Sinews of the Union

TO visit the ever-growing first unit of the Memorial Union and hear the plans for the future outlined by the man in charge of the project is an inspiration. Down on the beautiful site fronting the Iowa River and its rugged, tree-covered bluffs to the west, fifty men are working with stone and bricks and mortar—fifty men, building a dream come true.

Few realize the potentiality of the first unit alone, not to mention the Union as a whole. A few days ago, after examining the building operations and newly-completed plans of detail, an eastern visitor exclaimed, "This has done more than anything else to convince me that Iowa will be one of the greatest universities of the future."

One new feature planned for the unit now under construction is a roof-garden, or "deck," awning covered and wicker-furnished, along the whole length of the south, west, and north sides of the building. Scarcely fifty feet from the river, a more delightful lounging and studying spot for clement weather could hardly be imagined.

Individual class gifts are adding feature after feature to this building which will make it cherished in time to come, and of untold value the moment it is opened to University use. The great hall in the center, with its four fireplaces, long divans, and adjoining dining rooms for group dinners, bids fair to become instrumental in creating a new democracy and a closer union of spirit among the diverse and heretofore scattered groups that aggregate to form the student body. Oak-paneled window seats before the broad windows surrounding the sun-parlor which will flank the central hall are the gift of the class which is leaving the University this week, and a beautiful stairway is announced as the contribution of the class of '23.

Below, a broad front room on the west will open on a terrace to the river's edge, and serve as headquarters for water sports. Here, in the summer, canoes will be stored. Locker rooms and showers will be provided for bathers. In the winter, the canoes will be removed to a rear storage room, and the front room will become a rendezvous for skaters "in off the ice." Two fireplaces have been built in this room, for such delightful service as the warming of toes and the toasting of marshmallows.

The outstanding fact visible in every detail of the building which is now looming higher and higher is that it will be for faculty, students, and alumni, a genuine University center. Later units will contain rooms given over to specific organization but the first unit, becoming a reality, will be a vital part of University life as a whole, filling definite needs that have arisen with the ever-increasing number of students here. It is not taking anything for granted to say that beyond question the Memorial Union will mean more to individual students in the University than any other development on the campus for several years to come.

The Day of Judgment

Commencement is, in a sense, a day of judgment; not in a facetious sense, but in a very true and serious one. The senior comes face to face with the questions: "What have these four years done for me? What have I gained?" More often than not, the answer brings a feeling of painful inadequacy. There seem so few tangibles which can be named as "what college has given one. In most cases the senior probably feels that college has not done all that it should. More probably it is the senior who has not done all that he should. No institution can cram knowledge down the throats of students, or force the student to really develop himself, beyond enforcing a casual observance of the usual course of study—observe how vigorously any such attempt on the part of the University authorities is opposed by students.

There was, recently, a senior here who said, "Now that I'm through school, I think I'll take some correspondence work, and really get down to business." After hearing such a statement of student apathy, who could desire less stringent means on the part of the institution in doing its duty?

The Black Lord

At certain intervals in the world's history (made auspicious by the leaven of unrest), there arise statesmen and executives who by their own individuality rise above the near-great of their time and smash out wonderful careers for themselves.

Today Mussolini, the "black shirt" premier of Italy, is hewing out his niche. Twenty-two hundred years ago, Alexander, the child of Macedonia, almost entirely by his own genius, had conquered the greater part of the known world. All this from the tiny, insignificant province in Thraee.

Louis XIV of France, who, after enduring a succession of incompetent aides, took absolute control of the empire himself, had such intimate and personal touch with affairs that he was able to say "I am the State," and he was the state. He was an outstanding figure in military, scientific, literary, industrial, and diplomatic affairs of his day.

Napoleon, born in Corsica, hardly regarded as a Frenchmen even brought the French nation to its greatest power. Coming to rule at a time when France was plit by dissension, he welded it together, and added province after province, to build up a huge empire—which crumbled at once following his fall from power.

Mussolini, with his picturesque career, ranks with any of these men. He was a Wild youth, expelled from Switzerland for socialist teachings. He wandered over Europe until he was 25, then returned to Italy as a socialist editor. After the war he rose from comparative obscurity to head the government, in the midst of the dissensions which hampered the country's welfare.

Within a month after he had marched into Rome at the head of his black-shirted Fascisti army, he had gained dictatorial power for his cabinet.

Since that time he has been one of Europe's most picturesque, most powerful and most original figures—dictator of Italy. His latest move has been to take the position of minister of war in his own cabinet, when the policies of the former minister proved unsatisfactory.

