Infection Proves Fatal to Student

Eleanor Bringleston, A2 of Laurens, died at the University hospital at 5 o'clock yesterday morning from meningitis caused by a bruise on her chin.

When Miss Bringleston injured her chin two weeks prior to her death she gave it little thought. Several days later infection set in which gradually extended through the head to the brain, resulting in meningitis.

Last Wednesday Miss Bringleston was taken to the University hospital in a serious condition. Every possible medical attention was given her, but of no avail.

Mrs. Bringleston had been with her daughter since Wednesday evening, but Mr. Bringleston and the three younger daughters did not reach Iowa City until two hours after her death, due to an automobile accident.

Mrs. W. C. Keeler accompanied the grief stricken family to Cedar Rapids last evening. During the past semester, Miss Bringleston had assisted Mrs. Keeler in her home.

The body was taken to the Harmon Funeral home from which place it was shipped to Laurens last night.

Miss Bringleston was active in the Iowa City Methodist church. She was a member of the sophomore women's Sunday school class and a substitute teacher in the junior department.

Miners Confident They Will Reach Collins Tuesday

Explore Another Cave As Drill Bores Into 60 Feet Rock

CAVE CITY, Ky., Feb. 7.—The stream of hope for reaching Floyd Collins in his sand cave trap flowed down two channels tonight. Searchers had explored another cave nearby to a point not heretofore reached, planned another visit with more light and some rope, and had worked downward from the surface twenty-five feet. Rescue workers conceded, however, that whenever they penetrated Sand Cave that probably would find a man trapped beneath a boulder who no longer was alive.

Holmer Collins, brother of Floyd, took a small party into a crevice not far from the mouth of Sand Cave, and penetrated seventy feet today. A black pit of unknown depths blocked their passage there and they returned to daylight for rope and better light.

Meanwhile another expedition was under way. Three volunteers bound themselves together with rope and crawled into Sand Cave for a survey under the direction of H. P. Carmichael, supervisor of the mining operations. All work on the surface ceased as the three entered Sand Cave. Carmichael followed them. Soldiers ordered the strictest silence. No miners worked in the shaft.

The drill, boring down through the roof of Sand Cave tonight, had penetrated to a depth of 80 feet without breaking through into the underground coliseum. The last fourteen feet was through solid limestone. The six foot square shaft, however, lies behind the drill having reached a depth of only twenty-two feet at 10 o'clock tonight. After several hours of timbering, the work of digging and hoisting was resumed at 10 o'clock.

The drill has indicated that the miners have about twenty-four feet more of sand and gravel strata to penetrate before the limestone formation is reached. The miners still expressed confidence they will reach the tunnel where Collins is imprisoned by Tuesday afternoon.

Izaak Waltons in Ames Seek Funds to Feed Starving Elk

AMES, Ia., Feb. 7 (UP)—Relief for the hundreds of starving elk at Jackson Hole, Wyoming, is being urged by members of the Izaak Walton club here in cooperation with the national organization. Each winter a great number of these animals die from lack of food. The club is now raising funds to help purchase grazing lands in Wyoming for the elk. It is hoped that the government will aid by setting aside a game reserve area.

Raw Oyster Ban Improbable Here

Iowa City has passed no ordinance which punishes the eating of raw oysters with a fine, although Chicago and several other cities where the typhoid scare is rampant have drafted such a measure.

"I do not believe the danger is sufficiently great in this section of the country to warrant such a law," said a city hall official yesterday.

Oysters are contaminated from conditions affecting the water in which they live, according to Prof. C. C. Nutting, of the department of zoology. "No bed is more susceptible than another to contamination. It depends upon local and temporary conditions," he continued.

"If an oyster is infected there is no way of telling it, so the safest course to pursue is to cook it. This kills the germs which might be present to cause a disease."

"It seems to me that there is more of a scare now about eating raw oysters than I have ever known before."

According to local dealers the sale of oysters has not diminished to any appreciable extent as yet.

"Iowisms" Flavor Schoolboy Talk

Speech Department Conducts Novel Tests; Show "American Dialect" as it Is

A shy little chap looks at his questioner with wide inquiring eyes. The latter holds before him a picture of a pumpkin and asks, "What does your mother do with this?"

Instantly the little fellow's face lights up as he replies, "Makes pumpkin pies."

Having been raised on "the American dialect," he probably will say "pumpkin." Perhaps he has a slight lisp. Perhaps his speech will be perfect.

Such speech characteristics have been revealed in recent tests made by the University department of speech in the West Branch and Sumner township schools, cooperating with the Iowa Child Welfare Research station.

Natural speech without conscious affectation was secured by showing the child pictures, usually of familiar objects, and asking him to talk about them. The tests have given definite information as to the speech of the children in the selected locality, and formed the basis for determining the nature of speech conditions among the school children.

"On the whole," stated Sarah T. Barrows, assistant professor of phonetics in charge of this part of the work, "the children responded quite enthusiastically to the tests, and we found very few peculiarities and defects. There are several cases of actual stammering and a few instances of retarded speech, or 'baby-talk.'"

The tests were given under the direction of Miss Barrows, Miss Mildred Freiburg, and G. W. Gray, all of the department of speech, and Dr. Lee Edward Travis, of the national research council. They were assisted by nine graduate students and seniors majoring in speech.

The Feel of Spring

WHEN, about this time of year, you stroll forth in the evening, and find a perfect, delicate translucent blue—

And the stars hang steadily, each set sharp and clear, like jewels in the infinite carcanet of the night—

And the full moon rides high above, clear and serene, shedding a light like day—

And the fresh smell of moist brown earth comes to your nostrils, and the air feels cool and clear—

And you want to walk, and walk—on and on—forever—

And the girl beside you looks unusually beautiful—and you wonder if you're falling in love—

Then, perhaps, you'll know that spring is hovering near.

