Lafayette Young—Iowa Editor

THIRTY-SIX years ago a young journalist whose only previous editorial experience had been as editor of a country weekly bought a newspaper in the state capital of Iowa, installed and operated its presses, became known as the best printer in the shop, conducted the news department, wrote editorials, and attended to the business of the advertisement and circulation, all with the help of only two men. His personal energy began to bear fruit. The paper doubled in size, modern mechanical methods came into use, high speed presses, modern linotypes, and the editor saw hundreds of persons employed in the departments he had once carried alone.

During the march of those years from 1890-1926, Lafayette Young, Sr., editor of the Des Moines Capital, became known over the United States as the editor of a great paper, a politician always faithful to his party, and an Iowan who was as proud of his state as he was loyal to its ideals. He served his country and his state in other than editorial capacities, for in his connections with the republican party he served his district for twelve years as state senator, nominated Theodore Roosevelt for vice-president in 1900, was delegate-at-large to two national republican conventions, acted as United States senator on his appointment in 1910 to take the place of the deceased Jonathan P. Dolliver, and was the chairman of the state council for defense during the World War.

His editorial experience embraced every type of journalism. He began as an apprentice in an Albia (Iowa) print shop. Later he went to St. Louis as a journeyman printer, then went to Atlantic, Iowa, where he started the Atlantic Telegraph as his first formal newspaper enterprise. He was a reporter on the Des Moines Register for a while, when it was owned and published by F. M. Mills. His first effort as a news writer was an interview with Gen. W. T. Sherman, who was visiting his brother at his home in Des Moines.

After taking over the Capital, he did special correspondence work during the Spanish-American war with Shafter's army in Cuba. In 1913 he was correspondent in the Balkan war, and in 1915 he spent four months at the seat of war in Europe.

During this trip abroad he was held as a spy by the Austrians, who thought that the name "Lafayette" indicated some direct connection with France. The United States government secured his release. Some months after the Armistice, the king of Belgium conferred the Order of Leopold II on Mr. Young.

Several years ago, he gave over all other work on the Capital except editorial writing to his son, Lafayette Young, Sr.

The news of his sudden death yesterday made editors of Iowa papers over the state stop in their busy routine for a few moments to pay a tribute to this Iowan who has made his name as an editor, and as a distinctly Iowa editor. The many friends whom he made so easily over the United States will halt in memory of a kindly gentleman, an incomparable story-teller, loyal republican, a stalwart Iowa newspaper man.

"Out of the Silence"

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE again has broken the ice of his reserve, this time in his Armistice day speech at the dedication of the Liberty Memorial in Kansas City.

Politicians will scrutinize these official words most carefully. Foreign governments will place different interpretations upon their meaning, but the average American will take it as just another speech, and read it only because it came from the president.

The chief executive reiterated his belief in the World court, made another plea for adequate military, naval and aviation preparedness and at the same time again asked for a lessening of competitive armaments.

All of which did not startle his hearers because they had heard the same thing in substance before.

The president, however, did emphasize an important position which he has not previously stressed, and which seems to be the outstanding proposition of his whole address. "To expose some men to the perils of the battlefield," he said, "while others are left to reap large gains from the distress of their country is not in harmony with our ideal of equality."

This straightforward declaration in favor of conscription of wealth in time of war is commendable. Coming from the nation's president its significance is obvious, for the principle of wealth conscription has been endorsed by so many Americans that this official approval should insure adoption of the measure.

The sincerity of the president's belief is evidenced when he says: "Any future policy of conscription should be all inclusive, applicable in its terms to the entire personnel and the entire wealth of the whole nation." Such a program backed by official action should have a noticeable effect on this country and war in general. Each day someone tells us just who started the war and why, but there is fact in the argument that certain capitalists were far-sighted enough prior to 1914 to see the tremendous opportunity for personal profit, should there be a world conflict with America participating. That these "all for me" brand of "patriots" made a life's fortune in a year or two is known to the public and even admitted by the newly-made millionaires.

Certainly any plan that will right this unequal situation in the event of another war, would be welcomed by every fair-minded citizen. The president's proposition of wealth conscription, which seems to be the most significant of his whole speech, would undoubtedly go far towards correcting the evil. He states his opinion positively, and his position gives the argument dignity and weight. This coupled with existing favorable opinion will encourage the adoption of this democratic and American idea, the practice of which should make the "stay-at-home" fighters think twice before they fail to object to the initiation of another war.

Vare, Senator?

VARE of Pennsylvania, who put Newberry to shame in the little matter of campaign expenses, was officially reported after last week's election as Pennsylvania's senator-elect. No doubt the gentleman rested much easier after this announcement, as it meant that the investment of close to one million dollars had finally borne fruit. And it is safe to say that Vare's campaign expenses are counted in seven figures, for he spent more than $600,000 in the primaries alone.

But now those ill-bred democrats, in the manner of a somewhat restless mule, are threatening to declare Mr. Vare's seat vacant and to seat in his place William B. Wilson, the democratic entry in Pennsylvania's senate sweepstakes race. Already the lowly democrats have the Coolidge followers worried, for Mr. Vare and his cohorts are not laboring under the false impression that a republican majority in the seventieth congress means control of their party. To the G. O. P. that nauseating word "insurgents" spells defeat in a contest such as the seating, or rather unseating, of Vare.

