Ship Is Subject of Geneva Toasts

Y. W. C. A. Holds Annual Geneva Club Dinner

Fifty women students attended the Geneva dinner at the Y. W. C. A. last evening at the Mad Hatter's Tea Rooms. The dinner, held annually, serves as an initial effort to interest women students in the summer conferences at Lake Geneva each summer.

Between courses of the dinner, a toast program, typifying the Geneva conference, and carried out by the different parts of a ship, was presented by three of the "crew"—those who have previously attended conferences in other years. The speakers were introduced by Melba Carpenter, A4 of Iowa City, who acted as toast mistress.

W. A. A. Vaudeville Theatens To Rival Acts of Professionals

Program Includes Tumbling and Dancing

A true vaudeville program has been the aim of the W.A.A. vaudeville, which will be presented by the athletic association at the Engler theatre, February 9. The three branches of dramatics, dancing, and singing will be well represented in the various acts. The new orchestra, which will be organized by that time, under the leadership of Margaret Ashe, A4 of Bedford, will have entire charge of the music for the evening.

The present plans call for at least seven acts, for which fifty women will be required, not including the members of the orchestra, who will be unable to take part in any other department of the entertainment. Tryouts for each department have been held, but the names of successful candidates have not yet been announced. No woman will be used in more than three different acts, and only members of W.A.A. are eligible.

In former years, the criticism has been made that the vaudeville did not fill the requirements of the name.

Clever conversational sketches will be included with dancing acts, which in turn will range from Pavlova to cake walking. A Butterfly act is an innovation which promises to be one of the prettiest features of the program. Tumbling acts, which proved their popularity at the Gym Khania, will be another feature, but with an entirely new repertoire. A grand finale, which will require the entire cast, will provide a fitting conclusion to the evening. The sale of tickets will be announced later, so reservations can be made. Contrary to previous custom, the entertainment will be held only on one evening instead of two.

The supervision of the acts will be entirely by the athletic association, with Elizabeth Halsey, head of the physical education department, as advisor. Anne Doornik, A4 of Iowa City, is the General Manager, with Thelma Whimpey, A4 of Albia, as assistant. Other departments and their heads are, Ushers, Maxine Glover, A1 of Oak Park, Ill.; Dancing, Shirley Kinney, A4 of Mason City; Singing, Hilda Ohman, A4 of Independence, Mo.; Dramatics, Helen Burtis, A4 of Armour, S. D.; Music, Margaret Ashe, A4 of Bedford; Tickets, Evelyn Harter, A4 of Iowa City, and Publicity, Alice Roose, A2 of Pavlova to cake walking. A Butterfly act is an innovation which promises to be one of the prettiest features of the program. Tumbling acts, which proved their popularity at the Gym Khania, will be another feature, but with an entirely new repertoire. A grand finale, which will require the entire cast, will provide a fitting conclusion to the evening. The sale of tickets will be announced later, so reservations can be made. Contrary to previous custom, the entertainment will be held only on one evening instead of two.

College Religion Is Vesper Topic

Morals and Morale Introduced in Discussion

"The Effect of College Life on the Religion of the Student" was the topic of a discussion at the Y. W. C. A. vesper yesterday afternoon led by Miss Nelle Summers, secretary of the organization. Miss Summers' topic was chosen from observation made at a meeting of all religious workers in University communities held at the Chicago Beach Hotel, in Chicago, January 7 to 9.

Some of the points introduced by Miss Summers in discussion were: the effect of fraternity life on the student's religion; what the students think of the religious workers on their campuses; present attitudes of the University administrations toward the religious life of the students; the effect of the classroom on religion; student movements in this country; and under-graduate morals and campus morale.

The meeting was presided over by Jean Beattie, A1 of Malvern. Preceding the discussion, Gwendolyn Vincent, A2 of Ottumwa, offered a piano solo. Tea was served to all present following the discussion, with Mrs. Philip G. Clapp of the music department, pouring.

