December 1 Date Set for Completion of Huge Plant

By N. N. JONES
A $240,000 bid by A. H. Newman & Co. of Des Moines was awarded the general contract for construction of the mammoth new University of Iowa field house here yesterday by the Athletic Council.

The contract calls for completion of the new athletic plant by December 1 of this year, and it is expected that the new athletic center will be opened in time for the beginning of the indoor season next fall, probably by the first of November. Completed it will be a $300,000 project.

Armory Part of Plant

Excavation and steel work for the wing of the building that will house the new swimming pool have already been finished under direction of the university, and brick work will commence this week under the direction of the contractor.

The new field house will be built directly on the front of the present armory on the campus west of the Iowa river. The front wall of the armory will be torn out and the armory will become a part of the new plant. A canvas curtain will hang between the armory portion of the building while the R. O. T. C. department conducts its classes there during the day.

Magnitude of House

Paul E. Belling, director of athletics, said "The new field house without a doubt will place Iowa at the top with the best equipped schools of the country in the way of athletic facilities. I do not know of any similar building that is its equal."

Although the university and the athletic council have approved the plans for the building and the awarding of the contract for its construction, a special building committee of the state board of education, composed of George T. Baker, of Davenport, president of the state board, and E. P. Schoentgen of Council Bluffs, was present as an advisory board when the contract was let yesterday.

Huge New Natatorium

Speaking for the state board Mr. Baker stated after the contract was awarded yesterday that "because the board of education is greatly interested in athletics for all, as well as for the few on the teams of the university, the board is particularly gratified to see this new project accomplished by the university."

One of the outstanding features of the new plant will be the natatorium to be located in the south wing of the structure. Already because of the seating advantages it offers over other college tanks in the country, the pool has been chosen as the scene of the national intercollegiate swimming meet next April.

The natatorium will seat 4,000

Literary Magazine Editor Says Vale as Year is Ended

The issue of the Iowa Literary Magazine which goes on sale tomorrow is the last one to be edited by John F. Denman.

Among the contents is an article by David Pearson in which he discusses the recent suppression of the April number of the American Mercury. The article is a scathing denunciation of censorship.

Howard Sheldon, 44 of Webster City, writes a short story entitled "Dimming Light." Mr. Sheldon was editor of the 1925 Hawkeye.

The issue includes poems by Ruth Lechlitner, who has contributed poems to many of the national poetry magazines. She will be remembered as the author of the parodies on Miss Muffet, which appeared in a recent issue of the magazine.

Lee Andrew Weber and Paul L. S. Myrhe also contribute poems. V. T. Ting, a member of the Chinese group on the campus contributes a highly characteristic Chinese love poem.

The long "short" story is by Wahan H. Johns. It is a post-war story which centers around a soldier who has been blinded—a story of the love that is his through the little child that binds his wife to him.

Special Rule Provides for Four Days of General Debate

(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, May 3 — Farm relief legislation waiting in the anteroom for six months, will have its "day in court" beginning tomorrow, when the house takes up the three bills reported by its agricultural committee.

Under a special ruling providing four days of general debate, the Faugens price stabilization bill will be called up and the other two measures, the Tinchler credit plan, supported by Secretary Jardine, and the Curtis-Aswell national commodity marketing proposal will be in order as substitutes. Debating will be controlled equally by the authors of the three bills.

Last minute conferences of various house factions were held today in an effort to live up support for one bill or another. Endorsement of the Faugens bill was announced by Representative Rainey, Illinois, chairman of an unofficial committee appointed at a meeting of fifty house democrats to investigate farm relief legislation. Mr. Rainey said that he was not speaking for the committee which had not yet reported.

Democratic members of the house agricultural committee said it was not a partisan issue and they saw no reason for a caucus. They are divided on the support of the bills.

English Denies All Charges in Senate

Declares Impeachment Articles of House Unfounded

(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, May 3—Sitting as a high court of impeachment for the tenth time in history, the senate was asked today by Federal Judge George W. English of the Eastern Illinois District to dismiss charges of usurpation of power and other "high misdemeanors in office" brought against him by the house.

The judge appeared at the bar of the senate both in person and through counsel. He entered general and specific denials of the allegations set forth in the five articles of impeachment approved by the house and contended that even if they were true they did not constitute impeachable offenses.

Flatly denying that he had committed any act as judge for the benefit of his friends, members of his family or anyone else, Judge English declared that "he discharged his duties honestly conscientiously and with impartiality and according to law, to the best of his ability."

After the fifty-eight page reply of the judge to the charges had been read, the senate adopted an order giving the house two days in which to adopt a rejoinder.

After its receipt Wednesday, five days will be given for the filing of his reply by anyone else. Judge English declared that "he discharged his duties honestly conscientiously and with impartiality and according to law, to the best of his ability."

Tippetts Outlines Strike Situation

Says America's Foreign Trade Will be Endangered

(By Charles S. Tippetts (Professor in college of commerce))
That England is faced with a crisis of serious magnitude is beyond question. For the first time in British history a general strike has actually occurred, although such a strike has been threatened several times since the war.

It is difficult at this time to determine whether the action of British labor is justified. The miners claim they cannot suffer the proposed 13 1/3 per cent decrease in wages and the increase in the working day from seven to eight hours. The British Trades Union Congress supports this view and several million workers have struck in sympathy with the miners. The mine owners claim they cannot operate on the present cost of production.

Britain Subsidized Industry

The British government, to prevent a strike last July, agreed to subsidize the industry to permit the continuance of the present wages. This has cost over $100,000,000. The expiration of the period for which the subsidy was granted brought no solution. The miners demand government ownership of mines, and complete reorganization of the industry.

The British coal commission appointed last summer to suggest a way out rendered its report March 10. It refused to recommend nationalization of the mines except for undeveloped fields. Inability to agree upon plans for reorganizing the mines, as necessary as this seems to be, helped to bring on the present strike. Attempts by the Baldwin government to prevent the strike failed.

Economic Effects Bad

The effect on British economic life will be destructive. England has not yet adjusted her industries to post war conditions. Over a million men have been continually unemployed since the war. This strike seriously retards recovery.

Should the strike continue for any length of time it will interfere with American import and export trade with the British Isles. The effect upon American industry dependent upon this trade would be most injurious.

Must Act Immediately

However England has a cool-headed way of handling such matters. While the strike may drag on for days it would not be surprising to see the miners and the unions assisting them back at work soon. A strike of such proportions cannot last long.

Five Million Workers Strike With Miners

Labor Leaders and Cabinet Unable to Reach Agreement; Government Threatened; Wild Crowds Throng London Streets

(By The Associated Press)
LONDON, May 4—Organized labor of Great Britain is in revolt. Five million men are backing up the miners' demand for what they consider a living wage and proper working conditions. At midnight a general strike of the workers became effective throughout the country.

This widespread demonstration will, unless speedily terminated, cause untold suffering with the loss of millions in money. The last hours before the general strike call went forth were anxious ones. Thousands of citizens assembled in Parliament Square and the adjoining streets, while within the House ministers of the crown and former ministers, representing labor, battled in support of their respective contentions.

Baldwin Criticizes Labor

Premier Baldwin criticized labor leaders, on the ground that in ordering the general strike, they were threatening the basis of orderly government and were nearer to proclaiming civil war than Great Britain had been for centuries.

Ramsay MacDonald, labor leader, said the country faced a situation, whose end and evolution not even the keenest observer could visualize.

Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, asserted that if this conflict were fought out to its conclusion, it could only mean the end of parliamentary government or its decisive victory.

From a kind of apathy, the people of Great Britain and particularly of London, the central point of the struggle turned to anxious speculation as it became apparent that the negotiations were to fail.

LONDON, May 4 (AP)—A general strike in all the great industries throughout the country, began at midnight. It affected close to five million workers including more than a million miners, who had already given up their labors in the coal field.

All Negotiations Fail

Another day of suspense, of hopes and fears, ended with a complete breakdown of last hour negotiations between the government and representatives of the Trades Union congress, who had been delegated as spokesmen for all the men.

Throughout the day and night every effort was put forward to bring about an agreement, and even at a late hour there was promise of a renewal of the negotiations, which gave the anxious nation hope that a way out would be found.

The final conferences developed out of the debate in the House of Commons, but it is still difficult to ascertain exactly what happened in the House, although it is believed that Premier Baldwin and the other minister had further interviews with the negotiating committee of the Trades Union council.

The premier said that up to the last moment both sides had been too prone to maneuver for a favorable position with the public. It had been impossible to get an agreed account of what the miner was earning because neither side has agreed on a figure.

They (owners and miners) were two stubborn bodies, whose advance in the negotiations was like an irresistible force attacking an absolutely immovable object.

The debate in the Commons adjourned at 11:30 with nothing accomplished. Large crowds remained assembled outside the parliament buildings waiting the final announcement.

Cook Reports Failure

A. J. Cook, secretary of the miners federation, on leaving the precincts of the house shortly before midnight, told newspaper men of the failure of negotiations and that "the general strike on tomorrow."

Similar scenes were witnessed around the headquarters of the trades union congress in Eccleston square, which throughout the evening was besieged by volunteers offering their services. Later in the evening from the room where the council was setting came the strains of singing which continued for several minutes. It seems as if a general stoppage of the press will be immediate as many of the London papers were able to issue only early editions for the country. The printers quit at midnight.

All the war time routine measures so far as concerns vital supplies are being put into effect at once and there will probably be wartime regulations for the protection of the public. Theatre managers held a meeting last night to discuss whether they should close down during the strike period. No decision was reached.

