Mathematicians to Meet at Old Capitol Tomorrow Morning

Prominent Speakers to Attend First Math Convention Here

The first mathematics conference to be held at the University of Iowa will convene at old capitol tomorrow. Lectures will be given by prominent men in the field of mathematics including: Prof. W. H. Wilson, of the mathematics department; Mr. Alfred Davis, of St. Louis, Mo., and Prof. E. H. Taylor of the Eastern Illinois Teachers college, Charleston, Ill. Supplementary discussion periods will be conducted by Prof. H. L. Rietz, head of the department of mathematics here, and associates.

A 6 o'clock dinner at the Memorial Union tomorrow, will add a social touch to the conference.

Consider Student Needs

Although the discussion will have special reference to the teaching of mathematics in the high schools and junior high schools of Iowa, it will be of general interest to all teachers in the field. All instructors in mathematics and students who are prospective teachers in this line of work should profit by attending the sessions of the conference, according to Professor Rietz. The calling of this conference was made necessary by state-wide conditions and demands.

"Important work has been done during the last ten years in this country in the re-organization of mathematics to meet present-day conditions, but much still remains to be done," says Professor Rietz. "It is hoped that a conference of this kind will focus attention upon the issues involved to the end that we may adjust the teaching of mathematics to the needs of the student."

Present Questionnaire Results

Professor Wilson will talk on objectives of the branches of mathematics taught in high school. He has been on leave of absence from the university this year on account of bad health, but will return to aid in the work of the conference.

Mr. Alfred Davis, Soldan High school, St. Louis, Mo., is expected to bring some important investigative results to the conference. He has submitted a questionnaire to the leading business men of Chicago and St. Louis, the findings of which will be presented. The purpose of the investigation is to determine the place of high school mathematics in the education of the young men and women employed in the business world.

Edward Stewart, Clinton Insurance Agent Murdered

Suspects Under Observation; Police Believe Robbery Motive for Slaying

(By The Associated Press)
CLINTON, Oct. 6.—Several suspects tonight were under observation in connection with the slaying today of Edward J. Stewart, an insurance collector, who was shot and killed in an effort to conceal the crime.

Police accept the theory that robbery was the motive. Stewart is believed to have carried about $100, but his records were scattered during his struggle with the assailant and an accurate check has not been made.

Several persons have furnished police with descriptions of a man seen in Stewart's company shortly before the shooting.

The collector was accosted by an unidentified man in front of the home of Mrs. Howard L. Omer. They departed together and a short time later, Mrs. Catherine Goldsmith, who resides near the bluff from which Stewart's body was thrown, heard a shot and Stewart's screams. In her attempt to find the injured man, Mrs. Goldsmith circled the bluff and saw a young man descending by a pathway. Before they met, however, the man retraced his steps and descended in another direction. While Mrs. Goldsmith was continuing her search, she heard another shot and saw the stranger disappear in the brush.

The police theory is that the robber shot the victim, threw him over the brow of the hill in a struggle that ensued and later descended to shoot Stewart again and complete the robbery.

Stewart was about 40 years old.

Cursing Operator Gets Curious Cryptic Telegram

"Why the hell—" was the startling exclamation Iowa's radio announcer sent out into the ether Saturday during the game between the University of Iowa and the Colorado State Teachers college. He did it unwittingly, perhaps, but vehemently, nevertheless. From Osage, a town up in northeastern Iowa, where a group of football fans hung anxiously over the radio, a cryptic and anonymous answer came over telegraph. It said, "Please finish the remark started during the first half." A puzzled operator read it and then broadcast it in the hope of receiving a more lucid message.

It was later in the game that his hope was gratified. After "Buzz" Hogan had made his contribution of a kick, incidentally adding three points to Iowa's score, the announcer received another message worded, "Curiosity satisfied. You meant, 'Why the hell wasn't Hogan put in earlier?'" It was signed "Osage listener."

Honorary Society Outlines Program

Six Meetings Feature 1926-27 Schedule of Sigma Xi

The executive committee of Sigma Xi, honorary scientific society, has outlined a program for the coming year.

The first meeting in the senate chamber of Old Capitol on Oct. 20 will be open to all interested. An address will be given by the retiring president, Prof. Bird T. Baldwin.