Faculty Comments Favorably on January Issue of Literary Magazine; Frederick Calls Coming Number a "Fine Venture"

Storms of applause tastefully spiced with criticism, marked the comments of members of the English department on the advance copies of the January issue of Iowa Literary Magazine. The number will be on sale on the campus tomorrow morning.

"I have discussed the magazine with several students as well as with faculty members" said Prof. John T. Frederick, editor of the Midland, "and on the whole their comments have been most favorable. This number seems to me undoubtedly the best yet. There had been a need for such a publication on this campus, and I think the Literary Magazine is filling this need well. It is a fine venture."

Prof. Frank L. Mott, co-editor of the Midland, believes that all the student magazine lacks is prestige. He said, "It has had a good start on the way to becoming such a magazine as those which have become famous; among them, the Yale Review, Iowa Literary Magazine needs a background, which can come only with time. Some of these people who are writing for the magazine now are going to make names as writers. When they can have it said that their readers number millions, such tributes will help to make the magazine known."

Mr. Rudolph Kiek, instructor in English, spoke enthusiastically of the January number. He recommended especially "Alice to Kiss", a short story by Zoe C. Lemley, A1 of Brighton.

When finished, the group will consist of five antelope, including two bucks, two females and a calf, mounted against a native background. Two prairie dog mounds, cactus, sagebrush, and a small dried-up stream bed will be added to the group to further resemble their natural habitat. The animals were secured by Prof. Homer R. Dill on an expedition to Wyoming in 1921.

It is planned to have the new exhibition, which is to occupy the glass case south of the buffalo group in Mammal Hall, ready before the June commencement.

Famous Orchestra Plays Composition "Norge" by Clapp

It was also played in Chicago by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra two years ago under the leadership of Frederick Stock.

Off With Hobbles

IT is for men like Judge M. Lindley, of Danville, Illinois, to vindicate a profession, which due to the chicanery of lawyers has been accused of red tape, corruption and purposely delayed judicial action.

In New York, when the lawyers from the state and defense prepared to impanel a jury to try Colonel Thomas B. Fielder and Gaston B. Means, former department of justice agent, on charges of attempted bribery to quash indictments, Justice Lindley announced that HE would question and select jurors to sit on the case.

The lawyers swallowed their chargin. They protested that it was setting a federal court precedent, but Judge Lindley picked the jurors.

Probably the weakest link in the chain of the judicial system is the selection of jurors. Both lawyers know the type of men to which they can make the most effective appeals. The lawyers who question are usually more cognizant of the juror's private life, than the man being questioned is aware; they know how to play upon the sympathies of the jurors, —they are shrewd detectors of response: keen psychologists, who given leeway in selecting a jury, can swing a case.

There will be no room upon Judge Lindley's jury for week-kneed, pliable, responsive, neurotic men. Bribery cases, such as this was, offer too many technicalities which a canny lawyer may use to muddle a juror. Justice is discarding her hobbles.

Civic Apathy

THE trattle of faraway newspapers never arouses a community from its lethargy. Villages are content to bask in the light of their immunity from crime, until the stage of a death, a crime, manslaughter, is moved within their own limits.

Four people in Iowa City died in the past year from auto accidents. With its promotion from provincialism, the Iowa City death toll has increased. For a city of as little traffic congestion as this, as few dangerous curves, there is no condoning careless driving. Inside the past two weeks, a boy of fifteen and a man of twenty-one were killed.

Other cities, other cars, other deaths. In New York, Ralph Graves, editor of World's Work, was struck by a speeding taxi and injured. Recently, Tiffany Blake, head editorial writer of the Chicago Tribune, was severely hurt in an auto accident.

The Chinese, once pained by the acceleration which predominates everything American, said, "Yes, well enough to go fast, but what do you do when you get there?" Driving which sacrifices lives for selfish joy in a burst of speed is tantamount to murder. The limit of a court penalty is barely enough, Manslaughter lacks the deliberation of murder, but is equally as malicious. There has been too much laxity in the enforcement of speed laws, too much leniency, upon promises to amend, in the issuance of court fines. The drive against speeders begun by Mayor Harvat, backed by a few healthy jail sentences, will help make Iowa City safe for pedestrians.