How will the future rank him as a crafty genius seeking his own advancement, or an executive who really planned for a greater Italy?

The Stars Say

THIS civilization of ours" at this time every year begins toughening up its shoulders and back in preparation for the congratulatory slaps of the horde of commencement orators of the land.

Most of these orators say nice things about our progress intellectually as well as materially. They assert we are an intelligent people.

Yet it seems some of us still believe in the long exploded myth of astrology. Our newspapers carry articles telling what the stars foretell for the babe who happens to be born on the same day as that issue of the newspapers.

These articles tell of many happy or dire things that apparently cannot fail to come to pass in the lives of the lucky or unlucky children born upon that day. They even advise the parents what "calling" their sons and daughters should heed.

It appears from them that all people born on the same day are in a way identical twins and will react the same way under the same set of circumstances. This is obviously untrue. But to speak in high-grade college English, "the people swallow this apple-sauce and bawl for more." Maybe our civilization hasn't progressed as far as we think.

Another thing that shakes our faith in the sincerity of the commencement orators is the patent medicine trade in this country. Gallons of sweetened water or some worse concoctions are swallowed by people who have plenty of faith but very little sense.

Innumerable campaigns have been waged against patent medicines of most varieties, but they still are sold.

The sunrise is still a long way off.

Poems That Live

The Slave They set the slave free, striking of his chains. . . Then he was as much of a slave as ever. He was still chained to servility, He was still menaced to indolence and sloth, He was still bound by fears and superstition, By ignorance, suspicion, and savagery. . . His slavery was not in the chains, But in himself. . . They can only set free men free. . . And there is no need of that; Free men set themselves free. —James Oppenheim.

Sylvis-Independent Battle, Mecca for Local Fans Today

At 2:30 this afternoon, N. J. Alexander's Iowa City Independent baseball team will trot on the City Park diamond to try for their second win under their new manager. The Sylvis nine, one of the fastest semi-professional clubs in western Illinois, is slated to furnish the opposition for the occasion and all indications point to an unusually fast game.

Formidable Pitchers
The visitors will present a formidable array of twirlers for the fray in the persons of McCartney, Thomas and Pfeiffer who are reputed to be among the best in the semi-pro ranks and will likely give the local batsmen all they can handle. Just a week ago, the Illinois crew turned back a team led by Carter Hamilton, former Hawkeye star pitcher, and the dope indicates that they have more than an even chance to turn the trick on the local men.

"Doc" Schreiber, who has been twirling exceptionally good ball all season, will probably start the mound work with the local squad. Clarke, Iowa City's second best bet will be held in reserve.

Following is the lineup:
Iowa City
C. Hayes, shortstop.
Schonefelder, third base.
Trepow, (captain) second base.
Burns, right field.
Crawford, left field.
E. Hayes, center field.
Smeuth, first base.
Brown, catcher.
Schreiber, pitcher.

Sylvis
F. Calkins, left field.
H. Scott, center field.
F. Walker, right field.
R. Lyman, third base.
C. Wilson, shortstop.
C. Whistler, second base.
Johnson, first base.
McCauley, catcher.
Thomas, Phueffer and McCartney, pitchers.

One interscholastic record, the mile run, was smashed twice, and the 100-yard dash equalled.

The scores of Iowa schools entered: Mason City, 4; Carroll, 3 1/2; Council Bluffs, 3 1/2; Burlington, 2; Greenfield, 1.

The Mason City relay team placed second in the three-fourths mile relay.

More Than 700 Men Earned All Expenses During School Year

Between 700 and 800 men earned part or all of their expenses at the University of Iowa this year, according to announcement made by Robert E. Rienow, dean of men. Statistics in the dean's office show that students have been employed in nearly forty different kinds of work, from skilled professional positions to dishwashing and janitor service.

"Every year a larger number of young men are earning their college training," says Dean Rienow. "A boy who can save from $150 to $200 need not be afraid to start his college education. However, no boy should attempt to earn all his expenses unless he absolutely must earn all. The boy whose parents or friends are able to finance him, even modestly, should be willing to suit his standard of living to his income and devote his time to his college studies."

Dean Rienow urges that boys begin to save for their college education upon their entrance into high school.

Failure to "Make the Breaks" Hurts Tigers

These two photos show in striking fashion how the "breaks" are going against the Tigers these days. In the upper one Harry Heilmann, demon slugger, has been nipped at the plate in a Cleveland game by a throw to Catcher Myatt. Lower photo shows Burns, Cleveland first baseman, sliding into third in safety when a poor throw drew Third Baseman Haney off the bag.

