Mrs. Mayer Hits Catch-Word Rule

Professors Guild and Young Give Papers at Symposium

"Are we going to have a government ruled by catch words? No! As a woman, I say that women are going to enter on a campaign to save the world from this and from other evils that interfere with government. We are going to save the world whether it wants to be saved or not," declared Mrs. Max Mayer, of Des Moines, president of the Iowa League of Women Voters, in a talk at a symposium of the leaders of the third Commonwealth conference last night.

"Democracy is ours if we make it ours," she continued, "and not if we leave it to a few politicians who know nothing about it."

Young Tells of Minnesota The talk by Mrs. Mayer followed a paper read by Prof. J. S. Young of the University of Minnesota, on "The Reorganization of the Administrative Department of the State Government of Minnesota."

Prof. F. H. Guild of the University of Kansas, formerly of Indiana, showed charts to illustrate his discussion of the Indiana situation.

University Stars Delayed Enroute to National Meet

DENVER, June 29.—Special to the Daily Iowan—Charles R. Brooks, champion hurdler of the world and Frank J. Cuhel, Iowa Freshman who holds the National prep mark, were delayed here today enroute to the national A. A. U. championship at San Francisco. The Rock Island train was held up at Stratton, Colorado, due to a freight car off the track, and was four hours late into Denver, making the athletes miss their connection to the coast.

The boys were met by Charles L. Parson, Iowa nine letter man, who has arranged a workout at the city park track Tuesday morning. The boys will leave at 1:30 Tuesday morning on the Union Pacific arriving at San Francisco at 10:30 Thursday morning, making them a day late, leaving only one day for workout, as they will run in A. A. U. there Friday.

While the train was delayed at Stratton the athletes took a workout on the cinders between the tracks.

"Actors Need College Education," Says Carnegie Dramatic Director

"The future of the American stage is in the schools," declares Chester M. Wallace, director of dramatics at Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburgh. Mr. Wallace is teaching drama and directing plays here this summer.

Mr. Wallace firmly believes that a university education is as essential to the stage as to other professions. "If ever our theater is to gain the dignity and artistic standing of the European stage it will be brought about through universities and community playhouses," he says. "More educated people are going into this field of work now than ever before. It is gratifying to find the widespread interest in dramatics that is evidenced here."

Excursionists Pay Visit to Cemetery

War Memorial Proves Feature of Rock Island Trip

"A visit to the Confederate cemetery was the most interesting part of our trip," said Clarence W. Wassam, assistant professor of economics, discussing the Rock Island excursion Saturday. "Rock Island was the location of a Union prison during the Civil war and 1,964 men lie buried in the cemetery. Its monuments are all of the same size, each bearing the name of the soldier, and his company and state, with the letters C. S. A. beneath."

At the arsenal, the machine shops where raw materials are made, were thoroughly inspected. After driving around for a general view, the museum was visited.

Here are collected guns, wagons, harnesses, and other war equipment, including uniforms won during each war in which the United States has been engaged. Also on display are many guns and trophies captured from the enemy in the several wars in our history.

The party visited the Federal cemetery and also the power plant which sells large amounts of electricity generated by water power from the Mississippi river. A sight-seeing drive through Moline, Rock Island, and Davenport was taken, and several crossed the river on the ferry.

Illiteracy Hinders Good Citizenship Claims Herlihy

Educators in National Meeting at Indianapolis, Ind.

(By The Associated Press) INDIANAPOLIS, June 29.—Instruction in elementary reading and writing for the 3,000,000 native and 1,500,000 foreign illiterates in this country "is a public school responsibility to be recognized by every community," Charles M. Herlihy, Massachusetts state supervisor of adult alien education, today declared before the Adult Education department of the National Educational association in annual convention here.

"Wherever the state and local governments," he said, "have voted money for this educational work, the native and foreign adults have grasped the opportunity to attend classes."

This field of education, he asserted, already has passed the experimental stage and has become an integral part of the public school system in fifteen states.

Mr. Herlihy urged adequate appropriations for the work, declaring that "illiteracy is a serious handicap in the exercise of good citizenship and the success of a representative democracy requires a literate electorate."

George E. Teter, head of the English department of the Wisconsin State Normal school, said "English teachers will fight a well-nigh hopeless fight as long as poor English is accepted by teachers of other subjects."

"Man, Nature, God All One"—Murray

Cedar Rapids Rector Gives Talk at "Nature's Annual"

"One hundred and fifty years ago a person might not write a poem on nature and remain in the ministry, nor would it be safe to claim having had a religious experience and express pleasure in a beautiful sunset. In order to be safe spiritually, it was thought necessary to be opposed in the world," said the Reverend A. L. Murray, rector of the Cedar Rapids Episcopal church, in his address at "Nature's Annual," a part of the yearly program of the Wild Life school at McGregor, which was held here Sunday.