Furthermore it appears that these democrats, so long the under-dogs, have a case at last that is going to make the elephant raise its enfeebled trunk in a none too lusty defense. Not only are Vare's campaign expenses exorbitant—much greater than were Newberry's—but there is important evidence indicating that every vote did not go for the man it was cast. Mr. Vare will have to be an expert "explainer," if he can tell these democratic trouble makers why Wilson failed to get a single vote in forty-four Philadelphia districts—in spite of the fact that the law provides there shall be two or three democrats on each election board in every precinct. Either the law was violated or Wilson's votes were not counted.

Be careful, Mr. Vare! The democrats'll get you if you don't watch out!

Winter is friendly, if we have books. Winter is coming. Let's read those books we have planned for years to read.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor—It is with a great deal of interest that I have just read the editorial which appeared in your issue of November 13, under the heading, "Massing Iowa's Forces." This editorial deals chiefly with the matter of display in school spirit at football games and its relationship to the seating arrangement for the student body at home contests. I am not informed nor am I concerned as to the identity of the writer of that editorial, but whoever he is, he should be congratulated upon giving such a matter some real thinking and expressing in the body of his editorial some constructive suggestions.

Coming to the point, the writer of this editorial raises issues as to the purpose of football games. In my opinion, football games may well serve all the purposes listed by him, without slighting one of another. I agree with him that a football game is one occasion on which school loyalty should be displayed, and I am sure I can safely state on behalf of those engaged in the administration of the program of inter-collegiate athletics at this institution, that no one is more interested in fostering school spirit than they are.

Some weeks before the Homecoming game with Minnesota, one of the cheer leaders besought cooperation with reference to seats for a cheering section. He requested that 500 seats, centrally located; be set aside for a group composed entirely of male students of Iowa. His requests were granted in full and the entire staff of cheerleaders and membership of P. E. O. worked long and faithfully to the end that the desired result might be obtained. After the game I talked with him and he appeared somewhat disgusted and very much discouraged. He did not imply, however, that the cheering section was too small—it just simply did not deliver the required amount of noise.

The editorial expressed the opinion that the desired result might be obtained by gathering the entire student body into one compact group, excluding all alumni and "general public," and that plans for such arrangement might well be incorporated in the general plan of ticket distribution for next year or for some future year when a new and larger stadium might be ready for use.

This plan might work out satisfactorily for any game except Homecoming and Dad's Day—the two occasions on which school spirit should manifest itself to the utmost. This plan would not be feasible for these games for the reason that they are the two occasions on which the parents, brothers and sisters, and friends of Iowa students gather at Iowa City to look over the university and experience the thrills of football. It naturally follows that friends desire to sit with friends, and families desire to be together, and the formation of casual friendships and unified rooting of the student body, to the individual student, at least, are comparatively unimportant.

I state these conditions because I know from past experience that they exist. The student body alone can remove them. The student body must express a unified opinion to the effect that that student body should be seated together at the Homecoming game and all others, before action in the matter on the part of those in charge of ticket distribution is advisable.

Respectfully yours,

Kenneth E. Griffin.

To the Editor—Without doubt many suggestions and many rumors have come to you since the Homecoming football game at Iowa City, and the Wisconsin game last Saturday. Probably you have heard the old worn out adage "can the coach" from many sources.

Burt Ingwersen was chosen from a great array of talent, after he had been carefully looked over and his presumed qualities determined. He has done well—really better than most followers of Iowa football expected—until this year. We believe that the loss of three Big Ten games in a row should not be the criterion for hiring and firing coaches. If such were the case, how about Stagg and Little this year?

One making criticism should make it constructive or not at all. With due credit to all, and disparagement to none, we frankly suggest that your department spend some real money and get some real assistant football coaches.

It is mentally and physically impossible for a football coach in the Big Ten to take the burden of detailed coaching on his own. He must have help, and must have real help. Real help costs money. Successful teams have had exceptional assistant coaches.

Yours very truly,
A. F. Fleisher, Iowa '11.

Who's Who AT IOWA

Emerson W. Nelson

"Give me the blonde every time. I like their temperament better." So sayeth Emerson W. Nelson, 23 of Cherokee, better known as "Spike," and a "Shater of 1926," who holds down one of the tackle positions on Iowa's football eleven. Brunetis, Spike does not like so well, and he disagrees entirely with our "Cow-boy" friend who claims red heads are the one and only. That ends it.

Nelson was born at Cherokee, in 1907. After his graduation from the Cherokee, high school in 1924 he came to Iowa, where he won numerals in football and track. This is Spike's second year at tackle on the football eleven, and this spring he will again confine his ability to track, in the shot put, hammer throw, and the discus. He was one of the two men who won two letters in major sports last year.

In high school Nelson was a four year man in both football and track and captained both teams in his senior year. He was also president of sophomore, junior and senior classes. Spike is a member of Alpha Tau Omega, social fraternity, and he belongs to the Hawkeye club. In the liberal arts college election, just past he was chosen secretary and treasurer of the 1925 junior class.

Spike believes that the Volstead act in its present enforcement is of little good to the country. "If it cannot be enforced properly, why have it?" he said. Perhaps he's right. Other than having a few views on the above subject, Spike is a movie fan. He confided, quietly to me, that Clara Bow, we wonder why; and Richard Dix were his favorites.

