Organize Rescue Parties to Aid 6,000 Homeless

Clear Havana Streets of Storm Debris, Reconstruct

[By The Associated Press] HAVANA, Oct. 23.—The people of Havana have now had time to acquire some definite idea of the vast destruction to life and property wrought by the great hurricane of last Wednesday. All efforts are being turned to succor the injured and shelter the homeless.

From the first early reports until the present the casualty lists have steadily mounted. The dead throughout the islands are believed to number not less than 500, with a possibility that that figure will go much higher, with approximately 10,000 persons injured and a majority of the people outside of Havana in need of assistance.

The Cuban Red Cross tonight appealed to the American Red Cross for additional funds for relief work. The Red Cross announces that approximately 600 were killed, 9,000 injured and 6,000 families made homeless by the hurricane.

In Havana the estimate is 200 dead. In Marianno, which adjoins Havana on the west, the estimate is 100 dead.

200 Bodies in Water

The area of the storm at its worst was confined to Havana province and the western part of Matanzas province, but both Santa Clara and Pinar del Rio provinces were in the path of the hurricane and suffered severely.

More than 200 bodies are believed to be lying in the waters of the harbor or floating out to sea. Twenty-eight already have been taken from Havana bays, but undoubtedly many are imprisoned in the ships sunk by the storm.

Not a dock or wharf along the shores of the bay escaped serious damage. The only estimated officials were able to make a vague statement that the loss would run into many millions.

Queries About Americans

Messengers of inquiry have poured into the American embassy from relatives of persons residing on the Isle of Pines, where 17 Americans and many natives perished. Up to this evening neither the embassy nor the consulate had received anything but the first official casualty list, which is known to be incomplete.

Two coast guard patrol boats are on their way from Key West to Bahama where, of more than 3,000 houses, only fifty are standing and these are badly damaged.

Large piles of construction material appeared today in front of many of the downtown buildings damaged by the hurricane, and the streets in that section had been cleared of the litter of wreckage. In outlying districts the effects of the storm are still visible. Numerous trees lie on the sidewalks and roadways, with paths cut through them.

Hamilton Stewart Funeral Service Held Tomorrow

Funeral services will be held at the Hohenschuh mortuary, tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. for Hamilton Stewart Sample of Iowa City, who died at his home in Manville Heights, Friday evening at 10:45. Burial will be in the Oakland cemetery.

The deceased would have been 71 years of age next month. He had been a resident of Johnson county for fifty years, and for the last twenty years a resident of Iowa City.

He is survived by his wife and four children, Mrs. Alta B. Kettlewell of Pasadena, Cal.; Mathias W. Sample of Chiquicamatla, Chile, S. A.; Delmar M. Sample of Iowa City; and Carol Z. Sample of Iowa City.

British Sloop Succumbs to Bermuda Hurricane

LONDON, Oct. 23 (AP)—The admiralty announced that H.M.S. Valerian, a navy sloop of 1,250 tons, sank in the hurricane south of Bermuda. Twenty survivors are accounted for.

The British sloop Valerian was recommissioned at Bermuda in July 1925. She carried a complement of from 85 to 106 men. She was of 1,250 tons and indicated horse power of 2,000. The Royal Navy list gives her commander as A. E. H. Wright.

The Valerian carried two four-inch guns and four three-pounders.

Quake Terrorizes Armenia; Hundreds Killed

Thousands Injured, 300 Buried Alive by Heavy Temblor

Leninakan Wiped Out as Earth Swallows Town; Orphanage Miraculously Saved

[By The Associated Press] LENINAKAN, Armenia, Oct. 23.—A terrible earthquake which shook the whole of the Armenian republic Friday night, killed or buried alive more than 300 persons in and around Leninakan (formerly Alexandropol.) Half of the town was destroyed and hardly a building escaped damage.

The injured are believed to run into the thousands, although in most cases the injuries were comparatively slight. The confusion and terror among the population was heightened by erroneous reports that Mount Ararat of Biblical renown, was erupting.

The death toll undoubtedly would have been far greater had not the principal shocks been preceded by lesser tremors which drove the residents into the streets. In this way they escaped the worst effect of the later shocks, which continued at intervals until midnight. Shocks were felt at Batumi, in the republic of Georgia, about 130 miles northwest of Leninakan as late as 11 o'clock at night. That a still greater tragedy was averted was due to the solidity of the old Czarist building lodging about 9,000 Armenian orphans under the care of the Near East relief, who together with officials of the Near East relief are believed to have escaped unhurt.

Irregular rumblings continued throughout the night, terrorizing the inhabitants, who took refuge in the fields, parks and roadways. At the very first shocks the American nurses in charge of the Armenian Orphanages showed fine presence of mind and courage, rushing through the darkness to their posts and calming the fears of the thousands of children under their care. The children were marshalled for immediate removal and excellent discipline was maintained. The task of rushing the children to places of safety was greatly hampered by the fact that a majority of them were asleep and therefore, virtually without clothing.

Local Broadcasting Equipment Creates Havoc in Radio Waves

By LOUISE GLACKEMEYER
State of the sizzling, popping variety, and plenty of it too, disturbs radio reception within a fifteen mile radius of Iowa City.

A large amount of this interference is due to the ancient type of transmitter used at the station at the air mail field, according to Winfield W. Salisbury, physics research assistant.

20 Years Out of Date
This Polson arc transmitter is approximately fifteen to twenty years out of date. Though it has a two kilowatt capacity it is being operated at seven kilowatts. This overload produces a large amount of harmonics or extraneous wave lengths, that break in upon other wave lengths and interfere with local radio reception.

This interference is most noticeable with stations that use the lower wave lengths of 300 meters and less.

No Money for Equipment

The reason for using the old transmitter dates back to the founding of the air mail service, when the post office department lacked funds to adequately equip stations throughout the country.

To save expense a large amount of old equipment was taken over from the navy. It was out of date and could no longer be used by them, but is still in use at the Iowa station and in a great many stations over the United States, says Mr. Salisbury.

Need New Vacuum Tube

A new vacuum tube transmitter or the proper arrangement of filters on the old transmitter would eliminate this interference.

The operators at the air mail station are aware of the trouble caused by their transmitter and try to avoid using it as much as possible at hours when other stations are on the air. However they must send out weather reports, reports of planes, and answers to messages from other stations.

Lack Funds

An appropriation from congress will be necessary to supply air mail stations through out the country with new equipment. Although the air mail has been self supporting since the time of its establishment, it does not possess sufficient funds to equip the numerous stations.

Carl Menzer, announcer at WSUL, states that the use of the old style transmitter does not affect broadcasting there.

Sensational New Invention

Staggering possibilities may lie behind the new device discovered by Dr. W. D. Coolidge (no relation to the president of Schenectady, N. Y., scientist. It's a ray with a power greater than all the radium in the world; able, it is already proven, to turn sugar into acid; solidify liquids; translate gas to powder, etc. Doctor Coolidge (insert) calls it the Cathode ray; one of the tubes is seen in the hands of an assistant.

Rockne Reserves Subdue Wildcats in Final Stanza

[By The Associated Press] EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 23.—Notre Dame vanquished Northwestern 6 to 0 today, after the teams had battled for more than three periods on even terms. Rockne's reserves succeeded where his heaviest batteries failed, and two forward passes by Parisien, one to Walsh, a substitute end, for fifty yards, and another to Niemic, for 15 yards and a touchdown, constituted the whole of Notre Dame's drive to victory.

Notre Dame Rallies With Passes to Beat Purple

Rockne's first string backs, Edwards, Hearndon, Flanagan and Wynno went into the game in the second quarter and strove in vain for two periods to pierce Northwestern's defense.

Wilson Receives Minor Injuries; Sentman, Bane Unhurt as Car Swerves to Ditch

The accident happened one half mile past the children's hospital. John Sentman, Coralville, and Earl Bane, living on the Coralville road who were riding in the car at the time of the accident were uninjured.

According to Mr. Wilson the car was going at a rate of about twenty miles an hour when the steering gear caught an ditch car became unmanageable. Before he could put on the brakes the car had swung into the ditch.