The King and His Court

HISTORY features many corruptions of famous courts, the foremost actors in which have been degenerate and selfish kings. We have rather been inclined to forgive the other officials of these past scenes thinking that little could be expected of them with such a bad example as the leader.

Today in America, with the facts reversed the same criterion might well be used. Our king is President Coolidge, a man of keen judgment, thoughtful determination and firmness, and unquestionable moral character. Statesmen, who were planning to take the lead in political affairs are now taking time out to marvel at the powers of leadership and assertiveness which the "new president" is showing. His admirable characteristics are well brought out in the successful operation of his own ideas above those of others who would influence him. Examples of his success are the presidential veto of the postal pay increase bill, the appointment of Charles Beecher Warren, his apparent opposition to the Hughes' treatment of attempted Russian negotiations.

In contrast to a president whose every hour is devoted to the work of the nation, whose energy is spent in solving the problems of economy, are the congressmen whose lives are featured in the Scott divorce case. Amorous affairs of the wives of congressmen, gambling dens frequented by the representatives themselves, and the congressional trip to Panama at which time the prohibition law was disgustingly violated are enough to show the wide difference between the sterling qualities of the president and the shady ones of these politicians. And they have not even the excuse of a bad example to fall back upon. One congressman excuses the guilty ones as being no better and no worse than the average person. But this is no excuse, for the leaders of our country are, or should be, elected for their supremacy over the average intelligence, in morality, and in leadership. If President Coolidge were no better than the average person, he would not be the president he is, and if these congressmen have shown their baseness in comparison to such a president, they no longer deserve their offices.

Far be it from us to wax intellectual, but now that Heywood Brown has developed a chronic case of recommending in his column the books he thinks good, we venture to commit the same offense.

We think that anyone who has not read three works of Oscar Wilde, namely, to wit, for example, and whereas, The Importance of Being Earnest, Picture of Dorian Gray, and the Canterville Ghost, should be drawn and quartered in the Home for Indigent Intellectuals.

We also think that every young woman should read Fielding's Tom Jones, Max Beerbohm's Zuleika Dodson, and Schopenhauer's essay on Women, in order to realize what peculiar characters other women have been. We especially recommend Zuleika Dodson.

We are convinced that no one should be allowed to pass through a love affair until he has read Sheridan's Rivals and his Duenna. No sewing circle can function efficiently without having read the School For Scandal. The reading of it should be a part of the initiation.

Anyone who cannot laugh at the Pickwick Papers, and Jerome's Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow, and his Three Men in a Boat should be deported to England—the sober producer of our greatest humorists. (We were born in America, but of Irish parents.)

And one of the greatest novels we have read since 1901 is William Barington Maxwell's Day's Journey.

When we are elected to the legislature we will make the reading of Havelock Ellis Dance of Life one of the qualifications. Not that it has anything to do with intelligent voting—we wouldn't deviate that far from the basis of suffrage qualifications.

That will do for now. If you can't locate nay of these just tell us and we'll loan you our copy.

"THE DOVES' NEST"