We were talking, Spike and I, of everything in general, and nothing in particular, when suddenly he broke forth with an over amount of enthusiasm, and began to tell me of everything from delinquent reports which he favors because they let the student know his standing in studies and gives him a chance to find himself, to the fact that he dislikes nothing about the modern co-ed. In between he found breath enough to say that he intended to remain in school no matter what opportunity was presented to him in the way of money making, for he believes that better opportunities will come after his college career. "Then he jumped to another subject, that of university athletics. "The school spirit," he said, "is reflected in the team. When the student body is brimming full of it, that of the team is higher, and vice versa." We wonder what Spike was thinking of? One might easily guess.

The big fellow is a worker in every sense of the word. He is perhaps the best known on the gridiron, but others who know him personally, call him in the collegiate manner, just a "good boy." And such he is.

Reorganize Law Clubs; Result of Unanimous Vote Groups Conduct Case Arguments; Form Ten Clubs

The law clubs which were discontinued last year have been reorganized as a result of a unanimous petition of the first year clubs. The students were divided into groups of eight in making up the ten clubs, the purpose of which is to conduct case arguments.

As soon as the facts for a case are issued, the students who are to argue confer with Charles E. Cornwell, L3, regarding investigation of the law, preparation of briefs and of arguments. Mr. Cornwell is assisted by Tyrrell M. Ingersoll, L2, and Charles F. Stitwill in analyzing and preparing cases.

Twenty Arguments Arranged

A series of twenty arguments has been arranged, the last of which will be given December 21. A faculty member acts as chief justice in each case; Iowa law governs the cases. The arguments will be held at 7:15 p. m. in the court room of the law building, another in the third year class room. Each of the opposing clubs has two representatives. The order of argument is that observed in the supreme court of Iowa.

Final Argument Next Semester

The four clubs having the highest standings will enter the semi-final arguments. Standings will be determined by the percentage of victories or in case of tie by the total scores.

READ THIS FIRST
MERRY LOCKE, pretty and gay as her name, is a born flirt. She knows no ambition beyond having a good time and plenty of beaux.

At 20 she falls in business college, to the great disappointment of MOMS, her ambitious mother. When her father suddenly dies, she goes into LILLIE DALEY'S little beauty shop at a small salary. At that time she is having the first real love affair of her life. The man in the case is ONY GAINES, a serious young lawyer who wants to marry her. Their engagement ends when Merry goes out with other men, and Tony learns about it. She sends back his ring, and a year later she hears that he is going to marry a girl in Montana, where he has gone to live.

HELEN, the oldest of the four Locke sisters, marries and settles down. CASSIE, the second oldest, marries MORLEY KAUFMAN, her rich employer. JINNY, the youngest, elopes with DERRICK JONES, who lives next door. Even MOMS, a year after Dad's death, begins to be interested in MR. HEFFLINGER, her boarder.

Through Morley Kaufman, Merry meets BILL ERSKINE, a well-to-do bachelor. She becomes engaged to him, but Bill keeps putting off the day of their wedding. Finally Merry begins to go out with other men—with LES PURCELL, in particular. She does not know he is married until one night when he comes to tell her his wife is divorcing him. Bill drops in unexpectedly, too, and becomes jealous and angry when he finds Les there. He and Merry have a row, and Merry is surprised when he telephones her the next morning and asks her to meet him down town. She goes, and Bill takes her to a jewelry store to buy an engagement ring. Merry wants one that costs $480, and when Bill tells her "not to soar above $200," she founces out of the shop. "I don't want any ring," she declares. Bill trots after her.

One afternoon Les comes to the shop, tells her that his wife has been having him "shadowed" and is going to name her as co-respondent in her divorce plea. He and Merry go to her flat to try to explain that Merry is not in love with him, only to find that she has just been rushed to the hospital after trying to commit suicide.

MERRY goes home to ask MOMS' advice in her trouble, but MOMS is full of her own affairs.

ETTA KETT

"I'm going to marry Mr. Hefflinger next week," she announces before Merry has time to say a word.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER XLVI
The sickening smell that was in the flat seemed to cling to her clothes and her skin, as she walked along the familiar streets.

Her nostrils were full of it still, when she unlocked the door of the old house on Chester street and walked in.

There was a light in the sitting room, and MOMS was sitting under the green-globed lamp, darning Mr. Hefflinger's socks.

She looked up as Merry came into the room.

"Aren't you home early?" she asked, running her bright needle in and out of the hole he was filling in. "Lillie's not here yet."

"How can I tell her about Les Purcell?" Merry thought, full of her own dark thoughts.

"I'm glad she's not here," MOMS went on, biting off a piece of mending cotton, "because I want to tell you something—Mr. Hefflinger and I are going to be married next week."

Merry heard what MOMS said. But she was too dazed to take it in.

She stood staring at her mother's face with wide, unseeing eyes for a moment. Then she half-stumbled across the room and sank down on the "body Brussels" carpet at her feet.

"Oh, MOMS!" she gasped. "Oh, MOMS! The most horrible thing has happened! The most terrible thing!"

Her voice seemed to stick in her throat and she could get no further.

