President Speaks at Armistice Day Memorial Service

Country Pays Tribute to Honored Dead; Lower Flags

[By The Associated Press] WASHINGTON, Nov. 10—While President Coolidge rode swiftly westward tonight to speak for all his countrymen their share in the high pride with which Missouri will honor the valor of her own world war dead tomorrow, preparations were completed in Washington for the observance of Armistice day at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery.

It is the first time since the inception of the Unknown in 1921 that the president has not gone in person to lay a wreath upon the tomb that gives the day its new significance in American hearts.

No engagements but over of honor to the dead of the Great War would have been permitted to interfere with the annual patriotic pilgrimage. Even in the absence of President and Mrs. Coolidge, a wreath from the White House will be among those that will cover the simple resting place of this lonely warrior.

Aside from the military honors to be paid the war dead by living comrades at all army posts or stations, there is no set formula for observance of the day. At Arlington, those who wish may come to lay a tribute to the Unknown's tomb and pass a moment to look over the rolling hills where white, gleaming new head stones of his known comrades who fell in France, march their orderly lines in this last parade of valorous dead.

A half score of patriotic organizations have reserved time for such ceremonies at the tomb tomorrow and a throng of other visitors will pass by during the day, many of whom will drop single flowers on the white stone that covers the Unknown.

At the capitol, a new torch will be given when the colors rise at sunup over the chambers of the senate and the house. For the first time, there will be companion flags on each staff. They will be service flags of the World war, bearing blue stars for all those who served and gold stars of those who died in France.

People Greet Coolidge ON BOARD PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S SPECIAL TRAIN Nov. 10 (AP)—The middle west gave President and Mrs. Coolidge a friendly greeting today as they passed on their special train bound for Kansas City, Mo., where the president will deliver an Armistice Day address.

Only occasional operating stops were made by the train, but in each case groups of railroad men and citizens gathered about it to extend a welcome. Although the route of the train had not been announced many of the smaller stations had their crowds on hand to wave a greeting, while at different points along the way, school children were present with flags to shout a shrill greeting as the chief executive and first lady of the land passed by.

The train, which left Washington late last night, ran almost immediately into cold weather, and this morning found snow falling lightly. Apparently unmindful of the weather, Mr. Coolidge appeared without his overcoat with Mrs. Coolidge on the platform to acknowledge the greetings early today at Pittsburgh, then in the forenoon during a brief stop at Dennison, Ohio, and again this afternoon at Columbus, Ohio.

Car Massed With Roses Mrs. Coolidge wore a blue and tan crepe gown, matched by a blue turban. The presidential cars were massed with pink roses, but the first lady wore a lone yellow rose at her breast. For the most part, the president spent the day resting in his private car, going to the dining room with Mrs. Coolidge for his meals along with members of his party.

Recluse Found Dead—Youth Seriously Injured

Hawkeye Rooters Not to be 'Docked' for Absence

The regulation of the faculty of the college of liberal arts with regard to absences before and after a vacation is as follows: "Each absence immediately before, or immediately after a holiday or vacation (except the vacation preceding the opening of the new year) shall operate to reduce the amount of credit by one term or semester hour for each absence, unless such absence be excused by the committee on admission and classification."

Armistice day is a holiday. The committee on admission and classification (Dean George F. Kay, Dean Robert E. Rienow, Dean Adelaide Burge, and H. C. Dorcas) will apply this rule in connection with absences from classes on Wednesday, Nov. 10, and Friday forenoon, Nov. 12.

But students absent from classes on Friday afternoon or on Saturday morning of this week will not be given the penalty of loss of credit even if their petition to be excused for the absence is not granted.

This method of administration of the regulation will make it possible for class work to be carried forward normally and will enable those students who wish to go to the game at Madison or to be absent from classes for any other reason on Friday afternoon or Saturday morning to do so without incurring loss of credit.

Thousands Jostle, Injuring Many at Belgian's Wedding

BRUSSELS, Nov. 10—Princess Astrid of Sweden and Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium, united in marriage by a Roman Catholic ceremony in the Cathedral of St. Gudule this morning, tonight left on their honeymoon for a destination which has been kept strictly secret.

The heir to the Belgian throne and the "daughter of the Vikings" whose love had found a way to overcome difficulties of political, religious and financial character, were the center of the greatest demonstration in Brussels since the Armistice day, eight years ago tomorrow.

Fully 200,000 persons lined the magnificent streets and avenues of Brussels and gathered in so great a crush about the Cathedral that many women and children were injured. Several scores were taken to hospitals or treated for their injuries in nearby drug stores.

Today's ceremony followed the civil wedding performed in the Swedish royal palace at Stockholm last Thursday. The religious rites, used in cases of marriage between Roman Catholic and a Protestant, were not so elaborate as would have been the case had both been Catholic communicants.

Leopold and Astrid left the royal palace, which will be their future home, shortly before 11 o'clock this morning, and rode through great crowds to the cathedral in company with the royal train that included King Albert and the Princess' uncle King Gustav of Sweden. As the young couple approached the cathedral, a great shout arose from the massed crowds, which nearly drowned the roar of the cannon firing a 21-gun salute.

The prince and princess were re-church dignitaries, headed by Archbishop Van Roey of Malines. The archbishop greeted the prospective king and queen of the Belgians in the name of the Catholic church. The entourage which drove in open carriages to and from the cathedral was made up of representatives of every royal family in Europe as well as the entire diplomatic body in Brussels. Ambassadors from all countries were garbed in gorgeous uniforms. Although it was a morning hour, American Ambassador Wm. Phillips was dressed in evening clothes.

Frederick DeWolf Dies in Shack on Outskirts of City

Death Occurs After Several Years of Poor Health

Frederick DeWolf, 55 years old, was found dead in the shack of "Chick" Nichols in the southeast part of the city about 5 p. m. yesterday.

DeWolf had been sick at different times during the last few years, and was in poor health at the time of his death. He came over to the shack of Mr. Nichols and stayed with him Tuesday night, before his death. Nichols left him in the morning.

When he returned to the shack yesterday afternoon, he found DeWolf dead. He had evidently been dead for some time, as his body was cold when found.

He is survived by two sisters, and two brothers, Fannie, of Iowa City; Ollie, of New York City; and Charley and John, of Muskegon, Michigan. DeWolf was not married.

Delay Decision in Divorce Appeal of Rhinelander Case

[By The Associated Press] NEW YORK, Nov. 10—Decision on an appeal for a new trial of Leonard Kip Rhinelander's suit for annulment of his marriage to Mrs. Alice Jones Rhinelander, daughter of a negro coachman, was reversed today by the appellate division of the state supreme court.

The decision may not be rendered for several months. The briefs filed to contest points of law in the previous trial, held before Justice Morchauer in West Chester county, run to nearly 5,800 printed pages.

The decision will cover not only the appeal against justice Morchauer's denial of a new trial but will consider arguments for and against the payment by Rhinelander of $12,000 additional counsel fees asked for appeal services by counsel for his wife.

Woman Writer to Lecture Saturday

Marjorie Allen Seiffert, famous writer, will speak before the Saturday lunch club, Saturday noon, Nov. 13. The meeting will be held at the Memorial Union instead of at Youde's Inn.

Mrs. Seiffert was interested in music during her years at Smith college, and composed several pieces. After her marriage, however, she did not have time to devote to music, and sought to express herself in verse. Her earliest printed poem, "Portrait of a Lady in Red," appeared in Reedy's Mirror in 1916. Later works are: "The Old Woman," which is a morality play and one of her most famous poems; "A Woman of Thirty," which was published in 1919 by Alfred A. Knopf, and includes her "Studies and Designs," as a third section; and finally several lyrics of simple and human experience such as love, motherhood, friendship, and emotional illusions.

Storm Center of Maryland Reports More Casualties

[By The Associated Press] LA PLATA, Md., Nov. 10.—This little town emerged slowly today from the numbness of grief which stunned it yesterday when, without warning, a freakish wind, rains and hail storm demolished its school house, killing or fatally injuring fourteen children and injuring at least twenty-three others.

The death list, including a negro man and woman, mounted tonight to sixteen, when Theresa Estelle Dean, aged 9, died in Washington. Scarcely a family among the 500 residents of the town was left untouched in the toll of casualties and no coherent story of the disaster had yet emerged from the dazed accounts of survivors.

Most of the severely injured remained in Washington hospitals where they were taken in city and military ambulances and private automobiles after receiving hasty emergency treatment from physicians and nurses who rushed to the scene as soon as news of the school's collapse became known. Red Cross relief workers, meanwhile, have come to administer expertly to the injured here and to bereaved and impoverished families in need of aid.