The Shadow of Her Impending Death Hangs Over This Last

Novel by Katherine Mansfield

Reviewed by Karl W. Kohrs

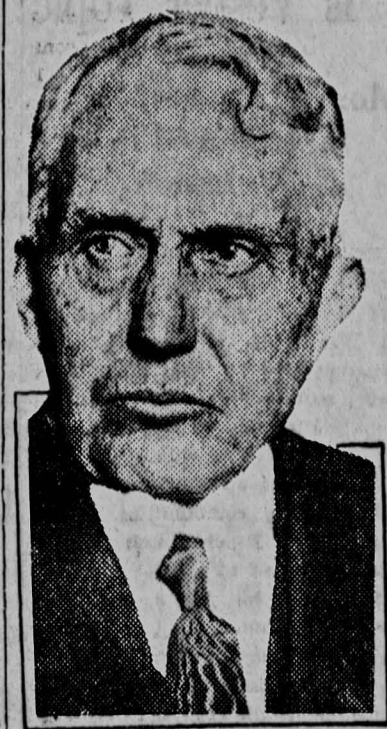

"Can one do nothing for the dead? And for a long time the answer had been nothing." Thus Katherine Mansfield, in her last book, "The Doves' Nest," expresses her vision of the vast gulf of death with all its bitter hopelessness and anguish. Nowhere in the entire book is this sentiment more tragically poignant than the death of the author herself. It is difficult to imagine to what heights of literary fame Katherine Mansfield would have ascended had not fate, with such insidious swiftness, snuffed out this flame of genius.

The thing that appeals in Miss Mansfield's stories is a sympathetic understanding and insight into human nature, that makes her characters step out of the pages into flesh and blood existence. It is all-embracing. "Our Elise" of the "big imploring eyes," is drawn with the same innate skill that portrays "Mr. Podger walking stately, with a benign air of a Monsieur who had eaten well." And yet it is not done with the cold, psychological analysis of a Bennett. A whimsical twist of personality there, a stroke of quiet humor there, and the character leaps into life. As real as they are, they pale, but for a moment on the imagination, and then are gone, as fleeting, as evanescent as the spirit of the author itself.

This elusive quality is typical also of the thought of her stories. It hovers just outside the pale of definite understanding, a tantalizing will-o'-the-wisp. This lends a freshness and vividness that stimulates and refreshes. These latter traits also abetted by the author's style which has the charm of artlessness. It is as if Miss Mansfield were talking across a tea-table, or at one's side in a garden, frankly and in perfect confidence.

As the author presents character, so does she create an emotional attitude in the mind of the reader. One lives with the characters, and likes or dislikes shape themselves under their influence. Take Mr. Podger again, for example. As he enters the room there intrudes in the mind of the reader a slight antipathy toward his clean-shaven self-sufficiency. One feels the sharp contrast between this stranger and the smiling equanimity of "Mother." And in another moment he reveals himself. With blundering assiduity, he calmly proceeds to probe the rankling wound in "Mother's" heart in his insistent inquiry of her husband's death. "Are you sure my inquiry did not give you too much pain?" he reiterates. As if "Mother" were not certain whether, in that fiery furnace of anguish, she felt the sting of the flame. It all inspires a disgust that taints even the last pic-

French Students May Tour France

Professor Bush Heads Party, Assisted by Michigan Man

Students of French may plan now to study French this summer in its native land. A combination of travel in France and an intensive study of various phases of the French language at the College of the Seigne is the unusual offer open again this year to students who desire to spend a profitable vacation.

The group will be in charge of Prof. Stephen H. Bush, head of the Romance languages department of the University. He will be assisted by Prof. R. Talamon of the University of Michigan. These professors will direct the sight seeing trips besides the regular courses.

Those who plan to go will set sail on June 20, from New York harbor, arriving at Cherbourg June 29. Ten days will then be devoted to sight seeing on the way up to Paris, and on July 10, a month of special study at the College of the Seigne will be taken up. There will be courses offered in conversation, grammar, modern novel, French drama, and phonetics, for which credit will be given.

Matmen Have Highest Percent of Victories

By winning twenty-one matches and losing thirteen, with three ties, the Hawkeye wrestling team have won a higher percentage of their contests than any other of the Hawkeye athletic teams in either major or minor sports. Since its establishment in 1911 the wrestling team has won a percentage of .618 and have to their credit one conference championship team—that of 1916—and have more than once ranked second in the conference.