Case of "Nerves" Makes Suicide of Linn Grove Teacher

ALTA, Oct. 23 (AP)—A nervous breakdown is believed to have been the cause of the suicide by shooting of Miss Dorothy Kieselburg, aged 24, a high school teacher at Linn Grove, but whose home is here. She took her life at the home of her parents this morning.

Last night she came home from Linn Grove to spend the week-end and this morning appeared in good spirits. She went out and bought meat for the noon meal and on her return home went to a cob shed and fired a bullet into her temple.

J. J. Osuna, Porto Rican Professor, Visits Iowa's College of Education

"Some day we Porto Ricans expect to serve as a connecting link between North and South America, as our blood, our language, and our traditions are the same," said Mr. J. J. Osuna, head of the department of education at the University of Porto Rico who was here Friday and yesterday visiting and studying the department of education.

"Our people are not foreigners; they need no naturalization papers, but are citizens of this country just as much as is an Iowan or a Kansan. Some of them would prefer to be independent but this group is small, as nearly all of them are loyal Americans," he continued.

Of his people, Mr. Osuna said they might some day be able to serve the United States to a great extent in the diplomatic service. They take but a minor part in that field now.

Mr. Osuna was impressed with the staff of able young men who are in the department of education here. Among the people whom he interviewed were Miss Bessie Pierce of the department of history, Prof. Claude J. Lapp of the department of physics, and members of the staff in the department of education.

"The largest building program is being carried out in this university of any that I have visited recently," he said after having been taken about the campus by Prof. Elmer T. Peterson.

At eleven o'clock Friday morning a luncheon was given for him at which Professor Peterson, Dean Paul C. Packer and members of the

Sections B and C Win Quad Games

In a drizzling rain which made the field soggy and the ball almost impossible to hold, Section C defeated Section D, and Section B crushed Section A in the Quadrangle football tourney yesterday.

Soggy Field and Wet Ball Mar Grid Battles

The games were slow, but many good plays were worked despite numerous fumbles. In the first game Barge of Section D made a 48 yard run around right end but was downed on his own 20 yard line. In a series of line plunges D failed to make their yardage and lost the ball on downs.

Section C scored their first touchdown when McClintock took Godlove's pass and raced 33 yards for a touchdown. He kicked his own goal. After the kickoff a bad pass from center gave C the ball on the 20 yard line, and after a series of end runs and line plays, Godlove failed by inches to make a touchdown. D kicked out of danger. The final touchdown came towards the end of the game when Hanson blocked a punt and fell on it for a touchdown. Godlove failed to kick goal. Game ended C-13, D-0.

The second part of the double-header was unlike the first. Section B started out with a punch. End runs by G. Armstrong, D. Armstrong, and Houlahan, who carried the ball to within striking distance of the goal, but here they lost their chance to score when the rain soaked field was fumbled.

A put up a great fight, but could not down their heavier rivals. B outweighed A almost ten pounds to the man. B scored early in the second quarter, when Gile hit the line for a smart gain and a touchdown. He kicked his own goal after fumbling the ball. Gile also smashed over the second touchdown after Armstrong had been stopped one yard from his goal line. Gile kicked goal. Score B-14, A-0. The lineup:

By MAURICE VAN METRE COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 23.—

(Special)—Obviously it is all in the point of view. The story which Freddy Grim of Toledo wrote here this afternoon may have been as his imaginative forebears as far as Ohio State was concerned, but for Iowa it was nothing less than a grim American tragedy. True, this boy Grim has some collaborators, but it was his splendid run of fifty yards after catching a forward pass for the first score that put heart in his team.

Some breaks later on helped to fashion it into "and they lived happily ever after" fairy tale for the Buckeyes. Breaks such as Ohio got an all in the game and this spectator isn't here offering an alibi. He believes Iowa made a splendid fight in face of devastating turns in the tide. The Hawk looked good in the first half but thereafter they played with the part of a loser. For the grim statistics you are hereby referred to such a reliable news agency as The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 23 (AP)—Ohio State opened its western conference season here with a 23 to 6 victory over Iowa. It was the first time the Buckeyes have trounced the Hawkeys. Although the Iowans registered twelve first downs to Ohio State's eleven, the Buckeyes were able to outplay the westerners in every department.

Cowboy Kutsch was corralled at the start of the game and never once got away on a run of any distance. The Sloux City lad was a marked man and almost invariably was upset as he swung around end or attempted to pierce tackles. His passing was only mildly successful, but one of his heaves to Byers, halfback, gave the latter an open field to a touchdown.

Hawks Complete Five Passes

Out of sixteen attempted passes, Kutsch completed five for a total of 74 yards, eight were incomplete and three were intercepted. Nelson, Clinton, Iowa, tackle, was the star performer for the Iowans, breaking up several threatening plays in spectacular fashion.

Fred Grim, halfback and Captain Karow, fullback, were the Buckeye stars.

Although both teams showed considerable drive in the first period, neither was able to muster the strength necessary to put across a touchdown. Once Iowa had the ball on Ohio's 17 yard line but Kutsch's attempt at a field goal was blocked by Hess, Ohio State all-American guard. A little later, mostly through Grim's brilliant running, Ohio had the ball on Iowa's ten yard line where Iowa's line held and Ohio was compelled to yield the ball on downs.

Kutsch Loose Once

After the first quarter ended with the count a scoreless tie, Kutsch made his one spectacular run of the game, sweeping left end for 22 yards. Ohio got the ball on its 42 yard line on Kutsch's short punt and Ohio opened up its passing game. Robin Bell dropped back from end and heaved the ball ten yards to Grim who got away through a clear field to a 50 yard dash for a touchdown.

Deb Rowan, Chillicothe end, who played a stellar game for the Buckeyes, started the ball rolling for the second touchdown when he intercepted Kutsch's pass and ran 25 yards to Iowa's 24 yard marker. From that position Grim and Karow ran the ends, sliced the tackles, and plunged the behemoth Iowa line for three successive first downs and an ultimate touchdown by Karow.

Byers Snags Pass

Kutsch and Byers, Denison, Iowa, half, began connecting on passes as the half waned, piling up 34 yards in a succession of three first downs, the last pass for ten yards going for Iowa's lone tally. The most startling and spectacular play of the game came on the kickoff at the start of the third quarter when Ar-

Labor Indorses Colonel in Coming Senate Contest

DES MOINES, Oct. 23 (AP)—The Iowa State federation of labor today re-endorsed the candidacy of Col. Smith W. Brookhart for the United States Senate. In a letter signed by J. C. Lewis, president and Michael Sherman, secretary of the state federation, sent to 30,000 officers and members of the labor organizations in the state, Brookhart's labor record at home and in the senate is commended. The letter, according to Mr. Lewis, was sent out because of the circulation of a story that Brookhart is unfriendly to organized labor.

Law Alumni Will Raise Four Million
 Ask Former Harvard Students to Give Endowment

Ten thousand Harvard Law alumni in all parts of the world have been mailed, during the past week, a beautifully printed pamphlet and a future written by Dean Roscoe Pound.

The Harvard Law school alumni in Iowa City to receive the pamphlet are, Prof. H. Claude Horack, Dean Henry Craig Jones, and Professors George Doner Koser, Odus Knight Patton, Rollin Morris Perkins, Charles Sanford Tippets and Jacob Van der Zee.

More than a fifth of the entire amount has been pledged in advance of the formal opening of the campaign on Oct. 25. Of this $750,000 is a conditional gift from the General Education Board, first contributions to legal research, and over $400,000 is from private donors.

Illustrative of the achievements of the Harvard Law school, Dean Pound points out the number of graduates who have occupied the White House, sat on the bench, served in legislative bodies or practiced at the bar, among which have been no less than eight Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, including three now sitting.

The present activities of the school are described by Dean Pound, who says: "First, the school is endeavoring to keep up the scientific professional training of common-law lawyers. Second, it is endeavoring to carry forward the work of the past in training teachers of law. Third, it is endeavoring to keep up and further scientific study of law begun by Ames, Thayer and Gray. Fourth, it is endeavoring to further the improvement of the law in the United States through legislation.