After cutting its deadly gash through the outskirts of La Plata where several dwellings and barns as well as the school were shattered, the storm proceeded into the nearby town of Cedarville, where about a dozen houses were wrecked or seriously damaged and two persons were reported injured.

Judge Gets Scent of Dirty Dealings on Murder Jury

[By The Associated Press] CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—Investigation was started today to determine whether or not the jury, which last night returned a verdict of "not guilty" in the trial of the Joe Salsis and Frank Connel, bear runners and alleged Chicago gangsters, for the murder of John Foley, a rival bootlegger, had been unduly influenced.

Judge Harry E. Miller, who presided at the trial, met today with two special state's attorneys and the foreman of the trial jury, who it is reported, held out in jury deliberation for five hours for a hanging verdict.

When the verdict was returned last night, Judge Miller expressed his surprise and chagrin at the jury's findings, saying "that the evidence offered warranted a different verdict." The remark, an unusual one from a trial judge, was held to be significant that an investigation was possible. Today's developments indicate that some move will be made by the prosecution.

C. Herring Excused From Jury Service

DES MOINES, Nov. 10 (AP)—Clyde L. Herring, national democratic committee man, today was excused from district court jury service for the term at the request of welfare drive leaders. Mr. Herring is needed in the city wide campaign for money, the court was informed.

ON TO WISCONSIN

An Editorial Napoleon is credited with the statement that an army travels on its stomach; no less true is the time-honored rule that a football team performs on its mental attitude. The dumbest follower of the gridiron knows that a healthy condition of the mind is as essential to a winning eleven as a vigorous physique.

Yesterday afternoon the college of law, 150 strong, paraded the streets to Iowa Field to prove to a badly battered, but fighting grid aggregation that "The Law School Goes Rolling Along" is no idle ditty.

On this page is a statement from a faculty committee that will make it possible for all students to make the trip to Wisconsin, providing they leave not earlier than noon tomorrow, without loss of credit because of the Armistice day holiday.

Tonight at 7:30 o'clock, the entire squad and coaching staff, the university band, and the student body will gather in the Iowa Union for the season's greatest pep demonstration. Tomorrow noon, every conveyance from the family Packard to sister's bicycle should be turned toward Madison.

Jury in Hall-Mills Trial to Dismiss Court for Holiday

[By The Associated Press] SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 10.—Patriotism of a Somerset county jury today decreed a recess in the Hall-Mills murder trial until Friday. The jury voted there should be no session Armistice day. Half a dozen witnesses were heard today.

The testimony ranged from medical reports of physicians, who saw the bodies before and after burial, to testimony of a maid in the Hall home relative to conditions there at the time the Reverend Edward W. Hall was slain with Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, choir singer in the church of which Mr. Hall was pastor.

Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, widow of the rector and her brothers, Henry and Willie Stevens, charged with the murder of Mrs. Mills, sat calmly through the crowded day.

Razor Introduced in Court as Weapon Used in Killing

A razor unexpectedly was projected into the court room picture by special prosecutor Alexander Simpson, with only the brief word that he has some evidence regarding it. The day brought differences of opinion, one between two doctors and another in which a witness took issue with the transcript of testimony given in 1922. Dr. Edward L. Smith, who was on the stand when the razor found its way into the record, although not in evidence had a place in another play.

Paul Consamus, 14, Knocked off Bike and Injured by Car

Fractured Legs, Ankle, Head, Lacerations, Sustained by Lad

Paul Consamus, fourteen year old son of L. L. Consamus, chief clerk at the C. R. I. & P. freight office, here, was seriously injured last night at 8:10 when the Maxwell sedan driven by Henry Musack, Jr., crashed into his bicycle on Burlington street, in front of the H. J. Dane coal company.

The injured boy was immediately rushed to the emergency hospital in the car of H. J. Dane.

X-rays were taken at once, and revealed that both the boy's legs were fractured, his left hand broken, and there was a compound fracture of his right ankle. His head and cheeks were slashed with deep cuts. Apparently there were no skull fractures.

A deep gash on the cheek of the boy was closed with several stitches last night to prevent further loss of blood. The fractures were packed in ice last night and will be set this morning as soon as the swelling permits.

The accident occurred shortly after dark last night. A section of Burlington street, at the interurban crossing, just east of the Burlington street bridge, is being torn up for construction work, and when the workmen quit for the day, they painted several red lights along the edge of the workings to warn motorists of the danger. The boy was coming across the tracks on the right side of the pavement and heading for town. The car came down Burlington street in the direction of the bridge, veered to the left to avoid the red light warnings, and collided with the boy, completely demolishing the bicycle. The radiator of the car was pushed in and three holes were driven in it. One headlight was smashed, and the windshield broken. The driver said that he did not see the boy at the time of the accident.

Fall and Doheny Plead 'Not Guilty'

[By The Associated Press] PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 10.—All athletic relations between Princeton and Harvard were broken off today, Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, chairman of the board of athletic control, announced. Princeton was willing, Dr. Kennedy said, to finish such events as are on the present schedule but he deemed it "inadvisable."

Trouble between the universities began brewing last spring, when Harvard suggested cutting Princeton from the football schedule in favor of Michigan. Ill feeling in existence since then was brought to a head Saturday, when throngs which attended the Harvard-Princeton game in Cambridge were greeted with a special issue of the Lampoon, Harvard undergraduate publication. The edition was devoted to jeers and insults at Princeton.

Harvard Surprised

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 10 (AP) News of the break between Princeton and Harvard was received at Yale tonight with great regret.

Harold P. Woodcock, general manager of the Yale athletic association, said the rupture was most regrettable from Yale's standpoint because it upset the triple agreement executed several years ago. He had thought, he said, the difference between the two schools had been patched up last month when Harvard agreed to play Princeton again next year on the gridiron.

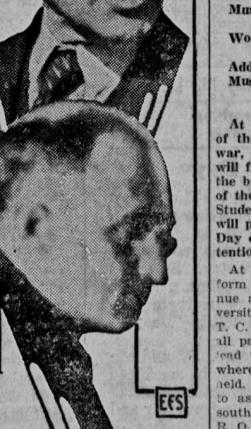

Yale Regrets Break

BOSTON, Nov. 10 (AP)—Announcement from Princeton that all athletic relations between Princeton and Harvard had been broken by Princeton authorities came as a complete surprise to Wm. J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard.

"I have received no word of any such break from Princeton," he told the Associated Press over the telephone from his home in Wellesley tonight. "And of course, until I receive definite word from Dr. Kennedy that he had made such an announcement I can say nothing beyond repeating the assertion that this is the first news to me of the matter."

Double Rivals in Hall-Mills Trial

Opposing counsel in Hall-Mills trial are reported to be rivals for New Jersey governorship. Alexander Simpson (top), special prosecutor, is a Democratic candidate; Clarence E. Case, defense chief, is a Republican candidate. Both are state senators.

At the men's gym the Hon. Charles A. Dewey, judge of the District court and popular orator, will deliver the principal address. On the platform with him will be Harold D. Evans, commander of the Boy Scouts, Chapook post of the American Legion, Dean George F. Kay, representing the university, Mayor Carroll of Iowa City and all members of the local G. A. R.

In the afternoon the Legion post is sponsoring a varied program of boys' and girls' sports. Individual races, team races, and vehicle races of all sorts with prizes for each event comprise the afternoon's program. It is to take place at 2:00 on Jefferson street between Clinton and Capitol. This addition to the Armistice Day program has attracted much interest in the past.

Brookhart Spends Nearly $600 in His Election Campaign

Democratic Candidate for Iowa Governor Lists Expense Account as $460

[By The Associated Press] DES MOINES, Nov. 11—Campaign expenses of Col. Smith W. Brookhart elected to the United States from Iowa on the republican ticket totaled $597.52, it is shown by the statement he filed with the Iowa secretary of state today. Brookhart estimated free entertainment provided him at $400, an item not included in the general expense account total.

Among contributors listed by the colonel were the American Legion post of Melcher which gave $75 and W. L. Stern, of Logan, chairman of the state republican committee who donated $100.

Alex Miller, defeated democrat candidate for governor from Washington listed his expenses as $360.

Wm. T. Gilman, republican candidate for state representative from Cedar county spent $93.65, while Frank Creglow, republican candidate for state representative from Lyon county turned in his statement with the note "no expenditures and I was beaten."

Japanese Theaters Prosper

While the complaints are general of business depression in Japan, the theaters apparently are prosperous. More than 400,000 persons attended theatrical performances in Tokyo during September or about 20 per cent of the population.