The first soirée will be held on Nov. 17, will be either with the geology or botany department, as will the second on Jan. 12. On Feb. 23, the annual banquet and initiation will form the program.

Two Other Parties

The two soirées will be given by psychology and child welfare departments. The last, on April 20, will be with the physics department.

Attention of the members is called to the fact that Nov. 17 is the first night of one of the university plays and since that is the date of a Sigma Xi meeting, those wishing to attend the play should reserve theatre tickets for Nov. 18.

Membership of Society

Sigma Xi is an honorary, scientific society in which membership is attained by ability and promise in research. There are two classes of members, full members and associate members. Associate members are selected from a group of people doing degree work, whose research is not yet of a grade to entitle them to a full membership. It is the custom of the society to select in the spring seniors majoring in science who have received distinction in scholarship and who give promise of research ability.

Departments in the university who have representatives in Sigma Xi and from which members are elected are: chemistry, mathematics, zoology, geology, botany, psychology, child welfare, physics and the colleges of applied science and medicine.

Daugherty Jury to Decide on Oil Case Today

Defense Maintains Innocence of Client in Accepting Fees in Oil Conspiracy

(By The Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Harry M. Daugherty and Thomas W. Miller did not conspire against the government in Sept. 1921 for bribes promised them from a fee of John T. King's because King had no expectation of receiving any fee at that time," attorney William Rand asserted in his summation for Miller today.

The conspiracy case, in which Daugherty and Miller are charged with withholding their best services in permitting release of $7,000,000 impounded assets of the American Metal company reached the summation stage shortly before noon when the defense unexpectedly rested its case.

Lengthy Defense

Rand spoke to the jury in defense of his client from 2:30 o'clock until 5:30 o'clock and had not concluded when Judge Mack adjourned court. He will be followed by Max D. Steur, summing up for Daugherty, and by United States attorney Buckner for the government. This may be completed tomorrow and Judge Mack will then charge the jury and give it the case.

If necessary a Saturday session will be held to enable the trial, which has lasted five weeks, to be completed this week.

Miller's counsel reached the climax of his afternoon's dissertation just before adjournment.

"If there was a conspiracy," he said, "it fell through before the claim went through Daugherty's office eight days too late to earn a penny."

Explains Fees

Rand explained to the jury an arrangement between King and Richard Merton, German copper magnate, who came here to arrange the release of the assets whereby King was to receive a fee of five percent of the $7,000,000 if the claim was awarded by one date, two and one-half percent if it were not allowed until a specified later date, and nothing at all beyond a retainer of $50,000 given him when the arrangement was made, if the claims did not go through before a later specified date.

The government claims that of $441,000 promised King for successful completion of his work, some $150,000 was used as bribes to gain the defendant's approval.

Browning Receives Bills for "Peaches" Clothing Purchases

Millionaire Anxious to Discover News of Vanished Girl

(By The Associated Press)
NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Edward W. Browning, 51-year old wealthy real estate operator and promoter, is still receiving bills for clothes bought by his school-girl wife just before she left him, but he has received no word from the girl. The latest bill, for $250 covering dresses which the 16-year old wife bought and had charged to Browning was received by him today. Last Saturday he received bills for $6,000 for frocks, wraps, silk stockings, and other feminine apparel which were purchased on Friday by "Peaches," as Browning called his wife.

Peaches May Star

"Peaches" has not yet said whether she was considering accepting an offer, reported to have been made from Chicago, to appear on the stage for $2,000 a week. Browning has insisted that their separation is only temporary.

Late this afternoon, Browning's secretary said that "Peaches" had returned, presumably from New Jersey, to the home of her mother in west 15th street, Manhattan. The secretary said this information was contained in a telegram received at Browning's office, but he did not say from whom the telegram was received.

Still Waiting

At the same time the secretary gave out the following statement in behalf of Browning: "Mr. Edward W. Browning is still maintaining apartments at the Kew Gardens Inn, Long Island for Mrs. Browning and himself. He is also maintaining a city home for Mrs. Browning, and himself at the hotel Emerson."

This is the hotel where Browning has been living alone for the past few days.

Y. M. C. A. Holds Freshman Banquet

Harry Terrell Gives Object of College to Freshmen

Fifty freshmen, representing all phases of campus activities, met at a freshman Y. M. C. A. banquet in the Memorial Union last evening for the purpose of bringing together the men and creating an interest in student activities.