Campus Debt to Literary Societies Includes Wide Variety of Activities
 Few people realize that many of the present day activities on the Iowa campus are an outgrowth of the early literary societies. Some of these activities are The Daily Iowan, the University Theater, the Iowa Literary Magazine, and inter-collegiate debate.

Of these activities The Daily Iowan is important. The first sheet published by the university was called The University Reporter. This paper told the news of the university of that time and as the university grew the paper kept pace, changing into the Daily Iowan of today.

Groups of Players
 Another important activity sponsored by the early literary societies was the University Theater. The University Players are a group of students who show ability in dramatics, and who in the course of the winter session put on plays. The Theater of Iowa has progressed until it is now recognized as one of the best college theaters in the United States. This theater movement is a direct outgrowth of the literary societies. At first plays were presented for the amusement of society members and anyone who wished to attend. These plays grew in popularity until the societies were not able to comply with the demand and the University Theater resulted.

Debating, Too
 Another gift of the literary societies is the inter-collegiate debate. As early as 1874 the societies were having inter-society debates and oratorical contests. As a result of these debates, the Debating League of the University was formed. This league was instrumental in bringing inter-collegiate debating to Iowa. That inter-collegiate debate is a success is shown by some of the debates that are scheduled for this year. Two of the important ones are with Oxford University of England and the University of Sydney, Australia.

The Iowa Literary Magazine is still sponsored by the literary societies. It is composed of short stories and poems written by the students of the university. The purpose of the magazine is to encourage undergraduate writing.

The literary societies came into prominence soon after the Civil War. At that time they were the student centers both socially and intellectually. Part of their popularity was due to the fact that the events of the Civil War were discussed at the meetings. These discussions drew most of the student body and many of the townspeople to the meetings.

Celestine Vosmek, Alpha Chi Omega Writes of Visit to Iowa City Shops

SLEEVES! SLEEVES!
 —and what quaint ones they are! "Puffed and gathered, and they are the very newest thing," says Mr. Sprague of the Strub ready-to-wear department. "Just like my mother's wedding gown," I explained, "and now I can wear them."

And here's a surprise. Mr. Sprague has just received the dress that Miss Tulsa wore when she was crowned Miss America! It has loads of black velvet on the skirt and the cutest puffed sleeves! In fact seeing is believing, and you will have to see for yourself the clever line of dresses they have, and I know, I have never seen such novelty sleeves in my life. Hurry and see them!

BEFORE WINTER COMES
 —and the next football game, tie yourself to Yetter's and see those cunning football muffs in old gold and black. They are exactly the size and shape of a football, and are to keep your hands warm while you aren't giving the deaf and dumb yell for Iowa. They're real clever and I know they'll make a hit with you, especially to use at the coming games.

And what's more, Yetter's have the smartest black and tan American pony coats you ever saw! Bright plaid tomboy linings are their features. This is just the coat that you'll find becoming at Homecoming.

And scarfs—simply a host of them, roman striped ones brighten up a fur coat marvelously. The colors are outstanding and the materials do honor to any cloak. We can't have too many of them, can we?

THE SECOND
 —Sorority to be featured in next Sunday's style article will be picked at random from a complete list of the sororities on the Iowa campus.

TAKE A GLANCE
 —at Dvorak and O'Hara's window if you want to see the new manure racks with tiny clocks on them and secret drawers. They are of ivory and amber and of tinted ivory in pink and mother-of-pearl shades. A wonderful suggestion for a gift, don't you think? Mother or sister or sweetheart would appreciate having a place to keep her manure things together.

But these are just a suggestion of the host of lovely things which are contained in this shop. You'll find that if it is a simple matter to solve the gift problem here—there are so many things that appeal to the modern college woman.

NOW DON'T FORGET
 —if you want an afternoon dress, to look at Seidenbecker's, for they have some darling ones, and reasonable, too.

They are mostly in black, as black is always good, you know, and there is nothing quite so serviceable, for varsity or afternoon wear.

"Trimmins make the dress" they say, and that is certainly true as these little frocks, some of them high waisted, some of them bloused, are made distinctive by their unusual trimming of embroidery, and entirely new collars and cuffs.

Dresses have personality, so say I am convinced, as I chose several frocks which I thought just looked like some of my friends! Did you ever do that?

The Iowan Presents Its New Style Feature

Celestine Vosmek
 Celestine Vosmek, A4 of Cedar Rapids, a member of Alpha Chi Omega, Erodolphian literary society and University Players is the first sorority representative in The Iowan's new style feature. Her sorority was picked at random from a complete list of sororities on the Iowa campus. She in turn was appointed by the chapter president, Helen Beatty.

Read of her visit to Iowa City shops in this article.

EVERYTHING TO MATCH
 —is apparently the slogan at the Denecke college shop from all appearances. Girls, we saw the most charming bracelets and brooches to match in silver and yellow gold, set with blue lapis lazuli stones and with lovely jade! Truly they were ravishing!

Mrs. Gibson showed us the sweetest blue leather tie and belt sets also which match the jewelry perfectly.

And don't you just hanker for a pair of kid gloves with needle point embroidery on them? If you do Denecke's shop has them, with blue kid bands and insets of tiny baskets woven in needle point work.

If you want your outfits to match, don't fail to see these lovely things!

A NEW SCHOOL DRESS
 —now and then is needed in the best of wardrobes. In this case I'm sure you will find Helen Donovan's shop ready and willing to help you select that much needed frock.

My eye was especially attracted to a row of bright colored jerseys which were heavy laden with Swedish embroidery. Some were in peasant style with large embroidered sleeves and some were strictly tailored. You will have to see for yourself, but I know you will be delighted. And they are exclusive models.

If you are in need of good service hose you couldn't go wrong in selecting from the stock in this shop. They specialize in a very good make of service chiffon. And one thing which satisfying, they have every color you could ever imagine!

HAVE YOU SEEN
 —the new metallic hats at Mrs. Bishop's Millinery Shop? If you haven't, you've missed, and don't delay it any longer. They have clever brilliant buckles and trimmings on them and are being worn in the cities as "dance hats."

It is never amiss to buy a new felt or velvet, for one does get so tired of school clothes, and a change now and then breaks the monotony. Stop in and see them.

ARE YOU READY
 —for the university formals which will soon be starting and do you have your slippers to match your dress? If you haven't, you're not up to snuff, I say, but you will be if you'll just take a trip from me.

Whether it be blue, or rose, or any of the other luscious colors for party dresses, you can find an exact match at Stewart's in the newest patterns. If you want blue, there are one-strap slippers of blue kid in an alligator pattern, and for most any other color there are the clever new pasley styles with any desired shade predominating.

And last but not least, if you aren't pleased with the others, they will dye white satin pumps for you any tint or shade you wish. I ask you, what more could you wish!

RUTH'S FROCK SHOP
 —is featuring a dainty new teddy which was designed by George Whites Scandal's of 1926, and which is consequently the newest note in undies. They are pleated and are quite the daintiest things I ever saw!

The new brilliant jewelry for formal wear has arrived, and you can't help but exclaim that you'll want one of those new tomboy purses when you see them!

ARE YOU LOOKING
 —for something new in the way of dress hats? If you are, I believe I have found what you want, for the metallic hats are the latest word in "hat-dom." If you will stop in at Josephine's hat shop, she will show them to you.

Turbans and close fitting hats of metallic material in gold and silver combine with light shades of silks or perhaps a touch of gold lace, are the answer to "what kind of a dress hat shall I get?"

NEXT WEEK
 —Another style feature will be presented to The Iowan readers. It will contain hints of the newest on the latest, as seen by a prominent sorority woman.

PHYLLIS HERRICK
 —is specializing in $15 dresses for college girls, and I think she is right, for that amount can usually be squeezed out of a month's allowance and never missed, and we are still one dress to the good!

Perhaps you'd like to know what they're like, so I'll tell you. Jerseys in all colors with bright embroidery of yarn, fine twills ranging from strictly tailored to more fussy ones because of their collars and cuffs or touch of color. And silk dresses, too—a wide choice of them.