At 11:00 o'clock today, the hour of the official ending of the world war, the Armistice Day audience will face east in silent tribute while the bugler blows in memorium of those who died for their country. Students and citizens of Iowa City will pay tribute while the Armistice Day exercises hold the center of attention.

At 9:20 the parade will begin to form at the junction of Iowa avenue and Clinton street. The University band, followed by the R. O. T. C. unit, the American legion and all patriotic bodies of the city will lead the march to the men's gym where the main program will be held. All patriotic bodies are asked to assemble on Clinton street just south of Iowa avenue, at 9:45. The R. O. T. C. unit will meet at 9:20.

In charge of the parade will be Capt. Will J. Hayek of the Iowa National Guard cavalry troop. The line of march will lead north on Clinton to Jefferson street east on Jefferson to Dubuque, south on Dubuque to Iowa avenue, east on Iowa avenue to Dodge street, west retracing the route on Iowa avenue to Linn street, south on Linn to Washington and west on Washington to the men's gym.

To facilitate the marching, Mayor Carroll has requested that no cars be parked on Iowa avenue between Dubuque and Dodge streets from 9:00 o'clock until the parade has passed. Owing to the fact that today is a legal holiday, no parking regulations will be observed by the police. This leniency will make it easy for car owners to comply with the mayor's request.

At the men's gym the Hon. Charles A. Dewey, judge of the District court and popular orator, will deliver the principal address. On the platform with him will be Harold D. Evans, commander of the Boy Scouts, Chapook post of the American Legion, Dean George F. Kay, representing the university, Mayor Carroll of Iowa City and all members of the local G. A. R.

Armistice Day

ARMISTICE day today! The nation uncovers its head for a few minutes, and stands at attention in honoring those young, virile youths who gave their lives for their country. Speeches are made—memorial speeches, patriotic speeches—but every one of them contains the grain of thought—"Be prepared!"

Armistice suggests peace. Should the very significance of the day be sacrificed to the exploiting of militant powers? Armistice suggests respite from war and turmoil. Should the anniversaries of that event be observed by the continual emphasis of preparation of the military machine? The thought is worthy—that our nation should not be encroached upon in a moment of weakness. But should that theme become the hue and cry on such a memorable day as November 11?

America is a great and a powerful nation. It owes its strength to those men, not only in the late war, but in the wars before, who laid down their lives for the country's preservation. This day, November 11, should be a paying homage to the nation's heroes. It should be a day to pay respect to the maimed and to the invalids who, because of their patriotism to their country, are now living joyless lives. It should be a day to honor the thousands of mothers who gave up their sons to the cause. It should be not a day of sentimentality but a day of sentiment, so that each year after its observance the rising American generation can catch the vision for which those soldiers gave their lives, and "carry on."

Buried Treasures of Knowledge

CERTAIN self-appointed alarmists are raising a great hue and cry because they believe that the world is becoming over-educated. They picture a place in which everyone besporns a white shirt and goes about chanting, "Sign here on the dotted line."

Such people are short-sighted in that they fail to see that as the bottom of the educational structure widens so does the top pierce farther into the skies of knowledge. They forget that the sum total of our knowledge is but an infinitesimal point in the universe of facts.

A recent example of the advance of knowledge may be found here at the University of Iowa. Prof. Charles C. Wylie of the astronomy department has been observing and recording the mysterious appearance of spots on the sun.

At the same time Prof. Floyd A. Nagler has been recording the flow of the Iowa river. Recently the two gentlemen met at luncheon and found that the appearance of sun spots varied in direct proportion to the flow of Iowa river.

Then some wizard with a mania for figures found that the sun spots also conformed with the fur receipts of the Canadian Fur company, also with fables in India. Another thrust, that, into buried treasure!

But the critical one continues to howl, "We can never get to the source of the sun spots. We would die of old age before we could ever reach the sun."

Well, the fact may be that the body ceases to age after it gets outside the zone of the earth's pull. Maybe dying of old age is just succumbing to the pull of gravity. In this space outside the pull of the earth may be the place called Heaven—where no one ever ages and dies.

"But if you could get to the sun you could never land. It's too hot," protests the unconvinced one.

Well, brother, perhaps the sun is Hell—or buried treasure.

Life's Quitters

IN New York city, the other day, a man committed suicide because he had no money when, in the mail box downstairs, there was a letter telling him of a $30,000 inheritance.

It is a startling idea that there are very few people who come to the end of their lives without thinking, at one time or another, of committing suicide. Some only play with the idea in their minds, some are saved from it by a turn of fate, and the unfortunate few go on to the end.

A man loses his money, a girl her sweetheart, and they decide that they cannot go on; while if they had only waited for time, who heals all things, to minister to them, they would have learned that there were other fortunes and other sweethearts.

Apart from any religious side to the question, our lives are not our own to throw away as we please, and suicide is a coward's way out. The one who destroys himself may be safely out of it, but those who love him are left behind to bear sorrow and disgrace.

Some poem calls a suicide, "a poor passionate fool, who stayed not long enough at school." If only the man or woman who comes to the point where life seems no longer worth living, could know that nearly everyone else has reached the same point at some stage of life and, by hoping on when hope seemed useless, has fought his way to some sort of victory.

The Year of Wonders

BE glad that you have lived this long, for you have seen the Year of Wonders. In all history, no sequence of events has dragged in its train the prodigious social, mental, and moral transformations that you, who have beheld the World war come and go, have witnessed.

Having lived to see the Year of Wonders, it is now for you to muse on the ferocious spectacle of bitterness, war, hatreds mountains high, assassinations by the millions, on the red battle fields of France, Belgium, Russia, Austria, Italy. Out of these infinite calamities that deformed men's minds as well as their souls, you now behold faster railroad trains, more luxurious hotels, more diamonds for all classes, everywhere more automobiles, the palatial rebuilding of city after city, and where the fathers were content with wooden walls and varnished floors, we demand marble, onyx, bronze, lapis lazuli.

The more violent the war, the greater always the change in the ways of living, thinking, acting. Set that down as a puzzling fact, bringing in the Year of Wonders. And so, out of all these dooms deep as hell, out of these millions on millions of bloody deaths, world without end, has come the strange blossoming, exotic as the jungles of the Tropics, the new materialism called by men "Progress."

Unriddle this riddle, and you are greater than Bacon and Socrates combined. The barbaric display of unprecedented luxuries, squandering, riotousness, taking rise out of universal misery, shame and disaster beyond the knowing, is the outstanding fact of the Year of Wonders in which you are now living.

America might well, like Edward III at the time of the black-plague, that took its toll of 150,000,000 lives, sing the nursery rhyme, "Hey hey, daffy down dilly," and picking up the lady's garter on the ballroom floor clasp it gallantly on his own leg, with the merry quip, "Fe fi, fo, fum, evil to him that evil thinks."

And, in the riot of folly, women went crazy and even the priests were garded as fops. We have pictures of our own, rivaling Edward's, and if you doubt it, look round you, in the Year of Wonders.

Calling Contests

AT Athol, Ia., a chicken calling contest was held for women only. A hog calling contest was also held for the men—professionals barred. The following calling contests are suggested for those anxious to try their vocal skill:

- A babies' mama calling contest.
- A football quarterbacks' signal calling contest.
- A deer calling contest.
- A contest calling for help.
- A contest of pool-players calling shots.
- A name calling contest.
- A contest between chaperons for calling down students.
- A contest for men calling up girls.
- A calling-on-fair-lady contest.
- A collegians' contest, calling on dad for money.
- A calling-card contest.

Packing a Punch

SPORT lovers have always favored the fellow who dares to take a chance. The unusual or the dramatic, has a universal appeal.

The public bowed to "Moose" Clabaugh when he made sixty-two home runs in one hundred and twenty baseball games. As an outfielder he lacked prowess, but when he came to bat he had a mean swing—an athlete that packed a punch. The spectacular playing of Mme. Lenglen, the brilliant runs of Red Grange and the thrilling "come-backs" staged by Bill Tilden, give ticket holders their money's worth. Walter Hagen became popular in golf circles primarily through his ability to accomplish the unexpected in a crisis. Ty Cobb has always been a chance taker.

The public likes good, clean sport, and demands a high degree of skill on the part of the contestants, but for its heroes it selects those who dare to take risks and who can furnish thrills.

