A Newspaper's Conscience

STUDENTS in schools of journalism would do well to consider the life of Charles S. Parker, publisher of newspapers at Arlington and Lexington, Massachusetts. Parker started out as a pressman, ran the gamut of jobs in the mechanical, business and editorial departments, and then entered metropolitan journalism. He served under Dana, Greeley, and Bryant, all fearless journalists, and then started out for himself. He hitched his journalistic wagon to the star, "News not fit for a child is not good enough for its parents." Publisher Parker kept to his aim, and always observed it in the editorial as well as advertising departments. It cost him money, it seemed at times, but in the end he triumphed. Among the guiding principles which he believes should motivate the conduct of a newspaper are these essentials: "Be independent. Print everything that will interest a dozen readers. Do as you please with your editorial page and inform your critics they are not compelled to read the articles. Never put anything into a paper that children cannot read. Make the interests of your community paramount, even before your pocketbook." Here is a professional attitude worthy of cultivation and respect.

Another Discovery

NO one can be an orator sitting down. This is the discovery made by David Houston in a tour of inspection of the federal reserve banks. In the tour it was planned to hear all objections to the system, and fearing that political enemies of the plan might make long, pointless speeches, the decision was made that all speakers must sit down to deliver their addresses. On the tour a southern senator was scheduled to speak. When he opened his speech he was sitting down, as the committee requested, but as he warned to his subject he rose. The chairman again asked him to be seated, and he finally gave up in despair, admitting that it is not possible to sit down and still climb to the heights of oratory. If the investigating committee only realized it, they have made an amazing discovery. After dinner speeches will no longer be boring if the speaker remains seated while he talks. Another interesting angle appears. Professors have long wondered why students seated before them in classes were unable to recite. The erroneous impression that they knew nothing of what was asked may now be corrected. It is merely that the poor, seated, student hadn't a chance, in competition with his professor standing before him. Perhaps this is why, in ancient days, the student had to rise when asked to recite.

Skrzynski and Cummins

AMERICANS usually think of themselves as living in a country endowed with the presence of certain traits of character which the land of the free possesses exclusively and other countries in their ignorance ravish along without. The other day Count Skrzynski and General Szeptycki had a duel over in Poland. Just why we are not concerned with at present. The general fired first, but missed. Skrzynski thereupon tossed his pistol away, saying afterwards, "I don't know how to miss, and I did not want to kill a man in whose veins flows the blood of my forefathers." We suspect that the count would not have shot even if his opponent had been someone in whose veins the blood of his forefathers had not flowed. Count Skrzynski is a good sport. Only a couple of days before this happened in Poland, Brookhart and Cummins sat within five feet of each other in a senate chamber over here. The results of the primary had been announced. Cummins chatted with men all around him, virtually with everyone in the room except Colonel Brookhart, though Brookhart sat only a step or two away. We would characterize this attitude on the part of Mr. Cummins as one of a decidedly poor sport. The sportsmanlike thing, and one for which we think the whole state of Iowa would have respected him, for Mr. Cummins to do was to have taken Brookhart by the hand and congratulated him warmly. We wonder what Mr. Cummins would have done had he been in Count Skrzynski's place with a loaded pistol in his hand and his opponent standing defenseless with an empty gun.

Vacation Schools

MONDAY morning thirty Des Moines churches opened their doors for the daily vacation Bible schools which are to hold sessions during the next few weeks. Several more Des Moines churches as well as some in other parts of the state have planned similar programs. These schools, sponsored by the churches, endeavor to give the rising generation some background and foundation in the principles of Christianity and some knowledge of the Holy Book. They are supported in most part by donations or private subscriptions. The teaching is done by devoted religious workers, often public school teachers or advanced students, who receive little, if any, pay. The vacation Bible school acts as a time-filler for the children so lately set free from school duties. These little people often find themselves bored by their unusual freedom from set tasks and unable to find pleasant pastimes. To these the vacation school is a real boon. The morning is spent with pleasant companions in doing things, learning things, and making things. The child thus employed will be better all through life for the training he has received. In some small towns the churches unite in holding one school for children of all denominations. This works well, saves expense, and simplifies the matter of securing competent instructors. Incidentally it paves the way for the future coalition of small congregations. When approached upon the subject thoughtful parents are glad to embrace the opportunity to give children the advantages of the vacation school and the verdict of the children is: "We like it." Any town would do well to take up the idea and endeavor to work out a community plan which would meet its own problems.