Ideas of Nature Changing "Now this idea is changing to the more rational one, that nature is a manifestation of God, through which he speaks to man," he continued.

"The old belief in enmity between man, nature, and God has been dispelled and we now have a feeling of universal oneness in which God, nature, and ourselves are conceived as inseparable," said the Reverend Murray.

School Opens August 18

Prof. Bohumil Shimek of the botany department presided at the meeting, at which about 200 persons were present, and the Reverend George Bennett announced the seventh annual session of the Wild Life school to open at the "Heights" near McGregor August 8. Here students and teachers come together to study nature but the prime object is the preservation of wild life.

Special musical numbers were furnished by three students from the school of music, Miss Lorna Schupert sang "Repent Ye" by Scott, Miss Jeanette Rothschild, "Ave Marie" by Schubert, and Walter Kollnowski played a cello selection.

Predict Larger Convention GRINNELL, Ia., June 29, (AP)—Delegates who attended the second annual Order of DeMolay convention here recently predict that the meeting next year will be bigger than ever before, basing their forecast on the fact that the 1925 session was larger than in 1924.

Tremors Shake City All Day; 12 Dead

Estimate Property Damage at From 3 to 30 Millions; Endangers Water Supply; Big Buildings Are Mass of Ruins

(By The Associated Press) SANTA BARBARA, Calif., June 29.—Three additional earthquake shocks were felt here tonight, a heavy tremor felt at 5:32 p. m., and still another shock shook the city at 6:46 o'clock this evening and wrecking crews in partly undermined buildings stood clear for several moments until the vibrations ceased. No fresh damage was done. The third tremor was felt at 7:42 p. m.

Warping of Earth Causes Trembling

California Subject to Shocks Because of Pacific Track

"Earthquake shocks which disturbed Montana Sunday and southern California yesterday were due to the sinking of the earth's crust in certain places, setting up a series of vibrations," explained Prof. Abram O. Thomas, of the geology department. "The sinking of the earth's surface is caused by the sliding or slipping of rock, or possibly caused by the internal heat of the earth, which may have started lava flows. Diastrophism is taking place all the time and the vibrations are likely to be felt in varying degrees of intensity anywhere at any time."

Professor Thomas stated that seismic shocks are more severe in mountainous regions and along the coast lines. "The tremor in Montana," he said, "was not a severe one, but Montana is subject to earthquakes for most of the state is mountainous. California will continue to be visited with earthquakes in the future; for out in the Pacific is a great earthquake track which curves in toward southern California. There has been earth movements along this path for years, and it cannot be predicted when an earthquake will come."

Indications are that twelve lives were lost although this rests upon the recovery of several bodies asserted to be in the ruins.

Mrs. Charles E. Perkins, widow of the late railroad wizard, former president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad, was declared to be buried in ruins of a section of the Arlington hotel. Manager A. L. Richmond said that he did not have the slightest hope that she escaped and debris was being removed to uncover her body. Manager Richmond also believes that Bertram Hancock, of Los Angeles, was killed, his room having been above Mrs. Perkins' and demolished. State street, the main thoroughfare, is a ghastly avenue of ruin, portions of its most stately buildings tumbled down and cornices, walls, and fronts of practically all the principal structures shattered.

Quake Endangers Water

The earthquakes continued throughout the day. They menaced the water supply by crashing out the dam of Sheffield reservoir, but a bypath has been established to a folk reservoir back in the hills and water provided for the city. The terror stricken 30,000 inhabitants in most cases settled down to an emergency existence by noon, many of them living on the lawns.

"I have been through fifty earthquakes but never one like this before," said Manager Richmond. "It just took the hotel that we considered strong as a fortress and shook it back and forth as if it were a rag. It was precisely as if one were at sea in a storm. One would not believe it were possible for a building to move with such force in so many directions and apparently so limply as did the Arlington."

Along the main thoroughfare, State street, there were many automobiles and trucks which had been parked at the curb and almost buried under the debris. It was in one of these that William Matthews, a laborer, was killed.

The finest building in town, the San Marcos, a big four-story structure, built as an L on a corner, had its whole corner center pushed into the debris. Dr. James Angle, dentist, was killed in this crash.

John McCormick Says Will Leave Stage When Fifty

NEW YORK, June 29, (AP)—Collectors Weekly in its current issue will say that John McCormick, the first tenor, has decided to retire from the concert stage when he is fifty years old. He is now 41.

"I am going to retire definitely when I am fifty," he is quoted. "There will not be any farewell tours or any of the mechanics of exits."

"I will be through. Of course, I will return to sing for charity, but never for my own profit."