Wanted: A Robert Peel

FEBRUARY is the month of birthdays. Abraham Lincoln is a child of February. So are Charles Darwin, the scientist, and Sir John Suckling, the poet. Charles II, the worst scapegrace that ever sat on the English throne, and Robert Peel, the defender of English freedom, both had birthdays during the past week.

Robert Peel was born February 5, 1788. His father was a rich mill owner and was able to send Robert to Christ's Church college. Here Robert proved to be a steady, quiet, industrious student. He led his class in the classics and in mathematics.

At twenty-two Robert Peel had a seat in parliament. He belonged to the party of his father who was a thorough going Tory. As the younger Peel came to study the political situation, he became convinced that his father was wrong. After a dramatic scene in parliament, he became the leader of the middle classes and the champion of the poor.

The criminal laws in England were unjust. The most severe punishments were dealt out for simple offenses. A man might be hanged for chicken stealing. Peel hated this unfairness of laws, and fought through a reform bill in 1825.

Peel was living in an age of religious intolerance. The reaction from Catholicism had been tremendous, and the triumphant protestants were intolerant in their victories. Roman Catholics were not allowed to vote. Peel was a tolerant, broadminded statesman. He put through a law which declared that there should be no limitation of citizenship based on religion.

Peel was a friend of the working man. At that time the English working man was little better than a serf. Prices were high and wages were low, so that the laborer could barely make a living.

The rich men had to pay few taxes. Peel saw the injustice of the situation, and in 1842 he put through two laws to help the poorer classes. One law set an income tax on all incomes of over 180 pounds. The other greatly reduced the tariffs. Peel's opponents predicted that these laws would wreck the country. Before they were passed, the government had a yearly deficit of $2,000,000; afterward it had a surplus of $5,000,000.

In 1846, Peel did the crowning work of his career. He brought about a repeal of the corn laws. These laws had provided that wheat should sell at about $9 a bushel. If it should go below that price, all importations had to cease until it again reached that figure. As a result of these laws, the poor of England had been denied white bread.

When he repealed these laws, Peel said, "I shall leave a name sometimes remembered with expressions of good will in the abode of those whose lot it is to labor to earn their daily bread by the sweat of their brow, when they shall recruit their exhausted strength with abundant and untaxed food, the sweeter because it is no longer leavened with a sense of injustice."

Poor children in England had been ground down under a vicious system of child labor. Even at the age of six, some of them were working twelve and fifteen hours a day in the factories. Peel forced through a law which provided that no child could be employed for more than nine hours a day.

Peel was a rebel. He came of a rich family, but he sponsored the cause of the poorer classes. He brought about the triumph of the middle classes over the aristocracy and went a long way toward lifting the laborers to the middle class.

In college, Peel was a conscientious student. He took an interest in affairs of government, and at twenty-two had a seat in parliament. At the death of Canning in 1827, Peel became the leader of his party. He was prime minister from 1841 to 1846.

Peel was at odds with his times. In an age of intolerance, he was tolerant. In an age of aristocracy, he was the champion of the poor. He dared to depart from his father's political and economic theories which he thought to be wrong, and to fight for those which he believed to be right.

Today we are not serfs, but we need leaders and thinkers as did the England of the thirties. Too many of us are intolerant and prejudiced and selfish. We need a leader who is a clear thinker and a courageous fighter. We need a statesman who is keen enough to see through the problems that perplex us, and broad-minded and courageous enough to fight for what he conceives to be right. We need another Robert Peel.

After wading through a fog for the past two days, we have come to the conclusion that our next itinerary will not include London.

When the Duchess D'Alfufera was shot, her corset saved her life. We hate to think what would have happened to an American flapper.

We feel sorry for the co-ed who put off studying Friday because the world was going to end at midnight.

Henri Verbrugghen Comes Here Soon

Leader of Orchestra Once Aspired to Be Doctor

"The world makes way for the man who knows where he is going," is quoted concerning the career of Henri Verbrugghen, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, who appears in Iowa City on Wednesday, February 18, at the men's gymnasium.

Like other artists before him, the career chosen for the young Belgian by his parents, was to be along professional lines, preferably medicine. He was allowed to study violin only as an avocation, but his talent became so apparent that the attention of Ysaye, the Belgian violinist was attracted to him, with the result that he became a pupil of the virtuoso. His first public appearance in Brussels was so great a success that his master took him to London where he made his debut at the age of fourteen.

For five years he was a concert violinist. Step by step, he worked his way to the concert master's desk. After playing in various orchestras in England and on the continent, he accepted the post of assistant conductor of the Symphony orchestra of Glasgow, Scotland.

His reputation as a conductor was further heightened by later engagements as conductor of the London Symphony orchestra in the Beethoven festival of 1914, and the Beethoven-Brahms-Each festival in the following year. The State Symphony orchestra in Sydney, Australia was the next to recognize him, and from there the summons came to direct the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, the position he now holds.

Iowa Beats Rivals, Making Intramural Sports Pay Way

University Funds Used to Finance Activities in Every Other Big Ten School But Iowa

Iowa University is today the only member of the Big Ten conference boasting of an intramural sports system wholly self-supporting, according to E. G. ("Dad") Schroeder, director of the gym and minor sports. Illinois ranks next to Iowa, the only expenditure for intramural activities there being a salary for the director of the intramural department.

No part of the University funds is used for the support of intramural sports here, while at Ohio State and Michigan thousands of dollars are expended annually for the upkeep of the intramural division of athletics—appropriations running up into five figures each year.