Poems That Live

From "Morning Song of Senlin"

It is morning. I stand by the mirror
And tie my tie once more.
While waves far off in a pale rose twilight
Crash on a white sand shore.
I stand by a mirror and comb my hair:
How small and white my face!
The green earth tilts through a sphere of air
And bathes in a flame of space.
There are houses hanging above the stars
And stars hung under a sea . . .
And a sun far off in a shell of silence
Dapples my walls for me.
. . . It is morning, Senlin says, I ascend from darkness,
And depart on the winds of space for I know not where,
My watch is wound, a key is in my pocket,
And the sky is darkened as I descend the stair.
There are shadows across the windows, clouds in heaven,
And a god among the stars; and I will go
Thinking of him as I might think of daybreak
And humming a tune I know . . .
Vine-leaves tap at the window,
Dew-drops sing to the garden stones,
The robin chirps in the chinaberry tree
Repeating three clear tones.

FACULTY OFFICIAL NOTICES

ABSENCES BEFORE AND AFTER ARMISTICE DAY

The regulation of the faculty of the college of liberal arts with regard to absences before and after a vacation is as follows: "Each absence immediately before, or immediately after a holiday or vacation (except the vacation preceding the opening of the new year) shall operate to reduce the amount of credit by one term or semester hour for each absence, unless such absences be excused by the committee on admission and classification."

Armistice day is a holiday. The committee on admission and classification (Dean Kay, Dean Rhenow, Dean Burge, and Mr. Dorcas) will apply this rule in connection with absences from classes on Wednesday, Nov. 10, and Friday forenoon, Nov. 12. But students absent from classes on Friday afternoon or on Saturday morning of this week will not be given the penalty of loss of credit even if their petition to be excused for the absence is not granted. This method of administration of the regulation will make it possible for class work to be carried forward normally and will enable those students who wish to go to the game at Madison or to be absent from classes for any other reason on Friday afternoon or Saturday morning to do so without incurring loss of credit.

R. O. T. C. ATTENTION!

For the Armistice Day parade, Thursday Nov. 11, companies of the R. O. T. C. regiment will assemble at 9:20 a.m. as follows: companies A, B, C, & D (classes which meet on Monday mornings) in front of the liberal arts building; companies E, F, G, & H (classes which meet on Tuesday mornings) in front of the natural science building just north of the walk leading to Old Capitol; companies I & K (classes which meet Monday afternoons) in front of the natural science building. Company guidons bearing the letter of the company will be placed where the right of each company is to form. Engineer units will assemble in front of engineering hall. Uniforms will be worn.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10 (EFS)—One of the elevators in a New York department store is operated by a dour alms across whose neck and chin the scars of razor slashes—evident evidence of many a well-behaved fray—abound with the profusion of railroad tracks in the vicinity of a roundhouse.

On the wall of the elevator hangs a small, framed card bearing the legend: "This car is operated by Friendly James. His watchword is courtesy."

The sad-eyed Greek proprietor of a Sixth avenue lunch chop conservatory, whose business ability manifests itself in marked contrast to his culinary attainments, seeks to augment his clientele by announcing to the world at large that he specializes in "Corned Beef and Cabbage, Jewish Style."

An Eighth avenue hardware merchant who specializes in mouse traps has on sale 30 different steel, wood, wire and tin devices for snaring the diminutive rodents.

I marvelled that so trivial a purpose as mouse catching should prompt ingenious manufacture of such wide range.

"That ain't hothin'," said the merchant. "You probably wouldn't believe me if I was to tell you that they've been 3,000 different kinds of mouse traps patented down in Washin'ton."

I quoted Emerson for him, about the mob finding its way through the woods to the door of the master maker of mouse traps.

"Evidently a great many persons have taken the old master seriously on that," I suggested.

"Who is this guy Emerson," asked the hardware man, "an exterminator?"

A New York woman recently returned from the Orient had an insurance inventory taken of some priceless curios she had picked up in her travels. The collection included two ancient Chinese statuettes fashioned of pure white jade.

The insurance appraiser bestowed a cursory glance on the twin pieces, gravely listing them as "Two glass Chinamen."

A department store advertises at $9 a pair men's house boots of green morocco trimmed with red silk stitching.

The only bird I know would wear house boots of that description is a certain writer of novels who carries his perfumed handkerchief tucked into the left sleeve of his pink shirt and who, in rough Broadwayese is "every other inch a gentleman."

The story of an almost perfect romance was unfolded in court the other day by the plaintiff in a divorce action who told the court that the final stage of the quarrel with her husband began when he gave her a four-cylinder automobile while he drove a $22,000 Hispano Suiza.

"I met my husband two years ago," said the fair plaintiff, "at a party where everybody was drunk. We were introduced by my divorced sister, who at that time was engaged to him, and a week later we were married."

DES MOINES, Nov. 10 (P)—Iowa will be well represented at the agriculture relief conference to be held in St. Louis next Tuesday and Wednesday, president Charles E. Hearst of the Iowa Farm Bureau federation, said here yesterday.

The delegation will represent virtually all the important farm organizations. President Hearst believes the conference holds promise of a new concentration of efforts by farm leaders, in all parts of the country, to obtain remedial legislation.

DES MOINES, Nov. 10 (P)—Iowa has been deep in thought the last few days, the baby doesn't but all the rest of the kids do.

For enabling us not to funk any of our exams, good Lord we thank Thee (although the charity of our neighbor in the exams really saved us).

For delivering us from the fur-coatage which would make us all look like Betas, good Lord we thank Thee (although the real credit is due to father's unwillingness to get one).

For the removal of the weeds from in front of old Capitol, good Lord we thank Thee (although there is very little credit to be assigned for that business).

Who's Who AT IOWA

Ruth A. Gallaher

Ruth Gallaher, one of Iowa City's leading women in politics and a member of the city council, chairman of the finance committee, has been active in public life for a number of years. She attended the Warren, Illinois, Academy, and graduated from the University of Iowa, receiving a B. A. in 1908, and a Ph. D. in 1918.

Miss Gallaher has attended state democratic conventions in Cedar Rapids, 1920, Des Moines, 1922, and Davenport, 1924. She is the author of a work, "The History of the League and Political Status of Women in Iowa," (1918).

What was the feature of the election just past?
I was most interested in the Brookhart-Porter contest. Being a democrat I feel that lowering the tariff on manufactured goods is the only way of equalizing the farmer and the manufacturer. Undoubtedly it is as far as Iowa is concerned.

Does the candidate who is best suited for the office always win? Why?
No. For two reasons. First, the man best suited for the position isn't always the one who has the time to solicit votes.

Second, the voters frequently do not understand the qualifications of the candidates.

What is your opinion of the statement that "Women's place is in the home?"
To a certain extent that is correct. It is a normal attitude, but the world doesn't run on normal lines entirely. Women should have a chance to exercise their talents in whatever they wish to engage.

What do you think of the modern girl?
She has a greater chance for a large womanhood than any other in history. In comparison with the opportunities I do not believe the girl is making the best of them. It is equally true of the men.

Why should women be permitted to serve in the state legislature?
There is no reason why she should not be allowed to serve if the voters so wish.

What about the statement that women are the weaker sex?
It is a good example of the statement that all generalizations are false including this one. Man is fitted for a particular place as is woman. Women are different but not inferior or superior.

Why do gentlemen prefer blondes. Ask them. I don't think they do. I have seen no signs of it. A brunette is just as likely to be as popular as is a blonde.

Gov. Gen Wood Assumes Powers of Control Board

U. S. Officials Inform Philippine Head of Transfer of Command

[By The Associated Press] MANILLA, Nov. 10.—Gov. Gen. Leonard Wood yesterday issued an executive order announcing that hereafter the duties and powers heretofore exercised by the board of control is comprised of governor-general, president of the senate and the speaker of the house of the insular legislatures.

The executive order was issued under authority, it was said, of opinions rendered by the judge advocate general of the United States army and attorney general of the United States holding invalid provisions of the Philippine statutes creating the board of control and defining its duties.

The opinions greatly increase the power of the governor general. Under the Philippine statutes, the board of control selects the directors of all government owned corporations, including the Philippine National bank, Manila Railroad company, National Development company, National Coal company, and others.

The senate president and house speaker, being a majority, were enabled to dictate decisions of the board, over-riding the governor general.

The executive order with the opinions of Judge Advocate General Davis and Attorney General Saragat was handed to President of the Senate Manuel Quezon and Speaker Manuel Roxas immediately after the sine die adjournment of the legislature this morning.

Registrar's Office Renders Unusual Service to Co-ed

The registrar's office has extended its functions from the purely negative service of checking up credits and giving out dismissals, to a plan of genuine social betterment.

Upon the recent receipt of a letter on the fatal stationery of the registrar's office demanding her presence the next morning at the place which might have had inscribed above the door, "Where Students Leave College," one senior girl was overcome by cold chills and vague nameless terrors.