During the dinner, popular and college songs were sung under the direction of Toastmaster Ralph Bender.

Lyman C. White, the first speaker of the evening, related some of his experiences while in the employment of the Ford Motor company at Detroit, Mich. Mr. White is a member of the Industrial Reserve group of college students.

Tells of World "Y" Meet

Raymond Hamilton, one of the Iowa delegates to the World's Y. M. C. A. conference, held at Helsinki, Finland, followed with a review of the conference. The main topic discussed at this conference was "Youth and the Changing World."

Harry Terrell, secretary of the Y work at the University of Iowa, concluded the speeches for the evening with an appeal to the students to back "Old Gold" and all student activities.

"This is not a Godless university," said Mr. Terrell. "Many persons throughout the state have such impressions, but they are wrong. We have the finest students here that one could find anywhere."

"Building loyalty is the hardest job possible in any school. We are here not only to establish loyalty but also a spirit of unselfishness. We are here to establish a friendly Christian spirit and help men to serve each other. Just how we solve today's problems determines our future success in this world. Men are men for what they are. Numbers do not count. It is the quality."

"To Uphold Loyalty"

"I am an Iowa man and you are too. We must uphold the loyalty of Old Gold, and I issue to you, the freshmen, this challenge. To not only keep the honor of the university sacred, but to further the development of a greater spirit of loyalty and to make your coming four years the foundation for a useful life."

Prof. C. W. Hart, assistant professor of commerce; Prof. W. J. Dennis, romance language department; and Herbert Meyer, graduate student, were the guests of the evening.

A short business meeting was held immediately after the banquet and the following were appointed to complete plans for the coming year: Raymond Hamilton, John Jay O'Brien, Paul Weaver, Louis M. Rich, Ted Rieger, Emil Koerber, Vern Hunt, James Kecker, Carl Becker and Marvin Wright.

Adler Starts Fund for the Family of Kewanee "Heir"

Committees Appointed to Care for 500 Young Guests

Philip D. Adler, editor and publisher of the Kewanee (Ill.) Daily Star-Courier and former editor of The Daily Iowan, today announced a subscription fund for the wife and four children of John Cooper, Kewanee iron worker and would-be millionaire, who left his family penniless following his exposure as the perpetrator of a hoax.

Less than a month ago Cooper announced a $9,000,000 inheritance and the gift of a $250,000 church and a $150,000 nurse's home to the city which was the object of much praise from the people of Kewanee. At that time he threatened to sue Adler for $1,000,000 because Adler called his supposed inheritance a "hoax"; but when Cooper's family became public charges Adler started the fund to be used for the current expense of the family. The fund is meeting with liberal response from the people of Kewanee.

Democratic Hopes For Presidential Timber Improved

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP)—David Ladd Rockwell, campaign manager for Wm. G. McAdoo two years ago, said today that Ohio democrats would undoubtedly favor a favorite candidate for president in 1928 if they are able to elect Altee Pomereoy to the United States senate and to re-elect Gov. Donohue. Al Smith's chances in the south and west are no better than they were two years ago, in Mr. Rockwell's opinion. He said, however, that 1928 was too far away to talk much about. "E. T. Meredith, of Iowa, is of presidential size," Mr. Rockwell said, "and will surely be a candidate, if he will permit the use of his name."

Swat King Slams Three Balls Over Fence for Victory

Babe Breaks Former Records in Ten to Five Win

By ALAN J. GOULD (Special Correspondent)

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—The mighty bat of burly Babe Ruth knocked the slipping Yankees back into favoritism in the world's series here today when he crashed out three home runs to lead the American league champions to a thrilling 10 to 5 victory over the Cardinals.

Stepping to the plate in the first inning after two men were out, Ruth knocked his way into more world's series fame with a crashing drive over the right field stands for his initial home run of the series. Again he came to the plate in the third frame with two men out. He caught Flint Rhem's slow ball and sent it flying over the right field fence. The fans who had booed him since his arrival in St. Louis now cheered as the Bambino demonstrated his marvelous ability with the club.

