music, and likewise the second year, dealing with the junior and senior high schools. A course in orchestration and conduction, together with practice teaching, observation, psychology, and education, made up the required units for a teaching certificate. Orchestration proved to be an interesting course—it taught me the range and tone quality of the instruments of a symphony orchestra, their relative position and balance, and something of how they are played. Conducting meant the planning of an interpretation of a song or chorus for mixed voices, and putting it across to them in a class meeting, seeing that they followed the conductor's signals in a satisfactory manner.

Throughout my college course in music, I can safely say the enthusiasm I had for my other courses in my enjoyment of the music heard in the appreciation courses. I learned to love Isolde, Parsifal, and the Ring from the part of the opera which I heard at the annual spring Wagnerian festival. Who can gainsay the enchanting sweetness of the draught of Sieglinde, the power and majesty of the Wanderer motives, the shimmering gold and crimson of the Holy Grail, or the thundering steadfastness of the Spear? I trembled with Brangane while Isolde, unmindful, sang upon the terrace, and marched with Gunther's vassals behind the body of Siegfried the Hero, whose motive but a few short hours before had rung so stalwart and triumphant. Likewise, modern music will always prove to be a mine of delight. Even now I recall the mysterious groupings of the Dwellers in the Rear World, the elfin daintiness of Footsteps in the snow, the swirling of the Sea, Brahms' masterful polyphony, a violin in the Lekeu, or the sinuous warmth and exaltation of the Prelude, Chorale, and Fugue. Equally clear the melancholy mood of Tschakowsky's 4th Symphony, Manfred's sinister portent, the innocence and fanciful gaiety of Scheerzade, or the swiftly moving glory of Finlandia. Knowledge of the best compositions in musical literature and a keen enjoyment of them as a result of their analysis can give anyone an incentive for the scientific study of music. I took music because, in the first place, I was taught a love for it in all my appreciation courses.

Engineer Attacks Water Systems of Country Towns

Reveal Iowa Has More Small Plants Than Neighbor States

State Water Men Elect Levine, of Ames, New Chairman

An attack on the water systems of small towns was made by Lafayette Higgins, Sr., Consulting Engineer, Des Moines, Iowa, in his paper on "Water Supply for Towns" given at the tenth annual meeting of the Iowa Section of the American Water Works Association held at the chemistry building here yesterday.

Points Out Cause

In his paper, he demonstrated two causes of this unfavorable condition: first, because the indifference of the people, and second the lack of cooperation between small town officials and water-works operators. In the discussion which followed it appeared that Iowa has more small town water plants than any neighboring state a total of 550. Many of these plants were put in by local talent; consequently they are inefficient and do not make for good health in the community.

Elect Officers

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Dr. Max Levine, Iowa State College, Ames, was elected chairman; Mr. Homer V. Knouse, Metropolitan Utilities district, Omaha, vice-chairman; Mr. N. T. Veatch Jr., Consulting Engineer, Kansas City, Missouri and J. W. McEvoy, Superintendent water works Dubuque, Iowa.

The following will read papers on today's program: J. W. McEvoy, Supt. of Water Works, Dubuque, Iowa, George T. Prine, Consulting Engineer, Omaha, Nebraska, E. W. Bennison, Engineer, Kelly Well Co., J. B. Trenchard, Fairbanks Morse Co., Des Moines, Iowa.

Where Walking Takes Skill Plus Pains--These Kiddies Don't Kick

Patience, perseverance, and hard knocks are the toll a kiddie pays on the high road to self-locomotion—at least so they say in the Perkins hospital. Skill comes afterward, maybe.

After an attack of infantile paralysis, one is often left without the use of arms or legs and with twisted and defective backs. Perkins hospital conducts a scientific laboratory to help alleviate these afflictions.

The children are assisted in walking first, by two iron rods placed parallel to each other. They walk between these rods until they are able to take a few steps alone. Then with the assistance of a teacher they experiment until they reach a stage when they can walk with some ease. This often takes months of consistent practice. It is a curious fact that the children can walk more easily than they can stand alone.

Children who need hand development enter the muscle training class where they learn the simplest motions of the hand. The first exercise is grasping and releasing wooden blocks which is a painfully uncertain process for beginners. This develops the hand muscles to such an extent that the child has nearly normal use of them after some weeks of training. The work is timed so that the children do not tire. They spend short periods of time at each exercise, alternating as they improve.

Such muscle training work is a preparation for craft and hand work done by the children when they reach that advanced degree of development.

Eyes of Country Focused on Harvard-Princeton and Illinois-Chicago Games Today

Last Game on Iowa Field for Six Today

Capt. Parkin and Five Team-mates End 3 Years Service

When the Butler game is over, six of Iowa's football warriors will have played their last game on Iowa Field. Captain Leland Parkin, F. Lowell Otte, John Hancock, Darrell Fisher, and Chas. Brookins will sing their swan songs before the year's last home crowd today.