Contests in the sport which was established here by "Dad" Schroeder fourteen years ago, have been held consecutively except in 1919 when the war interfered. And like other sports the rules of play have undergone drastic changes since it was first recognized as a sport. In the meet held in 1911 with Nebraska, three weights were represented—light, middle, and heavy—and each match lasted for two falls. Later the meets were extended to conference championship twice, winning during the seasons of 1923 and 1924; Johnny O'Brien, captain of this year's team, who tied with Holmes of Wisconsin last year for the title in the 135-pound weight. Pfeffer has probably the best record of any Iowa matman in his three years of varsity competition he lost one match by a decision, winning all the rest.

The season of 1925 finds Iowa in excellent condition to improve her already good record in this sport. The majority of the men who will represent Iowa on its wrestling team this year have had experience in stiff competition and can be depended upon to make a good showing.

include four weights, still later to six, and now to seven. In the early days unless a fall was obtained sooner, the bouts lasted twenty-three minutes.

Iowa takes a back seat to but one rival in wrestling, Illinois, who has won most of the matches between the two schools. The Hawk eyes tie with Indiana, Nebraska, and Ames, in the number of matches won and lost. The record of Iowa's matches, with each of her rivals is as follows:

Won	Lost
Iowa 5 Nebraska 5 (tied 1)
Iowa 1 Illinois 4
Iowa 2 Ames 2 (tied 1)
Iowa 1 Indiana 1
Iowa 2 Purdue 1 (tied 1)
Iowa 3 Minnesota 0
Iowa 2 Wisconsin 0
Iowa 1 Michigan 0
Iowa 4 Northwestern 0

Total 21 Opponents 13 (tied 3)

Three coaches have led the Iowa matmen: Dad Schroeder, who originated the sport at Iowa, coached the team from 1911 until the season of 1921; Ralph Parcaut, prominent Iowa middleweight wrestler, coached the team of 1921; and Mike Howard, who took the mentorship in 1922 and who is still in charge of the Hawkeye wrestlers.

Conference champions at Iowa are: Hobbett, 145-pounder, who won the conference championship in 1914; Gran, 125-pounder, and I. J. (Stub) Barron, heavyweight, who held championship titles in their respective weights during the season of 1915; Parriott, 125-pounder, who tied for first with Hill of Illinois during the season of 1916; Charley Sweeney, 135-pounder, who held the title in his weight in 1921; in 1922 Vanna tied with Loucks of Ames for the 125-pound championship; Teddy Pfeffer, 115-pounder, the first Iowa matman to win a

S. A. E.'s Take Lead In Greek Sports Trophy Tourney

Championships in three intramural sports tournaments have placed Sigma Alpha Epsilon as leaders in the interfraternity race for the participation trophy, with Delta Tau Delta second and four Greek letter organizations tied for third position.

The S. A. E.'s took first place in all of the three interfraternity events that have been completed. This organization won the fraternity swimming relay with Sigma Phi Epsilon a close second. The S. A. E.'s took firsts in the water-basketball tourney, Kappa Sigma runner-up, and the fall golf tournament, with Delta Tau Delta placing second.

The participation trophy standing by points of the ten highest fraternities to date: Sigma Alpha Epsilon 146, Delta Tau Delta 121, Beta Theta Pi 116, Phi Psi 116, Phi Kappa Sigma 116, Sigma Chi 116, Sigma Phi Epsilon 96, Kappa Sigma 96, Alpha Tau Omega 91, and Phi Epsilon Pi 91. Many fraternities not listed, with points less than above, may yet prove strong contenders for the cup. Most of these organizations have a total of about fifty points.

Five hundred and thirty-five fraternity men have been entered in interfraternity sports since October. Of this number 164 have actually participated in intramural sports, excluding those entered by the thirty-two fraternities in the basketball tournament now under way.

The swimming relays attracted fifteen fraternities with six-men teams, nine competing. Twelve teams, six men in each, signed up for the water basketball tourney, though two of the teams dropped out. Thirteen organizations entered four-men teams in the golf tournament, and all of the fifty-two men played.