Her mother gave her a keen, searching look, and put her mending basket on the table beside her. She leaned forward and took the girl's cold, trembling hands in her hard ones.

"Go on, my dear," she said, more gently than Merry had ever known her to speak. "What has happened?"

Merry's teeth were chattering and her slender body was shaking all over as she had a violent chill.

It took all of MOMS' urging to get the story from her—the story of Nonie Purcell.

She told it slowly and jerkily, as if she had to drag the words out from the very depths of her being. Her eyes were turned away from her mother, and fastened on the fire that glowed in the grate a few feet away.

"Les has gone to the hospital," she finished, "and I came straight home to ask you what to do about it. You see, I haven't done anything wrong. I didn't try to vamp Les away from his wife. He wasn't living with her when I met him!"

She turned to look at her mother. But MOMS' face was set and her eyes were accusing.

"You played with fire—that's what you did," she said grimly. "You say that Lillie told you months ago that this man was married. Then why did you keep on going out with him—and letting him come here? Right here to your own house?"

She got up, brushed some threads from her dress, and kicked at the dying fire with her foot.

Merry watched her dully. She had come home for the help and sympathy that she craved and she was only in for a good scolding, instead.

"But MOMS, you don't seem to get the point," she said, pleadingly. "If the story gets into the newspapers—or even if it doesn't, and Bill ERSKINE hears about it—he'll never marry me. Never!"

MOMS sniffed. She was looking into the mirror of the mantel-piece now, and patting her hair into shape with her hands.

"My goodness, I thought you'd seen the last of Bill ERSKINE weeks ago!" she returned, "Of course, I never pry into your affairs any more, since you take such pains to hide everything from me. But Lillie tells me that she had a violent chill. It took all of MOMS' urging to get the story from her—the story of Nonie Purcell.

She told it slowly and jerkily, as if she had to drag the words out from the very depths of her being. Her eyes were turned away from her mother, and fastened on the fire that glowed in the grate a few feet away.

"My goodness, I thought you'd seen the last of Bill ERSKINE weeks ago!" she returned, "Of course, I never pry into your affairs any more, since you take such pains to hide

MOMS swung around on her with a threatening look.

"Don't you tell me what I'm doing!" she warned her. "I'm making a respectable marriage with a respectable man. I'm not dragging my good name through the mire. You get upstairs to your room."

She marched out of the room herself, without waiting to see if Merry obeyed her or not. And a second afterward she could be heard telephoning for a taxi cab.

When she came down again, with her hat and coat on, Lillie Dalle was just coming in.

"Where are you going, Sadie?" Merry heard her ask, and MOMS murmured something in a low tone.

Then she appeared in the doorway of the sitting room, where Merry was still huddled on the floor in front of the fire.

"What hospital is that woman in?" she asked, and Merry told her.

She drew a deep breath of relief. She was sure that, somehow or other, MOMS would get things straightened out. MOMS always did. Her methods of dealing with people were the methods of a steam roller.

But MOMS did not get things straightened out, as Merry had hoped she would.

She had no chance to do anything in the matter of Nonie Purcell's divorce. For Nonie Purcell was lying unconscious in Christian hospital, and for three days she hovered between life and death.

All the first day Merry worried. On the second day she did not worry quite so much. On the third day she thought about Nonie and Les Purcell only three or four times.

For trouble never stayed with Merry Locke very long. It might threaten her, like the sword of Damocles ready to drop. But she forgot it, anyway.

It was her nature to forget unpleasant things. She lived from one moment to the next, with the care-free lightness of a butterfly flying through the sunshine and rain of changeable summer.

"I wonder if Purcell's wife had filed her case before she took the poison," Lillie remarked thoughtfully one noon when they were making their cocoa and sandwiches in the room behind the shop.

"I guess not," Merry answered, easily. "Or I'd have heard about it."

Then a shadow crossed her lovely face.

"Gosh! all hemlock, wasn't she a fool to take acid!" she exclaimed, spreading a piece of bread with pimento cheese. "It must have burned her face terribly. I wonder if she'll be scared."

As Merry saw it, that would have been the most dire misfortune. To lose a husband was bad enough. But to lose one's beauty! That surely would be the blackest of misfortunes! She stroked her own satiny skin with the tips of her soft fingers.

"Mmmm—I'd hate to have anything happen to my looks," she sighed, and lifted her cup of cocoa to her mouth.

On the other side of the table Lillie was watching her with cold eyes. There was a queer little scornful twist to her lips.

"Honestly," she blurted out at last. "You have about as much human feeling as a Persian kitten, Merry Locke. I guess the only thing you ever think about is your looks, and the men who fall for them."

That afternoon she sent Merry downtown to order some new sterilizers for her combs and brushes.

It was a clear, cold day. The kind of day that brings out all the new fall clothes.

Merry thought how pretty the women looked, as they hurried past her, with their fresh faces and their smart hats and furs. Many of them looked at her as they passed, and almost every man did. Men always gave Merry Locke a second glance. She was well worth it.

At the corner of Fir Street and Platt Avenue she bumped into Cobby Marsh. Or rather, he bumped into her before he saw who she was. Then he caught her by the arm and stopped her.

"You wouldn't pass up an old friend, would you?" he asked, smiling down into her eyes, "just because you're all dressed up like the Queen of Sheba out calling on King Solomon?"