The Wrong Idea

THE MID-WEST REVIEW announces that the great trouble with college students is that they believe that when their education is complete that they have heretofore become masters of the world. They feel that they have finished the one task, and the rest of the world should accept this. This idea of college students was formerly more common than it is now. The novel of a generation ago usually showed how the poor but honest boy who was not too proud to work climbed to the height of fame, and the smug, self-satisfied college graduate took his place as office boy. Though the graduate who really lives up to this imagined idea is almost extinct, there are so many graduating from higher educational institutions every year that the individual cannot believe himself one of a chosen few. The fact is, that he really does not, except in rare cases, consider himself too good to work. He expects to start with nothing, but his hope is that with the training he has been able to acquire, he has added to his ability to advance.

Requiescat, Big Ben!

FRIDAY night as we retired into the deep, cool hush of our lowly cot, Big Ben, our erstwhile alarm clock, once deemed as faithful as the proverbial bull pup but now relegated to the limbo of forgotten mechanisms, was ticking along rather spasmodically and squeakily. Due to kindness of heart more than to any fear that he would fail us in our hour of need, we went to great pains to thoroughly saturate him with a quantity of hair oil in an endeavor to ease his rasping cough. Upon waking this morning, much to our dismay and disgust, Ben's hands pointed at three fifteen, though the seven o'clock whistles were blowing, and his rasping voice was stilled, apparently forever. We were going to be late to work. For sentimental reasons only we carefully buried Ben in a deep recess in our trunk to preserve him as an heirloom for our posterity. A strange face will look down at us from our shelf tomorrow morning—and we mourn the passing of Big Ben.

Father (at one a. m.)—Is that young man asleep, Helen?
Daughter—Hush, father! He has just asked me to marry him and make him the happiest man on earth.
"Just as I thought. Wake him up."
Young Scout—Auntie, one of our scouts faced two lions by himself.
Auntie—Where, dear?
Young scout—In the zoo.
Customer—Is this card table well made?
Dealer—Yes, sir; you can bet on it.

Poems That Live

Chinese Slippers
Have you seen
A dappled butterfly
Winging its saffron way
Across a sheen of purple sky
To greet a vivid day?
Have you seen
A golden shaft of light
Piercing a lake of blue?
Roses beneath the kiss of night
Flushed to a deeper hue?
Have you seen
A tinkling emerald splash
Into a crystal pool,
And perfumed dust of peal-ash
Ghostly and grey and cool?
I have seen
Enwoven dreams of rainbow mist
Brothered upon the shoon
Casing the feet of one I kissed
Last night, beneath the moon.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Dear Editor:
I have two daughters, both of them winners in the Register Beauty Contest last year, clever, agreeable, entertaining, and now in attendance at the University. In spite of the fact that their father is tremendously rich and wishes them to be socially popular, they have no boy friends. What shall I do about it?
WORRIED MOTHER.

Answer—Send us your address; don't write—telegraph. We are enclosing a letter under separate cover.

Skimmer Miller—Oh, yes, you do too know him; he was the center of attention on our conference championship basketball team—says Latin courses are like golf courses only more so. Any old chap could go round in '97 but it takes a star to make it in '26.

A frosty old geezer named Milo
Invested his kale in a silo.
He explained, "No, its use
Is not silage but juice—
If you want to get stewed, you must buy low."

The math department claims to have the university champion address; we should have thought them more appropriately placed in the zoology department.

Knowledge—The red stripes around the barber poles are there because they used to bleed people there.
College—Why don't they put 'em in front of restaurants on dance nights?

Hostess—Do you know any jokes?
Guest—Pardon me—yes, I guess I've met every one.

OUR ESTEEMED PREDECESSOR HAD A MORE OR LESS MOTH-EATEN COLLECTION OF LAST LINES. WE PRESENT YOU WITH A SIMILAR GROUP OF FIRST LINES. WE START OUR CAREER WITH THE MOST NOTABLE: "YES, I THINK HE HAS HIS FATHER'S EYES."

Bobby—Mamma, why has the giraffe got such a long neck?
Ma—Shame on you, you naughty boy; I'll spank you when you get home.