And here is a secret: there are a few party dresses which are so reasonable that you would hardly believe me if I told you, so I'm going to leave that to you and if you hurry, you will get your choice of these darling bouffant frocks in light taffetas and georgettes. (There, I gave you a hint, now you do the rest) . . .

Once or Twice a Year—

AGITATION is high right now to make our smoky little town as bright and shining as a 1926 silver dollar so that the annual influx of Homecoming guests will find nothing but praise for this haven of smoke, rickety street cars, tricky traffic signals, and what have you.

It is a noble spirit that would instigate this rejuvenation, and not only the visitors but the permanent fixtures themselves would appreciate an abatement in the standing evils of the town.

Highway engineers will open up the new stretch of pavement on the River-to-River road and endeavor to keep all roads leading to the Iowa-Minnesota marathon in good condition, for the benefit of Homecoming guests.

Iowa City civic clubs will clean up the town, decorate the streets and the stores, and practically hold open house for the visiting notables, and others not so notable. Extra policemen will patrol the streets and regulate the traffic.

In fact, the week preceding the Homecoming game might well be termed Iowa City's Clean-Up Week. Every village has them, but the officials apparently do not realize that one clean-up week per annum will not insure clean streets and buildings for the entire year.

If city officials and clubs would cultivate this same enthusiasm through the entire year, Iowa City might easily become a refuge to those in search of a clean, progressive home town. The roads would be always passable, the smoke nuisance would be abated; real street cars would take the place of the toys which rattle up and down Dubuque street; stop and go signals would replace the hick arterial signs which are visible only to the eye of the law; and cleanliness would reign next to Godliness in Iowa City.

A little cooperation and more than a week-end desire for improvement would soon make every week Clean-Up Week, and Iowa City would be a city of the first class in spirit as well as name.

At Sea

THE individual soul feels a great need for religion. It cries out to the Unknown, seeking God.

The skeptic may exhibit Man's multitudinous conceptions of Divinity and ask, "Which of these is the true God?" He believes man's pretensions as the Finder. But it is man's persistent seeking which is the more significant.

Man the Finder, and Man the Seeker, are ever at odds. Perhaps in no period of recorded history has there arisen a greater conflict between the Finder and the Seeker than in our own times. Our modern seekers have revealed new truths which, in the language of Omar, "all the warring sects confute." Against them the followers of the ancient Finders wars. They say, "You are trying to tear the temple down."

But mankind's need for religion—for a personal religion—was never greater or more insistent than it is today.

The fishermen of Brittany have a saying which seems to voice this great need of the human soul: "O God! Thy sea is so big; and my boat is so small!"

Taking Your Medicine

A GREEN hand at the New York stock gambling game shoots out his brains in a fit of despondency. He lost only $5,000, at that, but to him life was no longer worth the living.

Foolish fellow, had he withstood the jar he might be alive today, and doing well. Fortune's frowns frequently change to smiles, or night.

Recruits run when first they smell gunpowder, but after a few hard battles, gain discipline, take shocks, win where the timid soldier dies miserably.

Training goes far to fit a man for the struggle of life. Athletes practice to harden themselves to take a jar. The hope of all trainers is that "their man" will smile when he receives a frightful blow across the stomach or to the jaw—in any event, he will not back away. You cannot give a man "heart" if he has no heart, but you can show him how to take punishment, if he is determined to improve.

The other day, in a gymnasium, this writer saw a trainer viciously pulling a prize fighter's hair. This went on till it seemed as though great handfuls must inevitably be snatched from the unfortunate athlete's head. Though the man whose hair was being uprooted wined, he tried not to show his feelings. Asked what it was all about, the trainer said: "To make him understand how it feels to take a jar, and pulling his hair without mercy will make him do better."

Why not have some one pull your hair?

Chicago's Vote Slackers

THIS year the city of Chicago has 876,509 registered voters. Two years ago Chicago had 1,064,895 registered voters. Thus we see a decrease of 188,386 voters during a period in which the population of the city has increased appreciably.

Statistics ordinarily are dull and dry; but these figures are significant in that they show a growing indifference to the ballot on the part of many citizens. Of all the cities of our land, Chicago is in the greatest need of good government, perhaps. And in no other city, except New York, is the problem of local government more difficult or involved. Its registration of voters is on the decline, nevertheless.

The political situation in Chicago is one which lends itself readily to the operations of the professional politician. The city contains vast elements of the native and foreign born proletariat. Three elements are marshaled and directed by the ward bosses. And so large blocks of votes are directed with definite purposes in view. Those purposes are the greater power and greater enrichment of the vested political interests.

The prohibition law has complicated the business of government in Chicago. Containing vast numbers of persons who hold the dry law in contempt and forming a rich market for the rum runners and bootleggers, the city is confronted with a combination of "ward heeled" and liquor law violators which is discouraging to the friends of clean government.

And we suspect that the 188,386 voters who failed to register, may not be the victims of indifference so much as they are of discouragement. The voter sees the recurring "reform" movements make a great noise for a little while and then fade out. These movements have little lasting effect on the gang. The gang makes itself a bit less notorious for a while until the ruckus is over. Then it sets itself up in business at the old stand.

Many a voter is coming to think that things will be the same whether he votes or not. So he stays away from the polls and "lets George do it!" And "George" is willing to accommodate. That's how he fattens his goose.

Now the Falling Leaves . . .

DOWN the long street, autumn leaves are busy with their ritualistic death dance of woe. Tossed by the four winds, they rattle and scrape along the sidewalks—suggestive of the clatter of bones, long dry. Above, the sighing boughs stretch away into the arched distance. As if in pain they weave before the pushing wind—a wind that waits a lonelier refrain.

Autumn is the most depressing time of all the year. Down the avenue, tinted leaves besport in whirling circles like children at play. Tangled by the breeze, they clutter the world in tangled robes of glory—golden, yellow, russet, red, an ecstasy of color. The tree limbs press against the wind, and their twigs sing as they vibrate like the strings of a violin. The spirit of fall and football is in the air.

Autumn is the most exhilarating time of all the year. Two pictures, but the same street. Two moods, but the same leaves and the same wind. Two entirely different worlds, yet the same one. It is not what you see but the way you look at it. Living right is learning to see the beautiful side.

Skin-Deep

WHEN it was noised around that Marie, queen of Roumania, was heading for these shores, New York officially prepared to hand her the keys of the city and a list of bootleggers who could be relied upon to supply only the Real Stuff, and pay her such other attentions as are usually reserved for visiting firemen and British authors.

When the Prince of Wales percolated himself into these United States he received more attention in a week than he had at home in his whole life, including matinees.

After swimming the English channel, Gertrude Ederle got one good parade up Fifth avenue, and today the man in the street hardly knows whether she is a champion swimmer or somebody that old man Browning took a fancy to. But if she had happened to be second-cousin to one of the European thrones that were made safe for democracy, New York would have been good for a month of free eats, and the women would all be wearing the same kind of what-you-call-'ems that she does.

One day we're talking high and wide about our stalwart and copper-lined democracy, and the next we're kow-towing to some duke or potentate who has come over to get a little kind of animals we are, anyhow. You see a little dizzy trying to figure it out.

Even the way we talk about people we like, and about our national heroes, smacks of something just beneath the skin that makes democracy look kind of queer.

If a guy makes a hit with us, he's a "prince." Babe Ruth is the Home Run King, the Emperor of Swat, not the Home Run President or the Senator of Swat.

Marie, queen of Roumania, is probably a nice girl and good to her folks, but a lot of the mill-run of neighbors hereabouts have been asking whether that was a good excuse for them to go mad and bite themselves.

It wouldn't be right to blame Mrs. Roumania, at that. She's probably the most bored person in the whole parade.

Poems That Live

O World, Be Nobler
O World, be nobler, for her sake!
If she but knew thee what thou art,
What wrongs are borne, what deeds are done
In thee, beneath thy daily sun,
Knows't thou not that her tender heart
For pain and very shame would break?
O World, be nobler, for her sake!

When Faults Are Virtues

by FRED C. KELLY

One of my neighbors has been raising four or five nice little white pigs and I have grown interested in watching their ethical as well as physical growth. The more I observe them and study their motives, the more I'm convinced that pigs have long been much maligned.