Bambino's Day

In five times at the plate, Ruth was purposely walked twice with men on bases less his circuit blows should score more than one run. But once he fooled them and, after having the balls pitched to him, sent his third homer screaming into the center field stands, scoring Combs ahead of him.

The ardor of the St. Louis fans was somewhat dimmed today following their decisive trimming by the Yankees, and interest in the series has abated. Ticket speculators are left with 1300 pasteboards on their hands and the dope favors the Hugmen to win tomorrow.

Special A. P. Correspondent

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6 (AP)—Babe Ruth led the Yankees out of the Missouri woods today with the greatest exhibition of home run hitting any world series has ever seen.

Three battering ram blows from the Babe's mighty bludgeon cleared all barriers and set fire to a Yankee attack that crushed the Cardinals by a score of 10 to 5 in the fourth game of the world championship baseball battle.

Today was a field day for Ruth, the greatest he has ever had in world series competition and one of the most spectacular of his wallowing career. His three terrific homers not only lifted the Yankees out of their hitting slump but figured in the shattering of seven world series records.

Pitchers Parade

Another record crowd for Sportsman's park, a jam that numbered 28,825 and broke yesterday's mark, came in the expectation of seeing the Cardinals continue their winning streak. Instead they saw Ruth lead an onslaught that started in the first inning and continued unabated throughout a fray in which five Cardinal pitchers paraded to the mound. They saw a game of freak plays filled with good and bad baseball, but most of all they saw the Babe at the peak of his glory. At the finish, these Cardinal rooters had become so aroused that they yelled for Ruth to make a fourth home run when he came to bat in the eighth and bood Hallahan, St. Louis pitcher, when he walked the Yankee slugger.

Rhem Victim Twice

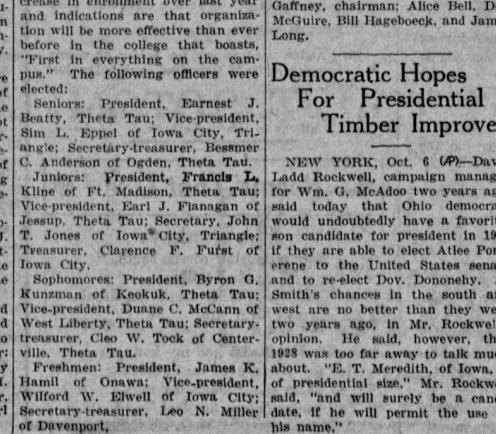

Nothing like the Babe's clouting has ever been seen before in baseball's classic. His first two circuit wallops came in the first and third innings, each time off the first ball pitched by Flint Rhem. The young Cardinal right hander tried a fast curve in the opening frame and the Babe lofted it high over the upper deck of the right field grand stand. In the third inning, Rhem shifted to a slow ball of the variety that had been poison to Ruth previously in the series, but the Babe nailed it and drove it on a line far out over the roof of the right field bleachers.

No one was on base to benefit from either of these clouts but Earl Smith, who had just come out of Herman Bell in the sixth inning. The count was three and two this time, as Bell worked cautiously on the Yankee star, but the Cardinal twirler made the mistake of trying to slip a fast one over the plate.

First Time in Series

Ruth took a toe hold and smashed the ball on a line and high into the spectators in the center field bleachers. It was the most resounding whack of the three, and the long distance record for Sportsman's park. Never before has the Babe connected out his third homer in one game where a pennant or world series was involved, although he has done it in exhibitions. He picked a dramatic and timely spot to do the trick this afternoon but he made the statisticians groggy trying to tally up the records that tumbled as a result.

Dean Burge Talks to Freshmen Girls on Budgeting Plan

"Every college girl should keep a budget, because of the desponsibility she owes to those who have sacrificed money which represents time and effort, in order that she may have the advantages of a college education," declared Dean Ad-halide Burge in her talk before freshmen girls at the auditorium yesterday afternoon, on the subject of "Honesty and Budgeting."

Dean Burge stressed the necessity of honesty in obtaining excuses for absences, in all phases of school work and business transactions.

Mrs. Burge read extracts from a discussion on this matter of budgeting written by Prof. Sarah Strutevante, of Columbia university. This authority laid down four rules for successful budgeting. They were: know the amount of your income; have a spending plan, live honestly by your plans, and readjust your plans as the occasion demands.