Merry giggled. "So you're King Solomon?" she said, gaily. "I was wondering what your name was."

"That's it," he assured her gravely. "And my middle name is Money. I just put over a great big right now, and we'll go out to dinner and celebrate it, eh, wot?"

She shook her head in its new leaf-green hat. "I can't, Cobby," she answered, still smiling up at him entrancingly. "I'm out on a job of work, and besides—"

"Besides what?" he asked.

All the rest of her life she regretted that she told him why she didn't want to go anywhere with him! But she did.

Professor Dickman Talks at Humanist Society Meeting

Prof. A. J. Dickman spoke informally before the Humanist society last night on "The French Situation."

Professor Dickman, who is a native of Belgium, and who saw four and a half years of service during the war, was in France last summer and made a study of the French.

He stated that America's attitude of indifference is due to her own wealthy comfortable situation, as well as to political prejudice. He maintained that misunderstanding comes in considering the debt settlement as a plain business proposition, whereas it was really incurred for political and military purpose in conquering a common enemy.

By the new Mellon-Berenger settlement, he said, the debt would be reduced more than fifty per cent, but as the people of France see it, they received $4,221,000,000 of merchandise, supplies, and ammunition sold at a big profit by American manufacturers, for which they are asked to pay $6,847,000,000, in gold in 62 years. America does not wish to be paid back in merchandise.

The French hesitate to verify this agreement because they can not burden their future generations, especially when this settlement offers no guaranty to France.

Settle Big Ten Conference Championship Dispute Saturday

Gophers Set to Wreck Hopes of Wild Wolverines

Northwestern Wildcats Confident of Win or Tie for Title

[By The Associated Press]
CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Upon the shoulders of the Minnesota Gophers, in the view of most followers of Western conference football, rests the only considerable chance of averting a tie for the title honors.

Minnesota, which lost to Michigan early in the season at Ann Arbor, meets again next Saturday the Wolverines who bested by a single point last week the barrier to their championship hopes interposed by Ohio State.

Northwestern Should Win
Northwestern, which stands with Michigan at the top of the Big Ten heap, meets Iowa, and a defeat for the Wildcats would be regarded everywhere as a distinct upset.

Attention turned today to the Gophers in their preparation for the Michigan combat, and their game this week-end assures already as big a crowd as the Minnesota stadium will hold. Since the Gophers lost by 79 points to Michigan, Spoon's men have hit their stride and have rolled rough shod over Wabash, Wisconsin, Iowa and Butler, conquering the Butlers Saturday by an 81 to 0 score.

Iowa's entertainment of Northwestern was viewed by the latter as a game that must be won, for the Wildcats are at the threshold of their first conference championship. Iowa has lost to Illinois, Ohio State, Minnesota and Wisconsin in succession and has yet to win a conference game.

Every Team in Action
For the first time this season, every Big Ten team will be in action Saturday against a conference foe. Wisconsin meets Chicago, Indiana battles Purdue and Ohio State engages Illinois. All of these have the earmarks of royal battles.

Wisconsin and Chicago are foes of long standing and conference rankings are forgotten when they meet. Purdue, which fought to a scoreless tie with Indiana a year ago, is favored to defeat Indiana. Ohio State and Illinois have been brilliant contestants since the Buckeyes nosed out a heavily favored Illinois team five years ago and dimmed its title hopes in the season's final game.

McTigue Kayos Vadabek
NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (P)—Mike McTigue, former light heavy weight champion, knocked out Billy Vadabek of Bayonne, N. J., a former sparring partner of Gene Tunney, in the third round of a ten round match here tonight. McTigue weighed 171, Vadabek 174 1/2.

Finnegan Gets Decision in Featherweight Title Go

BOSTON, Nov. 15 (P)—Dick (Honey Boy) Finnegan of Dorchester, won the decision over Chick Suggs of New Bedford tonight in a ten round contest billed as a battle for the world's feather weight title.

Finnegan carried seven of the rounds and Suggs two, while in one honors were even.

Tough Luck! With Notre Dame Ahead Drake Coach "Out"

DES MOINES, Nov. 15 (P)—Illness, which has confined Oestle, head football coach and athletic director at Drake University, to his room except for rare intervals during the past six weeks, finally has forced him to temporarily relinquish the coaching reins and to return to his home at Minneapolis. It is doubtful if he will rejoin his squad this season.

While the Drake squad was in the east playing the Navy at Annapolis, Oct. 9, Oestle contracted a severe cold. An attack of influenza followed leaving him in a weakened condition.

Ordered to prepare to enter a local hospital where he might recuperate, Oestle discussed the matter with his physician who gave him the alternative of returning to his home, where he will place himself under a doctor's care and be attended by members of his family.

Yearling Gridmen Use Purple Plays Against Varsity

Coach Leland Parkin started his last week of freshman football practice last night when he sent his yellow clad huskies against the varsity warriors. Most of the time was spent in developing a defense against the aerial route as well as the line. The frosh were on the defense most of the time, stopping varsity backs and breaking up interference. The men showed up real well and many are expected to make strong bids for varsity berths when next fall rolls around.