Panoramic glimpses of shattered credits, incomplete registration, too little science, on dismissal, made the night a feverish mixup of course books, and texts springing out at her from the dark corners of the room.

She went to the registrar's office at the earliest opportunity and gave her name with fear and trembling. Two minutes later she left the office richer than before, as one of the office staff had found her meal ticket and had called her in to return it.

Superintendent Washburne will also talk at the conference in the north room of old capitol Thursday afternoon on the subject of "Winnetka an Educational Laboratory."

Stern Says Butler Defeat is Warning for Republicans

DES MOINES, Nov. 10.—(P)—Commenting on the defeat of Senator Butler in Massachusetts in last week's election, Willis Stern, chairman of the republican state central committee, yesterday said the republican party should accept it as a warning that the needs of all sections of the country should be more carefully considered. The Butler defeat, he said, might mean a strengthening of the position of the west on the farm relief question.

Mr. Stern does not regard the outcome in Massachusetts as a direct expression on the administration because of the desire of the democrats to beat a republican national committee.

Education Class to Send Men to Game

Acting upon the principle that weak football comes from the meek, should be voters, Prof. Frederick B. Knight of the education department is swinging psychology to the side of the team in the coming fray with Wisconsin, by giving the team the organized support of his class in psychology of education.

The class is dividing the expense of sending Edward B. Carter and Mercer B. Richter, chosen representatives, to carry the enthusiastic support of the other members to the game next Saturday.

During every game this year, according to Professor Knight, the crowd has been squelched, unspornsmen-like, and reduced to a spineless defeat, long before the team was beaten.

The too common student attitude has been that of disregarding the part which the supporters of a team play in winning a game. Many consider the "I knew all the time we'd lose," to be a reflection against the team instead of against the one who says it.

Professor Knight has outlined to the class during the last few weeks the probable psychological explanations of the football season. He has been anxious to start the precedent of sending representatives to carry the enthusiasm of the crowd. This is the first time in the history of the university that such a cooperative plan of supporting the team has been carried out.

Now the class is showing a little real Iowa spirit by contributing a quarter apiece toward paying the expenses of the chosen rooters to Madison. Earlier in the week he announced the plan, saying that any who wished to show their loyalty to the team could lay the money on his desk the first of the next period.

Individual enterprise only brought three dollars, but introducing a little group incentive by passing the hat raised the necessary fare for a trip to Madison. This illustrates Professor Knight's principle in regard to the team that individuals respond better when working with a group than when working alone without support.

The class decided to send two representatives, paying half of each fare to Madison. Professor Knight agreed to furnish the transportation home in his own car.

Next the question arose who should be given free passage. Seven came forward, four men and three girls, and the class voted. In a carefully supervised election where no one voted an undue number of times, the opportunity fell to Carter and Richter. Their nearest feminine competitor was only two votes behind.

Professor Knight threatened the boys with continual recitation during the whole year, if they are able to talk when they arrive home Monday. They are commissioned to represent the whole class, and unless they have hoarse voices when they return, they will not have fulfilled their obligation to the class, he said.

YW Vocation Group Starts Investigation

The vocations group of the Y. W. C. A., of which Phoebe Williams, A3 of Iowa City, is the chairman, held a meeting yesterday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock in the liberal arts drawing room. Dean Carl Seashore of the department of philosophy and psychology started the group in their investigations by a talk on vocations. He said that a woman, in order to be successful, must make her avocation her vocation, and be really interested in it. He also told the members of the group that, to be successful in their investigations, they must help themselves, and not depend for information on lectures by faculty members and people outside the university.

A short discussion was held, and it was determined that a committee should investigate the openings of social service and report the results of their investigation at the next meeting, Wednesday, Dec. 1. The members of this committee are: Louise Hallenbeck, A1 of Cedar Rapids; Helen King, A4 of Newmarket; and Doris Wendroff, A4 of New York City.

Dorcas Receives Word from Iowa's Former President

H. C. Dorcas recently received a letter from Prof. Thomas H. McBride, former president of this university, who is now living in Seattle. To him Seattle seems a city of youngsters who control the big business and who regard any man past forty as a relic of the dim ages.

"I was reckoned a sort of patriarch when I first arrived in Seattle," said Professor MacBride, "and the men seemed to feel that I had reached the time in life when I should retire from the scene."

The former president also said that of the more successful law firms in Seattle the firm of the Burkheimer brothers held a commanding position. This firm was originally composed of Dean, John, Arthur, and Clark Burkheimer, all of whom received degrees from the University of Iowa. In recent years, however, the work of the company has been carried on by John and Clark due to the untimely deaths of Dean and Arthur Burkheimer.

LEAD THIS FIRST
MERRY LOCKE, pretty and gay as her nickname, is a horn flirt. Since the time she was 16, Merry has always had men galore at her feet. She has no ambition beyond love-making and a good time.

At 20, she fails in her business course, to the disgust and disappointment of MOMS, her mother. When her father suddenly dies, she takes a job in LILLIE DALE'S beauty shop. At that time she is having the first real love affair of her life. The man in the case is TONY GAINES, a serious-minded young lawyer, who wants to marry her.

One night Merry, in a fit of jealous rage because Tony is spending the evening with his mother, lets DERRICK JONES make love to her, just by way of "getting even" with Tony. Later she goes out with a new man, BILL ERSKINE, a wealthy bachelor. When Tony hears about it, he stops seeing her, and later Merry hears that he has gone to Montana. A letter comes to her from him, but is lost in the house before she has a chance to see it. However, she returns his ring and tries to forget him.

Helen, her oldest sister, marries BILL HEFORTH, CASHEE marries MORLEY KAUFMAN, a rich broker with whom she quarrels constantly, and JINNY, the youngest sister, annexes DERRICK JONES. She and her young husband live with his parents, for Jinny refuses to stay in the same house with MOMS' boarder, Mr. HEFFLINGER. MOMS is in love with Mr. Hefflinger, and "acts too silly for words" over him, so Jinny says.

Through Cassie, Merry meets BILL ERSKINE, a wealthy bachelor. He and Merry are engaged, but he keeps putting off the date for their wedding. One night when Merry thinks he is in Florida, he appears suddenly at the house and finds her in the arms of LES PURCELL, one of her old beaux.

His jealousy only amuses Merry, who plays up to Les Purcell. Toward the end of the evening MOMS and Lillie come home from the movies. Lillie walks into the kitchen and tells Erskine that she used to know him. He says he can't remember.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER XLII
Laughter rippled all over Lillie's broad white face, and sparkled in her bright little eyes.

"So you don't remember me, Tubby?" she said, looking more and more pleased. "Of course I've fleshed up a bit since that winter down in Florida—and I'm not any younger than I was. But I'll bet you'd know who I was if I sat down here and gave you a good mauling."

"You've not forgotten Lillie Dale, surely," she helped him out.
"And then, of course, Bill had to pretend that he hadn't known her until that instant. His face cleared and he came across the kitchen floor and shook her plump white hand, as if he were delighted to see her. Which he wasn't—not one little bit!"

"I never would have known you, Lillie!" he said heartily.
He tried to look pleasant. But Merry saw him frown as Lillie sat down in MOMS' little rocking chair and settled herself for a nice long gossip with him.

"And what happened to that lovely English girl you were going to marry that year?" she asked him, beaming at him as she rocked herself back and forth. "A tall blond girl, with pale blue eyes. Very thin she was—not pretty, but not bad looking, either! She had a lot of money, someone told me."

Bill looked uncomfortable and said that he didn't remember the English girl who had money.
"You've got me confused with someone else," he said smoothly.
Lillie laughed. "Well, maybe," she answered. But she winked at MOMS wickedly.

"You were so nice to that winter, too," Lillie mused, smiling up at the ceiling. "Remember how you used to come into my shop every day or two? How you used to want to take me out to dinner, or for a ride in a surf-boat? But I never was able to go, was I? I was always so busy. Well, I must be going upstairs and leave you young people to yourselves. You coming, too, Sadie?"

She looked at MOMS, who followed her.
But on the threshold she turned.
"How long ago that winter seems now, Tubby, doesn't it?" she asked, with good-natured mockery in her voice. "I was married then. Do you remember that I told you I was? But you said that didn't make any difference. Are you still so broad-minded, Tubby?"

Bill looked at her as if he could cheerfully murder her, but she only laughed back at him.
The sound of her laughter died away, slowly as she and MOMS mounted the stairs.
Merry could still hear her and MOMS talking upstairs, an hour later, when Les Purcell said goodnight. Bill had outstayed him, and when Merry and he were alone he was silent for a long time.