Scott McIntyre, out of the game with a broken ankle from the Illinois mixup last week, has already played his last football game for the Old Gold. While Brookins' flight to fame has been mainly over the hurdle path, he is rounding out his three years of service with a try at the grid game. Making up for lack of weight with speed he may get into the play today.

As Parkin, Otte, Hancock, and Fisher appear for the last battle on Iowa Field, they have behind them almost three years of faithful service that began back in 1922 with the old custom of burying Knox under an avalanche of scores in the practice game, brought the triumph over Yale a few days later, and carried the team through its second championship season. That year Michigan was also undefeated in conference circles but played a scoreless tie with Vanderbilt while Iowa was gathering laurels in the East.

Losing two hard battles last year by close scores and hitting a snag in the fast going Minnesota outfit near the end of the season. Iowa finished in the first division with a 500 rating. Although handicapped by injuries during most of the season, Parkin was able to get into the game now and then.

Fisher has done a great deal of work for Iowa with his toe and his defensive work has always been superb. In the passing of Otte and Hancock, the Iowa line will lose one of the greatest pair of ends in the conference, and a versatile tackle who has also filled the bill at end and worked at the kicking game.

Since these men began to play the game for Iowa, the Hawkeyes have piled up fifteen victories in twenty contests, and one game has been tied. Of these, fourteen were conference games and one, the Yale tilt, an important intersectional affair. In garnering 409 points against conference opponents, Iowa has scored 209 punts, who were let down with 121, and played six games with non-conference elevens for a count of 188 to 8.

In making the record, Iowa has twice defeated and once tied Ohio State, taken the measure of Northwestern and Purdue twice each in as many chances, and won a two to one advantage over Minnesota. Illinois is the only team that can claim two victories against the Hawkeyes in the last three years, Iowa winning in 1922 and losing twice to the Illini since that time. Michigan has appeared on the schedule only once.

Yale-Army Wins are Forecast by Scores

View of Army-Yale game. Arrow points to Failing, substitute for Cotter, trying vainly to advance for Yale. Four yards lost on the play.

BY NORMAN E. BROWN

Yale will beat Princeton by one touchdown when they meet Nov. 15. The Army will have the edge on the Navy by one touchdown when they clash in Baltimore Nov. 23.

That is, if comparative scores mean anything. The Yale-Army game, which resulted in a 7 to 7 tie after two hours of battling before a crowd of 80,000 in the Yale bowl the other day, furnishes an interesting basis on which to figure the chances of the forthcoming games mentioned with the deductions noted.

Notre Dame whipped the army 13 to 7. Yale and the Army fought a 7 to 7 tie. Which would give Notre Dame a 6 to 0 edge on Yale. But Notre Dame trounced Princeton 12 to 0. Which would give Yale a lead of one touchdown on Princeton. So that game's settled. As for the Army Navy tilt. Notre Dame's 12 to 0 victory over Princeton and—

Notre Dame's 13 to 7 victory over the Army indicates that the Army would be a 7 to 0 victory, over Princeton. Princeton nosed out a 17 to 24 victory over the Navy—proved itself three points stronger. Which makes Army a 10 to 0 victor over the Annapolis team.

The score of the Bulldog-Mule tilt does not indicate clearly the comparative strength of the two teams, however. Yale's lone touchdown was due to a 48-yard run by Ducky Pond in the first quarter. Army outplayed the Blue through most of the game. The West Pointers tied the score by conducting a steady, driving attack against the Yale line.

Boston Scheduled Against Marquette As Intersectional

Buckeyes Clash With Indiana at Bloomington

With the coming of fall weather the football combats become tinged with an autumn snap which makes them more exciting from the spectator's point of view and increases the pep of the team.

A number of red hot contests are scheduled for this afternoon and some of the traditional games long since regularly fixed features will be decided. Chief among these is the annual Harvard-Princeton mix, scheduled at Cambridge. This is the first game of the season between members of the "Big Three" and is attracting the usual amount of interest in the east. Both are considered somewhat weak but are quite evenly matched with Harvard perhaps holding a very thin edge.

Yale meets Maryland Penn State and Carnegie Tech look upon a genuine battle on the State field with the Bengals favored to win. Carnegie has beaten Pittsburgh, though losing to Washington and Jeff, and should be capable of showing plenty of opposition.

Yale meets Maryland and is open to win, while Boston and Marquette meet in an international contest. Boston has the best record this season and may get revenge on their opponents for last year's defeat. Brown takes on the Haskell Indians, Dartmouth plays Boston U., Rutgers, Lafayette stage a feature card at New Brunswick. Penn, unbeaten thus far, has a breather with Georgetown, and Syracuse will have an interesting time with West Virginia Wesleyan, conquerors of the Navy. The West Point cadets should win from the invading Florida team, and the Navy is better than Vermont, according to the dope.

ida team, and the Navy is better than Vermont, according to the dope.