A section of the crowd outside of parliament amused itself for nearly an hour by singing "The Red Flag" and cheering for the miners. Another section sang "God Save the King."

A. J. Cook in a statement said: The only terms of peace that are possible are terms that will insure the status quo for the miners in the coal fields, while reorganization is taking place."

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 3 (AP)—The socialist party of America today adopted a resolution concerning the British strike, urging "American workers to render all aid that is possible to insure a victorious conclusion of the strikers."

Economic Crisis

"In this crisis in the economic life of England," the resolution said, "capitalist ownership of a basic industry as well as the political leadership of British capitalism has become archaic, incompetent and disastrous."

NEW YORK, May 3 (AP)—The threat of a general strike in Great Britain accompanied by official references to "civil war" brought about a general reaction today in practically all of the principal securities and commodities markets.

Active securities on the New York Stock Exchange recorded declines of 3 to 10 1/2 points, a small part of which were recovered by the more reassuring cables received just before the market closed. British government bonds sank to new low levels for the year. Sterling exchange which was within striking distance of gold parity last week dropped nearly a cent over the week end; French and Belgian currencies sank to record lows for all time at 3.27 and 3.28 cents respectively; wheat futures broke two to three cents a bushel and moderate recessions took place in cotton and most of the important commodity markets.

[By The Associated Press]
WEST BRANCH, May 3.—Forty years ago a West Branch dentist enthusiastically exhibited to a ten year old child a collection of geological specimens and instilled in the youth a desire to learn more of the mysteries of the substances that lay beneath the surfaces of Mother Earth. A few months ago the boy, now a famous mining engineer and present member of President Coolidge's cabinet, remembered the old dentist with a substantial gift of money in appreciation for the lift that gained for the boy the passports to fame.

The boy was Herbert Hoover, son of a father who was the village blacksmith, and a mother who became a Quaker preacher to eke out a meagre living.

Remember Teacher
Mrs. J. K. Carran, who was Herbert's teacher, in her home here looks up at the large autographed portrait of "Bertie" as he looks today, and recounts many quant stories of the boy who learned to read and write in the little schoolhouse of the town. In her home is a scrap book filled with clippings about "Bertie" and the things he did on his rise to world renown.

Herbert Hoover began life Aug. 10, 1874 in West Branch, in a small frame cottage still standing beside the little creek which winds through the town. Older citizens recall the round-faced, fair-haired boy playing with his brother beside the door of his father's blacksmith shop, next door to their home. After the death of the father, Mother Hoover traveled from one Quaker meeting to another, preaching good sermons, while the children remained with their uncle and aunt, Benjamin and Ellen Hoover. From his father, Herbert obtained his genial characteristics and sense of humor; from his mother, executive ability and valuable religious training.

When she died, Herbert, then a lad of twelve, spent a year with relatives at Le Grand, Iowa; then made his home with his uncle, Dr. Mathews at Newberg, Oregon. His soon was making his own way in the world and managed to earn his way through Leland Stanford university doing odd jobs. While in university, he managed the football team and the glee club.

Leading Engineer
At thirty, he became a leading figure in his profession as mining engineer, accomplishing noteworthy work in China, Africa, Australia, Siberia, Asia Minor, Mexico, and Alaska. London was his headquarters for a time. He standardized his loving life by turning out an amazing amount of work in his travels. His food administration work in war-torn Europe established him as one of the greatest men of his time.

As secretary of commerce, he works from 12 to 15 hours each day. "I do not drink; I do not over-eat; I do not waste energy running around in circles. I go fishing." One of his hobbies is to read detective stories.

Outstanding characteristics which have made for his success are clarity of thought, native resourcefulness, sturdy faith in fellow man, courage, self reliance, industry, and loyalty to American producers. He is rather shy, extremely sensitive about publicity, but withal a genial and considerate man, his old-time friends here say.

Y. W. Secretary to Speak at Tea

Miss Quayle Will Explain Student's Aid for Foreigners

Miss Margaret Quayle, International Secretary of the Y. W. C. A. will be the principal speaker at a student friendly tea to be given by the association in the sun parlor of the Memorial Union Thursday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock.

This tea will be given with the purpose of explaining to the students of the University of Iowa their part in the work of international students' aid being given to needy students in foreign countries. Students in Russia, Poland and other European countries will be the subject of Miss Quayle's talk. An offering will be taken during the afternoon.

Yung to Play
Several contribution from people not in the university have been promised to the Y. W. C. A. if the students contribute their share of the quota, so the officers are anxious that students come to the meeting Thursday.

Foreign color will be added to the program for the afternoon when Kuany Yung, a Chinese student, plays his Chinese "piano."

This is an affair about the size of a large suitcase which gives a thin, twangy melody when its wires are tapped by the two very flexible reeds which are held by the pianist. Mr. Yung played this instrument at one of the most attractive Y. W. C. A. meetings held during the past year.

Folk dancing will be given under the direction of Miss Clarke, of the department of physical education for women.

Foreign students dressed in their native costumes, will be assisted in the serving of tea by American students in foreign costumes.

W. A. Makes Two Appointments for Executive Council

Dannie Burke, A1 of Great Falls, Mont., was appointed chairman of the flower committee of Women's association at a meeting of the executive council of that organization yesterday afternoon. Her duties as will-o-the-wist job; Esther Ralston flower committee chairman are to send flowers and call upon university women who are ill in the hospitals.

At the same meeting Helen Springer, A3 of Des Moines, was appointed chairman of the Saturday afternoon varsity, her duties to be taken up by her next fall.

Women Delegates Report on Parley

Say Y. W. Conclave Passed "Radical" Resolutions

"New Frontiers" is the campaign title for the report of delegates from the University of Iowa to the national convention of the Young Women's Christian association which was held in Milwaukee. It will be given at the regular weekly vesper service of the association which will be held Wednesday afternoon at 4:15 in the liberal arts drawing room.

Fannella Duffney, A3 of Iowa City, president of the Y.W.C.A.; Mildred Eck, A3 of Des Moines, a member of the cabinet; and Miss Nelle Summers, general secretary of the association, were the delegates. They returned from the convention Sunday.

The convention went on record with several resolutions, reported in New York and Chicago papers as radical.

"In our reports we will show just how the actions of the convention will affect the association in Iowa City in the coming year," Miss Summers said yesterday afternoon. "As most conventions, it was very interesting and I feel that some really worthwhile things were accomplished. Every girl who belongs to the association should hear how she will be affected by the actions of the convention."

Celebrated Painter Says Art Students Pick Ugly Models

LONDON, May 3 (AP)—The Honorable John Collier, the celebrated painter, visited the exhibition of student's work at the Royal Academy submitted in competition for Rome scholarships and came away in disgust.

"The great lecture room was a chamber of horrors," he declared. "There seemed to be a deliberate cult of ugliness. With one or two honorable exceptions the students belonging to the best art schools in the country seemed to be competing not for the Rome scholarships, but for the distinction of producing the most degraded representations of the human form. What struck me most was the deliberate choice of ugly models."

Start Probe on Relation of Gang Warfare With Politics

McSwiggin Jury Gets Instructions for Investigation

Judge Brothers Warns Jury Against Possible Threats

[By The Associated Press] CHICAGO, May 3—Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom of Illinois, intervening at the request of state's attorney Robert Crowe, took charge of the panel and instructions of Judge William V. Brothers, acting chief justice of the criminal court. The probing of possible relation of the gang warfare with politics in Cook county was suggested by the fact that the first two witnesses to appear before the grand jury were Coroner Oscar Wolfe and Harry Eugene Kelly, president of the Union League club of Chicago and an advocate of an inquiry into gangdom's possible relationships with law enforcement officials. Neither witness would comment on his testimony after he had appeared before the jury and neither was in the jury rooms more than a few minutes.