We have been told that a pig is gluttonous and makes a good of his tummy. But when you once get the pig viewpoint, gluttony becomes one of the highest virtues. Gluttony is to a pig as much a duty as for a good citizen to take an interest in politics.

You see, back in the jolly, remote days when all pigs were wild and entirely on their own resources, a pig had to store up food in seasons of plenty to carry him through long, hard winters. In the falls, nuts and roots were easily available. As pigs roamed about over wide territory, it was not considered practical to store up this surplus in the ground or in a hollow tree—after the manner of dogs and squirrels. The wild pig said to himself: "I don't know where I may be two months from now. No use leaving my food supply here. I'll take it with me." He stored it away in the form of fat. To do this was a simple tribal virtue, no more reprehensible than buying one's winter supply of coal in August.

Moreover, a pig doesn't overeat because he is personally a gourmand, but because he finds from his associates that it is considered proper. Anybody who has ever tried to raise one pig all alone must have noted that he eats in leisurely fashion and is not easily fattened. But with several of his kind in competition at the trough, he catches the sense of doing the conventional thing. He eats more than is immediately needed because that is what he sees others doing. We mustn't blame a pig for following his crowd any more than we should censure ourselves for wearing senseless derby hats whenever they are considered fashionable.

We never criticize bees for storing up food, yet there is a close analogy between pigs and bees. True, each pig personally stores his own heat-giving material, while bees place them in a community bin. In their zeal to provide plenty, both pigs and bees play into the hands of their human friends. I wonder what pigs and bees would think if they thought about it at all—of the smug complacency with which man appropriates their reserve store of food for his own use.

From observing pigs I have started to wondering if many other supposed faults may not be hidden virtues. We may say that a boy in school is bad because he is disobedient. But perhaps he is merely intelligent. Maybe he senses the absurdity of various orders by his teacher, who is probably no genius, but merely a plain little woman struggling along with a job that she scarcely understands.

We also criticize men who have a succession of sweethearts and say that such men are fickle. But if a man mopes and pines away his life merely because his sweetheart walks out and leaves him to his own devices, we say that he is a strong, steadfast character.

Isn't the stronger character one with enough resourcefulness and adaptability to acquire readily a satisfactory new sweetheart?

In other words, isn't fickleness often a striking exhibition of ability to meet successfully an unexpected problem?

Isn't it more of a virtue than a fault?

Woman Conquers New Art
TIFFIN, O.—Mrs. John G. Stelner won the Seneca county hog-calling contest over a field of many men, with a long "P-oo-oo-oo-ee-ee" in which she wailed up and down the chromatic scale twice.

There's a gentle little rhythm that has pierced me through and through. It's not by Faderewski played, it emanates from you.

And when I think upon it is not your raven hair Nor the sheen of your nude Hoop-er in the freight's fitful glare That puts its spell upon me; I can still behold your eyes Always calm, expressing nothing, neither dreams nor yet surmise Hear your voice float on forever, filled with ghosts of words that died Coolly murdered by their user, propositions crucified.

I can see you jazz the Charleston, like a slightly pie-eyed elf Showing some of fashion's offerings, showing much more of yourself. But your looks no longer stir me, nor the fact you were so dumb—Like your steady ceaseless rhythm on a cad of Spearmint gum.

That habit of obedience—or the fruits of matrimony.

How many of you saw the picture "Into Her Kingdom?" The comedy that night was especially good and particularly because of this incident. A couple were caught in a raid made on a party but managed to escape and got to the street where there were a number of taxis waiting. They knew if they took one the police would take another and follow them; so they hollered just before they stepped into a yellow, "Look out, boys, the cops are looking for a bootlegger." In two minutes the whole place was cleared.

Only forty-nine more days to do your Christmas shopping. Follows, it's getting about time to have them annual falling-out with the fair one.

Their little faces shone happily. On the tapering slender tree hung baubles of green, gold, and intense purple; strings of popcorn formed a huge web over its fragrant green branches. The children of the town were assembled in the big walnut pews, the one day through the year when they might stay up after nine.

The pastor had given a touchingly eloquent talk, the choir had sung divinely. Now they were waiting for Santa Claus. The rattle of bells and he appeared, a monstrous figure with a bushy white beard, red jowl face, twinkling eyes, a heavy fur coat, and a monstrous sack full of presents. The younger children squealed in delight; one or two were scared. To every one he handed a sack—a present from Santa to all the children. Bobby Ledure, a cherubic smile on his face gazed into his; three pieces of hard painted Xmas candy and six walnuts. "Aw, hell," he muttered. "It's getting so this damn stuff ain't worth comin' even once a year for."

She was thirty-eight and mad at her father. Furiously she rushed from the house and said to the first passer-by. "I've just vowed I'd marry the first single man I saw. Come along."

"Lady" he said. "I always believed that I was single but I'll swear I'm a bigamist now."

"In the most remote regions of Europe one finds Hollywood setting the fashion in clothes and in the way people live in their homes. Which of the romance languages is the most popular?
French, on the basis of numbers.

What was your boyhood ambition?

I still feel that I would prefer teaching.

Of what value are language clubs?
It gives the members a better opportunity for informal practice in the use of the spoken language than they can possibly get in the classroom.

READ THIS FIRST:

MERRY LOCKE, as pretty and gay as her nickname, has been a flirt ever since she was sixteen. "Boy Crazy" was what MOMS, her mother, called her when she was in high school. At twenty Merry falls in her steno-graphic course at business college, and when her father dies she takes a job in LILLIE DALE'S beauty shop. At that time she is having the first real love affair of her life. She is deeply and sincerely in love with ANTHONY GAINES, a young lawyer. Tony wants her to marry him. But Merry tells him that none of her love affairs have ever lasted, and she's afraid that even this one won't. So they decide to wait for six months before they marry.

Then, one night when Tony breaks an engagement with her, Merry lets Derrick Jones, a college boy who lives next door, make love to her as he often has in the days before she met Tony. Later on, when Merry confesses this to Tony, she explains that she did it to "get even" with him for breaking an engagement with her. But Tony doesn't get her point of view on the thing and he stops seeing her. Finally he shuts up his law office and goes to Montana to live.

Merry's oldest sister, HELEN, marries BILL, HEPWORTH. CASSIE, the second oldest, marries MORLEY KAUFMAN, a rich broker for whom she worked for many years. JINNY, aged sixteen, the youngest of the sisters, takes Derrick Jones away from Merry under her very nose, and Merry finds herself without beaux, for the first time in her life.

So when BILL ERSKINE, a bachelor friend of Morley Kaufman's, pays her attention, she is pleased and flattered. He is a traveling man, and he sends her all sorts of lovely gifts from the towns that he "makes" on his trips. The night before Christmas she asks Bill to lend her a thousand dollars to buy herself ashare in Lillie's beauty shop. She explains that Morley Kaufman's sister, MURIEL, thinks it's "smart" for a girl to own her own shop, and Merry yearns to be "smart" above all things. After some argument Bill writes a check for the thousand. The next morning Merry answers the doorbell, thinking that Bill is calling at the house.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER XXVII

On the porch stood a small, freckled messenger boy, holding a green pasteboard box that was almost as tall as he was.

"Mrs. Locke?" he asked squinting up at Merry with white-lashed eyes.

"Miss Locke," Merry answered, and took the box.

But the flowers in it were not for her.

They were poinsettias—a whole dozen of them. And among their gorgeous red velvet blossoms and dark leaves was tucked a tiny envelope with Mom's name on it.

"Moms! Somebody's sent you flowers," Merry called, carrying them out to the kitchen. "Poinsettias, with stems a yard long!"

Moms was sitting at the table by the window, peeling potatoes. She looked up as Merry came into the warm, sunny room.

"Now who do you suppose was fool enough to send me all those expensive flowers?" she sniffed.

"Fatty, I suppose."

"Fatty" was what she always called Bill Erskine, behind his back. She had refused point-blank to invite him to Christmas dinner today.

Merry had been furious with her, about it. But she was glad now that Bill wasn't coming until late in the afternoon. She felt so sick and dizzy that it was a relief not to have to dress.