Montana Quake Loss Not to Go Over Half Million

HELENA, Mont., June 29, (AP)—While stricken Santa Barbara prepared to take inventory of its disaster, the task of checking up damage of earthquakes throughout Montana over the last three days proceeded today with indications that property damage would not exceed $500,000. Also shocks were reported from Helena, Great Falls, Billings, Bozeman, Logan, Three Forks, and Manhattan. None were severe enough to cause additional damage.

White Aisles

IT is not without significance that the state hospital should be located in the same town as the state University. It means that all the resources of modern science, as they become richer by persistent experiment and investigation, are placed at the disposal of Iowa citizens who enter the hospital. It means, also, that the college of medicine, from which come largely the future physicians of the state, has a clinic without equal in the state, where the medical students come face to face with every type of human ailment.

But that phase, important as it assuredly is, does not exhaust the significance of the presence of the state hospital in Iowa City. It surely is a moving sight to stand at some vantage point on the campus, when the morning classes are pouring out from a hundred classrooms, and watch the hundreds of young men and girls, in the full enjoyment of youth and health, hurry here and there, books under arms,—chatting, laughing, jostling. The campus is alive, a kaleidoscope of color—everywhere is the rhythm of abounding movement.

And only two blocks away, people are lying in agony—longing for the night to come, and when it has come, longing for daybreak. No movement here, only the movement of stricken limbs and bodies. No color here, only the white of the beds, the walls and the uniforms. There is here, not the joy of some great ambition or creative purpose, just the dumb passion for life and mere health.

When the devout Catholic passes his church, he gives a thought to the sacred presence enshrined within. To those of us who feel the joy of living in these days of movement and sunshine, it surely would be fitting that when we pass the hospital, with its long aisles of suffering, we give a kindly thought to those who lie in the bondage of affliction dependent upon others for success in their struggle back to physical freedom.

Along the Road

IT IS the month of tall grasses. The roadside waves and undulates with them, for they are reaching maturity; the headed bluegrass, the hairy horsetail, stray tufts of wheat and oats, and all the uncatalogued seedy green stalks. The wind that sighs in the grove drops to a whisper in the bending grass, and diffuses its dusty perfume and the more dominant fragrance of the purple clover up and down the highway.

Pale yellow butterflies tumble leisurely from blossom to blossom through shifting currents of dust. Across a field of swaying oats, a lodb-white whistles shrilly to his mate who bends, her protecting warmth to the eggs beneath her wings as she sits among the long grasses by the fence.

June... again...

A "Yellow" Journalist

IN THESE days when newspapermen are being subjected to much adverse criticism and the press is being charged with yellow journalism, it is interesting to note that "yellow journalism" belongs to days gone by as much or more than it does to the present.

A hundred years ago, Anne Royall wrote for a Washington newspaper, Edna M. Coleman, in her book, "Seventy-Five Years of White House Gossip," calls Miss Royall "the mother of yellow journalism," and describes her as "a whirlwind of invective, a firebrand of indignation, a torrent of abuse, keen on the scent of every bit of news."

To Anne Royall belongs the distinction of having secured the first presidential interview. The manner in which she obtained it is unique and worth recounting. Knowing President John Quincy Adams' fondness for an early morning dip in the Potomac, the active old lady used her knowledge to advantage.

It was a morning in July, and the president was enjoying his swim. He had left dressing gown and slippers in the bushes. Bathing costumes then were yet to be introduced. His mind was occupied only with the splendor of that July morning, and he was quite unaware that Anne Royall was on his trail—to be more exact, sitting on his clothes—until a shout from the bushes disclosed the figure of the elderly news gatherer, sharpening her pencil for an interview.

"Come here," she ordered. Adams was a man of modesty, and he swam out of the deep water until the river was chin deep. "what do you want?" he inquired. "I'm Anne Royall," she snapped, "and I want an interview on that state bank question; I've been trying to see you for months. Now will you give it to me, or will you stay in there the rest of your life?"

The president protested, offered to give the interview if she would leave him and allow him to dress, but Anne was firm, and remained on the bank. Adams, realizing that discretion is the better part of valor, stood in the peaceful waters of the Potomac, its waters swirling about his neck, and gave the first interview on a state question ever granted by an American president to an American newspaper.

Our Own Business
(The Chicago Sunday Tribune)

MUCH publicity has been given the school of politics held in the summer at Williams college. On these occasions distinguished men as well as American scholars and public men from abroad have appeared and have discussed our foreign relations and world duties with gusto. The school of politics, as we have read report of it in the public press, seems to have been especially, if not exclusively, concerned with these relations and duties. We have gathered from its deliberations that our responsibility for setting right whatever seems wrong in the world is paramount, and advocates of the league of nations, the league court, and other forms of participation in foreign politics and affairs have dominated the proceedings of the school, unless its publicity has been strangely partial.