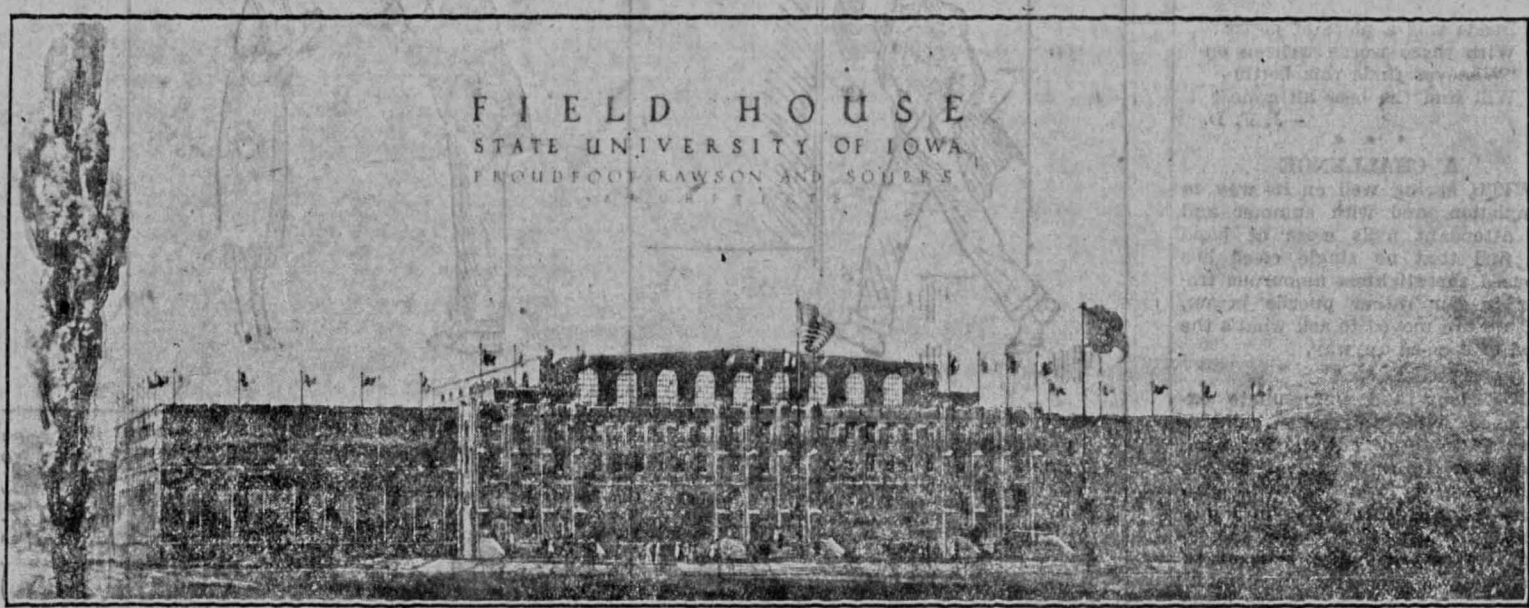

State's Attorney Crowe announced before the investigation began that Atty. General Carlstrom would conduct the inquiry with the assistance of the state attorneys office.

Recalls Recent Murders
Calling attention to twenty murders in Cook county since January 1, Judge Brothers told the jury that "At least nineteen of these are what might be termed gang murders." He recounted the use by the slayers of sawed-off shotguns, rifles and machine guns; the commission of all the murders by night, the refusal of victims to name their slayers even when they remained conscious long enough to do so.

Warns Against Intimidation
Recounting the commissions circumstances attending a number of the slayings and warning the grand jurors not to let intimidation deter them from their work, the court called to the jury's attention the fact that he had "purposely refrained" from limiting the scope of its inquiry in any fashion.

Cicero Aroused
The business men's organization of Cicero, the Chicago suburb where the triple murder occurred and which has been the scene of many such gang wars because of the presence there of leaders in the liquor-rumming element, itself took a hand today in the McSwiggin inquiry and called a mass meeting

Soares Stresses a Lasting Religion

Vesper Speaker Tells Hopes for Future of Christianity

The everlasting quality of religion regardless of seeming change and discouragement was the theme for the vesper talk by the Rev. Mr. Theodore Gerald Soares, of Chicago, Sunday afternoon. His subject for this last vesper of the year was "The Outlook for Religion." He developed the trend of his thought through tracing religions that seem to have died only to be born again in a new era.

Religion dies in the new interest of mankind and rises again clothed in new thought, as when the age of the Greeks took such a hold on the thoughts of the people of the middle ages as to almost kill Christianity in its accepted sense.

It will hold 500,000 gallons of water and its 9,000 square feet of surface will give each of 250 persons in the pool at once, nearly 35 square feet of surface.

464 feet north and south, 412 east and west and varying in height from 50 to 85 feet, the building itself will enclose approximately two and one-half acres of ground and contain 5,500,000 cubic feet of space. And all the university buildings on the campus east of the Iowa river contain only 14,000,000 cubic feet.

Will Fit West Campus
Above the new pool in the south wing six rooms, each 30 by 120 feet, will be used for boxing, fencing, storage and indoor golf. A subway will connect the pool room with the locker room.

Stadium Still Used
What is to be done with present Iowa Field, which has not been decided yet. The question comes within the jurisdiction of the state board of education and is under consideration but no definite decision has been reached as yet.

For the present the stadium, football field, track and baseball fields on this side of the river, in other words Iowa Field, will continue in use until the time when the proposed stadium west of the Iowa river becomes a reality.

The contract awarded yesterday approximately $300,000 when completed and marks the culmination of many years work on the part of the university to secure ample quarters to handle Iowa's increasing activity in athletics.

It is being built around the present armory and that structure will become part of the field house at the latter's completion.

Expect Englert Plans Within Next Few Days
Plans for the new Englert theatre structure, which are being drawn by the architects, Vorse, Kraetsch and Kraetsch of Des Moines, are expected to arrive in the hands of James J. Hanlon within the next few days.

They will provide for a $75,000 building to be outfitted and operated by the A. H. Blank Theatre corporation, through their local representative, Al Davis. The new theatre will feature road shows and will be opened to the public some time next September.

Five of Y Cabinet at Cornell Retreat

Attend Conference at Upper Palisades On Week-End

The Y. M. C. A. cabinet of the university joined the cabinet of the Cornell organization at a retreat held at the Upper Palisades Saturday and Sunday.

Most of the time was taken by a consideration of such problems of organizations as finance, finance campaigns, weekly meetings, and various other subjects.

Saturday afternoon, many of the cabinet members joined the visiting Cosmopolitan clubs in games and recreational activities.

According to those who attended the retreat from Iowa, the discussions were helpful, and many of the suggestions made will be used in the planning of the work for next year.

Those who went to the retreat were: Charles Baker, A3 of Fontanelle, president; Ferris E. Hurd, A3 of Northwood; Raymond Powell, Cm3 of Montour; William T. Hageboeck, A2 of Lake Park, and Harry Terrell, general secretary. E. R. Hinckley, state secretary, was also present.

The Crisis of the English

THAT all of Britain's five million laborers will be precipitated into a general strike seems inevitable at this hour. The ministry and the men are becoming further and further alienated as what purports to be peace conferences go on. Negotiations have collapsed.

The trades union general council has issued a statement disclaiming all responsibility, saying, "consequences which must inevitably follow the breakdown of Sunday's negotiations lie solely with the mine owners and the government." And No. 10 Downing street has beligerently stated that the failure of settlement "must not be taken as any sign that the government is weakening."

From this there is but one deduction: that both sides are digging in, that peace is a distant speculation, and that England is on the brink of a national crisis which has already ruptured its economic machinery.

Here is the nub of the strife. England is being infiltrated with Communism. The Zeitgeist of labor which has subdug first Russia, then Spain, Germany, and Italy is now knocking at the doors of the British Empire. It is a labor revolution. But Baldwin's ministry will not accede to this continental labor plague until Downing street itself is made a labor headquarters.

The coal miners' strike was but the fuse which was to ignite the powder of fascism in England. Already the black-shirted cohorts are screaming in London and Glasgow, where the first disorders have occurred. May day saw many fascist demonstrations which was evidence how the whole of Britain is undermined with radicals.

The government holds the trump card. Labor believed Baldwin's government to be passive to the outbreak, so that communism might be the victor in a bloodless revolution. True, in 1924 when a coal strike threatened, the government gave way and the miners triumphed.

All eyes turned toward the crown to probe its attitude. King George backed the power of the ministry by declaring: "In pursuance to the emergency powers act of 1920, we do, by and with the advice of our privy council, hereby declare that a state of emergency exists." The emergency powers act endows the prime with dictatorial powers; more particularly, with the sovereignty to mobilize the army and marines to maintain the lines of communication and food supply during the strike. This was what the workers least wanted.

But behind the prime minister's powers lie a still greater sovereignty with which to reckon, the sovereignty of English popular opinion. Public sentiment is the ultimate court of England. It has not yet spoken. If the vast body of public expression is minded to fight the strike and the waves of radicalism which are lashing the shores of England, the strike is lost. If public opinion backs the labor issue, the ministry falls, and the family royal might as well consider paying a long visit to cousin Wilhelm at Doorn. And an English Mussolini would seriously menace the peace of the world.

Before another sunrise lights up the Admiralty Arch and the Trafalgar monument, all England may be in the vise-like grip of a general strike. Communication and transport lines may be severed, food stuffs would dwindle, and martial law would be the law of the empire. No one can conceive the chaos which would drench Britain like a Niagara if the strike becomes absolute and inclusive.

Use the Union

TOO many students in the university have failed to make use of the Memorial Union. On nights when parties monopolize the glistening floor of the lounge six or seven hundred frolic and pay homage to the imagination of the founders, who visioned the finality in student centers for Iowa men and women.

But during the week, if one will take the trouble to visit the Union, there are all too few students making use of the facilities of the magnificent structure which lies, stately and inviting, on the banks of the stream.

The library of the building is probably the finest thing yet conceived by an Iowa official. No where else on the campus can such a commendable group of volumes be located; small, it is true, but what an inspiring list of authors. In the peace and quiet of the sun parlor, swept by the river's fragrant breeze, the intellectual may while away the hours, an anachronism among his fellows, according to the popular concept of college people.

The men who selected the books of the union library, and the furniture of the lounge, deserve an everlasting vote of thanks, for their judicious selection and discriminating taste.

Let Iowa students make their vote of thanks count in a practical manner and make use of the facilities afforded in the castle by the river.

The Hopeful Side

CONCLUSION of the Franco-American debt settlement marks an interesting step in the passing of the World war debacle.

For nearly eight years, now, the peace of nations and the aspirations of a people have hung fire, awaiting final negotiations regarding the readjustment of the debt. In France the ministries of one man after another have arisen from the ashes of political strife, occupied the center of the stage for a time, and passed from the scene. The French people have pondered and hesitated, wondering what would come of any proposal if the failure of Germany to make good her reparations should impair the financial standing of the French government. Finally, they have assumed the responsibility and attached their signatures to the plan, which does not recognize the German phase whatever.