New Honors Courses Planned in English

subjects. Admission will be obtained through a departmental committee on honors, to be appointed by the head of the English department with the approval of the dean of the college of liberal arts. The plan of study and the program of each student admitted, as well as the direction of the student's work in the field of concentration, will be in charge of another departmental committee appointed by Professor Craig and approved by Dean Kay.

Direct Four Students
The committee will have the direction of the work of but four students and determine the specialization for each honor student in its charge. Besides the student in English, the committee will designate subjects to be followed in fields closely allied to it such as history, philosophy, and foreign languages.

The student who is admitted to the honors English courses will be allowed to take fewer hours of the regular work and he also may be permitted to attend certain courses purely to receive the benefit of the lectures and without being required to do the work of such courses. He will not be given grades in these regular courses but will simply be "passed" if he makes a grade of "C".

Hold Special Exams
To determine standings, honor students, at least once a year, will be given special and exhaustive examinations over the field of their study. They will have no chance to know what will be the nature of such examinations for the reason that a special committee, made up of the faculty members from the English departments of other universities, if possible, will make out the examinations.

If that is impossible, a local examining board will be appointed, the members of which will have no direct connection with the students' studies. The examinations will last for three hours.

Three Degrees of Honors
Three degrees of honor will be conferred upon the successful students. "Highest honors," the greatest distinction possible for graduates from the English department, will be given to those achieving the greatest heights of learning. "High honors" will follow while "Honors" will be third.

Dean Kay states that if the experiment proves successful in the English department, it will be extended to include other departments.

NOTICES
WEEKLY ASSEMBLY
In order to afford time for the weekly assembly Wednesday mornings, the last two class periods are shortened, the regular ten o'clock period closing at 10:25 and the eleven o'clock period opening at 11:15. All members of the faculty and the student body of the summer session are urged to attend the assembly.
For the benefit of Latin students who wish to learn how to scan hexameter verse a meeting will be held Tuesday afternoon, June 22, in Room 110, Hall of Liberal Arts, at 4 p. m. ROY C. FLICKINGER.
ALL-GRADUATE SUMMER SESSION CONVOCATION
The all-graduate summer session convocation will be held in the natural science auditorium Monday, June 21, at 7:30 p. m. This is the annual gathering of all students who will do graduate work. All members of the faculty who deal with graduate students are also urged to be present.
CHORUS AND ORCHESTRA
The summer session chorus and orchestra afford excellent opportunity for those who are interested in music to secure training under superior direction. Both chorus and orchestra have public performances during the term.
The examinations will last for three hours.
Three Degrees of Honors
Three degrees of honor will be conferred upon the successful students. "Highest honors," the greatest distinction possible for graduates from the English department, will be given to those achieving the greatest heights of learning. "High honors" will follow while "Honors" will be third.
Dean Kay states that if the experiment proves successful in the English department, it will be extended to include other departments.

CORNELL COLLEGE ALUMNI LUNCHEON
There will be a Cornell College alumni luncheon at noon at the Memorial Union, Thursday, June 24. Students who plan to attend should call 1215-W.

TO ALL STUDENTS WHO EXPECT TO GRADUATE AT THE CLOSE OF THE FIRST TERM OF THE SUMMER SESSION, JULY 23
Every student who expects to receive a degree, or certificate, at the University Convocation to be held July 23 should make his formal application on a card provided for the purpose, at the Registrar's office on or before Saturday, June 26. It is of the utmost importance that each student concerned comply with this request immediately for otherwise, it is very likely that a student, who may be in other respects qualified, will not be recommended for graduation at the close of the present term. Making application for the degree, or certificate, involves the payment of the graduation fee ($15) at the time the application is made, the payment of this fee is a necessary part of the application. Call at the Registrar's office for the card.

UNION PICNIC OF YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES
The Young People's societies of the Iowa City churches will hold a union picnic at the City Park Saturday, June 26, at 3 p. m. All people who intend to go are requested to register in their own society.

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR
The Congregational Christian Endeavor meets at 6:30 Sunday evening. Prof. W. S. Maulsby will speak on "Journalism and Christianity." Everyone is invited.

COMMITTEE ON RECOMMENDATION OF TEACHER REGISTRANTS
Those registered with the committee on recommendation of teachers are asked to leave their summer addresses and class schedules at the office.

South Wales Retains Old World Traits

TREORCHY, June 19 (AP)—Mining and steel industries have not separated mothers in South Wales from their old world method of mothering.