"Yes, they are from Bill," she said, opening the little envelope for her mother. "Merry Christmas for Moms," he says."

Moms's lip curled scornfully. "He flatters himself—calling me 'Moms'!" she said, with a grim laugh. "I'll bet he's pretty nearly as old as I am! I'll tell him so, too, sometime when I happen to be in the mood for plain speaking."

"Moms! Indeed! I like his nerves!" She got up and began to bustle the two chickens that she was roasting in the oven.

"I just wish I had the money he paid for those silly flowers!" she said over her shoulder. "Put them in that pail under the sink, Merry. We haven't a vase in the house half big enough for them."

She turned scarlet-faced from the heat of the stove and surveyed the poinsettias with a cold and calculating eye.

"I never knew a man to throw money around the way that Erskine does!" she remarked. "He must have all of it that he needs." "He surely has," answered Merry, thinking of the check that was folded in her handbag upstairs. Suddenly she drew a quick breath and a look of horror swept over her face.

"Ye gods and little fish-hooks!" she cried. "I haven't bought any Christmas present for him! I meant to get something for him—Oh, my soul, what will I do?"

She made a movement with her hands, almost as if she were ringing them.

"I remembered everybody else," she moaned.

She had. She had remembered to buy a clock for Moms, a fancy powder-puff for Cassie, a salad set for He'en, a flapper belt for Jinny. Jinny! Perhaps Jinny could help her out! She probably had bought some kind of gift for the infatuated Derrick.

"Jinny!" Merry called at the top of her voice. "Jinny what are you going to give Derrick for Christmas?"

"A bill fold," Jinny's soprano voice floated down from upstairs, where she was making the beds and dusting "A leather bill fold. Why?"

"I want you to give it to me, instead," Merry answered her. She was halfway up the stairs by this time.

"You see," she explained, going into Mom's bedroom. "I forgot to He scraped up the best of his salad."

"Well, you must think I'm crazy!" Jinny retorted, with a withering look. "You must think I come get anything for Bill Erskine—"

"And you want me to give you Derrick's present so you can give it to him?" asked Jinny, getting the idea at once.

Merry nodded briskly.

from the place where the woodpecker eat up the railroad station every night! Why should I let you have Derrick's present for your Willy-boy? Why didn't you buy him something yourself?"

"I told you I forgot," Merry reminded her gently.

"Well, that's your funeral, not mine," answered Jinny, beating the pillows into shape.

She straightened the window curtains, picked up a thread from the carpet and went out of the room, humming to herself.

Merry followed her across the hall to their own little bedroom. She went to her and put her arm around her.

"Jinny, please let me have that bill-fold, darlingest," she pleaded. "You've known Derrick so long that he's sure to understand the whole thing when you explain it to him. But if I don't give Bill a present I'll never be able to square myself with him. He'll think I don't care a bit for him."

"Well, you don't, either!" Jinny came back at her. "If you did you would have bought him a Christmas present, wouldn't you? The trouble with you, Merry, is that you're never honest with your men friends. Even Derrick says you're as two-faced as a totem-pole!"

"Derrick!" Merry cried. "He's a fine one to talk, isn't he? I suppose he didn't start playing around you about a week after he asked me to marry him, did he? He's not two-faced. Oh, no!"

But she knew that it was useless to argue with Jinny any longer.

She went downstairs to help Moms set the table for dinner.

Even if she had bought a Christmas present for Bill, she could not have given it to him that day, as it turned out.

For at two o'clock, just as she was sitting down to dinner with Moms and Jinny, she began to feel sick. Not just hot and dizzy, as she had been all morning, but dreadfully sick.

Pains shot through her chest and stomach. Pains that took her breath away, and made her double up like a jack-knife.

The meal grew cold on the dining room table while Moms and Jinny got her upstairs and into bed. She writhed and twisted and cried out in her agony. The ginger-tea that "Bigger and better" National Navy Days is objective of Mrs. William H. Hamilton, founder of the annual celebration, which takes place Oct. 27. She is seen talking to sailor. Idea of Navy Day is to impress country with importance of keeping U. S. strong on sea.

Moms forced down her throat only seemed to make her worse.

"I'm dying! I'm dying!" she declared in gasping shrieks. She thought that she was.

But Moms knew better.

"No, you're not!" she said firmly. "But you will if you don't swallow some more of this ginger-tea! You're having one of those stomach attacks that your father used to have when he was alive, that's all! Now, open your mouth and take this, and no more nonsense!"

She held the ginger-tea to Merry's colorless lips and made her drink it to the last drop.

"You've just eaten something that's upset your stomach," she added, nodding her head wisely.

"You probably had lobster salad, or some such thing last night. I'll tell you, you never know what you're taking into your system when you eat in one of those restaurants!"

But Merry shook her head and moaned. She knew only too well that it was not food that had made her ill. She knew perfectly well that it was last night's liquor that had laid her low.

"Never again!" she groaned.

"What's that you say?" Moms asked sharply.

But Merry pretended not to hear her. Her lids were closed and her lips were open as she breathed.

All the apple blossom color was gone from her face, leaving it a greenish white.

"Merry never drinks, does she?" her mother asked Jinny, when the two of them sat down to their warmed-over dinner a few minutes later.

"No, indeed," answered Jinny, who thought that she was telling the truth.

Merry spent the next few days in bed.

She had caught cold, and she was afraid that she might not be able to go to the New Year's Day party that Cassie and Morley Kaufman were going to have. So she stayed at home and let Moms "doctor" her with hot grease, cold compresses and calomine tea.

She was the only one in the family who had been invited to the party. And she knew that it was not because she was Cassie's sister that she was invited. It was because she was a friend of Morley's friend, Bill Erskine!

"Cassie's getting to be a snob, if you ask me," she said on New Year's Eve. She was sitting up in kimono and slippers, watching Jinny dress to go out.

"She always was one," answered Jinny, slipping one of Cassie's cast-off evening dresses over her sleek little red head. She smiled at her dazzling reflection in the old mirror above the dresser.

"I certainly expect to have some time on this brawl tonight," she chanted happily. "Some of Derrick's fraternity brothers are giving it and they've got a case of gin. How many bottles is that?"

"Twenty-four," Merry told her. "But you don't drink do you?"

Jinny's shining brown eyes met hers in the glass and winked at her.

"Something tells me I'm going to tonight," she said cheerfully.

"Don't you do it," her sister warned her. "You never know what kind of stuff you're getting these days. And, anyway, Jinny, it'll make you sick and dizzy, and you won't look pretty. Women look horrid when they're drinking."

Jinny only raised her arched eyebrows.

"I certainly love the way I look in this green dress," she murmured.

"If only I had an evening cape and a gold cigarette case, and an honest-to-John orchid to wear I'd be perfectly, madly, wildly happy!"

She waved her hand and dashed down the stairs to join Derrick, who had been honking his horn in the driveway for the past ten minutes.

Merry went to bed at ten o'clock. At twelve the sound of whistles and horns announcing the new year awakened her for a moment, and then she dozed off again.

Several hours later she woke up again.

Her room was still in darkness. She stretched up her arm and switched on the light above her bed. The clock on the table beside her showed that it was five o'clock. Across the room Jinny's bed was still empty.

Downstairs she heard a door close, and then the sound of an automobile in the driveway below the windows. Then angry voices talking in a loud jumble in the lower hall of the house.

She got out of bed and ran halfway down the stairs.

There was a light in the hall and Moms stood at the foot of the stairs. She was fully dressed in her black gown and apron and she was staring at Jinny, who had just come in.

Merry stared too.

Jinny was a different creature from the sparkling, lovely little girl who had waved her hand and run out of the house a few hours before.

Her eyes were glassy and there was a loy-sided smile on her little mouth. One cheek was smeared with rouge and the other was dead white. In one of her hands she carried a bedraggled bouquet of flowers that had once been white and were now a brownish yellow.

"Ring out, will bells to the will sky," said Jinny, poetically. "The year is dying in the night! Ring out, will bells, and let it die!"

Merry saw tears spring into Mom's blue eyes.

"That wretched boy next door has got her drunk. That's what happened!" she said quietly. She seemed to know that Merry was standing behind her on the stairs.