With cooperation as the keynote, intramural sports are handled here in a manner that requires no appropriation or expenditure on the part of the University. "Dad" Schroeder directs the whole, and the different coaches handle the various divisions of intramural athletics. G. W. Tompkin, assistant to Schroeder, has charge of all preliminary work in obtaining entries and starting tournaments and contests. He keeps records of the points made by individuals and organizations, and other information goes down in the annals of the department, in connection with regular work at the gym office.

Coaches Drafted Without Pay
Schroeder and Tompkin, together, have charge of the intramural baseball, basketball, handball, tennis, and boxing tournaments, make the drawings for all tournaments and selecting trophies and prizes for the winners in all of the intramural contests held at the University.

The coaches, D. A. Armbruster, swimming; Mike Howard, wrestling; G. T. Bresnahan, track; and Charles Kennett, golf, assume charge of the intramural tournaments and contests in their respective branches of sport, after entries have been received and drawings made at Schroeder's office.

Charges Entrance Fee

The greatest expenditure in connection with intramural sports, here, is that incurred in the purchase of trophies, medals, and other prizes given the winning contestants, while minor expenses include those for umpires, in the contests in which a judge or referee is required, and for other supplies. The intramural department meets these expenses by charging small entrance fees for participating in

Listen, Iowa By Oakley Davidson

Thrusting college credits upon an athlete may be cruel and inhuman treatment in some cases. Weekman of Wisconsin is now giving notice that he is through basketball for good. And all because he is eligible for a degree. Changing over from a guard position last year, Wachman whacked through as a forward for the leading scoring place among the Badgers. Wisconsin will have more trouble now, but it's nothing new. The other way of getting ineligible is a little easier and just as certain.

Counting up ineligibilities about the time of year might be simplified by the use of a combined slide rule and adding machine. And football isn't so far away that they may entirely forgotten.

Eleven men were out for the first spring football meeting, but that isn't why a football team is referred to as an eleven. It really takes a few more than that to fill up the programs for the big games. After all eleven men are quite a few. Notre Dame had only ninety suited up for a little game at South Bend one Saturday last fall.

Reports say only 2,000 were turned away from the basketball game at Bloomington when Logan and Company took in the Boiler-makers. The Hoosiers seem to think they are back in the Big Ten race. At any rate, we can't see anything easy ahead for the Hawkeyes for many, many days.

The boys worked hard over at the Army yesterday, lots of them. The speedmen were all set for work, but some of them took on unscheduled exercise for good measure. Swaney showed them how in the pinch by running anchor to win the company relay, helped Phi Kappa Sigma on to 1:57 9-10 for second in the interfraternity relay and turned in four fast laps around the Army orbit to give Alpha Tau Beta a five year lead in the second heat of the inter-sorority scramble.

most of the different events. As men handling intramural athletics at Iowa receive no extra pay for their work, thus intramural sports cost the University nothing.

Sport Started 10 Years Ago

Even though the athletic department lacks facilities for fostering a greater and more extensive program of intramural sports here, "athletics for all" is rapidly becoming a more firmly established slogan at the University of Iowa. Over one-half of Iowa University's students have taken part in intramural sports since school opened last fall.

"Dad" Schroeder started intramural sports for the Hawkeyes ten years ago. The contests then were mainly between the different colleges of the University and has developed, since, more for the individual to give each one a chance in the sport for which he is most fitted. Gymnastic work was started in 1910, swimming 1912, wrestling 1913, fencing 1917, and boxing 1918. Tennis was started here years ago, but as a sport, was dead for about ten years preceding 1924, when it was revived and developed into one of the greatest sports at the University.

Phi Pisis Nose Out Phi Kappa Sigs; Set Record

Two relay records went to the board yesterday when approximately 350 athletes opened the Hawkeye cinder path season in the Fifth Annual University Athletic Carnival at the armory. In the sorority relay section, Einer Sorenson, anchor man for the Phi Omega Pi team, succeeded in maintaining his lead over H. R. Phelps, Sigma Kappa representative, and culminated a six-lap fight between the two by lowering the armory mark for the event by 15 1-10 seconds.

The second record succumbed to the attack of the Phi Kappa Sigma team for the fraternity championship by 8-10 of a second and lowered the indoor mark by 20 seconds. In the special events, Cubel and L. Phelps tied for individual honors, Cubel winning the high barriers and taking second in the lows, while Phelps was first in the lows, fourth in the 50-yard dash and the high hurdles.

The first event was the 50-yard high hurdles which was a battle between Cubel, Coulter, and Mann. Coulter and Cubel won their respective heats, but Mann pulled a surprise in the finals and defeated Coulter for second place. Cubel was first by a margin of more than a yard.

L. Phelps Takes Lows
The 50-yard dash, which drew the largest entry list of any of the special events, was won by Roberts, who defeated his team mate, Chan Coulter, by a few inches. Taxman was the lone freshman in this event, taking fifth place after winning his heat in the preliminaries.

In the relay events some very close races were witnessed. In the interfraternity section, the Phi Kappa Pi team, composed of Cubel, Harris, Saunders, Greenwood, Graham and Romey, succeeded in snatching away the victory from the Phi Kappa Sigma crew, composed of Vogel, Swaney, Cunningham, Raw, Gillespie, and Nesler by less than a second, after the Phi Kappa Sigs had won their own heat by a comfortable margin.

440-Yard Walk Feature

The race between the Phi Omega Pi and Sigma Kappa representatives for the cup in the inter-sorority section was one of the closest ever seen in this event on the armory track. The Phi Omega crew of Sinning, Cubel, Dauber and Sorenson, after seasawing the lead back and forth for thirteen laps, with the Sigma Kappa aggregation, made up of Wylie, L. Phelps, Jones, and H. Phelps, finally emerging victorious when Sorenson defeated H. Phelps by a margin of six inches at the finish, after he had led his rival for the entire six laps on a lead secured in the dashes in the middle of the relay.