The psychological and moral effect of their step is important. France has once more assumed a place of good standing and sincere intent in the family of nations. The position of Germany will be largely determined by the unity and sincerity which marks the work of the other powers, in their relations through the world court and the league of nations.

The wisdom and soundness of the debt funding plan may be questionable: what is important is that two nations have met each other on an equal footing and agreed to make good their obligations. With France it was a case of justifying her financial policy; with this country, a case of playing square with a friendly country with which we had but recently been allied in a common cause.

And now another step in the rehabilitation of mankind has been completed. What remains is to arrive at some sensible and tolerant viewpoint regarding the status of Russia; and that is a matter which will probably drag through another presidential administration.

The Gum-Chewers' Dailies

PERHAPS the most interesting thing about P. Pook, Pook-Hoey, recently published on Iowa campus by Sigma Delta Chi, was the tabloid format of the newspaper. If copied, in exact form, the makeup of the tabloid sheets now experiencing the first pangs of popularity without dignity in certain eastern cities.

The tabloid newspaper, dubbed the "gum chewer's sheetlet" by some critics, was inspired by the success of tabloid newspapers in London prior to the World War.

In 1922, the first American tabloid was brought forth in New York City by the owners of the Chicago Tribune. From the first it experienced wonderful success from the viewpoint of circulation, climbing, in three years, to a reader body of more than a million daily, the only circulation of like size in the western hemisphere.

Its success brought imitators into the field, and New York now has three picture papers; Baltimore, Boston, Buffalo, Philadelphia have one each, and plans are being laid to bring out more such papers in every American city. McCadden, the physical culture hobbist and publisher, threatens to establish one in every principal city himself. Young Cornelius Vanderbilt is building up a chair of toy newspapers all his own; and the Scripps people have developed them along slightly different lines.

It is difficult to say what the future of the tabloid will be. Perhaps it will ultimately take the place of the standard size newspaper; certainly if the printpaper situation doesn't change it will be necessary for papers to appear in an abbreviated form. And the speed and bustle of American life is such that we think newspaper readers may finally reach a point where they will refuse to read and will demand illustrations of all major news events.

In the meantime it will be well for the reader to clasp his eight column morning paper closely and pray for the return of sanity to the publishing business.

Poems That Live

Image
Showing her immortal —

Shaping her —

mood shaping form —
imperishable —
it's there —
I can see it —
But I can't say it.
There's no secret about it —
she tells it
every breathing, breathless moment —
I can hear it —
but I can't say it.

What can my mere body and scrawning leave you, if it doesn't leave you her?
If I could transcribe one infinitesimal phase of the trillion-starred endowment which comes tumbling out of simply trying to look at her, or out of catching a glance, slyly pointed, trying to look at me, stirring a trillion-starred emotion, vibrating like a bell across endless tides of endless seas — I'd do it — but I can't.
I love her so much, I can't do anything else.

A CHALLENGE

WITH spring well on its way to completion, and with summer and its attendant evils close at hand we find that no single co-ed has aroused the slightest of tremor in our rather puerile breast, and we are moved to ask what's the good of a co-ed anyway.

OUR long and unfortunate experience with university children leads us to throw out the following challenge: To any student of the University of Iowa who will give either personally, or in writing one good, unadorned reason for the existence of the feminine element on this campus, we will give information regarding the whereabouts of James Joyce's extraordinary novel, a sequel to "Ulysses," free of charge. And also any information regarding any disputed point of morality in any or all of the opuses of James Branch Cabell. And also we will note his, her or its remarks in this column. No names mentioned.

We offer this as indisputable evidence of the salubrious effect of the university co-ed upon the mind of an otherwise normal child.

WHEREAS

A SLIGHTLY bald professor in the college of commerce came very close to the truth the other day when he tore this one off: "A gentleman of breeding, if he has any sense at all, will be courteous to the moneyed aristocracy only when he wants to borrow money." We have been treating almost everybody nice of late. Which only goes to show, as Anita Loos once said, that brains are really everything.

ONE of the most remarkable bits of effrontery yet recorded in the history of this great university came to light yesterday morning when an aspiring reporter for the Daily Iowan remarked smilingly to Jack Carroll, Iowa City's illustrious mayor, "Well, well Mr. Carroll, this town'll get in Chicago's class yet, if it keeps on." The mayor kept a distinct and noticeable silence.

WHAT OF IT

A SHORT STORY
CAME the dawn. A pistol spoke, barking out its message of death in the very face of the doughty Nick Carter. But our hero never batted an eye as the leaden missile whistled past his head. A sound of ringing away came to his ears as the villains of the cut-throat gang, that were intent in snuffing out the flame of life which burned so brightly in the body of our hero, vanished into the mists of the morn.