Mother and baby share the same plaid shawl they did generations ago. The shawl is the emblem of maternity in this area and hardly a woman of marriageable age but shelders a baby with it. Her left hand clutches it firmly half a day at a time, while her right is busy with household tasks. In this nest on its mother's left arm the baby sleeps, eats or looks out cheerfully on the world. It takes the place of the perambulator and go-cart.

Independents Vs. Mechanicsville at City Park Today

The Mechanicsville baseball team will oppose the Iowa City Independents this afternoon on the city park diamond. After two weeks of illness the local team will return with even a stronger lineup than before. The probable addition of Lane, shortstop on last year's team, should make the Independents' infield a strong combination. If he plays Lane will probably used at second place with Buck McGuire at short. Otto Vogel is slated to continue to hold down his third base position and Seemuth will probably be at first.

Paul Clark, university freshman hurler, will be in the box again. This is Clark's second year with the team, as he carried the bulk of the pitching burden in 1925. His fine pitching against the Wilton Boosters two weeks ago enabled the locals to walk away with an easy victory while Wilton collected only three hits.

The strength of the Mechanicsville nine is an unknown factor but reports seem to indicate that they will give the locals a tough battle today.

What Is A Life Underwriter?

One who executes and delivers a life insurance policy. In other words, a person whose business it is to offer the known benefits of life insurance to individuals, to corporations, to partnerships, etc.

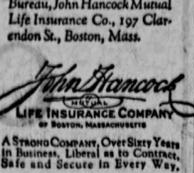

But further, the life underwriter is one who must convince those clients of the benefits offered. This means stimulating contact with human character, and with large affairs. Some underwriters prefer the game of character and deal mainly with individuals. Others prefer affairs; to them is open the great field of business insurance.

Furthermore, the business of life underwriting pays highly for initiative and ability.

And still more, the life underwriter offers to his client a commodity which has no risk in it, does not deteriorate, and adds no burden of mental worry. The life underwriter sells absolute security, the foundation of serenity of mind.

It is worth while to think these things over now and to remember them when, perhaps, you find yourself wrong-placed in whatever business you may have chosen.

Police Arrest Smith for Alleged Attack

Accused of an attack upon an eleven-year-old girl, Fred H. Smith, 3292 Marcy street, plasterer for the university, is being held in the city jail. The information filed by the girl's mother late last night alleges that the attack took place yesterday at 6 p.m. in Mr. Smith's office, in the basement of a local nurses home.

Smith, a married man of forty years, asserts his innocence and is emphatic in his denial of the charges. He says that he has fathered the child, who lived with her mother in a double house with his family, but that he had never attempted intimacies with the girl, who she regarded almost as one of his own family.

She had been playing with his children during the day and had followed him to his office. He had left his family in a parked car nearby and had stepped in to make out his time card. His asserts that he was gone only for a short time. Medi-

Grammar Schools Award Diplomas to 121 Graduates

Greater Development of Rural Schools Advocated

"I have no sympathy for the person like the one from the east who recently said to me, 'I can see no future for the boys and girls of Iowa, because everywhere they look there is nothing but fields of corn,'" declared Agnes Samuelson, republican nominee for the office of state superintendent of public instruction, in her address to the 121 eighth grade graduates of Johnson county, yesterday afternoon. A crowded court room vigorously applauded the address.

"Be Real Citizens"
"My answer for the boys and girls of Iowa is: My eyes are keen, my ears are alert—nothing escapes them. My hands are restless, ceaselessly occupied in tearing apart and putting together. My feet are active, seeking truth and righteousness. My mind is active, seeking the highest ideals. My heart seeks friendship. I am a child."

Miss Samuelson urged the pupils to do all within their power to repay their teachers, parents, and the public for providing them opportunities to finish the first great step in their education.

Young People's Organizations to Stage Joint Picnic

The young people of all the churches in Iowa City are invited to attend a union young people's picnic Saturday, June 26, at the city park at 3 p.m.

The program consists of a number of games, baseball, volley ball and others, between teams of various societies. In the evening all those who wish to go swimming may make use of the Big Dipper.

Students who wish to attend are requested to register with their group before Saturday in order that the persons in charge may know how many to expect. Thomas Thompson, L3 of Iowa City, is chairman of the picnic committee.