Before the scrimmage, Schirmer and Parkin held a fast, snappy signal drill, not only teaching the men new plays, but making the old ones more perfect. The frosh have been going good in scrimmages, but they have not been giving the varsity keen enough competition, so Parkin is especially anxious this week to have his yearling squad in the best condition possible so that the varsity will know what to expect Saturday when they meet Northwestern.

Raise Howl Over Price of Ducats to Service Grid Tilt

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (P)—Gate prices for the annual Army-Navy football classic are causing some complaint, but the unprecedented demand for seats continues just the same.

One of the protests registered with officials here came from a member of congress who objected to Secretary Whitbur that the $10 and $15 scale fixed by Chicago officials where the game is to be played is beyond means of the ordinary football fan.

The war department also has received a few scattering complaints. The sale of the big block of tickets allotted to Chicago authorities is regarded by officials here as none of their affair, however, and no objection to high prices is seen here so long as the public is eager to pay.

Some Chicagoans have telegraphed here saying they saw no prospect of getting into Soldiers' Field even at $10 or $15 apiece, and were willing to go much higher.

Section C Wins Quad Gridiron Tournament

Section C of the Quadrangle are the football champions for 1926. They succeeded in downing section B in a close and hard fought game by a score of 3 to 0. A place kick by Captain Godlove two minutes before the game ended was the only score of the game. This was the last of the series, as sections A and D had fallen before the powerful attacks of sections B and C.

Section B outplayed their rivals and an intercepted pass resulted in C's score. The winners will each receive gold medals for their work. The first game of the tournament a few weeks ago was played in the rain while the championship game was played on a snow covered field with a strong, cold wind sweeping across the gridiron. The following men will be rewarded: Captain Godlove, quarterback; McClintock and Stevenson, halves; Clark, fullback; Hanson, Swift, and O'Brien, ends; Crowell and Emsen, tackles; Aberg, Nelson, and Webster, guards, and Smith, center.

Finds Mouse in Milk

NORFOLK, Va.—William S. Hayes claimed the shock to his aesthetic senses occasioned by the finding of a mouse in a bottle of milk delivered to his home was worth $5,000. He brought suit against a local dairy for that amount. Although it was brought out the dairy charged Hayes neither for the mouse nor the milk in which it swam, the jury awarded the plaintiff a verdict of 10 cents.

Bowling Scores

High honors in the bowling tourney last night were carried off by the Burkett-Updegraff aggregation. Their team rolled for high score, in three games with 2371 pins, won high honors for one game with 868 pins, while Tanberg, also of the Burkett-Updegraff team, had high score for one game individually with 218 pins, and 555 for three games.

A.A.U. Ratifies World Record of "Fastest Human"

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 15 (P)—The amateur athletic union in annual convention today ratified the world's record smashing sprint performance of Charley Paddock for 100 yards and of Roland Locke, University of Nebraska star, for 220 yards but closed the door to acceptance of the records themselves—9 5/16 seconds for the century by Paddock and 29 5/10 seconds for the furlong by Locke—failed to materialize. Both were ratified without objection, but it was only after spirited debate that the convention voted to taboo, after next January 1, the type of watches that registered these performances and to readopt as official the fifth-second time pieces.

Professional Golfers Plan Title Matches

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (P)—The Professional Golfers' association today voted to stage the title fixture next fall at the Cedar Crest Country club of Dallas, Texas. Alex Pirie of Chicago, was elected to succeed George Sargent of Columbus, Ohio, as head of the association. Announcement of Great Britain's intention to send an invading team of professionals across the Atlantic was contained in an official letter from the British Professional Golfers' association.

At least eight well-known players will visit the United States to take part in the open championship at Oakmont and to engage American professionals in a return international team match.

Hawks Drill for Final Battle With Wildcat Gridders

Purple Tilt Last Hope of Iowa to Break Losing Streak

The Purple, defeated only by Notre Dame, will furnish Iowa the only remaining opportunity of winning a conference grid game this year. It is a hard battle that Coach Ingwersen and his warriors will face Saturday in an effort to break their losing streak.

The defeat by Wisconsin sank the Hawkeyes into the nethermost depths of last place and their only hope is that the Wildcats will come here over-confident. But the Big Ten title is the ambition of the Evanston aggregation, and Coach Thiethe will take pains to see that his men are in the right mood for victory.

Coach Ingwersen spent last night drilling his men on defenses against Northwestern's deadly aerial attack, the weak point on the Iowa team. Wisconsin scored all of their touchdowns via the overhead route, which the Hawks seemed unable to stop. Nearly every Old Gold defeat of the year except the Minnesota tragedy can be laid to their weakness in defending against passes.

The freshmen, using Purple aerial plays, worked long after dark last night in battling the varsity. The varsity in turn spent some time in renovating their own passing game, which has been a failure most of the season.

Movie is Evidence
NEW YORK.—Supreme court Justice May stood in a darkened courtroom nearly half an hour watching a "family" motion picture of the principals in a separation suit. The films were shown by the defense, with the complainant's consent, to establish that the martial life of the couple concerned was more harmonious than the wife's affidavits of cruelty indicate. The pictures revealed Mrs. Jeanette Reichard, now living with her mother, and Dr. Samuel Reichard, her dentist husband. Part of the reel was taken at Manhattan bench

Investigator Pleads for State Utilization

Huntington Tells Chamber of Commerce that Iowa's Salvation Lies in Converting Raw Products Within State

Utilization of the products of the state by the state itself is the remedy which Arthur Huntington of Cedar Rapids, suggests to better agricultural conditions in Iowa. Mr. Huntington is a member of the committee appointed by Governor John Hammill for the investigation of agricultural conditions in Iowa.