It was she who broke the silence at last.
"I suppose you're angry with me," she faltered. In the flickering light from the grate fire she was flushed and lovely, and her lowered lashes made moth-wing shadows on her cheeks.
"Aren't you?" she asked, and raised the green, slanting eyes that knew how to say more than any words could.

Bill turned and took her by both arms, shaking her a little. He glared down at her fiercely.
"What have you to say for yourself?"

"self?" he asked her. His voice trembled with the rage he had been holding in for all evening. Rage, and jealousy, too.
"What do you mean by having that fellow here?" he went on savagely. "Who the devil is he, anyway?"

"Don't swear!" Merry said in a small, innocent voice. "Don't swear at me!" she raised her big eyes and tried to look frightened.
But she wasn't. She knew she had Bill Erskine under her thumb, as she never had had him before. His own jealousy of her had put him in her power.

"Who is he?" Bill repeated, shaking her by both arms. His fingers pressed deep into her rose-white flesh, and she winced.
"Bill! You hurt me!" she cried, but he only shook her again.
"Who is he?"

"He's a man," said Merry, and she giggled.
It struck her all at once that Bill looked awfully funny with his face red with anger, his eyes bulging, and his teeth biting hard on the eternal black cigar.

"He's a man—who wants to marry me," she fibbed. "I met him at the beauty shop. He's a friend of Lillie's."

She did not mention that she had known Les Purcell years before Lillie knew him—away back in her little-girl high school days.
"And that's another thing! I don't like you to be in that beauty shop with Lillie!" The words seemed to shoot out of Bill's mouth. "I don't like her! I think you'd better get out of the beauty shop—and the quicker the better!"

"But, Bill," Merry cut in in a sweet, timid little voice. "But Bill, I can't. I've got to earn my own living as you perfectly know. And what would I do if I gave up the shop?"

In the golden half-light that came from the dancing flames she looked very soft and innocent and helpless as she flirted her big eyes at him.
"You see, I've got to do something for a living—and I've just about made up my mind not to get married," she went on in that same sunny voice. "At least, I've about made up my mind not to stick around waiting for you any longer, Bill."

He let her go and fell back on the hair-cloth sofa behind him. His slack mouth half opened, as he blinked at her.
"Are you crazy?" he wanted to know.
Merry shook her head blithely.
"Not any more," she answered, shaking her head gaily, so that all the gold-leaf ripples of her hair shone like metal.

"Not any more," she said again, in her little fluting voice. "I've been with my senses, Bill. I've been waiting around for you, for almost a year. Almost a year of my sweet young twenties gone, Bill—for nothing!"

"You call me nothing?" asked Bill sulkily. His head was sunk down into his fat neck, and his eyes gleamed at her narrowly. For once he had forgotten his black cigar, and it drooped from one of his pudgy hands.
"No, indeed," Merry answered warmly, but her bright blue-green eyes were still filled with the sparkle of laughter. It seemed to Bill that she actually was laughing at him! At him!

"No, I call you a very nice person," Merry told him, with her head

Head Restaurateur Diagnoses Industry

On one side and her hands clasped around one slender knee. "But I've been finding out lately that I'm very nice, too!"

"From this Purcell guy, I suppose?" Bill wanted to know.
Merry nodded cheerfully.
"Yes, from him," she confessed, "and from other men, too! From Muriel Kaufman's friend, Cabby Marsh, for instance!"

She stopped and let that sink in. It did, Bill scowled darkly.
"Cabby Marsh!" he said after her. "Flying pretty high, aren't you? Getting into the millionaire class, eh?"

The girl's eyebrows arched themselves on her clear white brow, and her innocent looking eyes were wider than ever.
"I didn't know Cabby had any money," she answered lightly. "I never think of money when I think of people. I just think of the people, themselves. I like Cabby." She let her voice become soft and dreamy.

She gazed wistfully into the fireplace.
Bill Erskine's eyes were on her face. She knew that he was angry with that peculiar anger that is born of jealousy.

"Then she made up her mind to give him one more pin-prick. You didn't think nobody would notice me, did you Bill?" she asked him. "You don't think I tell all the men I'm engaged to you, do you?"

Bill just went on staring at her, puzzled and angry and all at sea. He had never seen Merry in a mood like this before—full of recklessness and tantalizing laughter, and he didn't know whether he wanted to shake her, kiss her, or just get up and walk out of the house.

What he did was simply to sit still and go on staring at her vacant-ly.
"Indeed, I don't tell anybody I'm engaged to you," she answered her own question. "I'm tired of sitting at home alone, like old maid school ma'am! I've got my second wind, and I'm off in a cloud of dust. All I want you to do is to let me break the engagement and go my way singing paeons of joy and a bit of jazz!" She threw back her head and laughed wildly, hysterically.

"I'm too young for you, anyhow!" she half sobbed out at him. "I never should have said I'd marry you—I hate you, sometimes!"

She began to cry in earnest. She tried to stop but she couldn't. Her teeth chattered and she shook all over, crushed down into one corner of the hair-cloth sofa.

Bill got up and began to shake her. He closed the door of the room so that MOMS should not hear her sobs.

It was an hour before Merry was quiet in her warm bed. She lay propped against the pillows, sipping the glass of hot milk that MOMS had brought her.

"Now, then, that you've come to your sense," her mother said severely, "what was the matter with you? What made you go to pieces like that?"

Merry only shook her head. How could she explain to her mother that something inside of her had suddenly seemed to snap, tonight? That nothing had seemed worthwhile. Nothing. Not even the rich marriage that she had been trying to make with Bill Erskine for so long. And then, besides—

Her lip quivered, and she drew a long sobbing breath.
"Oh, MOMS!" she burst out, and threw herself on her mother's warm comforting breast. "Oh, MOMS!—Tony—Tony Gaines is going to marry some girl out in Montana! Oh, I can't bear it! I can't bear it—I can't bear it!"

"My, Lord, Merry, what's got into you?" he asked. "Merry—Merry! Listen to me! Turn around, and look at me!"

But Merry paid no attention to him. She went on crying, more wildly than ever. And finally Bill was forced to go halfway up the stairs and call for MOMS to come down.

She came, gaunt and thin, in a gray-and-white flannel bathrobe.
"What did you do to her?" she asked Bill accusingly, when she saw the state Merry was in.
"I?" asked Bill blankly. "I?"

MOMS gave him a look that he never forgot, and turned to Merry. "You'd better go," she said over her shoulder, and Bill did not need a second invitation. He went—and all the way back to his hotel he pondered the woman question.

"Can't figure 'em out. Queer things—women," was his final conclusion.
They were too deep for him.

It was an hour before Merry was quiet in her warm bed. She lay propped against the pillows, sipping the glass of hot milk that MOMS had brought her.

"Now, then, that you've come to your sense," her mother said severely, "what was the matter with you? What made you go to pieces like that?"

Merry only shook her head. How could she explain to her mother that something inside of her had suddenly seemed to snap, tonight? That nothing had seemed worthwhile. Nothing. Not even the rich marriage that she had been trying to make with Bill Erskine for so long. And then, besides—

Her lip quivered, and she drew a long sobbing breath.
"Oh, MOMS!" she burst out, and threw herself on her mother's warm comforting breast. "Oh, MOMS!—Tony—Tony Gaines is going to marry some girl out in Montana! Oh, I can't bear it! I can't bear it—I can't bear it!"

MOMS sat still on the edge of the bed, and held her close, while she sobbed out the misery that had been gnawing, like a pain, in her breast ever since she had heard the news about Tony and Katherine Bannerman.

And all at once, MOMS remembered something else about Merry—an old memory that caught at her heart. Long ago when she was a little girl, she had fallen down on her way to school. She had stayed for the morning session, had walked all the way home, dry-eyed, and not until she was in MOMS' arms had she begun to cry because her knees were scraped and bruised.

And like many another mother, MOMS had nothing to heal this bruise and hurt that Merry was showing her—this hurt that was in her heart. All she could do was stroke her soft bright hair, and murmur that it didn't really matter.

"There's as good fish in the sea as ever were caught, my dear," said MOMS and then added practically, "Did you tell Bill Erskine how you feel about Tony?"

"The girl shook her head.
"Well, thank goodness for that!" MOMS said fervently. "You'd better marry him and be done with it. There's nothing brings a girl around to her senses like getting married and having her family! You don't card about that Gaines anyway! He's been gone from this town for more than a year, and you've never opened your mouth about him! You just imagine you're in love with him, because you've been hearing about him and some other girl!"

Which was MOMS' idea of comfort and advice rolled into one.