Prefer Well Water For Farm Animals

"Deep bored wells or something which would give an equally pure supply of water to animals are to be preferred to any kind of surface water which animals drink," said Prof. Jack J. Professor Hinman went on to explain that many animal diseases are carried by surface water, such as bovine tuberculosis, anthrax, and to some extent, cholera. The state has made experiments to find if surface water carries diseases, and in almost every instance, it has been proven true. The usual case is that where animals

"Fashion" Clever Satire on Vanity

A charming love scene takes place when Count Jolmaitre proposes to Seraphina Tiffany, played by Emily Patterson. The love-making technique which the count uses is not quite as modern as present day methods, but equally as effective. It is just one more phase of society that is satirized in the production.

Adam Truman, played by Daniel Holcomb, is the first attempt to put the spirit of Uncle Sam on the American stage. Truman does not believe in the insincerity of the social life and portrays the feelings of the great mass of common people.

Contains Many Asides

In technique, the play contains many interesting points which are not commonly used at the present time. The asides and the soliloquies are not modern. Several times the acting is interrupted by the singing of a popular song of the times, either by one or two of the characters or by the entire company. Paul Toomey, Emily Patterson and Richard Atherton, take prominent parts in the singing. Mr. Atherton will be remembered for his work in the "Mikado."

The dances in the fourth act are the "Polka" and the "Square Dance." The accuracy with which they are given is the result of much research work by Miss Bollan, of the women's physical education department, who spent her Christmas vacation in Tennessee, studying the typical American dances of the period which "Fashion" represents.

The costumes worn by the character actors are almost perfect technically as the result of study by Miss Langworthy. Some of the gowns are from the private collection of a famous actress—and are valued at an unusually high figure.

Layden Gives Rockne Credit For Fame of "Four Horsemen"

"Knute Rockne is a real fellow," says Elmer Layden of Davenport, one of the quartet who rode the Indiana sprinters' four mustangs under the championship wire a winner by two full lengths. The speedy fullback who played with the "greatest ever" team is remembered by Davenport and Iowa City sports fans as displaying the same speed and cleverness in his high school days which enabled him to skirt Stanford's ends, and hurl passes to his fellow riders that brought touchdowns. The state tournaments held here were usually featured by his uncanny basket shooting.

Disregarding the praises heaped on the quartet which tore up the turf of ten gridirons and in each case rode from the tournament a winner, Layden gives the real credit for the record of the Irish legend to their coach. Because he can take a green lad and instill the fighting Notre Dame spirit into him, making him a great grid star, the former Davenport man speaks of Knute Rockne as the "grand old man behind the throne."

"Cake eaters" are "passe" in South Bend and every able-bodied man in school goes out for football in the fall. This explains the finding of stars on Rockne's "shock troops" and his crop of new stars that spring up each year.

The Notre Dame star visited Davenport last Saturday. He denied the reports that Notre Dame was intentionally roughed by Stanford but stated that "the game was hard fought from start to finish, and the many injuries we received were unavoidable." Layden also stated that although Miller, Stuhldreher, Crowley, and him-

St. Pat's Smash Hoodoo; Defeat Ambrose, 18-17

For the first time in the history of athletic relations between the two schools, the local St. Patrick basketball team triumphed over the St. Ambrose Juniors, in a game that furnished thrills from start to finish, St. Pat's winning 18 to 17.

The first quarter ended four all, the half eight all, and the Juniors fell one point behind at the end of the third quarter when Thomann failed to sink his free throw with but fifty seconds to go.

The game started slow with close guarding featuring the play of both teams and for six minutes neither side got a basket, although St. Pat's caged four free throws. After taking time out, the Juniors came back strong and Thomann sank two baskets before the quarter ended.

After this the lead saw-sawed back and forth until the start of the fourth quarter, when two baskets by Burger and one by Malone, in quick succession, put the Irish ahead with a comfortable lead.

At this juncture, "Shorty" Wagner, elongated St. Ambrose center, was inserted in the lineup and after two free throws had been made he managed to cage a basket. O'Neil followed with another minute later, but the gun cut the rally short with St. Pat's one point ahead.