No One Disqualified in Walk

The feature event of the afternoon, the 440-yard walk, was won by Claassen, who outclassed his two rivals by the length of his strides. None of the athletes entering were disqualified as was the case last year, when all were ruled out except the last man finishing.

The summary follows: (At the request of Coach Bresnahan no times or distances except in the relay events will be given.)

50-yard high hurdles: Cubel, first; Mann, second; Coulter, third; L. Phelps, fourth; Boice, fifth.

Iowa Wrestlers Throw Gophers as Gym Team Loses

The two invading Hawkeye teams broken even in their duals with Minnesota held in Minneapolis on Friday evening, the wrestlers winning a one-sided victory, defeating their Gophers rivals 25 to 4; the gym team losing by a score of 1231 to 912.

Five falls won and two decisions lost was the record of Coach Howard's grapplers. L. L. Pfeffer, competing in his first conference bout, threw Hendricks of Minnesota in 4:23. The outcome of this match was especially welcome to Iowa wrestling fans as the strength of this weight was questioned before the match.

Voltmere Wins Shortest Bout

Capt. O'Brien and H. C. Halweg won falls in their weights shortly before the end of the twelve minutes allowed for each bout. Grattan won a fall over his opponent in 5:21 while Voltmire won the shortest bout of the evening, defeating Catanzaro in 3:25. Catanzaro was defeated by Captain James last year in the shortest conference bout an Iowa man ever engaged in, throwing his man in less than thirty seconds.

Schutte, the Minnesota football star, who made the three touchdowns which Minnesota scored against Illinois last fall, won his bout in the light-heavyweight class from Hobart in the closest match of the evening, Schutte having a 2:03 time advantage after two overtime periods. Lane lost his bout by a time advantage of 5:35.

Summaries

115 pound class: Pfeffer won by a fall from Hendricks. Time 4:23.

125 pound class: Dally won by decision from Lane. Time advantage 5:35.

135 pound class: O'Brien won from Eastern by fall in 11:50.

145 pound class: Halweg won by fall from Peterson.

158 pound class: Grattan won by fall from Steinbauer. Time 5:21.

175 pound class: Schutte won by decision over Hobart. Time advantage 2:03 after two overtime periods.

Heavyweight class: Voltmire won from Catanzaro by fall. Time 3:25.

Gophers Take Four Events

In the gym meet Minnesota won four of the six events on the program, the Hawkeyes winning first place in tumbling and in club swinging. In the latter event Bailey, Iowa's sure point winner, won decisively over his Gopher opponent.

The feature of the meet was the work of Julius Perit, ex-captain of the Gophers, who won first place in three events: horizontal bars, horse and the parallel bars.

Summaries

Horizontal bars: won by Perit; Davidson second; Wiley third.

Side horse: won by Perit; Saxe second; Whitney third.

Rings: won by Miller; Perry second; Davidson third.

Parallel bars: won by Perit, Skurdalsvold second; Saxe third.

Clubs: won by Bailey; Miller second.

Tumbling: Breckenridge first; Smith second.

Oil Cruisers Look to Sofia

SOFIA, Feb. 8 (A.P.)—Many foreigners have applied for the right to prospect for petroleum in various parts of Bulgaria. The committee on commerce of parliament considered a mass of these applications the other day. The indications are that foreigners will receive concessions for digging oil wells, provided the rights of the state in natural resources are well guarded.

WSUI Promotes Iowa Spirit

WSUI is one of the most appreciated links between Alma Mater and her family, the alumni and former students of the University. This is not just a surmise but the gist of hundreds of messages which pour into the Station from all parts of the United States, Canada, and foreign countries where graduates of Iowa are located.

It is the personal note that counts. College days are revived and the old spirit rekindled at hearing familiar voices on the air. Distance is no longer an alibi and "out of touch" appears less and less frequently in our correspondence. A great deal of this new interest is directly traceable to the latest means by which the University is now keeping its friends "in touch"—Station WSUI.

Students Receive Library Hints

The value of a library is enhanced by the knowledge of how to use books. Some claim it is more important to know how and where to find material than it is to have data stored away in the mind; better to leave the brain untrammelled with bits of information which merely feed the main streams. In the matter of research (that much abused subject) books are indispensable tools and for results one must be absolutely familiar with what to use and how. A student in the new environment of the stacks will accomplish little; even titles and authors seem unfamiliar, while the varied letters and figures on the books themselves, the numerous legends on the stacks, and the erudite atmosphere are oppressive.

Before coming in contact with the books themselves, however, there ought to be a preliminary training for each student in the fundamentals of the library system. To assist the student to a short cut to knowledge of the use of books and of library methods, the University, through the College of Liberal Arts, now offers, tentatively, subject to formal approval of the Liberal Arts faculty at its next meeting, a new course known as "Library 2." This work will be open to undergraduate students of any class but will be limited this semester to two sections of fifteen students each.

Extension Division State's Asset

That the University reaches out to every district in the State is seen from the recently issued statement that one out of every six persons in Iowa established connections with the institution last year through the Extension Division. It is estimated that during the past year 961 different students took 1,108 courses. At present over forty members of the faculty are conducting 119 different courses. Among the correspondence students are United States soldiers in the Philippines, persons in the West Indies, two Japanese in their native country and others scattered over the earth. Radio courses will increase the number of students in attendance.

Aside from its direct offerings, the Division replies to all sorts of queries. In fact, it acts as a clearing house in this respect. For example one man wanted to know how to run a muskrat farm. A minister asked for three things as follows: a collection of good, clean dance music (not jazz), some old Atlantic Monthlies, and the name of a good book on how to run a Ford. He got all three, said the Director. "You can't stump the Division."