Confidence Returns to Hawks on Eve of Wisconsin Journey

Reserve Material Continues to Get Chance in Drills

Iowa Eleven Departs for Badger City Late Tonight

Confidence oozed back into the Hawkeye gridmen from where it was jarred so rudely last Saturday, as they went through a long scrimmage against the freshmen last night. A few long runs by Bunn, Cubel, Don Smith, and Skelley served well to bolster up the shattered morale of the Old Gold gridmen.

Nick Katsch is still on the retired list and has not donned the mole skins all week. He chose a disagreeable week of snow, rain, ice and cold weather to put his name on the injured list. The Cowboy will be ready to battle the Badgers Saturday, however, and may be in his "fighting" mood as the result of his enforced layoff.

Essen Guard, returned to the field last night with a muzzle over his face to protect his sadly battered nose. The Gophers were not all mugged by his countenance when he tangled with the trampling line plungers. A swollen lip is only one of the adornments that the Maroon-clad warriors attached to him.

All of the other men were going strong and dashed about the ice covered field while a specially organized squad of future lawyers mounted the west grand stand and rent the cold atmosphere with Iowa yells. The jurists-to-be evidently feel that something must be done to bring out a little spirit and took it upon themselves to set the pace.

Team Departs Tonight

Tonight at 11:35 the team will leave for the Badger stronghold, where they will be the big attraction at the Wisconsin Homecoming. The cross country team will leave at the same time. They will arrive at Madison about 9:00 Friday morning.

The Badgers, despite their poor showing during the season, will provide stiff opposition for the Old Gold. Although they have one of the weakest offensive combinations in the conference, they have a defense that held Minnesota to a lucky 16 to 10 victory two weeks ago. They are quick to take advantage of breaks and any Hawkeye fumbles may be costly.

Badgers Won Last Year

Wisconsin won a 6 to 0 game against Iowa last year in one of the worst games of the season. A heavy snow and wind made good football impossible, and the Badgers showed over the winning marker in the final period after one of the worst fumbling exhibitions in history. Twenty-seven fumbles were made in the first quarter alone.

This year the Old Gold, fighting for a chance to move up from the cellar, are priming hard to beat the Cardinal. Their showing against the Gophers has been forgotten and they are ready to start anew in the present battle. Coach Ingwersen has been using reserve backs all week in an effort to increase his offensive strength, and a change in the backfield lineup would come as no surprise Saturday. Skelley, Don Smith, Arnell, Bunn, Cubel, and O'Neal all got long workouts last night, and they may displace some of the regulars in the starting lineup.

Stribling Steps for Des Moines Fandom Tonight

Aged "Bat" Levinsky is Georgian's Opponent

[By The Associated Press]

DES MOINES, Nov. 10.—Young Stribling, famous Georgia "School Boy Boxer" will make his second appearance in an Iowa ring here tomorrow night, fighting Battling Levinsky, former light-heavyweight champion. Both men wound up training for the bout today.

The tussle, promoted by the local American Legion post, will determine to what degree Levinsky has retained his old stamina and prowess after five years of comparative idleness in the ring.

Stribling won an easy fight at Waterloo a few weeks ago.

A victory for either Levinsky or Stribling will give the winner a right to step in and claim the light heavyweight title, inasmuch as Jack Delaney, the present champion, has made public the fact that he can no longer make the weight limit, and has indicated that he may voluntarily relinquish his crown in the near future.

Hawkeye Harrier Squadron Leaves for Badger Run

Old Gold Gallopers Face Strong Wisconsin Team Saturday in Crucial Contest

By virtue of wins over Illinois and Minnesota, Iowa harriers who leave for Wisconsin tonight should make it interesting for the strong Badger aggregation, conference champions for the past two years, in the crucial test of the year, which is to be held on the Wisconsin course Saturday morning preceding the Wisconsin-Iowa football game.

As this is the last duel meet for both Coach Bresnahan's and Coach T. E. Jones' men, the conference championship will undoubtedly rest on this affair. Wisconsin is out for blood, and Coach Bresnahan realizes it and has worked his men hard in preparation for the meet.

The cross country men who will leave on the mid-night train tonight with the football team are Captain Speers, A. N. Bender, G. H. Brady, W. A. Elliott, L. E. Hunn, A. R. Houser, J. P. McCammon, W. C. Meyers and W. G. Wagner.

Big Squad Reports for Tank Workouts

A large number of men are reporting each evening to Coaches Armstrong and Klingaman for the varsity and freshman squads. Tuesday night the men spent much time on the fundamentals of swimming, perfecting the various strokes and developing endurance. The workout ended with a hard scrimmage between two water polo teams.

The freshmen are now holding a three mile marathon swim that will probably end in about two weeks. They swim a quarter of a mile at a time. Thus far Sam Greller has turned in the best time of the meet. His time is 6:00 4-5 for the quarter. George Turbett closely follows him with 6:07 and R. B. Nelson is third with 6:25 2-3.

Hornsby Says He Will Not Leave St. Louis Club

Manager of Champion Cardinals Denies Rumor that Trade Sends Him to Giants

[By The Associated Press]

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 10.—Denying rumors that he would be traded to the New York Giants because of friction known to have existed between him and President Sam Breadon of the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals, Manager Rogers Hornsby said today he would rather play in St. Louis than any other city.

"The question of Mr. Breadon and I conferring on our terms for next year is our private business," he said. "I can only say that I would rather play in St. Louis than in any other city in the country. I do not want to play in New York, Chicago or any other city. I want to play in St. Louis with the Cardinals."

Hornsby is a heavy stockholder in the club. He is the second largest stockholder. Mr. Breadon is the only man who owns more stock in the Cardinals than he does. Naturally, being interested financially to such an extent, I am interested in protecting my investment."

Hornsby has never signed a manager's contract. His player's contract expired this year. Although he has made no public statement it is known that he will ask Breadon for a free hand in managing the Cardinals without interference from Branch Rickey, former manager and now vice president of the club, whose activities among the players Hornsby is known to have resented. Hornsby also is expected to request a substantial increase in salary.

Will Hold Conference

Breadon, who is in Bradenton, Fla., said over the long distance telephone today that he would confer with Hornsby when he returned to St. Louis early in December and he was confident everything "will be ironed out."

Election Officers Held Under Bail for 'Zeroing' Candidates

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10 (AP)—Three precinct election officers were held yesterday in $1,000 bail for the grand jury for "zeroing" candidates other than the republicans in this city.

When their division, the second of the 86th ward, was reached in the official count, Judge James G. Gordon, Jr., and Charles B. McMichael, presiding over the election court, could not understand the unanimity of voters of the division when the returns showed 295 for each of the republican candidates from W. S.

City High Ready for Homecoming Gridiron Battle

Red and White Face Muscatine This Afternoon in Final Home Game of Season

City High men appear to be in excellent shape for their final home game of the year, with Muscatine, this afternoon at two o'clock. Tuesday night, the squad went through a tough scrimmage in spite of the inclement weather, and last night the men indulged in a light limbering-up signal drill.

An unusual angle of the game is presented when it is remembered that Coach "Zip" Kings of Muscatine is a former grid star of Iowa City and that he also served as assistant to Coach Soucek for a number of years.

A rousing pep meeting was held yesterday afternoon, with short talks given by the players and members of the faculty. A pep demonstration and parade is planned for one o'clock this afternoon after which the student body will proceed directly to the battleground. As this is City High's Homecoming, and also the final game of the year, the biggest crowd of the season is anticipated.

The probable starting lineup for the locals is: ends, Idema and Schluppert; tackles, Keelson and Herberling; guards, James and Sanger; center, Collins; quarterback, Stevens; halves, McGuire and Brown; fullback, Rhinehardt.

Cedar Rapids Firm Has Knoxville Bank

KNOXVILLE, Iowa, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Control of the Knoxville National bank and Trust company has passed into the hands of O. M. Dundy and associates, of Cedar Rapids, it was announced here today. "Some stock will be held by local people. The bank was organized in 1871, has capital stock of $100,000, and deposits of more than $1,000,000. The transfer of control marks the partial retirement of J. D. Elliott, a pioneer financier of Marion county."

U. High Grid Team Faces Mt. Vernon

Play Season's Final Game Out of Town This Afternoon

University high football men journey to Mount Vernon today prepared for a hard fought game as a closer for the season. Working against inclement weather conditions the Blue and White have gone through practices undaunted by falling rain, frozen ground, and wintry winds.

In last Friday's 13 to 0 victory over Tipton high a good showing was made, and the team is now in fine shape.