It was suggested that the girls budget their money, time, and effort wisely, so that the interpretations of college bred as "A four year loaf on father's dough" would not apply to them when they had completed their college course.

Baldwin Talks on Child Development

Tells Kiwanians That Iowa Pioneered in Child Welfare

The aim of the university's child welfare research station is to provide ways of developing children to their maximum, Dr. Bird T. Baldwin, director of the station, told members of the Kiwanis club at their weekly luncheon yesterday. He traced the history of child welfare work, with emphasis on Iowa's part as a pioneer in its development.

"At present the department," Dr. Baldwin told the Kiwanians, "has twenty-five graduates who are doing research work. The schools at Ames and Cedar Falls also have smaller groups to carry on this work in connection with the university."

"Since the work was started here other large educational institutions have organized departments and now there are about six schools in the United States engaged in the project," he said.

The Kiwanis club voted to meet with the Chamber of Commerce next Monday noon to help carry on the Civic week program.

"The Petter"

By BEATRICE BURTON
Author of "Love Bound," "Her Man."

MERRY LOCKE, just twenty falls in love with a MAN IN GRAY whom she sees every day when she leaves Finch's school of business to go out for lunch. To fall in love is nothing new to Merry. She has been doing it ever since she was sixteen. But this time she feels that she has found the One and Only person for her.

DERRICK JONES, a college boy who lives next door, once seemed to Merry to be the One and Only. But she's sorry now that she let Derrick and others make love to her. MOMS had always told her and her three sisters not to kiss a man until they became engaged. But Merry can't see what good this advice was to HELEN, the oldest sister, who is still unmarried—or to CASSIE, whose beau, MORLEY KAUFMAN, breaks engagements with her whenever he feels like it.

ding anniversary. Dad brings home some perfume and fruit for Moms, who scolds him. They call from Tony Gaines' office and tell Merry that he has gone out of town and cannot see her. Merry wonders if he'll return.

CHAPTER X
The day was hot and sultry, but Helen's teeth were chattering as if she were chilled to the marrow. "Dad—he's had a stroke down at the store," she managed to blurt out at last. "They're bringing him home."

Merry gave a little gasp. She couldn't believe it. Out of doors the sun was shining brilliantly on the smooth lawns and the leafy trees. Derrick Jones' small brother was riding his bicycle down the street. It wasn't the kind of a day to suggest sickness and misfortune to Merry's young mind.

One night Merry and Jinny, the youngest sister, go to the circus with Derrick Jones. They find themselves sitting next to the Man in Gray, and during a panic in the tent, he carries Merry out of the crowd. He takes her home, and Merry lets him kiss her goodnight. The next day when they meet he tells Merry how much he cares for her, and that love at first sight is the only kind worth having, and then asks her to marry him. In a burst of confidence, Merry tells him that she's been in love before, and that it never lasted long. Disgusted, he takes her home, but later he comes to see her and asks her to marry him if she still cares about about him, in six months. Merry says she will but decides not to tell her family anything about him until they've had a chance to meet him.

The night when he is coming to call on her at home happens to be DAD'S AND MOM'S wed-ny called. "You needn't come down!"

From the upstairs windows Merry and Helen watched Bill Hepworth lift Dad out of his car and carry him, as if he were a baby, across the lawn.

Bill Hepworth's father owned the wholesale grocery store where Dad was a clerk.

Bill was big and broad-shouldered and blond. Not good-looking, but nice-looking in a quiet, pleasant sort of way. His collars were always too big for him and showed his large Adam's apple, and his suits always looked as if they ought to have the floor dusted from them.

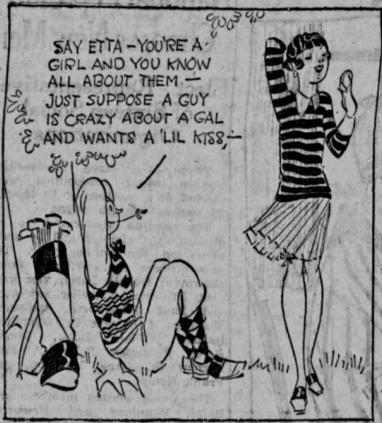

Merry had never liked him, but now as she saw him lay Dad tenderly on the bed, she suddenly had a warm, friendly feeling for him.