"That dreadful boy that I trusted to my daughter!"

She went over to Jinny, took her by her white shoulders, and began to shake her violently.

"You bad little thing! Coming home to me like this at the break of day! I won't have this sort of thing going on. I tell you! I will NOT have it, I tell you! I'll put you in the detention home first!"

Jinny laughed in her face. A foolish laugh.

"Ring out, wild bells!" said Jinny.

Merry goes to Cassie's party. "Little Muriel!" repeated Merry. "She's every bit as old as I am. I'd like you to know! If you're her big brother, you might be mine, too. If it's wrong for her to drink, it's just as bad for me to, isn't it?" You'll be surprised at Bill Erskine's answer in Chapter 28 tomorrow.

Prof. E. P. Tyndall of the department of physics appeared on the program of the Optical Society of America in session at Philadelphia during the past week. His paper, "Sensibility to Wave Length Difference as a Function of Purity," was a report of his own contribution to this subject.

The significance of the problem rests in its contribution to the present effort to standardize the subject of color. The experimental work was performed at the bureau of standards in Washington, where Professor Tyndall served during the past summer as a research fellow appointed by the Munsell research laboratory.

States Consider Licenseless Zone for Automobiles

ST. PAUL, Oct. 23 (AP)—Proposed legislation to govern automobiles in interstate operation will be considered at a conference of motor vehicle officials from fourteen states here Oct. 28.

Invitations were sent out today by Mike Holm, Minnesota's secretary of state, to secretaries and motor officials in Iowa, Ill., Ind., Wis., Mo., Neb., Kan., and S. D., Mont., Wyo., Idaho, and Col.

Topics for discussion will include a proposal, made today by attorney general C. L. Hilton of Minnesota, that states create a 25 mile zone along their boundaries in which automobiles from neighboring states could travel without obtaining a license.

Five New Vaudeville Acts at the Majestic

Five new Orpheum vaudeville acts comprise the Majestic theater program opening today for the first half of the week. Vaudeville fans of Cedar Rapids and vicinity will have as a headliner, Gene Collins and his "Sunburnt Revue" said to be the last word in colored song and dance revues. All of the members have appeared with the largest colored shows on Broadway in New York City where they cater to the white patronage. Another top-notch act is Trovato, the eminent comedian and imitator. It is said that Trovato can reap more comedy from a violin than any comedian on the stage today. His appearance in theaters in every civilized country one the face of the globe is a criterion of his ability to entertain.

Alexander Brothers and Evelyn in a skit, "All Balled Up" comprise some dexterity in juggling that has been good enough to keep them for years in the larger two-a-day vaudeville theaters on the Keith and Orpheum circuits. Dunn and Hall contribute a ditty "Your Little Wife" that registers many laughs and the Dixieland song feast, "Southland" with Edith Sherry and Company rounds out another snappy Majestic offering.

Coaches Keep Marks of the Yearlings Under Hats

Despite inclement weather conditions, Coach Charles R. Brookins' yearling track men came through with some nice marks in the Annual Fall Freshmen Track and Field championships on Iowa field, Friday and Saturday afternoon. Individual champions for the fall season were determined in nine of the ten events on the program, the pole vault ending in a tie for first place. Marks in all events were withheld by the coaches.

Stevenson, this year's sprint ace, was individual star of the meet, coping firsts in the 100 and 200 yard dashes. Faulkner was second pointer-scoring with a first in the broad jump and a third in the high jump. Runners were handicapped by the soggy track and chilly weather, but turned in some good marks, especially in the sprints. Coach Brookins believes that this year's squad will be a well-balanced team and not composed of one or two individual performers. He is optimistic regarding the yearling possibilities and is counting on another Freshman Big Ten track championship. Both indoor and outdoor championships were won last year by the 1925 tracksters.

Muddy Field, Pioneer Offense Too Many for Washington

[By The Associated Press] Grinnell, Oct. 23—A single touchdown and extra point in the second period gained through an aerial attack, today won a Missouri Valley conference game for Grinnell over Washington university, 7 to 0.

The contest was played in a rain that greatly hampered both teams. With the muddy field and Grinnell's offensive strength, Washington was unable to seriously threaten the Pioneer goal at any period of the contest.

Grinnell's march to the goal started in the first period, with long passes taking the ball to Washington's three yard line. Evahn and Meeter carried the attack to that point, and on the second play of the next period a short pass, Meeter to McClain, sent the latter over the line. Meeter kicked the extra point.

Teachers Bow to Columbia
DUBUQUE, Oct. 23—(AP)—Columbia college won its third straight game of the season by defeating De-

Kalb 19 to 0. The Northern Illinois Teachers were no match for the Iowans. Coach Layden tried Knute Rockne's stunt of starting his shock troops when the game opened. Ten seconds played most of the game and had little trouble.

Harvard Beats Big Green

HARVARD STADIUM, CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 23—(AP)—Harvard defeated Dartmouth in a sensational upset of advance forecasts, 15 to 12 here this afternoon. One team or the other scored in every period of the game.

Gophers Crush Wabash

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 23 (AP)—Minnesota revealed surprising scoring power this afternoon and swamped Wabash of Crawfordville, Ind. 67 to 7. Jeostling tore great holes in Wabash's line and Almqvist, Nydahl, and Peppel reeled off sensational twisting runs. Wabash's score came in the first period when Loer blocked a punt and ran forty yards for a touchdown.

Hoosiers Lose to Badgers

MADISON, Oct. 23 (AP)—Wisconsin opened its home season in the Big Ten conference play today with a 27 to 2 victory over Coach Pat Page's Indiana team. The Badgers scored a touchdown in the first few minutes of play and were in danger only twice from the rush of Indiana's backs, who failed to pass Wisconsin's ten yard line.

Ames drops Close Struggle 7 to 3

Forty-six Yard Run Gives Missouri Victory

[By The Associated Press] AMES, Oct. 23—Missouri won a fiercely contested football game from Iowa State college here today, 7 to 3. The game was played on a rain-soaked field, which greatly slowed up the attack of the Tigers and probably deprived them of additional points.

Iowa State scored early in the 1st period when Thomas intercepted Stuber's pass to Clark on the Ames 35 yard line and later booted over a perfect field goal. Thereafter the Iowans did not offer a serious scoring threat.

Clark gathered in a long pass from Stuber early in the second period and raced 46 yards through Iowa State's defense for a touchdown. Stuber added the extra point.

Brown Hands Eli Eleven Surprise in 7 to 0 Beating

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 23 (AP)—Flashing unexpected speed and power, Brown's dashing eleven conquered Yale today 7 to 0 in a game that completely upset expectations.

Scoring early in the first period on a brilliant 72 yard drive that culminated in Al Cornsweat's plunge over the Eli goal, Brown outguffed and outplayed the Elis.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26 (AP)—Directors of the Brooklyn National league baseball club today announced that the contract of Wilbur Robinson, manager had been renewed. The terms were not revealed.

"Frosty" Peters' Toe Fails Illini in Long Attempts

Bo Molenda Smashes Over for Only Touchdown

[By The Associated Press] FERRY FIELD, ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 23—The arms and legs of Benny Friedman, and the bull-like rushes of Bo Molenda, turned a 13-0 victory over Illinois to Michigan's credit today. Friedman kicked two goals from placement and forward passed for several valuable gains. Molenda made the only touchdown, pouncing over the one foot line after Illinois had bravely held for three downs.

Twice in the second half Michigan had its kick downed near its own goal line, and Illinois battered away in the shadows of the Michigan's goal but four attempts at scores by kicks from the field failed. "Frosty" Peters missed two and Stewart missed one.

Illini Pass Costly
The forward pass which Illinois used effectively was also responsible for the Michigan touchdown against the Illini.

Lovett intercepted an Illinois pass, and Oosterban carried the ball to the one yard line, from which point Molenda plunged over on the fourth down.

With the beginning of the second half, Illinois using a short pass to Daugherty and Captain Kassel marched deep into Michigan territory. Turzkowsky ending the invasion by intercepting Lanum's toss and Gilbert kicked out of danger.