We are glad, therefore, to call attention to an institution established at the University of Iowa which offers what is to our narrow view a refreshing contrast to the Williams institute. It is the commonwealth conference, to be held at Iowa City June 29 to July 1. This will be the third conference, and it will confine its deliberations to problems of domestic moment, as is shown by the main topics set for discussion—namely: the expanding functions of government, the mounting costs of government, federal aid and states' rights, state universities and the state, and the costs of education.

The purpose of the conference is defined to be "to consider, to weigh, and to discuss, rather than to decide, conclude, and resolve—to stimulate creative interest in commonwealth problems rather than to formulate political conclusions." The conference is not intended as a school for specialists and the discussion will be kept free from technical minutiae. Representative public men and educators have been invited to take part.

We think the project is highly commendable and hope it will have the publicity it deserves.

Tom Drake, skipper of a thirty-five foot sailing boat in which he recently completed a trip round-the-world, says a giant wave swept him from the deck into the sea, off Guatemala, and a whale rose beneath him and set him back on the packet's quarter deck. Jonah died all too soon.

Evidently the railroad's device "Wait—You May Lose" never reached Cyrus Mulvaney, Hastings, Michigan farmer, who shot himself because a protracted dry spell menaced his crops. A few minutes later one of the heaviest rains in three years began to fall.

A New York supreme court justice has rendered a decision wherein he declares that kissing is no longer grounds for divorce proceedings. What's a kiss or two among friends?

A Des Moines man returning from the Philippines says that the Filipinos believe that under independence "there would be no taxes and no authority." Some Americans hold the same ideas.

W. J. Marshall, manager of Riverside Park bath house at Des Moines, says that there is no state law or city ordinance which prevents women from wearing one-piece bathing suits. They need to wear at least that much.

Johnson county officials have decided that imprisoned bootleggers shall not spend an enjoyable vacation in the county jail as long as the rock holds out in the county quarries. There's a good supply of rock. Will it outlast the booze?

Thunderstorms

My mind has thunderstorms,
That brood for heavy hours;
Until they rain me words;
My thoughts are drooping flowers
And sulking, silent birds.
Yet come, dark thunderstorms,
And brood your heavy hours;
For when you rain me words,
My thoughts are dancing flowers
And joyful, singing birds.

Flared Sleeves, Skirt, Featured

By MME. LISBETH
Women do not particularly like to be told they are inconsistent, but what else can one call it when they take cool looking green chifon voile, make an attractive coat frock, thereof, and then collar it with a "choker" of beaver? That is what happened in the above case. This coat frock has wide bell-shaped sleeves and skirt and fastens with a belt and buckle at a fairly low waistline.

The skirts of the thin summer frocks have mostly ceased to be straightline and are frankly full. The colorful, sheer, printed materials lend themselves well to the added fullness. Whether we will return to the straight lines with the fall is problematical. Some houses favor flares but all show some slimline frocks for the fall.

Linen knickers and lumber jackets are another combination very popular with the athletically inclined younger element. The jackets match the knickers, button trimly down the front, have two pockets, and knitted bands at the hips.

Three-piece golfing suits, comprising jacket, skirt and knickers are very natty fashioned of an Italian woolen fabric. The jackets are single-breasted and belted.

Telegrams were dispatched to Coach Vogel but failed to reach him and he received his first information a week later over the long distance phone from the home of his fiancee's mother in Champaign. According to this information, Miss Whittaker had several ribs, her jaw, and one arm broken, and teeth knocked out, as well as bruises, and some minor lacerations. An operation was performed on Sunday.

It Will Be a Little Man Who Stops Dempsey

BERLENBACH IS A FAIR BOXER AND A GOOD BODY PUNCHER.

SLATTERY, THE BEST OF THE LOT, IS A REAL MASTER.

DELANEY, THE MAULER.

STRIBLING IS A PLODDING SLUGGER.

By NORMAN E. BROWN

JACK DEMPSEY, heavyweight champion of the world, won that title by cutting down the biggest man of the white hope days—Jess Willard. Dempsey, weighing 189 pounds himself, seemed like a small boy before the Goliath from Lawrence, Kan. Willard weighed 246 pounds. The difference, then, was a matter of over 50 pounds.

Dempsey literally whittled Willard down to his size. He crumpled the mammoth bulk with a nerve-deadening punch just below the heart, and then as Willard bent, struck up at his face.

Dempsey's probable successes form an interesting study.

Foremost of the pack, in my opinion, is Jimmy Slattery. This man, of all the probabilities, embodies everything that a heavyweight champion should have—hitting power, fighting heart, speed, science and ring generalship. Right now I believe he would stand a better chance against Dempsey than Gene Tunney or any of the other contenders.

Second to Slattery must be rated "Tunney." His victory over Gibbons—irrespective of Gibbons' condition, age or over-rated ability—stamps him as a great young fighter.

After Tunney comes Paul Berlenbach, a fair boxer and a great body puncher. Berlenbach can