By NORMAN E. BROWN
THE Tigers make their own breaks.
"You can always count on seeing the Tigers pull something off and get away with it."
These opinions have been expressed generally for years as the Detroit club has battled its way to pennant threatening positions despite the chronic state of poor pitching with which the club has been afflicted.

And these remarks are well founded. Under the dashing leadership of Ty Cobb—an his playing leadership was apparent long before he became manager—the Tigers have always played a nerve-racking, dashing game that has carried much stronger teams off their feet by its impetus.
The so-called "breaks" that gave the Tigers victories were not mere accidents. They were engineered calmly and deliberately. Plays that were close ended in favor of the Tigers. Cobb and his men knew that these plays would be close, but counted on "beating" them.

Now the Tigers are wallowing about in the 1925 scramble seemingly unable to hit their usual winning form.

Chicago Golfers Wallop Hawkeyes on Local Course

The powerful Chicago golf team added the Iowa quartet to their string of victims yesterday, when they swamped the Hawkeyes, 20 to 3, in the final dual match of the season. The Iowans suffered a complete reversal of form from that displayed on the trip to Indiana and Northwestern last week.

In the singles matches held in the morning the Maroons took three out of four with a total of eight points while the home team counted all their points of the day. Smiley was the only victor for Iowa, winning two to one from Miller. Miller took the first nine holes, but the Hawkeye came through and took the second nine and the match.

Vernon, who has been shooting between 71 and 76 all week, failed to get better than an eighty yesterday and lost three to nothing to Captain Hisert of Chicago. The Maroon leader played up to his usual form and was invincible in both morning and afternoon matches.
In the afternoon the Maroons took all the points when the Iowans fell down completely. Kraft showed good form at times, but there was no consistency in the work of the Hawkeyes and the visitors ran up a large score without much trouble. The matches were played under blazing sun that was far from conducive to any kind of exertion whether physical or mental.

The results of the matches:
Singles: Hisert (C) beat Vernon (I) 3 to 0; Smiley (I) beat Miller (C) 2 to 1; Patterson (C) beat Beman (I) 2 to 0; Dorsey (C) beat Kraft (I) 2 to 1.
Foursomes: Vernon and Smiley lost to Hisert and Miller, 6 to 0; Beman and Kraft lost to Patterson and Dorsey, 6 to 0.

Conference Directors Draft New Measures on Athletics

(By The Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 6.—Several matters were acted upon yesterday by the "Big Ten" athletic directors at their annual meeting here.

Recommendation was made that the annual wrestling, gymnastic and fencing meet be conducted under western conference management.

Officials voted that no football meeting shall be organized during the summer vacation. A new regulation was made whereby a freshman athlete or an ineligible man shall not be allowed to participate in exhibitions outside the same limits.

Athletic Teams Carry Own Water Bags to Slake Thirst in Safety

Taking No Chances
Several hundred gallons of Seattle water will be taken along by the oarsmen of the University of Washington when the crew leaves early in June to participate in the intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie. As a result of the experiences of the last two seasons, when members of the crew became ill in the East, the Washington authorities are convinced that a change in drinking water is detrimental to the physical condition of the men.
This practice of tanking up athletic teams like camels in the Sahara desert is not a new idea, say various campus authorities, in referring to the above article, clipped from an eastern paper.
"It is not at all an unusual practice," commented E. G. Schroeder, physical director, "all of the Big Ten schools carry their own water for the football, basketball, and track teams. In fact, when the football team goes to California next fall, an entire baggage car, filled with milk cans full of Iowa City water, will be part of the train that takes the ten."

"Water differs everywhere," stated Prof. Elbert W. Rockwood, of the chemistry department, in explaining the necessity for this precaution. "Water that comes from granite has less of a solvent in it than water that comes from limestone. Water from deep wells differs from surface water.
"Even at Saratoga Springs the water differs greatly in a short radius. One of the solvents which is common in drinking water is what is known as epsom salts. Upon those persons whose systems are susceptible to solvents of this sort in drinking water this has a very demoralizing effect."

Fatalities Pass 300 Mark for Country; Rain Predicted

(By The Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Ill., June 6.—Old Sol, who for a week has done his best to convert territory from the Rocky mountains to the Atlantic seaboard into a furnace, today found some active competition when Jupiter Pluvius took a hand in moderating the temperature in the middle west. The east continued to swelter in the grip of torrid temperature. The fatalities for the country today passed the 300 mark.
While rain moderated the temperature in some sections, there was little prospect for any great or immediate relief from the hot weather.
Weather forecasts generally were for continued warm weather over Sunday although in some parts rain was expected.