"The salvation of Iowa's troubles is thinking, working, and doing with Iowa's products what others are now thinking, working and doing for us," he said.

He explained, Iowa farmers and Iowa as a state must pay their debts from their profits. Instead of selling the raw products in other states and buying them back in the finished product at an inflated price, Iowans should convert it themselves and receive the manufacturing profits.

stalks." Every product of the state should be manufactured into other more profitable material before it is shipped out.

Iowans Make More Money

The university is the biggest manufacturing plant in the state. All of the students in the engineering and commerce colleges will not remain in the state and when each one of them leaves, he takes out of the state the $10,000, the cost of his production, and he leaves nothing in return.

"It is the duty of the commercial clubs of the state," he said, "to sell an appreciation of Iowa to these men who are leaving the richest state in the union, and to sell to Iowa an appreciation of these men that she has produced."

Mr. Huntington further stated that Iowa has a wealth of $4,200 per capita, against $3,200 in New York.

Bank failures in Iowa occur because bankers let someone else do their thinking. They do not apply business methods. Students from the university think for themselves. Therefore the banks will not give them a chance.

Corn Stalks for Paper

The profit which is made in Iowa from agricultural and industrial sources respectively was said to have been about two to one in 1860 and at the present time to be equal. This shows that industry has been advancing steadily although a vast amount of material is still being shipped out of the state.

No new use for agricultural products has been found in recent years. During the time in which the production of steel has risen seventy times, the production of corn has risen only five and yet there is an enormous surplus of corn and none of steel. Corn stalks will make better paper than wood; Iowans continue to use paper made of wood pulp.

"For 15 years," said Mr. Huntington, "a certain company was buying a chemical preparation from without the state. When it became so high in price that it was almost prohibitive, investigations as to a substitute were made and it was found enormous prices were being paid for a stuff that was made from corn

Breene Retires From Office

These deplorable facts will be changed in time, but not by leaving them to politicians. Mr. Huntington disapproves of tariff as a solution.

"Iowa has plenty of production, excellent transportation, profuse wealth, and plenty of free capital and yet we ship the bulk of our industry out of the state. Utilization is the only solution," concluded Mr. Huntington.

Harry D. Breene, president of the Chamber of Commerce, introduced the speaker. This meeting was Mr. Breene's last appearance before the club as president, and he was given a rising vote of thanks for his three years of service.

Members of the board whose terms have expired were retired last evening and the election of the six new members was approved. The new members are: C. A. Phillips, Carl Cone, C. A. Bowman, Harry Bremer, R. H. White, and J. E. Stronk.

The last Monday of each month was voted as the regular meeting time. Meetings will be held at 7:00 p. m.

Horrabin Company Finishes Paving

Summit, Van Buren Streets Finished by E. A. Edgar

The paving job, which has just been completed by the William Horrabin company of this city, will be presented for acceptance by the city council at a special session this evening.

The paving work consisting of surfacing of certain blocks on Center, Lucas, Governor, Johnson, and Day streets, completes the actual work to be done on Iowa City streets this year. Besides numerous alleys the job which the Horrabin company has just finished also includes the work on Ridge road in the Ball addition.

W. A. Edgar of Cedar Rapids, who has held numerous sewerage construction contracts with the city, is also scheduled to present completed work on Summit and South Van Buren streets, for acceptance.

According to city clerk George Dohrer, no word has yet been received from Ray Wyrick, Des Moines landscape architect, who was awarded a contract to lay out and superintend the new addition to the Oakwood cemetery.

The plans which Mr. Wyrick presented to the council some time ago met with that body's unanimous approval.

Johnson County Cattle Raisers Strive to Get Area Plan

Steps to have Johnson county placed on the area plan for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis, were taken by Johnson county cattle raisers Saturday when that organization filed its petition with the county auditor. The petition will come up for hearing at 10:00 a. m. Nov. 24.

As a majority of the cattle owners of the county have petitioned to have their herds tested according to this plan, it is compulsory for the board of supervisors to make a small levy for that purpose which is not to exceed two mills.

The tax raised by the county is combined with the federal and state funds. These funds defray the cost of testing which is carried on free of charge to the farmers.

When seventy-five per cent of the cattle raisers sign the petition, it is compulsory for every farmer in the county with a herd, to have it tested by state and federal veterinarians.

Cattle showing tuberculosis symptoms are shipped to one of the principal markets, killed, and examined. The owner is then paid two-thirds of the appraised value from funds which are furnished by federal and state governments.

The work is carried on under the supervision of the veterinary department of the state department of agriculture, and the bureau of animal health of the United States department of agriculture.

An old frame building formerly occupied this site. The new building is of fire-proof construction.

Diphtheria Cultures Taken at High School

Dr. Frank L. Love, assisted by the school nurse, Mrs. J. G. Gartner, spent yesterday at the Iowa City high school taking cultures of the students to determine which of them were carriers of diphtheria.