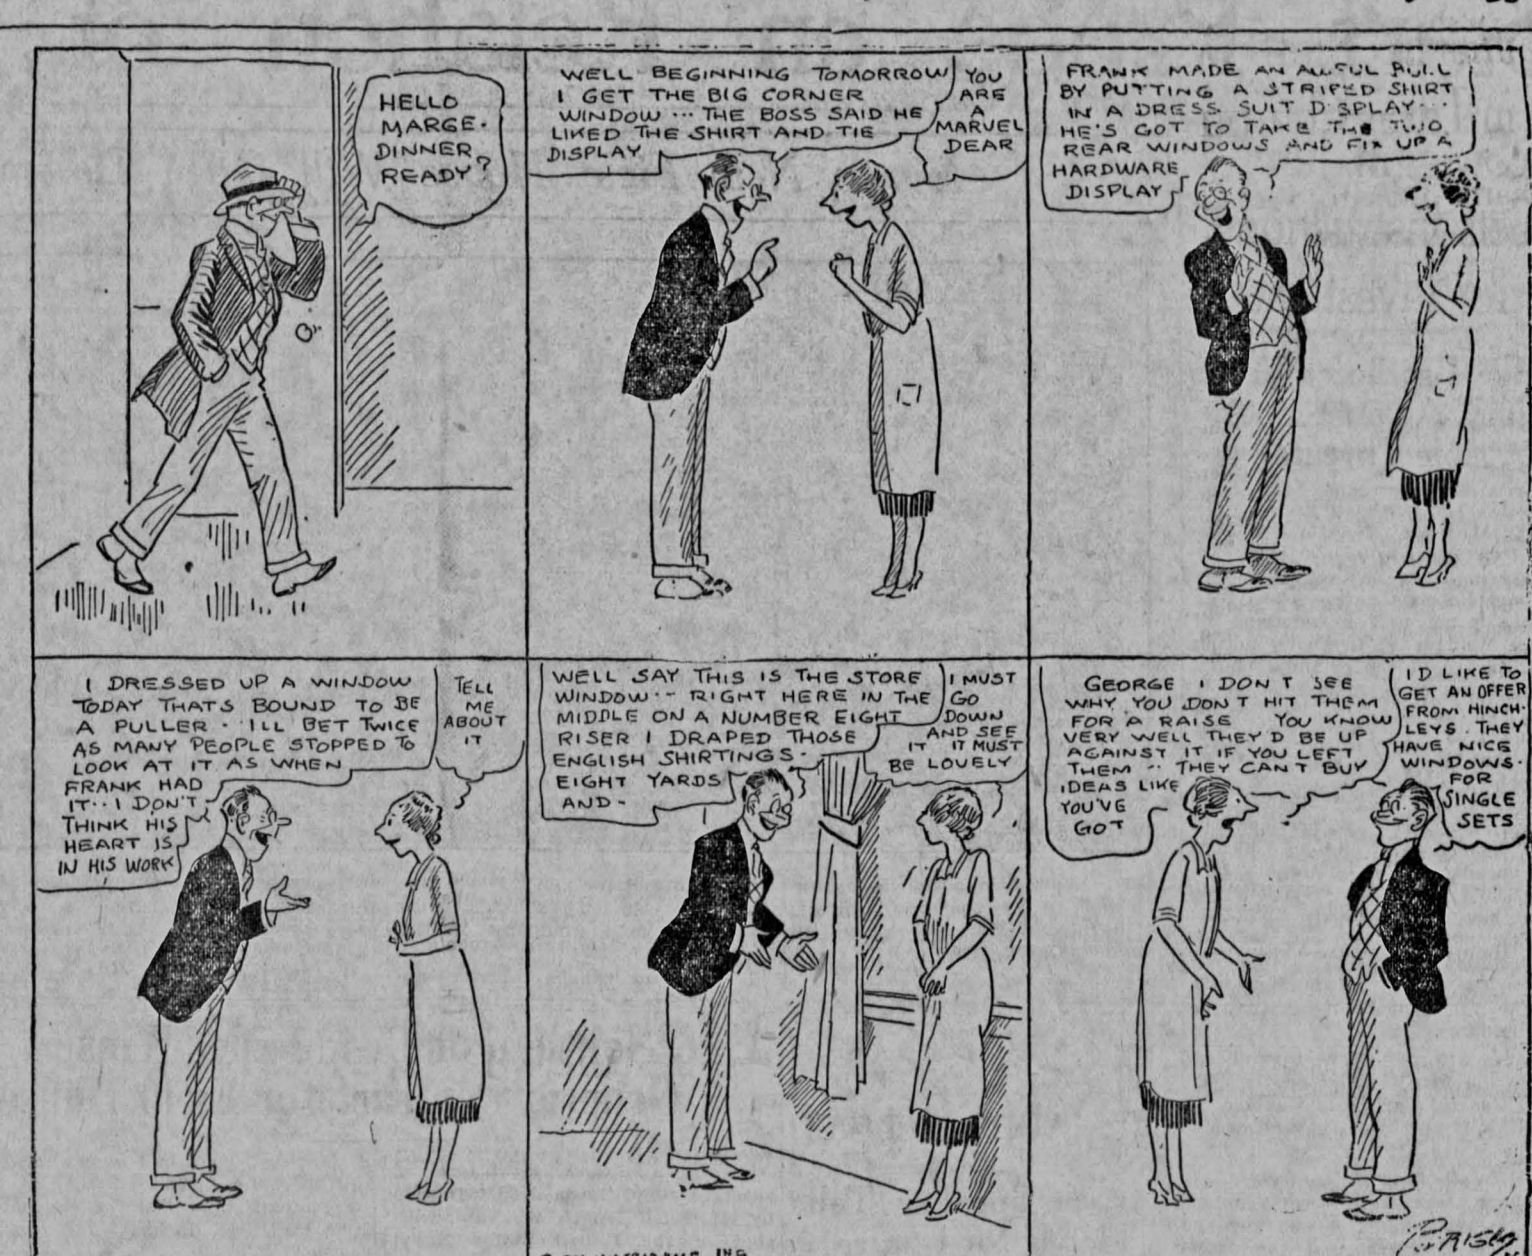

Little Nell, who hadn't been done right by, slept soundly on the hard bunk in the rough log cabin that was her only home, the only home she had ever known. Into her sweet dreams came the sound of a loud knock on the door. She arose, slipped on her robe and went to the door. She opened it and the villain still pursued her.

IOWA IS A LITERARY CENTER

By LULU S. FEETER IN THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY

A recent article in the American Mercury may lead some people to think that Iowa people do not read books. Perhaps the readers of this greenbacked magazine may think that Iowa people do not read good magazines. It is possible that some of the seventy thousand readers of Mr. Mencken's magazine may just dismiss us as hopeless, either as readers or writers, thinking only of "the old lady from Dubuque."

Granting that there are certain women's club members in Iowa who are like women's club members in New York, Texas, Maine, or California (women's club members are not "regional"), I do feel that the lady who wrote "Iowa Takes to Literature" does not know that Iowa took to literature some time ago.

Iowa writes as well as reads. The book readers of the whole country today know of John T. Frederick, Edwin Ford Piper, Herbert Quick, Mott, and many others. Carl Van Vechten preferring to be listed as a New Yorker. Percival Pollard came from Iowa and had lived would have been as well known as H. L. Mencken.

During the past few years it has been my privilege to sell books in the very center of Iowa's corn counties, and I have sold books to the man who plants corn and to the man who buys it and sends it into starch, oil, syrup, and sugar. On the whole, the farmer buys and reads as many books as does the man in the city.

The whole United States has read in newspaper headlines each day for several years that Iowa has "the farmer." It has read of his needs, his wants, and his demands. Brookhart, Iowa, and the farmers, have come to be almost synonymous. Since the farmer is today so important a person, the bookseller in Iowa had had to be on his job selling books to instruct, to entertain, and to pacify this "man with the hoe" and the Ford tractor. In selling books whether it be to a millionaire, the farmer or the day laborer, it is much better to sell the habit of reading first. The buyings will follow if you

STUDENTS SHOULD COPY STUDY-LISTS IN COURSE BOOKS

About eighteen or twenty students have deposited in the registrar's office this semester their course books without first having placed therein their study-lists in accordance with the following direction: "In the places provided you should copy the course title together with the name of each department, number of each course, and amount of credit appearing on coupon 1 of the registration form, which is returned to you at the time you finish your registration. If you make any changes in your courses after registration be sure to indicate in your course book the final program of the subjects for which you expect to get credit at the end of the session." Students are cautioned to be sure that their study-lists for the current session are thus copied in their course books before the course books are deposited in the registrar's office within envelopes bearing a postage stamp and the address to which the grades are to be sent. AGITATION AGAINST MILITARY TRAINING

By MAJOR GENERAL B. A. POORE, IN THE 88TH DIVISION CLOVERLEAF

AN act of Congress of 1862 authorized grants of public lands to certain schools and colleges maintained by States, on condition that a considerable portion of the instruction should be devoted to agriculture and the mechanical arts; and, apparently having in view the necessity of providing the Nation with some means for its own defense and continued existence, it was also provided that a course of military instruction should be established in such institutions.

The War Department interpreted this to mean that there should be compulsory military instruction; but the Interior Department, under which the schools were administered, decided that the law would be complied with if such institutions provided such a course of training; although students might elect whether they would take the course or not.

Therefore, so far as the United States is concerned, there is no compulsory military training in any of our educational institutions, except at West Point and Annapolis. It is true that at certain essentially military schools such training is compulsory; but these are private schools and attendance is voluntary and they cannot be considered as having compulsory military training. The present agitation is not, therefore, immediately directed at them.

It is a basic principle of citizenship that each citizen of this country has the obligation to serve his country in time of war in the manner best suited to his ability. If the citizen is able-bodied and of suitable age, his service will be with the colors. This principle was recognized by Congress when it passed the Selective Service Act, or the Draft Law. Persons who assemble and agree with each other that in the event of war they will take no part in it, seem to forget this principle which has been recognized as law.

Wars have occurred and will continue to occur when differences of opinion arise as to the right and wrong of a certain contention, and those differences are not susceptible of adjustment. The most bitter wars of all history have been between factions who hated each other with the most intense hatred, and whose excuse for war was the love of the same God. When our forefathers differed with the mother country as to our taxation without representation and the differences could not be adjusted, our independence was born. When there was a difference of opinion as to the right of one human being to own another, and this difference could not be adjusted, brother fought brother in the Civil War. And again, when our rights were disputed and ignored by Germany, and the high seas, we entered the World War. These questions were settled, and in each case with lasting benefit to civilization in general, by a resort to war. With better understanding between nations, such differences are becoming more susceptible of arbitration, but questions will arise which no nation would submit to arbitration; or, if the arbiters' decision is unfavorable, they will refuse to abide by the decision; and war will, as heretofore, be the last resort. We are no more righteous than any other nation, nor are we less susceptible to influences that will cause war. In any event, though we can now see no cloud of war on the horizon, we must remember our history, and must recognize that it is possible. And if it is possible, what shall we do when it comes? And right there is where people who believe in a sound military policy and those who believe honestly that we should make no preparation for war, begin to differ. If war should by any possibility come to us, will all then be ready to agree that our plans for defense are all right and the expense justified. To those who are honest in their objection to military training, I would say that unpreparedness has failed to keep us out of war. Would it not be the part of wisdom to see if preparedness would not accomplish that much to be desired result? Our hitherto traditional policy of unpreparedness resulted during the World War, as well as in all other wars, in great battle losses which were in large part unnecessary. It is impossible to put a price upon human life. We cannot, therefore, count the real cost. We who saw the useless sacrifice of life in the Great War can realize the price the youth of this country paid for their lack of training. Who is more competent to advise on the subject of military training; those who know nothing about it, or those who have seen thousands of lives sacrificed because misguided persons objected to military training on the ground that such training developed a lust for war? And who are the people who are foremost in the agitation against military training? With but few exceptions they will be found in the pay of persons or organizations who, honestly opposed to war, will contribute liberally of their means toward anything that seems likely to prevent war. Your agitators pretend to have conscientious objections

Lady Prosecutor Haunts Scofflaws in Texas Courts

Woman Attorney Gets 34 Convictions in First Trial

[By The Associated Press] DALLAS, Tex., May 3—The woes of the bootlegger in the Southwest may not be more heartrending than elsewhere, but he has one that is more persistent than any other. Her name is Mrs. Sarah Covey Menezes and she is assistant United States district attorney for this section of Texas.

No "Little Lady" Federal liquor prosecutions here are in the hands of this relentless little woman, whose only request when she accepted the position was that she be given a man's work. She was taken at her word and for more than a year she has been responsible for driving the (standstine) hooch traffic deeper into cover. There is one thing she will not tolerate. She will not be called "a little lady." A Dallas police captain called at the district attorney's office, looked about the office, and announced he wanted to see "a man lawyer."

Highly Pugnacious "Well, I'm the assistant district attorney, won't I do?" said Mrs. Menezes, who was the only person in the office. The police captain hesitated; it was something new in the man state.

"Well, you see little lady," she said. "You men might as well understand now that I'm not going to be just a clerk here. I'm assistant United States district attorney and I'm going to practice law just like a man does."

At her first appearance in Federal court before Federal Judge William Atwell, exalted ruler of the Elks, she disposed of thirty-four liquor cases with the assistance of Shelby S. Faulkner, another assistant U. S. attorney, and every case was a victory for the government.

Can't Prosecute Women She says when it comes to prosecuting old women for bootlegging she weakens. One of her first defendants was an old mother of seventy. She did not have the heart to prosecute vigorously so the woman was freed. She can be "hard bodied" though, when it comes to the persistent woman offender.

Mrs. Menezes district covers thirty-five counties and is as large as some states. She was born in Fort Scott, Kas., and read law in her father's office, later taking two years in Kansas University law school.