Third Period Scoreless
The third period was scoreless, and the fourth was well advanced before Friedman made his second place kick. He tried a third a few minutes later, but the ball was low and it was Illinois' ball. Just after this, Lovette performed his theft, and the Michigan team battered its way to Illinois' goal, which it had failed to cross for a touchdown last year.

Iowa City High Vanquishes Clinton 10 to 6 in Close Contest

City High Loses Early Lead But Rallies to Win

McGuire Opens Game Here With Long Place Kick

Iowa City high defeated Clinton yesterday on Shrader field by a score of 10 to 6. The game was played in a constant drizzle which handicapped the backs of both teams, necessitating a punting duel the greater part of the game.

McGuire starred for Iowa City with his fine punting performance and place kick from the 35 yard line. Rinehart, fullback for the locals, Captain Collins, center, and Adams, end, were other stars for the Red and White. For Clinton, Sandburg, fullback, was the outstanding player.

In the first half only one first down was made. There was a brilliant punting duel between McGuire, local ace, and Bush of Clinton, with McGuire holding an advantage over his opponent.

Little Hawks Score

By an exchange of punts, the Red and White worked the ball to the 45 yard line. It was here that the first three points were chalked up for the Little Hawks. McGuire went through the line for the first down of the half. The ball was then on Clinton's 35 yard line. In two attempts to gain, Iowa City failed. McGuire dropped back to the 35 yard line and kicked a perfect goal from placement.

U. High Harriers Easily Vanquish Washington High

In a driving rain which made fast time impossible, University High harriers defeated Washington High of Cedar Rapids yesterday afternoon at the latter's field by an overwhelming score of 15 to 6. The two mile course was slippery and soggy.

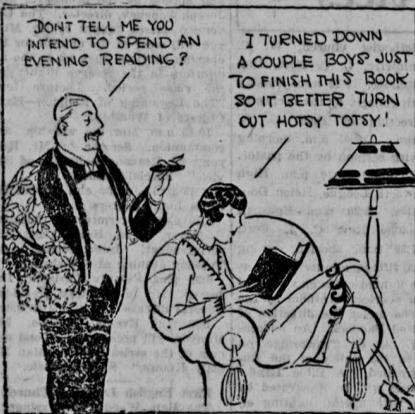

The Blue and White team turned in a time of 11:52. The surprise of the run was the fact that Cozine ran a poor race. Cozine is considered one of the outstanding harriers in the middle west. He took first place in the mile run in the inter-scholastic track meet at Northwestern last year.

The finishing order was: Capt. Stever (UH) first; R. Cozine (UH) second; Van Epps (UH) third; Trot (UH) fourth; Powell (CR) fifth; W. Cozine (UH) sixth; H. Bill (UH) seventh; W. Fairchild (UH) eighth; Simpson (CR) ninth; H. Fairchild (UH) tenth; Ellwood (CR) eleventh; Homer (UH) twelfth; Clark (UH) thirteenth.

Many Attend Varsity

Afternoon varsity was a success yesterday afternoon, and the floor was crowded with couples. Near the end of the dance, the stags thinned out, and a tag dance was instituted.

The "Revelers" furnished the music for the shindig, and gave long and peppy dances. The next chance for stags will be given Nov. 13, the afternoon of the Wisconsin game.

Institute Search for George Schockley

Police Request Assistance of Iowa Citizens; Laborer at New Chemistry Building Missing Since Last Saturday

The attention of the police was called to the mysterious disappearance of George Schockley, 35, who was for some weeks a resident at the H. and H. boarding house, 318 South Dubuque street.

According to James Hamilton, who is conducting a search for the missing man, Mr. Schockley was last seen on the morning of October 16. At night he did not return and for some time Mr. Hamilton of the boarding house thought nothing of his disappearance, believing he might have taken a short trip out of town. As the days passed, however, Mr. Hamilton became alarmed and now a thorough search is in progress for Mr. Schockley.

Mr. Schockley, according to word from Mr. Hamilton, was a steady and reliable person. He was working as a laborer at the new chemistry building, at which place he had been since about September 10.

As far as is known he had no family and it is not known from what city he came when he first appeared in Iowa City. About Sept. 10, also, Mr. Schockley came to the H. and H. boarding house and obtained a room, where he lived until the time of his disappearance.

The man is about five feet and seven inches in height, weighs about 170 pounds, is of rather a heavy build, has hazel eyes and thin brown hair. He disappeared on Saturday, Oct. 16, leaving considerable baggage with the H. and H. boarding house.

The police have made the request that anyone knowing the whereabouts of Mr. Schockley should send this information to them. Mr. James Hamilton, 318 South Dubuque street, would also like to get in touch with Mr. Schockley.

Boy Scouts to Have Hallowe'en Party

Games, Contests, Eats Stunts, Have Place on Program

Plans have been made by the Iowa City area Boy Scout council to have each troop in the area participate in an afternoon and evening program for Hallowe'en, Oct. 30. This program will consist of a troop hike, camp supper, games and contests, and a council fire. It is expected that about 700 boys of the city and surrounding towns will take part in the program.

In the afternoon, each troop is to hike out into the woods, where camp fires will be lighted. The scouts will cook their own supper over open fire. After supper, scout games and contests will be held until time for the council fire, when patrol reports will be given. Hallowe'en stunts put on by patrols, and ghost stories told. After the council fire has died down the troops will hike to town.

In case the weather makes such a program impossible a special Hallowe'en celebration indoors will be given by the troops.

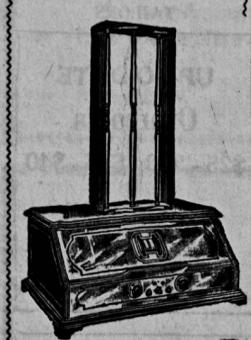

E. G. Stowell, scout executive for the area, made the statement, "Such a program offers an excellent opportunity to emphasize the ninth scout law 'A Scout is Thrifty,' for a scout does not wantonly destroy property, and will protect it on such an occasion as this by inviting non-scouts to enjoy a real Hallowe'en with him in a scout manner."

City to Entertain Press Association Again Next Year

End Conference With Discussion of Problems

The Iowa Press association expressed appreciation of the benefits received at the district conference and decided yesterday morning to return next year.

"This has been a splendid meeting," said E. F. Tucker, managing director of the association. "We are eager to return next year and I shall endeavor to persuade a still larger number to come."

As there was no set program for Saturday, members of the association, with students and faculty of the school of journalism, grouped themselves around the table and spent three hours asking and answering questions. Paul Jarnik of The Storm Lake Pictorial-Tribune, George Tucker, editor of the Webster City Freeman Tribune, Carl Grawe of the Waverly Independent Republican, and C. M. Richards of The Toledo Chronicle took an active part in the discussion.

The questions discussed included Publicity in the News Columns, Editorializing the News Columns, How to Write Funeral Notices, and The Benefits of the Editorial Page.

Saturday afternoon, some of the delegates were taken on a sight-seeing trip, around the campus. The school of journalism, the radio station and the new athletic field house were popular points of interest.

Delegates expressed a great deal of admiration for the manner in which The Daily Iowan is conducted, and E. F. Tucker asserted that it compared most favorably with other daily newspapers in the state.

Market Quotations Indicate no Signs of Business Slump

Bullish Tendency Develops With Assurance of Banking and Business Authorities

[By The Associated Press]

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Speculators for the advance regained control of the price movement in today's brief session of the market after an unsuccessful attempt had been made to unsettle the general list by attacking the motor shares. While a few soft spots developed, closing quotations disclosed scores of net gains running from one to three points, and a few of five points or more.

Trading was moderate in volume. Bullish sentiment was created by assurances from banking and business quarters that no general business depression was in prospect despite the apparent falling off in several important lines, such as automobiles and steel.

The early drive against the motors, several of which sagged 1 to 2 points below yesterday's final quotations, was accompanied by the usual rumors of curtailed production, further price cuts and reduced earnings. Most of the early losses in that group were made up. General Motors rallied from a low of 143 3/4 to 147 3/8, and then eased to 146 1/8, up to 3 3/8 on the day. Mack Trucks rallied from 92 to 94 1/2, up 3 3/8 net.