Dad's eyes were closed, and his face was red and swollen. He breathed heavily and snored gently at each breath.

Helen began to cry as she sat down on the bed beside him and began to unlace his shoes.

"You'll have to help me with him, Bill," she sobbed after a minute. "My fingers are all thumbs, I'm so nervous; I'll telephone for a doctor. Oh, I wish Moms were here!"

and slammed the screen door behind her as she rushed into the house.

"How do you do, Doctor?" Merry greeted the old doctor as he came up the stairs, "I'll take you right up to my father."

As they reached the head of the stairs Moms was just opening the door of the darkened room.

"Dearest—" Merry heard her say, and she wouldn't have believed that a tone like that could have been wrung from her mother. In it was love and fear and heartbreak.

The doctor followed Moms into the room where Dad lay, and the door closed behind them.

Bill Hepworth was standing beside the hall window. Bill's arms were around Helen and her head was buried on his shoulder.

It was not until that instant that she realized that the sound of loud and heavy breathing was no longer coming from the closed room.

There was a curious, unearthly silence in the house.

Merry did not need to have any one tell her what had just happened. She knew that Dad was dead.

There is one comfort in being poor. Poverty doesn't give people much time to brood over their troubles.

And so it was with the Locke family.

The girls spent the morning after Dad's death dyeing their dresses black and borrowing mourning veils from Mrs. Jones and from Mrs. Ellsworth, a widow who lived across the street.

Less than a week after the funeral they were faced with the immediate and pressing necessity for money. Now that Dad was gone, Cassie was the only wage earner in the family, and she was used to spending most of her salary on herself.

"Thank goodness, you're through with your business course and can go right to work!" Moms said to Merry one night when they were in the dining room. The parlor and living room still smelled of the funeral flowers, and Moms couldn't bear to sit in them.

Merry knew that the moment she had been dreading for two weeks had come. She knew that she would have to confess to her mother, at last, that she had failed in her speed tests and would have to take part of her typewriting course over. She braced herself for it.

"Moms—" she began in a low tone, and as she said it the sound of the front doorbell pealed through the dark house.

She ran to answer it. A man stood among the shadows of the front porch—a man in a gray suit. Beyond him, at the curbstone, the lights of a long roadster gleamed like tiger's eyes. It was Tony Gaines.

She opened the screen door and tried to speak. But all she could do was make a funny little frunting noise in her throat.

He came into the house and stood there, just inside the screen, holding her close.

"There, there! Don't cry, little thing!" he whispered into her neck, where the hair rose soft and silky from the warm white nape. "Did you miss me as much as that?"

Then all at once the light in the hall flashed on and Moms stood in the doorway. Her hand was on the button that controlled the lights, and her eyes blazed like coals above her black dress. They were fixed on Tony's surprised face.

"What's this, young man?" she asked, furiously, "what does this mean?"

She got up from the bed and turned toward the door.

And then an astonishing thing happened. She turned abruptly to Bill Hepworth and threw herself on his breast, crying and sobbing!

With eyes like saucers, Merry gazed at her, too startled to speak or move.

But Bill Hepworth didn't seem at all surprised. He put one arm around Helen's square shoulders and patted the top of her head with the other.

"There, there, there! Brace up!" he said soothingly. "This is no time to break down, my girl! You'd better telephone for the doctor right away!"

Helen dried her eyes and walked out of the room without another word. Merry followed her downstairs, where Jinny was waiting for her.

"What's the matter with him?" Jinny whispered, and Merry shook her head and shrugged her shoulders.

They sat there on the bottom step of the stairs while Helen phoned for Dr. Bateman and looked at each other with wide frightened eyes.

"I should think you two could find something to do instead of sitting there like bumps on a log!" Helen said to them sharply, as she brushed by them on her way upstairs. "Can't one of you call Cassie up and ask her to come home?"

But neither of them stirred. They just sat there with their arms around each other and listened to the dreadful snoring sound that Dad made as he breathed.

It was the first time there had ever been a serious illness in the rambling old house.

"We just can't afford to get sick," Moms had often said in her firm way. "It's money in our pocket to keep well!" And she saw to it that they all wore rubbers when it rained, stayed in bed when they had colds, and seldom had enough rich food to upset their stomachs.