In the Big Ten, Chicago meets Illinois on Stagg field in the best matched game of the day. Illinois can hardly be expected to be beaten but the Chicagoans should show them some characteristic Stagg fight. Both are undefeated and the title of the conference is at stake.

Iowa State College After Gophers Northwestern and Michigan meet at Ann Arbor in a game which the Wolverines apparently have clinched and Indiana receives Ohio State at Bloomington in the only other conference contest of the afternoon. Ohio State is superior to the Hoosiers and are doped to roll up a two or three touchdown score.

Notre Dame invades the conference for the first time this fall when they meet Wisconsin at Madison. With the powerful machine Rockne sends onto the gridiron it is doubtful if the Badgers, weaker than usual will be able to even hold the Catholic second string.

Minnesota fans are due for an exciting afternoon when Ames meets the Gophers in the new Minnesota stadium. Ames has one of the most formidable elevens in the Missouri Valley and are conceded an even chance for victory. Iowa and Purdue play Butler and DePauw respectively.

Coe and Knox Clash Drake engages Kansas at the Bulldog homecoming and promises to add another conference triumph to her unbroken string. Oklahoma and Missouri clash at Norman in a toss-up match and Washington meets James Millikin at St. Louis in a non-conference game.

Other middle western games feature the Michigan Aggies. The St. Louis battle at St. Louis, the Creighton-North Dak. N.C.L.A. A game at Omaha, and the Knox meeting with Coe College, who held Wisconsin to a tie earlier in the season, in which, however, Knox, fearfully strong for a small college, is the favorite.

The far west received a bitter disappointment when the scheduled game between Stanford and Southern California University was cancelled. These two Golden State institutions have broken off athletic relations indefinitely.

Virginia to Tussle with Georgia Oregon and Idaho fight it out on the Idaho gridiron for top notch in the conference. Both have suffered one loss and are anxious to make a mends, Idaho is the stronger but will not have the game won until the last whistle as the Aggies are fighters from start to finish.

Other coast games will find Santa Clara meeting Nevada at Fresno, California at Seattle to subdue Washington, and Montana playing Pacific at Missoula.

Denver U plays Montana State, and Colorado U. and the Colorado Aggies furnish the day's sport at Fort Collins.

It's deep-colored, rich-grained bowl, hand wrought from age-mellowed, specially processed briar, is certainly a thing of beauty.

It's stem, hand-cut from solid vulcanite, and perfectly fitted is equipped with an aluminum plunger that is peculiar to this pipe alone and makes cleaning synonymous with removing the stem.

Nothing to do but light it. No unpleasant "breaking in." It cokes to the very bottom as the bowl is moisture proof, insuring a cool, sweet, and enjoyable smoke.

Clinton Has Team of Heavy Veterans

Iowa City high school meets the undefeated Clinton eleven on Shrader field at 10 o'clock this morning. Though the Red and White has lost but one game, Clinton has a clean card and has the edge on Iowa City.
Coach Soucek has lost two of his first backfield men, Koza and McGuire. The substituted players have experience but will not fill the gaps left by the oldtimers. Strickler, stellar halfback, one of the most consistent ground gainers, will probably get his full quota of signals and a chance to star for the Little Hawks.
The stronghold of the Red and White lies in their unyielding line. The line has been almost unchanged during the season, the few changes being for the better. Iowa City has attempted to perfect the aerial game and will probably use it frequently.
The Clinton outfit is heavy and strong. All of the men are veterans, some having played three and four years. Chatterton, fourth year man a 240-pound center, will give the local pivot man, Forwald, a stiff workout. Their coach, Lester Belding, is a former star of the Iowa football aggregation, and has led his team on the same stuff he learned from Coach Jones. They have thrived on it very well, as they have lost no games this season.

On the trip Clinton brings Chatterton, Bossen, Diliang, Vickerstaff, Wallace, Miller, Kinuan, Knight, Albert Pierce, Frank Pierce, Moore, Kunan, Meggenberg, and Krebs.
The Iowa City squad spent their final practice last night in light signal practice.

Commission to Grant Petitions for Permits

Council Takes Action as Result of Request of Citizens; Zoning Committee Is at Work Drafting Plans for New Law

A TEMPORARY building ordinance which will be superceded by a zoning law was passed by the city council at the regular meeting last night.

The ordinance, which prohibits the erection of any building in Iowa City without a building permit, was passed following the presentation of a petition signed by eighteen residents in the vicinity of the corner of Muscatine avenue and Dearborn street asking that Joe Whitebrook be restrained from the erection of an oil station and grocery store on the corner.

Building permits will be issued by the commission composed of City Engineer F. E. Young, City Attorney C. B. Russell, and the chairman of the zoning committee, Prof. F. G. Higbee. The penalty for the violation of the ordinance consists of a fine from $1 to $100, imprisonment until the fine and costs are paid, not exceeding thirty days.

Justice Murphy sustained Hart and reduced the bond of $500 cash, which was furnished and Waeger was released until November 12, when his case will again come up for trial.