In the eleven years since the organization of the Division it has seen a remarkable growth in its response to the people of Iowa for an additional service which would bring the University into homes, stores, farms, and factories of the State.

Latest Novelty for Radio Fans

And now must we learn another language? We thought genders, declensions, conjugations, and all those troublesome preliminaries of reading and speaking in foreign tongues, were past forever, but here we are, starting a universal language—Esperanto—in the face. A knowledge of it, it is said, is necessary for radio fans of the future, or of the present. Witness the latest words of the press from an authority on the subject: "The broadcasting value of Esperanto is not yet appreciated in the United States." The enthusiast goes on to say that "it is so easily learned that one can teach himself," which is somewhat of a consolation, if we really must take Esperanto seriously. Possibly the University will be giving courses soon.

University Schedule

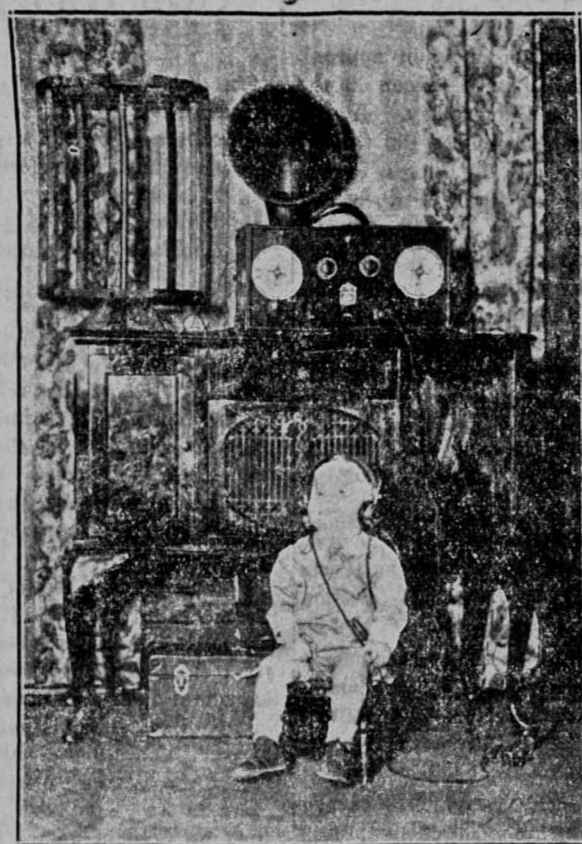

Now that mid-year examinations are over a psalm of rejoicing has gone up from the students: "Make ye a joyful noise unto the stars, all ye collegians." The new semester is on its way. After losing over one hundred young people from academic bonds at the convocation on February 4, the campus population has settled down to the stretch ahead to Easter after which there is a straightaway until June 9, commencement date. On that day bars will again be let down for a week. After a seven day's interval, the University plant will then continue full steam ahead through the summer months up to August 28.

Recent Election To Sigma Xi

Sixteen graduate students were elected members, twenty-eight graduates and fourteen undergraduates were elected associate members of Sigma Xi, honorary scientific fraternity, at a recent meeting of the membership committee. The department of chemistry headed the list with eleven elections, while there were ten from the department of physics. The complete list follows:

Radio News From WSUI

By Carl Menzer, '21, '22 M.S.

"HE DOESN'T want to register for engineering, he wants to see the broadcasting station," knowingly remarks Dean Raymond's secretary in the Engineering Building, as Mr. Stranger enters the office, making straightway for her desk. "What is it please?" she inquires.

"Why we just happened to be in Iowa City to-day and did not want to miss the opportunity of seeing Station WSUI," is the reply. "Would it be possible to see it now?"

The visitors, accordingly, are directed to the third floor of the Engineering Building, down a short hall, into a door marked WSUI, and the invasion of the station begins. If the visit is made around 12:30 P. M., and the operator is in a good frame of mind, Mr. Stranger may be allowed to peep through the double glass window connecting the studio and operating room and see the artists and announcer engaged in broadcasting the daily noonday program. While the program is being broadcast, he gets acquainted with the station secretary and the operator who is stationed in the control room operating the set. The operator takes pleasure in explaining the control system of WSUI, a class B station with a power rating of 500 watts, transmitting on a wave length of 484 meters.

Very likely he will also explain that WSUI operated on a wave length of 498 meters during a test period, but that this wave length was found unsatisfactory and the old frequency of 620 kilocycles (484 meters) was reassigned. He adds that the station call letters have been changed from WHAA to WSUI. The SU part of the call, of course, is the abbreviation of State University of Iowa. WSUI was the call originally sought when the Station was first established, but only during the last few weeks has this call been available.

Mr. Stranger then steps back into the reception room to listen to the program coming through a loud speaker there and the secretary tells him of the many cards and letters received by the station staff complimenting them on the quality and good transmission of the programs. "Our furthest report," she says, "is from Hawaii, but we have had many from ships on both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, from Mexico, Cuba, Alaska, and all parts of Canada and, of course, every state in the Union." One from the northern part of Canada told of the receiver being one hundred and eighty miles from a railroad, the only means of travel by dog sled in winter and canoe in summer. Another message was from an Iowa alumnus who never missed a Homecoming football game, but due to illness was unable to visit Iowa City this year. He had a radio set installed at his bedside,

Associates

in the hospital for the game and on October 25 said he hoped the rest of the patients would not suffer because most of the nurses and doctors were in his room.

Still another message from an old Iowa football player, who, unable to rise from his bed, listens to every football report broadcast from WSUI through his radio set and cheers along with the crowd. From Long Island comes a report saying WSUI is as loud there as the east coast stations and a lighthouse-keeper on a lonely island in the Atlantic tells how WSUI furnished him entertainment. A report from the gold fields of the Yukon says WSUI is "booming in and headed straight for the North Pole."