"I wish Moms were here now," Merry said as the sound of Dad's difficult breathing became louder with every moment.

She got up and went out on the front porch to look for her, and there she was coming up Chester street with her arms full of bundles.

"Where have you been?" Merry asked her, running to meet her.

Moms gave a half-ashamed little laugh. "I've been downtown," she said. "I took back that perfume that your Dad gave me on our anniversary, and changed it for some things that I needed. What do you suppose he paid for it? Ten dollars! Ten dollars for perfume for me! I exchanged it for mothballs and one of those cedar bags to put winter coats in."

They had reached the house now. Merry was trying to screw up her courage to tell her mother about Dad when Dr. Bateman's car flew into the driveway and stopped.

Moms turned and stared at it.

"Who called the doctor? Is someone sick?" she asked, and Merry saw that her chin quivered as she spoke.

"Dad—" she began, but Moms did not wait to hear the rest of her sentence. She dropped her bundles down on the seat of the porch-swing

Ruth's Bat Drives Gloom From Yank Baseball Quarters

King of Swat Enjoys Slaps on Back by Smiling Mates

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY
ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6 (AP)—There were no moans and groans seeping under the door of the Yankees' dressing room after today's victory. Instead there was much hilarity and back-slapping, with Babe Ruth hugely enjoying the whacks on his shoulders.

Miller Huggins, the Yankee leader, broke down and confessed that he made a perfectly sensible prediction yesterday to the effect that when the Yankees started hitting, things would be different.

Furthermore, he feels the facing the Cardinals assimilated today has broken their spirit and that the Yanks will breeze into the championship.

The edge, he believes, now belongs to the Yanks.

"My statement that when our club started to hit, we'd start to win seems to have come true," Huggins said. "I look to see the boys keep the hitting up in the next two or three games. If they do, we can't miss winning the championship. I shall send Herb Pennington a good rest since beating the Cardinals in New York last Saturday."

Ruth whistled a snatch from "Bye, Bye, Blackbird" while climbing into his street clothes. The Bambino was happy as a boy, proud of his performance of smacking out three homers, a feat never before equaled in a world's series.

Gloom Hits Little Hawk Grid Camp

Prospects for an Iowa City high victory in their forthcoming battle at Grinnell Saturday, look exceedingly gloomy. Zeilhammer and Brown are still reeling on the sidelines with injuries, and probably neither will be able to play.

Coach Souchek had the regular backfield scrimmaging against the first string line, to the disadvantage of the latter. The backs had little trouble tearing through for long gains.

Grinnell has won both games this season, defeating Toledo high 7-0 last Saturday. The game was more one-sided than the score would indicate. Toledo made only one first down and that on a ten yard pass.

Grinnell's backfield seemed rather slow at times but the line presents a stonewall defense. Turner, in the backfield, did the best work of the quartet while Case, center, played a star game for the line.

Bob Burrett, former Iowa cage star, is coaching the Little Pioneers.

Permits to build garages were taken out yesterday by Charles Wickenke and Mable S. Bales. The first was for $300 and will be built on East Burlington street, while the latter was for $500 and will be built on South Dodge. Ed. Mower will be the contractor for the Bales' garage.

Varsity Scores Two Touchdowns Over Yearlings

Coach Burton Ingwersen sent his varsity gridgers against the frosh yesterday in an intensive scrimmage testing out several combinations of backfield men. A varied attack, using line plays and forward passes, gave the varsity two touchdowns over the frosh in the first thirty minutes of play.

In the backfield Kutsch, Grimm, Skelley, and Schmidt started for the varsity, all of whom showed well against the yearlings. Hogan, Byers, Bunn, and Arml were later used and continued to make good gains through the husky frosh line.

Brown was at his usual position over the ball, Hines and Olson at guards, Nelson and Jessen, tackles, and Rice and Captain Smith were at ends. Moore, Armstrong, and Woodruff were also used at the wing jobs during the scrimmage.

Kutsch and Hogan practiced punting before the scrimmage, both men getting fairly good yardage on their kicks. Skelley and Don Smith alternated at throwing forward passes to the ends and backs.

An intensive drill in blocking and charging was on the program for the linemen.