Small Town Holds Many Aged Relics, Including Beer Jug

LAKE CITY, S. C., May 3 (AP)—A beer jug, brought from Scotland by Jane Campbell McNeill, the mother of Lieut. Hector McNeill in 1782, was one of the antiques listed in this little town of 1,700 inhabitants when the local D. A. R. post conducted a census of objects more than 100 years old. Other antiques included: A bible bought in Charleston on January 22, 1783, for twenty-eight shillings by John Daniel, a Revolutionary soldier, and now owned by one of his descendants, James D. Daniel.

A walnut chest of drawers used by Mary Wood Lipscomb, wife of William Lipscomb, who came to South Carolina from Virginia before the Revolution and who was the founder in this state of the numerous family of Lipscombs.

Winning of Prize for Juvenile Play Starts Keokuk Authors on Career

[By The Associated Press] KEOKUK, May 3—Winning of a $100 award offered by the Drama League of America for the best juvenile play was the starting point of a career of authorship of Miss Cornelia L. Meigs of Keokuk, writer of juvenile stories.

"The Steadfast Princess" was the name of Miss Meigs' offering in the Drama League contest. She became so interested in writing that the desire came to write stories for children. Her next effort resulted in the publication of the "Kingdom of the Winding Road," a story with fairyland setting. "Master Simon's Garden," a historical and literary effort followed, and since then a long line of juveniles have come from Miss Meigs' pen.

Nearly all of these later books have settings in the region of the mouth of the Des Moines river and its confluence with the Mississippi just below Keokuk. Indians, pioneers and voyagers along the Mississippi, are favorite characters in the books of Miss Meigs. During the war the author was made chairman of Red Cross work in the making of surgical dressings. During the past year she has devoted some of her time to painting toys for children.

She spends large amount of time in historical research in connection with her writings. Major Montgomery Meigs, U. S. C. E., in charge of the government locks and river work, here, is the father of Miss Meigs, and himself an author, with a gift for description.

German Director Predicts Movies Without Sub-titles

BERLIN, May 3 (AP)—Frederick Murnau, the German motion picture director, who goes to America this month to join the Fox film staff, believes the most significant development in the movies is the making of photoplays without the necessity of sub-titles. "We should tell the story in pictures," he said, "so that everybody understands it." Asked if artistic direction could be made profitable, he replied: "In the long run, artistic direction alone will be profitable, because only the artistic picture will be of lasting value and leave lasting impressions."

would not find in many city homes, even east of the great literary center, Chicago. Poetry was found in each group. Many who had thought the books should be for entertainment only, brought much fiction. The following list was given the prize: Shakespeare Complete. Longfellow's Poems. "Principals of Rural Economics," Carver. "The Challenge of the Country," Fiske. "Feeding the Family," Rose. "Tale of Two Cities," Dickens. "Lorna Doone," Blackmore. "The Mind in the Making," Robinson. The Dictionary. The Bible.

The periodicals were: Literary Digest. Good Housekeeping. Country Gentleman. Youth's Companion. Wallace's Farmer. Cedar Rapids Evening Gazette.

New York may not approve, but I think these were well chosen and appropriate for an Iowa farm home. My subject on the program was "Books and Reading for the Farm Home." The Resolutions Committee, reporting later, included the following in its report: "That we profit of good reading and especially the practice of reading aloud."

About two hundred of our book circulars were distributed, listing "Foundation Books for a Child's Library," "25 Books for a Home Library," "Suggested Books for Reading Aloud."

Contrasting with this trip, was one made in February into another County. This was a parents' meeting in a small country schoolhouse. Going twelve miles by train, three miles thru mud in an open buggy, I found an enthusiastic crowd waiting. The county superintendent had walked four miles from the interurban to share a place on the program. This was an entirely different group of people; people not so used to books in the home, but who had the love for stories. I shall never forget how they liked one of Dorothy Canfield's "Made-to-Order Stories." By reading "Root-abaxa Stories," selections from "When We Were Very Young," and other things of like nature, I proved to them by their own interest how they could interest each other by reading aloud.

These trips mean that the bookseller's day is from 8 to 5. It sometimes lasts from 5:45 A. M. to 12:30 midnight, for refreshments are always served and I wish you might sample some of these "feeds." Lulu Hunt Peters and McCann would get many suggestions as to what not to eat. I might tell of many such trips. The people are so delighted to have you come and, what's more, they do come in and buy your books, which is just what you meant should come of it all. No matter how much strength it takes to carry the Gospel of Books to the uttermost parts, if the bookseller really believes in the cause, he will go.

Fifteen Years Ago

Plans for the annual class day exercises of the college of liberal arts have been completed. The program arranged has been made up with a view of allowing other colleges of the university a chance to participate, to make the exercises a more completely university affair than they have previously been.

Educators here in the university who are members of Phi Delta Kappa, honorary educational fraternity, will hold a banquet at the Burkley hotel tonight. Modern education and its problems will be discussed.

With a blaze of many colored lights and a succession of unique ideas in costumeing, the "Seminar and Fez" formal at Company I Army was carried through as one of the most successful parties of recent times. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wheatstone led the grand march.

It took them eleven innings, but Ames finally defeated Iowa 5-1 yesterday afternoon.

The Triangle club, composed of instructors of the university, held its eleventh annual banquet last night. Prof. S. H. Bush acted as toastmaster.

Thin Ranks to Meet May 18-21 for Encampment

[By The Associated Press] BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 3 — Memories of the Sixties and old south institutions will be revived when five thousand of the living remnant of the Confederate army and their ladies hold their encampment here May 18-20.

43,000 Still Alive The reunion will bring together fewer of the gallant men who followed Lee than ever before. Only forty-three thousand of them are now alive. The annual death rate has been approximately six thousand. Arrangements have been made to remove every possible physical strain from the veterans. Camping quarters will be huge downtown office buildings especially fitted with cots and other equipment furnished by the United States government. The best food will be prepared under direction of dietitians. Nurses and medical attention will be at hand whenever needed.

Hold Annual Parade There was talk of not attempting to hold the annual parade, but it will take its place as the big feature of the annual event.

Besides bringing together the Confederate veterans and their sons, the reunion is the season for the gathering of the ladies of the Confederacy who come as sponsors, maids and visitors. General W. B. Freeman of Richmond, commander-in-chief, has named the list of ladies who will officially participate, included in which are:

Many Ladies Present Mrs. J. F. Scruggs, Birmingham, general chairman; Matron of honor for the South, Mrs. St. John Allison Lawton, president general United Daughters of the Confederacy, Charleston, S. Iowa Net Team Takes Second Match of Season at Chicago 8-2

Divide Doubles and Win Three Singles

Stage Great Comeback Following Defeat at Illinois Saturday

CHICAGO, May 3.—Following its crushing defeat at the hands of the Illinois team Saturday, the Iowa tennis aggregation staged a great comeback here today and defeated the Chicago team 4 to 2. In the doubles matches the Iowa combinations were able to get an even break and in the singles matches three out of four went to the Old Gold netmen.

Independent Nine Beats Blackhawks

Get 10 to 9 Decision at City Park Sunday

The Iowa City Independents were treated to the scare of their lives when the Blackhawks, local colored semi-pro nine, effaced an eight run lead in the ninth, Sunday afternoon at the city park diamond. The last rally fell one short of tying the game, however, and Manager Alexander's relieved cohorts smoothed down their hair again with the score 10-9 in their favor.

Wild Game

The game was almost as wild as the Hawks' first game, with West Liberty, with neither team exactly certain of their status until the last pop-up in the losers' half of the ninth. Starting in inauspiciously at the first, the colored team brought the score 2 to 1 in the second but slipped badly in the third and donned a series of errors, passes, and walks. One run was the best Seattle's team could do in the third and another generous streak in the next frame gave the Independents two more tallies. About this time the Independents decided enough was enough and packed away their batting eyes for future reference. The colored boys had much the same opinion, and unpacked theirs. Two runs resulted.

Rally Begins

The short respite granted the scorekeepers in the sixth ended abruptly when Catcher McCarty tripped for the Hawks and started the fun. Manager Scott's outfit forgot that they were beaten and played as if they were alone in the city park and four men crossed the plate before the leaders could do much fielding. A lone tally in the ninth marked the last vain effort of the Hawks to overcome the Independent lead. Scoring ended with this one run.

The score by innings follows: Blackhawks 011 020 401—9 Independents 260 200 000—10

Drake Relays Superior to Penn

By ROY GROVE
The Drake relays at Des Moines, Ia., so greatly eclipsed the famous Penn relays at Philadelphia that there was little or no comparison in athletic superiority.
The former furnished the thrills of the track while the latter developed the disappointments.
Relay records were the only outstanding events worth mentioning; these depended entirely on team work. Individualism worked and some won in some slow time, while the favorites dropped.
The most sensational moment in Philadelphia was not in victory, but in defeat of Frank Hussey of Boston college, national 100-yard champion. Hussey sustained one of the worst defeats of his career. He started badly and finished a poor fourth against a field winning the dash in the slow time of 10 1-10 seconds.
Penn Dash Slow
Harrington, of Notre Dame, was the only man to live up to any kind of a previous reputation against a field of dark horses.
The whole meet lacked the brilliancy that has characterized the relays in former years, while the events at Drake relays far surpassed preceding meetings.
Two new marks were set by individual efforts at Drake along with Charlie Hoff going over for a world's record in the vault.
Roland Locke of Nebraska, John Kuck of the Kansas State Teachers college, worked with Hoff to produce thrills.
Locke flashed the tape with a record dash of 9 5-10 seconds. Surpassing the former world mark held by Kelly of 9 6-10 seconds, made in 1906. Locke was ranked as America's fastest collegiate man when he tied the record several weeks ago.
Hauser finished by 1-2 inch.
Locke's running of the 100-yard dash is not to be compared with the time of 10 1-10 made at the Penn relays.
John Kuck, at the Drake meet,

Local Cavalry Troop Wins First Stage in Postal Rifle Battle

Troop A, 113th Cavalry, Iowa N. G., has just finished their last indoor postal rifle match of the season with the Reg. Headquarters company of the 172nd, Vermont infantry.
The match was fired in three stages and the local troop annexed the first stage with a margin of twenty points.
A five man team fired prone and sitting positions. Following are the scores of each man: Corporal Arthur B. Baldwin, prone, 100, sitting, 99; Lieut. James S. Wilson, prone, 100, sitting, 98; Private Leslie Schmale, prone, 100, sitting, 97; Capt. William J. Hayek, prone, 99, sitting, 94; and Private Carl Lagel, prone, 96, sitting, 96. The total score for the team was 978.
Results of the other two stages are expected to be received within a few days.