The secretary explains that the programs now broadcast consist of music and lectures from the studio, convocation and vespers from the Natural Science Auditorium, organ music from the Methodist Episcopal Church, basketball from the Armory and football games from Iowa Field. Another service just begun is the broadcasting of University courses by radio. Work on special apparatus to broadcast the University Band directly from the band room is under way.

As the announcer signs off he opens the door of the studio and invites the visitor in to inspect. If Mr. Stranger knows anything about acoustics, he does not have to be told that this studio is as nearly perfect as is possible for one to be. Heavy Plaxinum lines the walls and ceiling with an outside drape of velvet which absorbs all sounds not entering the microphone and prevents any echo which might otherwise blur the clearness of the voice or music.

At the end of the studio inspection, the visitor asks how basketball games are broadcast from the floor and how broadcasting is done from the Natural Science Auditorium and the Methodist Episcopal Church. The announcer explains that a special wire joins an amplifying device and microphone, located at the point of broadcast, with the station, and by this arrangement entertainment can be broadcast from any point outside the studio. In the case of basketball games, a special booth having sound-proof walls and double glass windows is built in the armory and commands a view of the floor. The microphone and announcer are located inside this booth, and it is found that this method allows a report of the game to be given, and enough of the cheering also to make it extremely interesting, as is attested by the numerous letters, cards, and telegrams received after every basketball broadcast.

In leaving, Mr. Stranger receives as a souvenir a pamphlet describing the Station and its programs.

The Summer's Offering

For The Latin Teacher

DO YOU know why Latin is taught in high school? Do you know what benefits each student should derive from his Latin? Do you know how to give them to him? Are you proving to your students by your teaching that Latin is alive, interesting, and practical, and that no other subject can take the place of Latin? The present or prospective Latin teacher who cannot, but would like to, answer yes to these questions is sure to be interested in the courses to be offered at the University of Iowa next summer.

Coming as it does on the heels, so to speak, of the publication of the report of the recent nationwide survey of the teaching of Latin, the Summer Session of 1925 will furnish a more than usual opportunity for becoming familiar with the latest developments and recommendations in the teaching of the most popular foreign language now offered in the high school. Obviously, the investigation will have been of little avail if its findings are not put into practice; accordingly, one of the aims of the Summer Session will be to show teachers just how to present the subject.

A million students in the secondary schools of the country are studying Latin (more than all the students of all other foreign languages combined), and this number is increasing every year, moreover, agencies and bureaus all over the United States are demanding more and more Latin teachers and urging Latin as the best field, financially and professionally, for teachers with a degree. As a result, the task of the department of Latin in providing courses to meet all the needs of the situation is by no means an easy one. For the first term there have been devised the ever-necessary courses in the teaching of high school Latin, Roman private life, and Latin composition. To these have been added four translation courses—the poetic myths of Ovid, the biting and witty gossip of Martial, the public and private letters of Cicero, and the interesting sidelights, historical and ethnological, of Tacitus' Agriicola and Germania courses for students from third-year to graduate standing in Latin. Special lecture courses will include one dealing with the Latin element in English, a very practical course indeed for both the Latin and the English teacher, and one in Roman religion. A new feature in the first term will be a rapid course in elementary Latin, for mature students who wish to review, and also for teachers who wish to observe methods of teaching beginning Latin.

During the second term, courses will be of the same general type—the teaching of second-year Latin; Roman political institutions; the history of Latin literature, with wide reading in the authors studied; and, for translation, the historian, Sallust, and the philosopher, Seneca. In addition to all the regular members of the faculty of the department, the summer session student will have an opportunity of studying under Professor DeWitt of the University of Toronto, and Professor Smiley of Grinnell College.

Aside from the regular class-work there will be much of interest. The equipment of the department and the large classical library will appeal to students who will come to "browse." Various members of the faculty will give public lectures. Furthermore a feature of last summer which proved highly successful will be retained—viz., the organization of a classical club to provide social diversion and to promote good fellowship, and at the same time to afford practice for teachers interested in learning how to organize and supervise classical clubs in high school, how to find and adapt material for club and assembly programs, how to write and produce Latin plays, how to edit Latin newspapers, how to conduct Roman banquets, how to make Latin exhibits, and other things of the sort.

Throughout the summer, it will be the aim of the department to give the students much that is practical, much that is broadening, much that they want. It will be a big job; but with plans laid far ahead, a large measure of success is certain.

Physical Education
 Forerunners of the new and complete semi-professional course for a Bachelor of Science degree which will be offered in the Division of Physical Education next fall are the courses on the schedule for the Summer Session. Doctor Paul E. Belting, director of the Division, has listed twenty-three courses for the first six weeks—the most ambitious summer program attempted.

Coaching in the four major sports will receive particular attention. Coaches Burton A. Ingwersen and Gordon C. Locke will take the classes in theory and practice of football, which will include all angles of offensive and defensive football. A similar course in basketball will be offered by Coach Sam Barry, while, under the new coach, Otto Vogel, the men will learn all about baseball. Coach George T. Bresnahan's track course will include cross country running, and is the fourth of the ten hour courses for which two hours of credit is given. Further courses directly connected with athletic coaching and administration are those of golf, theory and practice, under Charles Kennett, and golf-course construction and architecture, also under his supervision.

David Armsbruster, varsity swimming coach, will teach a class in the coaching of swimming as well as those of elementary and advanced swimming. Three other very important courses to be offered are those of physical education and athletic administration by Doctor Belting, officiating in competitive games under Coaches Ingwersen, Barry, Bresnahan, Vogel and Kennett, and the medical supervision of athletics under Doctor Walter R. Fieseler. In addition, Coach Vogel will have charge of a class in recreational baseball for which no credit will be given.