Diamondmen Play Seven Inning Game

Baseball candidates were sent through a long batting session Wednesday afternoon, followed by a seven inning game. Henn did the twirling for one team, while Muhoney was on the slab for the others. Henn's team won 8 to 2. The game was featured by the heavy hitting of both teams. Sahn won the honor of being the heaviest hitter.

The candidates are rapidly rounding into condition. Pitchers are working in mid-season form, while the rest of the men are also showing the knowledge they have gained during fall practice.

Twenty-eight men have been reporting daily to Coach Vogel. This is the largest turnout for fall baseball in the history of this University. Many more men will be out in the spring that are out for football.

Edler will appear in Vaudeville Acts

DES MOINES, Oct. 6 (AP)—Gertie Edler, first woman to swim the English channel, completed a tour of middle western cities with an exhibition here today and will go direct to New York City, her manager announced tonight, to open a series of theater engagements. She will appear, he said, in a vaudeville act with several Olympic aquatic stars, including Helen Wainwright.

Scouting Defended By Big Ten Coach

Northwestern Mentor Says it Prevents Disadvantages

[By The Associated Press]
CHICAGO, Oct. 6 — Unfair practices and misunderstanding between rival football teams would result from general agreements on a no scouting policy, Glenn Thistlewaite, Northwestern university coach, declared today in defending the existing practice. Enthusiastic alumni carrying "tips" to their alma maters on the methods of rival teams would also make the plan impracticable, he said.

Agitation for the no scouting agreements sprang up after Princeton and Yale entered into an agreement barring scouting.

Such a plan would also place an extra burden on the players in that they would be required to learn virtually every type of defense in order to meet whatever attack their opponents might launch, he said.

"Here in the Big Ten" he said, "scouting is carried on legitimately. Each school provides good seats for rival scouts and every consideration is given them. If this were done away with it would be necessary to practice daily behind bolted gates to prevent unfair methods."

Rock Island Railroad Outlines Extensive Building Program

Officials Meet to Plan for Changes

Will Enlarge Station Platform to Capitol Street, with Two Shelters on Sides to Provide for Increased Crowds

Rock Island officials were in the city yesterday to make a survey in response to recommendations made by Robert N. Carson for improving the Wright street station grounds. A conference was held in the afternoon at which Mr. A. T. Abbott, division superintendent, Mr. W. H. Petersen, chief engineer of maintenance, Mr. F. G. Thompson, division engineer, Mr. H. D. Breene, agent, and Robert N. Carson were present.

The improvements proposed include widening of the present platform and lengthening it, so that it will extend from Capitol street to a point east of the station where the north and south division tracks of the Rock Island pass underneath the main line. The entire platform will be surfaced with brick and lighted throughout during the arrival and departure of passenger trains.

Extend Platform
The standpipes which serve the locomotives with water will be moved east and west of their respective positions, that the center of trains will stop opposite the waiting rooms.
It is also planned to utilize the present grass plots east and west of the station for platform space, except that a small area at the east will be retained for the monuments and plates commemorating the services of the late Hon. Peter A. Dey and the late Dr. Wm. D. Middleton, connected with the early history of the railroad.

Wright street to the north is to be widened by setting the south curb lines to the south a few feet. It is possible canopies may be erected at east and west end of the platform facing Dubuque and Clinton streets respectively, as a shelter for passengers and mail in inclement weather. With the improvements contemplated, Iowa City will appear

New Field House Nears Completion

Belting Gives Vivid Description of Gigantic Structure; Plans January 13, 14, 15 for Dedication and Athletic Events

The new $500,000 field house now under construction on the west side of the river will be dedicated Jan. 13, 14, and 15, to the use of the student body, according to a statement made by Paul E. Belting, director of athletics. The department of athletics will open it for use by Dec. 1, however.

Bleachers along the north and south sides with seating capacity of 2,000 will be the largest in the world for basketball, stated Director Belting.

Eight Tennis Courts
Eight tennis courts which may be turned into a small practice field 150 feet by 400 feet for football during rainy or cold weather will also be built in the field house as will a straight-a-way of 100 yards for track meets.

State Board to Dedicate
At the January dedication the governor of the state, with the state board of education will be present, as well as representatives of each of the Big Ten schools. On Saturday night, Jan. 15, Iowa will play Michigan and on Jan. 14, there will be either an inter-collegiate or inter-schoolastic swimming meet.