St. Patrick's Cage Squad Elects 1927 Captain Tonight

St. Patrick's basket ball team will elect their leader for the 1926-27 season tonight at the annual banquet given to the cage team and the senior class by the alumni association of the south end school. Sponsors will be presented to eight men during the course of the evening. The eight will be Captain Kelly, Pugh, Grady, Glasgow, Kelleher, Smith, Pinney, and Walsh.
Of the regular five this year only two men will be left to form the nucleus for next year's five. Kelly, Grady, and Pugh will graduate so it is between Glasgow and Kelleher for the captaincy for the coming season. Glasgow is entering his senior year, while Kelleher will have two more years at the Green and White school, so it is probable that Glasgow will get the honor. Besides the three regulars Pinney will also be lost by graduation.
Sam Barry and Rollie Williams of the university coaching staff are among the list of speakers who will be on the program tonight.

Hawkeyes Whet Eyes for Purple Polish up Fielding

Vogel Hopes to Grind "Nerves" out of Fielders

Undaunted, in spite of the fact that the Minnesota baseball team set them down by a 5 to 1 defeat in their third conference start, the Iowa nine started working more seriously than ever in the practice session yesterday afternoon in hopes that they might develop the necessary hitting power that will bring them a victory.
In the defeat administered to them by the Swedes the Hawkeyes gave evidence that they have a defense that is liable to crack with a hard strain, which has been the case in the three games played this season. The fielding of the Vogelmen makes the team look like a league outfit during the practice sessions but the players have found it difficult to remain relaxed while under fire.

Defense Can Win

Should the members of the team get to feel at home in a conference battle they have a good chance of winning the game although they may be out-hit. A good defensive team can win ball games many times even though they are unable to connect at the plate.

Iowa Earned Run

Minnesota scored but one earned run for their victory while the Iowa team earned its only counter. Had the infield been steady the game might have had a different ending. The remainder of the week will be spent in efforts to develop hitting punch and in doing away with the tenseness that strikes the Vogelmen when they take the field against an opponent.

Purple Have Two Wins

Northwestern will place a team on Iowa Field Saturday that has won two of the five games that it has played this season. Their last victory was over the Indiana club and they are reputed by critics as having a team worthy of much consideration. However, their record like Iowa's, is none too impressive and a win for the Hawkeyes is not at all improbable.

Will Battle Frosh

The practice this afternoon will consist of more hitting drill and a scrimmage game with Coach Williams' yearling nine. The first year men are improving rapidly since they have been able to take advantage of some good weather and are capable of giving the varsity team plenty of competition.

Because he's one of the greatest athletes in the country.
Because he holds the world's record for tossing the discus, that ancient and honorable feat of the Greeks.
Because he set the new world's record this year—as his contribution to the 1926 sport records when he heaved the platter 158 feet 2 1-2 inches April 3 in a duel meet between the U. of Southern California, whose colors he wears, and Stanford University.
Because he leads a powerful aggregation of Pacific coast track stars to the intercollegiate meet in the east in May.
And hopes, while there, to win both weight events at least, as he did last year.

Fraternity Sports

Eight fraternity baseball teams got together Sunday in four games on the interfraternity schedule. Delta Tau Delta and Sigma Phi Epsilon battled in the best game of the four with the Deltas getting a 3 to 1 decision in the end. McCord, hulking for the winners, pitched a great game, allowing only four hits.
Alpha Sigma Phi scored an easy victory over the Chi Delta Psi outfit 13 to 5. Nelson in the box for the winners had an easy time and kept the Alpha Sig batters in check most of the way.
With Murphy doing some fine work on the mound the Phi Kappa nine trounced the Triangles team 11 to 2 in a contest that ended in a rainstorm. The Acadias won the fourth game of the day from the Delta Chi boys 10 to 2, without much trouble. The losers garnered only three hits off Smith and at no time threatened to take the lead.
The Beta Theta Pi tennis team, Gibbs and Knapp, started on its way to another championship last night when the Phi Delta Theta outfit fell 8-6 and 7-5 in two hard fought matches. Delta Tau Delta took the other match from Phi Delta Chi without much trouble.

Iowa Cinderman Limber Legs for Dual With Irish

Picked to Win; Will be Forced in Half Dashes, Vault

By DON SAUNDERS
With the Michigan dual meet settled but not forgotten, Coach Bresnahan's track squad is pointing for the Notre Dame dual at South Bend next Saturday. Iowa should win without much difficulty although the Irish will offer strong competition in the dashes, half-mile, and pole vault.
Think Meet Fluke
The general sentiment of members of the squad and of some five thousand fans who witnessed the meet is that Iowa has a stronger team than Michigan and if they were to meet again Iowa would come out on the long end of the count. The failure of Iowa men to come through in the two-and-a-half dashes spelled defeat for the Hawks.
Wind Hunt Hawks
Leonard Hurn and Maurice Speers run gritty races in the two-mile grind but conditions were decidedly unfavorable for them. With a stiff breeze bucking them through half of the race the Iowa runners were forced to break the wind for their opponents.
The Iowa runners have been in the habit of taking the lead and setting a fast pace, and to have let the Michigan men break the wind would have slowed up the Iowans and thrown them off stride.
Roberts' Legs Bad
Roberts has been troubled with sore muscles in his legs and he found the stiff breeze a tough handicap. Swenson had done a hard afternoon's work when he entered the half-mile race and he was too fatigued to finish the grueling race. There will probably be a different story to tell about these men in the remaining meets in which they will compete.
Doped to Improve
Roberts should be in fine trim to give Della Maria, the Notre Dame star, a workout in the dashes, while Hurn and Speers should come through one-two in their event at South Bend. Swenson, who has developed into one of the best middle-distance runners in the conference, will be a favorite in the quarter and the half.
Harrington Good
Jack Boyles will find tough going in the pole vault with Harrington of Notre Dame against him, but Jack is going better than ever and is given an even chance against his more renowned opponent.
Illinois defeated Notre Dame last Saturday and the performances of Coach Breggahan's men will provide some fun in the comparative strength of Illinois and Iowa. The Illinois dual will be held at Champaign a week from Saturday.

Death Ends Work of Oscar Straus as Philanthropist

his race to become a member of the Cabinet of a President of the United States. He devoted part of his life to social welfare and philanthropic work and was for 30 years active in public service. Honored by five presidents of his adopted country as a statesman and diplomat, he was a colleague of President Roosevelt in the formation of the Progressive Party, and in 1912 became the candidate of this party for governor of New York.

The diplomatic career of Mr. Straus began in 1887 when he was appointed Minister to Turkey by President Cleveland, whose nomination for the Presidency he had conspicuously urged. As an American Minister to the Ottoman empire, he was instrumental in reopening 50 schools and protecting more than 500 missions from harm. He brought about a better understanding and more friendly relations between the United States and Turkey and promoted the establishment of commerce between the two countries.

Turkish Ambassador
When President Roosevelt, in 1902, sought a man versed in governmental affairs and diplomacy qualified to succeed former President Harrison as a member of the Permanent Court of Arbitration at the Hague, the choice fell upon Mr. Straus. Four years later President Roosevelt appointed him Secretary of Commerce and Labor in his Cabinet.

In a crisis in the Turkish empire in 1909, Mr. Straus was persuaded by President Taft to again take up the duties of representing the United States in that country, this time as ambassador.

President Wilson, in 1914, reappointed Mr. Straus as a member of the Permanent Hague Tribunal for six years.

Born in Otterberg, Rhinish Bavaria, Germany, December 23, 1850, Mr. Straus was the son of Lazarus Straus, an agriculturist, who fled from his fatherland in 1852 because of the part he had taken in a revolution in 1848. Settling in Philadelphia for a short time, Lazarus Straus took his family to Talbotton, Georgia, where most of the boyhood of Oscar Straus was spent and where he studied in Collingsworth Institute. After practicing law in New York City for a time, Mr. Straus and his two brothers engaged in large department store enterprises in New York and Brooklyn.

Honored by Universities
Mr. Straus was a student of economics, wrote several books on that subject and was the author of text books in American universities. Among his works are, "The Origin of the Republican Form of Government in the United States," "Boswell Williams, the Pioneer of Religious Liberty," and "The Development of Religious Liberty in the United States."

Mr. Straus was one of the founders of the National Civic Federation, was formerly president of the American Social Science Association and was interested in many social welfare organizations. He was given the degree of Doctor of Laws by three universities. He was devoted to the cause of Jewish uplift throughout the world and was identified with movements to relieve suffering of the Jewish people in Europe and Asia.