But coaching subjects will not be the only courses to be stressed although they are perhaps more outstanding in the summer. Ernest G. Schroeder and his assistants will present courses in the theory and practice of public school gymnastics. Remedial gymnastics for schools and practice in community and competitive games complete the list of courses in the Department of Physical Education for Men.

Closely allied to both athletic coaching and physical education are several courses which have not been offered here before. Care of student health in the public school will be presented by Dr. Walter R. Fieseler, and hygiene in relation to athletic and gymnastic activities will be taught by Dr. Don Griswold and Professor J. J. Hinman, Jr. A course in the psychology of athletics in the form of twelve conferences will be given by Professor C. A. Ruckmick and staff of the department of philosophy. Dr. Belting will conduct a seminar in physical education. Under the direction of Kenneth E. Griffin, office manager in the department of athletics, a class in the management of athletic finances will be given, considering ticket distribution and athletic accounting as applied to any school or college. Eric C. Wilson, director of publicity, will offer a course in athletic publicity.

It is the expectation of the Director that the Summer Session in the Division will be the greatest in its history. Extensive announcements are being made throughout the country, and Doctor Belting has every reason to believe that the enrollment will be large. Additional information in the form of a complete booklet will soon be available and may be obtained by addressing the Director at the Department of Athletics.

Houston was chaplain of the day. The address was given by Professor Charles C. Nutting on "Ascending Humanity." Included in the program was a violin solo by Prof. Frank E. Kennedy and the opening and closing hymns.

Over one hundred candidates received degrees. Of the advanced degrees four received the degree of doctor of philosophy, two that of civil engineer, five, master of science, and eight, master of arts. Twenty-five received certificates in education and one hundred and twenty-five commissions were awarded by the military department to cadet and reserve officers.

Portland Dinner

Portland (Oregon) alumni had a delightful dinner on Thursday, November 13, at the University Club during the short stay of Dean and Mrs. C. E. Seashore in their city. James J. Crossley, '91, a classmate of Mrs. Seashore, had charge and called on each guest present to introduce his right-hand neighbor. Dean Seashore spoke on the recent developments of the University program, and Mrs. Seashore gave news of all the old friends inquired for. After the dinner W. K. Royal took the guests of honor to his mountain-top home to see the "fairly land night-view of long sparkling avenues, towers, and flashing night-signs of the city of light."

A letter from Mr. Crossley to Professor Ensign says: "We had over thirty at the dinner given at the University Club in honor of Dean Carl E. Seashore and his estimable wife, Roberta Holmes Seashore. We all had a very enjoyable time, and both Dr. and Mrs. Seashore acquitted themselves so splendidly on that occasion that all of the alumni present are still talking about their homelike visit with us. It gave the University alumni here in Portland an opportunity to get together, and we are all thankful that Dr. Seashore and Mrs. Seashore came to our city and that we had an opportunity of meeting them. We sincerely hope that other members of the University faculty will stop off in Portland as they pass through and give us further opportunity for such enjoyable gatherings of the University of Iowa alumni in Portland and from other points in Oregon. One graduate of Iowa, Mrs. L. H. Bowman, of the Class of '67, came down from Salem to the dinner."

Those present were: Dean and Mrs. C. E. Seashore; Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Crossley; Mr. and Mrs. David Lofgren; Dr. and Mrs. Max Charlton; Mr. and Mrs. George W. Gearhart; Sarah Ruby; Mr. and Mrs. W. K. A. Watters; Alice Waldron; Rex Weeks; George B. Thompson; Richard W. Montague; and Frank Griffin.

Reunions

Every mail brings us letters from members of reunion classes. Some of these are from class officers containing summons which we print below. There follow extracts from letters from alumni concerning these June gatherings. We hope to receive many of these from time to time.

Vicennial—1905M.
 A self-appointed committee of four who met, by accident, at the Chicago session of the A. M. A. have taken upon themselves the duty of sponsoring a class reunion for Alumni Day, at Iowa City, on June 8, 1925. Will you kindly pass the word along and make an effort to be there.

Wouldn't you like to rub elbows with the old gang, rehash the old stalls and learn of the successes and vicissitudes of your old friends? You know by now that you haven't formed any friendships that you should value any more than the old crowd, who helped you bluff and "pony" your way through your college course. Pry yourself loose from your practice for a day or so; give your patients a chance and join us. Dick Van Meter, Kurt Jahnecke, Snakes Griffin, Sid Hands, Committee

Decennial—1915L.
 On the evening of June 8, 1925, the Class of 1915 College of Law of the University will hold its tenth anniversary celebration. The place is the Red Ball Inn—the "grads" of '15 won't know it by that name, but it's the Euclid Sanders' former home "up the river" on Dubuque Road. The dinner will start about 6:30 or 7:00 o'clock P. M. The affair will be most distinctly "stag." A lot of the members of the class have written stating that they will be back and they don't mean May! Emmett Delaney, of Clinton, and Lee Shillinglaw, of Chicago, started it. Iowa City arrangements are in the hands of William R. Hart. This isn't an invitation affair; every member of the class is supposed to be back. We don't want the cup the University offers the class with the largest percent of living members back, but we do want the entire class back for a good time. The faculty of the College of Law will be invited, provided they promise not to ask questions. Write any of the three named for details. Addresses are: Emmett Delaney, 538, Seventh Ave., Clinton, Iowa; Lee Shillinglaw, St. George Hotel, Chicago; William R. Hart, Johnson County Bank Bldg., Iowa City.

Tricennial—1895L.
 "I received your postcard about the reunion of the Class of '95 L. I am very glad you are taking hold of it. At Homecoming I talked with C. T. Wright, of Des Moines, and George T. Lyon, of Dubuque, and both of them said they would work for our thirtieth anniversary. If there is any thing that I can do, let me know."
 E. R. Smith, Fairfield

"I am just in receipt of your card and in reply will say that at our reunion held in June 1920 I. J. Hamill, of Tipton, promised the class that on the thirtieth anniversary he was going to take them up the river. I wish you would let me know if you have any knowledge of this special arrangement."