Malone, Burger, and Clark did most of the scoring for St. Patrick's, but the floorwork of the guards was exceptionally good. The entire Junior team played a good defensive game and divided scoring honors about even.

The lineup:

St. Patrick's	18	St. Ambrose	17
Malone	RF	O'Connor
Burger	LF	Elwood
Clark (C)	C	Thomann

Property Owners Allowed Fifteen Days for Consideration of Proposed Ordinance; Objections To Be Heard January 16

At a meeting of the zoning commission held last night, the comprehensive zoning law for Iowa City, as prepared and submitted by the sub-committee, was unanimously adopted by the members.

Property owners are allowed fifteen days in which to prepare any objections which they may have. These may be voiced at the meeting following the reading of the ordinance in public. For this reason, no action will be taken at the next meeting of the city council.

Prof. F. C. Higbee of the college of engineering is preparing an ordinance containing the regulations adopted. He will refer them to the next meeting of the city council on January 16, a full text which will be made public at that time.

The city will be divided into three general districts by the action of the zoning commission. The three divisions, which will each contain sub-divisions, are residential, business and industrial, and public use.

The law will not be retroactive. Besides controlling the use of certain city property, the proposed ordinance will regulate the position of structures to the property line. Members of the zoning commission are: Prof. F. C. Higbee, chair-

Prepare for Leadership

BUSINESS leadership is a matter of mental training and ability plus a knowledge of business principles and their practical application to business life.

In addition to your undergraduate work, which should serve as a solid foundation, it will be well to consider the advisability of special training which will help to cut off years of apprenticeship in the business world.

Babson Institute offers an intensive training course of one or two years which teaches the fundamental principles of business and how to apply them in the daily conduct of commercial affairs?

By laboratory methods the student is shown and taught the principles of Executive Management which have built many of America's leading concerns.

Babson Institute is conducted for the purpose of aiding young men, who are to occupy positions of responsibility and trust to fill such positions ably and with credit to themselves.

They May Be Weak, They May Be Lame, They May Not Know Each Other's Name, But Pepped by Jazz, Flea-Hop the Same

An epidemic of "flea hopping" has taken the student body by storm, raging uncurbed for a few weeks now.

Even those who have taken vaccinations clamor for instruction right after dinner at the sorority houses.

A loud, thudding noise, an occasional giggle issuing from all rooms along the rubber-matted corridor characterizes Currier Hall. As each new aspirant learns how to kick up her heels, she hastens to proclaim the fact to her fellows.

"May I have the next flea hop?" no doubt will soon replace the old request for the next dance at afternoon varsity.

The upward trend of the skirt makes it easy to tune in to the proper meter and foot length. The only possible handicap is knock-knees, increasing the danger of an upset, and bow-legs to detract from the grace of the hop.

What of the dignity of formal parties? The next formal probably will resemble a colony of fleas if the craze continues to spread. No wonder the Charity Ball will have two orchestras.

Hall owners will soon have to increase insurance against losses from shaking and quakings. Companies also may be pushed to insuring legs against breakage and hearts against falling.

Why not take lessons from the originator? Capture a flea off some dog's back and watch the correct technique executed by his highness. Follow this advice and become a professional in the sideways, backward, and forward movements.

Seals to Decorate Charity Ballroom

Few Decorations to Make Funds for Charity

Lions' club seals will adorn the men's gymnasium tomorrow night when that organization stages its annual Charity Ball. With the exception of the seals and a few flags, there will be no decorations, these having been dispensed with by the Ball committees in the past to realize more returns for charity from the affair.

Two orchestras providing music for continuous dancing make the ball a novel affair. The ticket sale has been progressing rapidly, according to members of the committee. As soon as the saturation point is reached by the sales, the committee will remove all tickets from the stores where they are now being sold.

Dancing will start at 8:30 p.m. and continue until 11:45 p.m. Special committees to serve at the ball were named yesterday at a club meeting.

E. Sheppard. The report was approved by the board.