He was a brother of Nathan Straus, merchant and philanthropist, and Isidor Straus, who with his wife, was lost at sea by the sinking of the Titanic in April, 1912. Mr. Straus married Sarah, daughter of Louis Lavanburg of New York, April 19, 1882.

Coroner's Jury Finds Robert Hawkins Guilty of Axe Murder

Negro's Hearing Slated for Today in Carter's Court

Prisoner Claims Self Defense Motive for Deed

Lewis W. Blair, negro, who was killed with an axe early Sunday morning by Robert Hawkins, another negro, in the aftermath of an argument over a disputed point in a "crap" game, was late last night found to have reached his death as the result of a skull fracture administered with an axe in the hands of Robert Hawkins.

"We the jury find that Lewis W. Blair came to his death as the result of a skull fracture and other serious wounds.

"We further find that said injuries were caused by blows delivered upon the head and body, of Lewis W. Blair by a hand axe.

"We further find that said hand axe was held in the hands of one Robert Hawkins.

"We further find that Robert Hawkins killed Lewis W. Blair deliberately, premeditatedly, and with malice aforethought."

The coroner's jury, composed of Stanley Hands, George Katzenmeyer, and Herman Amish, reached the verdict at 11:15 after a half-hour of deliberation.

Claim Crap Game Going

Hawkins, Blair, Charles Smith, a junk dealer, William Rushing, and several other negroes, and several white men are alleged by the police to have been shooting craps at the home of Mrs. Ragler on W. LaFayette street when an argument between Blair and Hawkins arose over a point which Hawkins had rolled.

Policemen Find Blair

The police were notified Sunday morning about 3:30 by L. A. Beasley, 511 S. Capitol St., that there was a disturbance in the Ragler home. Officers Don McComas and Garret Byrne answered the call, found Hawkins preparing to leave, and Blair lying on the floor in a pool of blood.

Mrs. Ragler, the only other occupant of the badly littered room, was sitting in a drunken stupor on the couch.

McComas arrested Hawkins, placed him in a cab and took him to the police station. One of the officers called a physician for Blair, first aid was administered, and the injured man was rushed to the hospital where he died a few minutes later in the examination room.

An autopsy performed yesterday morning revealed the fact that there were several cuts on the back of the dead man's head, his skull was fractured in two places, three ribs were broken, and a wound had been inflicted upon his right thigh. Ralph William Morris, 609 S. Capitol street, testified as first witness at the inquest that he reached Mrs. Ragler's house about 1:30 Sunday morning and found a poker game in session. The poker game soon broke up in an argument and a "crap" game was started. Hawkins appeared to be running the game and charged a "rake off" on each game which was to be paid to the house.

Morris said that Hawkins tossed Mrs. Ragler "a nickel" now and then to keep her quiet.

Hawkins had the dice and was shooting a fifty-five cent stake which Morris had "faded." Blair had a "side bet" on whether or not Hawkins would make his point, which was a ten. Hawkins rolled a twelve and called it a ten which started the argument.

Presumably the argument was settled and Blair left the house to go home. Morris paid up his bets soon after and left the house in the company of Archie Scott because he wanted to get out of the dispute.

"I was sitting on the porch of the house at the time," said Morris. "I saw Hawkins run out of the house and start south in the direction of another house. The pair walked on up the street where they met Blair, who picked up the two men in his car and took them back to the Ragler house. As Morris stepped through the door, he turned, with his back to the door, and spoke to a white man on the couch. He heard a scuffling of feet and as he turned to look over his shoulder, saw Hawkins swinging an axe over Blair's head. Without waiting to see more, Morris testified, he made a dash for the door and heard only a thud as he left the house.

Dr. John Scanlon, city health physician, told the jury of his phone call, the trip to the scene of the murder, the death of the negro, and the condition of the body as he found it.

L. A. Beasley told how some colored man wakened him early in the morning and asked for a gun or a butcher knife to protect an old colored woman who was being robbed. The man did not appear to be drunk and stood near Mr. Beasley as he phoned in the police call.

Describing the brawl in detail, Charles Smith, a negro junk man, told how he had seen Hawkins strike the fatal blow, how Hawkins had struck with the axe at someone going out the door, threatened to attack Smith, and then had taken another swing at Blair's prostrate body.

Dr. Housman, director of the department of pathology, testified as to the findings of the autopsy. His testimony was corroborated by Dr. I. B. Ackerson, his assistant.

A further description of the poker game was furnished by Archie Scott, a negro who works at a local barber shop. Scott, however, was not present at the time of the killing.

Officer Don McComas, night patrolman, told of the arrest and how when he entered the room, Hawkins said to him, "I'm the man that done the hittin'." McComas testified that Hawkins was not under

McChesney Home Receives Slight Damage by Blaze

Sparks from the chimney, at the William J. McChesney residence, 12 East Bloomington St., were the cause of the blaze last evening at 6 p.m. that burned a large hole in the roof.

The blaze was discovered by one of the neighbors before any of the occupants of the house knew of it. The fire department made the run and put out the flames before they spread to the lower floors.

The influence of liquor and did not appear excited.

Night Patrolman Garret Byrne said Hawkins had told him that Blair was trying to rob Mrs. Ragler and that he was trying to protect her.

At the conclusion of the testimony, County Attorney E. L. O'Connor read a statement signed by Hawkins in which the negro stated that Blair had tried to rob Mrs. Ragler, that Blair had brandished a knife when he went to her assistance and that he had struck out with the axe in self defense.

Hawkins will be arraigned before Justice B. F. Carter some time today when he will hear the formal charges against him and enter either a plea of "guilty" or one of "not guilty."

Judge Otto Pleads for Confidence in C. of C. Address

Believes Indifference, Misunderstanding Hurting Courts

Lifting Chamber of Commerce members out of a self-centered, work-a-day world to a plane of vital thought, Judge Ralph Otto, judge of the district court, made the Monday noon Chamber of Commerce luncheon an hour of inspiration.

His plea for confidence in the "most marvelous thing in our American civilization; a tribunal for settling the differences between men," was robbed of its inspiration in not being heard by every American citizen rather than by so small a group as the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce.

"Losing Faith Individuals, groups and even nations are losing faith in each other," declared Judge Otto, "all through sheer ignorance." And he explained how this same ignorance, coupled with gross indifference was causing the American people to lose faith in our system of jurisprudence and in our laws.

"In olden times before courts were known, differences were settled by brute force. The strongest man or nation was the master," said Judge Otto, "but now the courts are serving this purpose, although the world court of settling international differences is still only a hope."

"The age we are living in is the greatest in the history of our country except for the fact that respect for our laws is being lost. No other people in the world have so many opportunities, advantages and privileges as we have in America. Our flag, the emblem of peace and prosperity, announces to the world that we acknowledge no superiors. In America there is inspiration in the air itself. Every one is eager to think, to do, and to be happy. Men may easily get what is necessary to have a home and provide for their children's education. Yet," he added, "courts and the law are the only thing standing between us and anarchy. Mob rule would sweep aside all that civilization has accomplished."

Indifference hurts The people misunderstand the law and the courts. Unfortunately they think that a judge on the bench decides cases as he desires, when he really is only applying the Law made by the people. The people may have any laws they desire if they will mould public sentiment for them and have public opinion expressed. One of the saddest things in our government is gross indifference toward citizenship. We are all shareholders in the greatest of businesses; that of self government.

Judge Otto ended his eloquent and inspirational address by intimating the remedy for restoring respect for our laws and courts, that of having men on the bench of justice who will not flinch under the acid test of popular disbelief, and of erasing the ignorance which makes people distrust our government.

Otto Grants Two Divorce Actions; Murphy in Court

Sue Supervisors for $12,000; Impanel Grand Jury

Arguments in the case of Murphy vs. the Johnson county board of supervisors were heard and two divorce decrees granted by Judge Ralph Otto in District court yesterday.

Reach No Decision In the Murphy case, the plaintiff seeks a writ of mandamus to compel the return of $12,000, alleged due him and several Iowa City property owners incorporated in the action. The case was heard in the State Supreme court several years ago where the plaintiff's right to start action was upheld. No decision had been reached at a late hour last night.

Mrs. Alice Yedlick was granted a divorce by Judge Otto from Charles Yedlick, with a settlement of property rights. In the divorce action of Brown vs. Brown a decree was awarded with alimony of ten dollars per week.

Seven Criminal Cases Members of the Grand Jury were impaneled yesterday afternoon. The seven men chosen include: Glenn McCrory, (foreman), George Attig, J. F. Kolda, Frank Krob, John G. Scheetz, Joe Reha, and William Ackerman. Five members were excused. Approximately seven criminal cases are now scheduled to be heard by the jury. The case of Robert Hawkins, who is said to have admitted killing Lewis Blair in Iowa City early Sunday morning will probably come before this session, according to officials.

Church Merger Plans Remain at Standstill

The meeting scheduled for Sunday by the committees delegated to study the proposed federation between the Presbyterians and Congregational churches of Iowa City was postponed another week. This cancellation resulted from the fact that some of the sub-committees did not have their reports complete.

The two main committees have been delegated by their respective churches to draw up a plan of union which may be voted upon by the congregations of the two churches some time in the future.

Fleming was appointed to confer with the Boy and Girl Scout camp committees. These committees will meet in the Scout council chamber at 4 p. m. today.

And he explained how this same ignorance, coupled with gross indifference was causing the American people to lose faith in our system of jurisprudence and in our laws.