The foundation walls, the pier footings, and all the excavations have been completed on the first of the five units of the Iowa Memorial Union building. The building will be constructed of red brick. It was started last October and will be ready for occupancy by next fall.

Of wide interest in University circles is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Ruby I. Watts, of Okmulgee, Oklahoma, to Professor C. E. Cousins, of Iowa City. Miss Watts was graduated from the University of Iowa in 1922 and during the past several years has been principal of the Franklin School, Okmulgee, Okla. Professor Cousins is associated with the romance language department of the University of Iowa.

Professor John T. Frederick is making a three weeks' tour of the north central and eastern states. His first engagement is at the University of Indiana where he will deliver the convocation address on February 4. He will give lectures at the University of Maryland at Baltimore, Trinity College, Washington, D. C., and a course of lectures at Booklovers' Shop in Pittsburgh, Penn. Four speaking engagements in Michigan follow and three at New York City. The last date on his schedule is at Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.

About fifty teachers of industrial education were present at a conference at the University on January 31. Speakers include Professor W. H. Varnum, Wisconsin; W. T. Bawden, Tulsa, Okla.; S. C. Sonnichsen, of the Iowa department of public instruction and W. L. Hunter, University of Iowa.

Professor Charles F. Ward will conduct a party on a tour of Europe this summer.

Four members of the 1924 golf team have been awarded letters following the approval of the athletic council of rules drawn up to govern such awards. The men receiving the letters were Captain Paul Barton, Fort Dodge; captain-elect, H. C. Jensen, Cedar Rapids; H. W. Lehmkuhl, Independence; and W. F. Bergendorf, Rock Island.

Mrs. F. C. Eastman, widow of the late Prof. F. C. Eastman, formerly of the Department of Latin and Greek, sailed for London, England, in the fall, and will be abroad several months.

Professor Alfred Craig Baird, Bates College, Lewiston, Maine, newly-appointed professor in the Department of Speech at the University was recently made honorary president of the University of Iowa Forensic League at its annual meeting in January. This election is anticipatory of the welcome which will be given him by forensic enthusiasts of the campus upon his arrival at Iowa.

The January number of The Transit includes a directory of the graduates of the College of Applied Science.

Old-Timers Try to Revive Dances of Their Youth

MARYPORT, England, Feb. 7 (AP)—William Smith of Ewanrigg Hall made a successful attempt recently to reintroduce the old polka into a modern dance program at the Maryport Farmers' dance. He led off with the wife of another farmer. Both were crack dancers in the days when rural Cumberland danced the country dances, the waltz and the lancers. Their dancing was vigorously applauded by the younger generation of fox trotters who, later in the evening, enjoyed a turn at the polka.

Helman Wins Fight in Justice Court to Regain 50 Gallons of Wine

Jury Upholds Right to Posses Liquor So He "Can Have Little Drink When I Want It"

William Helman, janitor at the Paul-Helen building, was victorious yesterday in a legal battle to regain possession of approximately fifty gallons of wine seized in a raid by local officers on his home recently. The case was tried before a jury in the court room of C. C. Roup, justice of the peace.

County Attorney Edward L. O'Connor, who represented the state in the case, last night served notice of an appeal to the district court.

The action was regarded as a test case under the new Iowa law, wherein Helman sought to regain possession of his private stock. He was represented by Ray Yenter. It was brought out by counsel that Helman was not on trial for maintaining a liquor nuisance or bootlegging.

Helman, on the witness stand, when questioned as to his reason for having the liquor, replied that it was "so I can have a little drink when I want it." He admitted that the wine was of his own manufacture but asserted that he had not sold any of it and that if any had reached the outside world it had done so without his knowledge.

Carter Explains Law Enforcement Association Aims

All Peace Officers of County Expected To Join

"We are in no sense a band of crusaders whose aim is to clean up crime in Iowa City," said D. F. Carter, justice of the peace, Saturday, regarding the newly organized law enforcement association. "The organization is simply to be a school of instruction for all peace officers of Johnson county, and will attempt to explain the performance of those official duties which are often unfamiliar to the newly appointed justice of peace or constable."

Mr. Carter is one of a group of five men who make up a committee on membership, which will attempt to bring all mayors, constables, justices of the peace, and vigilance committees of the county to the meetings of the association which are to be held every two weeks.

Send Out Invitations
A circular letter has been mailed to all peace officers of the county inviting them to the first meeting at the courthouse Feb. 18, at 8 p. m.

Carroll will discuss "How To Make Arrests." "How Peace Officers Should Use Firearms" will be the subject of a talk by Don Price. Chicago Physicians Perform Autopsy On Body of S. A. Coldren Yesterday

Results to Be Evidence in Widow's Suit To Force Payment of $30,000 Additional Insurance

Dr. John Dill Robertson and Dr. Joseph Springer, Chicago physicians, performed the autopsy on the body of Stevens A. Coldren yesterday morning at 9:30 o'clock. The results of the autopsy will remain secret until they are brought up at the hearing of the suit between Mrs. Coldren and an insurance company.

The autopsy was performed to furnish information which will be used as evidence in a suit brought by Mrs. Coldren, who now lives in Evanston, against an insurance company to force the payment of about $30,000, which Mrs. Coldren says is due. Mrs. Coldren has contended that her husband died accidentally, while the insurance company claims that the death was due to natural causes.

Thomas G. Vent, an attorney for Mrs. Coldren, accompanied the two physicians and was present at the autopsy. The body was replaced in its former resting place in the local cemetery.