A passing attack baffled the Tipton players and gained ground consistently for the Blue and White. One of the two touchdowns scored came by the aerial route. Louis, right end, has been handling the right wing in good form, and proves useful on the receiving end of the aerial attack. Dennis, right half, has been throwing accurately, and circling ends for good yardage.

Mount Vernon stands doped as a worthy competitor. The West Branch eleven fell before their charges for a score of 7 to 0 in a game two weeks ago. University high played West Branch to a scoreless tie this year in an early season game. Teams are therefore rated at about equal strength, if comparative scores mean anything.

Jury Finds for State in Rogers Liquor Hearing

Released on $1,000 Bond; Awaits Sentence in Justice Court Today

A verdict of guilty was returned against Roy W. Rogers, 211 S. Clinton, charged with illegal transportation of improperly labeled liquor, in Justice of the Peace B. F. Carter's court, at 9:30 last night after the jury had been out since 5:00 p. m.

In Rogers' hearing, which began at 10:00 yesterday morning, evidence showed that officers found three one-half pints of liquor on his person at the time of his arrest.

He is at present out on $1,000 bond awaiting the sentence which will be pronounced tomorrow morning.

Rogers, who is proprietor of a radiator repair shop at 211 S. Clinton, was arrested Saturday afternoon on Iowa field by Detective Carroll of Iowa City, assisted by Chief of Police Bensch of Cedar Rapids and a plain clothes man from Des Moines.

Girl Scouts Bake Cakes in Contest for Troop Prizes

Another feature of the National Girl Scout week, which is being observed this week, is a cake baking contest for the troops. The cakes are to be brought to Gay's meat market by 9 o'clock Saturday morning. Prizes for the winning cakes will be in the form of ribbons. A committee of students from the university home economics department will act as judges.

Miss Frances Zull of the educational committee of the girl scouts council, and Mrs. Nyle Jones are in charge of the arrangements for the cake contest. The food sale committee consists of Mrs. Thomas Farrell, Mrs. Will Marsh, and Mrs. Frederick Holmes. The committee of leaders from the Leaders' association is Geneva Millet, Beatrice Stoddard, and Elsie Molyneux.

Police Seek Robbers of Coach Bresnahan's Auto

A Buick five-passenger sedan, 1926 model, was reported to have been stolen from in front of the men's gymnasium last night at about nine o'clock.

The automobile, the property of G. T. Bresnahan, 5 Muscatine road, bore the license number 58-491 and was Duco grey in color.

As soon as a report of the theft was in the hands of the police, seven long distance calls were made by Night Captain August G. Mahke, the whole time taking less than eighteen minutes. Police in Davenport, Des Moines, Grinnell, Muscatine, Clinton, and Cedar Rapids were notified; while both broadcasting stations WHO, Des Moines; and KTTN, Muscatine, were aiding in the search.

Police have made the request that any one obtaining information of the theft notify the local station immediately.

Love Warns City Against Disease

According to a statement made by Dr. Frank L. Love, city health commissioner, autumn and late spring are the seasons when cases of diphtheria are apt to be most prevalent, especially among children from six months to six years of age.

Scarlet fever and measles are also likely to get a good start in a community. As a warning, since there are at present a number of cases of these three diseases in the city, it would be advisable for people who wish to be kept immune from these diseases, to have sore throats examined by their family physicians.

Englert Hangs Its Shingle Out Again Today; Maybe

Workmen will hang out the new eighteen foot electric sign before the rebuilt Englert theatre sometime today, if weather permits. The old sign came down yesterday. The new sign will be vertical with one letter below the other, as was the old one.

City School Holds Special Assembly for Pep Meeting

Open Sales Campaign for Class Annual; Alumni Speak

Two assemblies were given at the Iowa City high school yesterday, one the regular 9 o'clock assembly period, and the other a pep meeting at 3:15. The morning assembly was sponsored by the high school Annual staff, and marked the beginning of an extensive campaign for the year-book. The speakers were introduced by Miss Florence I. Churchill, faculty advisor, the first being William E. Beck, business manager, who explained the business side of the Annual.

Ruth Frazier, editor-in-chief, described the editorial side, and Marjorie Johnson appealed to the student body for their support. Art J. H. Lane, head of the speech department, talked in behalf of the faculty, and Mrs. Philip D. Ketsel voiced the sentiments of the parents. The junior class president, Donald Brown, and the senior president, George Rabas, concluded the talks by responding to the appeal to the students.

Dedicate Annual to Parents

The Annual this year is dedicated to the fathers and mothers of the students, and it is hoped that the book will equal if not surpass those of previous years.

The "Red and White" as it is called, has won recognition in previous years as one of the best in the state. It has also received honorable mention in the National Year Book contest, conducted by the Art Crafts guild of Chicago, in which it had competition from schools much larger than the local high school.

Alumni Give Talks

Representatives of the classes of '23, '24, '25, '26, gave short talks. These included Ruth Reese, '23; Max Kane, '23; Charles Nutting, '24; Richard Davis, '24; Thomas Cox, '24; Clarence Brown, '25; Hunter Gump, '25; Lucile Nelson, '25; William Barker, '26; Roy Koza, '26; Edward Lorack, '26; Donald Harter, '26; and Robert Prentiss, '26. Former yell leader, Thomas Cox, Hunter Gump, and Max Kane, led several yells.

The parade of alumni and student floats will form at the high school at one o'clock today, and will march through town on its way to the Shrader field. The game is scheduled for two o'clock. A mixer for all high school students, alumni, and Muscatine rooters will be held in the gymnasium at 7:30. George Jones' orchestra will furnish the music.

Drapes, Curtains Soon Installed in Englert Theater

Work on the new Englert theater is being rapidly drawn to a conclusion and, at the present time, it appears that the amusement house will be opened to the public sometime next week, according to Albert Davis, manager of the theater.

A. G. Stolte, general manager of the eastern Iowa section of the A. H. Blank theatrical enterprises, and C. H. Thompson, head of Younker's furnishing department, Des Moines, will arrive in Iowa City today to see about the installation of drapes and the laying of carpets in the new playhouse.

Seats in the balcony have all been set and, under the direction of a factory representative, a crew of fifteen men are working on the job of getting the main floor seats installed, a task that will be finished by Friday, at the latest according to manager Davis.

The new electric sign will be hung over the canopy today. The special asbestos curtain arrived yesterday from Bosman and Landis, a Chicago firm specializing in theater curtains.

Handicaps Fail to Halt Viaduct Work on College Street

Despite the fact that Ralston creek necessitated the building of a coffer-dam before the fifth set of excavations for the concrete footings could be dug, and that lack of steel for reinforcement halted the further pouring of concrete, the work on the College street viaduct is not behind schedule.

For two days the crew of men have been sinking a coffer-dam along the west bank of the creek, where the fifth set of footings will be dug. The wooden dam, reinforced with metal sheeting, is being built to turn the creek water aside, so that it will not hamper the excavators in their work. Another eight days will be required before the dam will be completed and the concrete poured for the footings.

Four sets of diggings for the bridge footings, with four excavations in each group, have already been completed. Concrete for the first four footings has already been poured. The forms for the piers are now resting on the footings and are in readiness for the concrete.

The north half of the present College street bridge has been closed to traffic. This part of the structure is being used for the mixing of the concrete, which is poured through a small hole in the plank floor.

Visit Elementary School

Visitors at the elementary school this week are: Marguerite Ramsdall, Nelwah Risko, and Hortense Wells of Hazelton; Robert S. Lynd from the Commonwealth Fund, New York; and Mrs. Elizabeth Chandler, Council Bluffs, are also visiting the school.

Reilly Claims Cold Snap Will Leave Soon

The coldest weather of the season was registered late Tuesday night when the mercury in Prof. John F. Reilly's government thermometer dropped to 14 degrees above zero. It was still resting at that mark at 7 p. m. yesterday morning. Ice of considerable thickness was frozen in open ponds about the city.

The weather moderated somewhat during the day when the column rose to 30 above, but by night it had fallen again. At 7 p. m. last night it had dropped to 22 above.

In a statement issued last evening Professor Reilly said that he believed the cold snap was due to leave in a very short time.

City School Board Takes Measures to Prevent Diphtheria

Last night at the regular meeting of the Iowa City board of education, it was recommended that the school here adopt the recommendation of the state board of health regarding the administration of the toxin-antitoxin treatment as a preventive for diphtheria. It was revealed that there is already five cases of diphtheria carriers in the city, including one teacher, and to prevent any further outbreak, the recommendation was passed by the board.

Dr. George C. Albright, in his report to the board, urged that the treatment be carried into effect immediately.