It has been rumored that an epidemic of diphtheria had been prevalent in the high school and this step was taken to insure the safety of the pupils.

Auto Wreck Injures Charles N. Rowley

Charles N. Rowley of Cedar Falls underwent an operation Saturday morning at the University hospital as a result of severe injuries received in an automobile accident Nov. 8. He received nine facial fractures.

Mr. Rowley, a former resident of Iowa City, is a machinist linotype operator in Cedar Falls. He has been a newspaper man for some twenty-eight years. He managed orchestras in Iowa City, West Liberty, and Cedar Rapids back in 1908, '09, '10, '11, and '12.

Mr. Rowley and his family were enroute from their home to Elma, when rounding a corner about eight miles north of Waverly, the car skidded in loose gravel and turned completely over. Mr. Rowley, who was driving, was the only member of the party who received any injury. He was rushed to Waverly where he was given first aid treatment.

He was then taken back to Cedar Falls, where he remained until last Saturday when he was brought to the university hospital here. On op-

Fire Guts Rear of Oakland Bakery Sunday Evening

Several Thousand Dollar Loss Partially Covered by Insurance

Fire, of unknown origin swept through the rear of the Oakland bakery, 124 1-2 South Dubuque street, Sunday evening and caused damaged estimated by Fred Schuppert, the owner, at several thousand dollars. The interior of the building was demolished.

One oven, used only for pastry baking, was completely destroyed while most of the loss was incurred from damage by smoke and water, the interior being completely flooded as a result of the fire department's efforts to battle with the blaze.

Both units of the local department were called into action. More than an hour elapsed before the flames were brought under control.

According to Mr. Schuppert, who also owns the main plant of the Oakland bakery at 1119 E. Court street, the structure was covered with insurance of $1,800.

After the fire Mr. Schuppert stated that he was at the plant at 4:00 p. m. Sunday, two hours before the fire call was sent in by a passerby. John Donovan, associated with Mr. Schuppert, was in the building at about 5:40 p. m. to see Mr. Schuppert, and neither had seen any sign of fire. It is thought that the flames started along the north wall between the floor and ceiling.

For a time it appeared that the Economy grocery, next door to the bakery, would be endangered. The fire was characterized as the worst in several months.

'MYSTERY MAN' CONFESSES PLOT

Dedicate Greater Hawkeye to Modern University Students

Pioneers Pass as Book Takes New Collegiate Trend

Humerous and Serious Ideas Combined in New Publication

The theme of the 1928 Greater Hawkeye is different from that of any other year book in the United States. At least, to the knowledge of the staff, it is different.

In past years Hawkeye staffs have dedicated their books to the "pioneers who blazed the trails," to "the great university of the future," and to "the daring voyagers who discovered our country."

This year, however, it was felt by the staff that something a little bit different should be done. These stock themes were getting rather old, in the opinions of those most interested in the book. Pioneers may have been wonderful people, and they undoubtedly were, but were the university students interested in them? That was the question which the staff discussed.

Expert Opinion
Year book experts from some of the largest engraving companies in the country came to Iowa City. Some of them had plans all prepared for the 1928 book. There was a suggestion that this book be dedicated to the great men who have graduated from Iowa. Another suggestion would have carried out the idea of the glory of the state. There were many ideas, all of them skillfully prepared.

The staff was not satisfied, however. One day "X" and "Y" were talking it over. Said "X," "These themes may be all right. Other books are using them, so they must be. But it seems to me that the university student wants his Hawkeye as a memory book—something to take with him when he graduates, something that will make him remember the good times he had while he was in school. Really, 'Y,' do you think that this pioneer stuff and all these other wonderful ideas are connected closely with the university student?"

Student Theme
"Y" agreed with "X" that they were not. The two argued for several hours about what these would come the closest to interesting the students. Little progress was made. Then "X" had an idea. He said, "See here, we've been wondering what would interest the modern university student. It's so simple there's nothing to it. What could possibly interest the modern university student more than himself? See the possibilities of it? Make the book a book for the university student of today, by him, and concerning him."

The idea had been found. "The University Student of Today" was made the theme of the book. The first thing that was necessary was art work. Artists were asked to submit samples of their work. There was something wrong with all of it. It was discovered that the fault was due to the fact that the artists were commercial artists and not illustrators.

Modern Art
Then a clever illustrator was set to work on the opening section. When the staff members of The Hawkeye saw his first work, they knew that the fault had been discovered. Here was work that carried out perfectly that which they wanted carried out. Up-to-date young collegians and co-eds tramped through the pages. They actually lived on paper, and were typical of Iowa university.

So different from other art work that had been submitted, the girls were not caricatures of co-eds, but the regular thing. The boys were modernized. Oxford bags took the place of skin-tight trousers on the pictorial figures. Hats were the kind that are being worn. Everything in the art work was as it should be.

Eight opening pages were designed by this artist. The pages are to be printed in four colors, and the colors are the very brightest. Stagger-letting is used. The art is modern.

Vanity Fair Style
The ex-libris is one of the high spots in the carrying out of the

Urge All Juniors to be Represented in Section

Juniors! The book is yours! It's up to you to make it or break it! Are you proud of yourself and your class? Prove it by getting your picture in the junior section!

The 1928 Greater Hawkeye is the official publication of the class of 1928. It is the sole responsibility of every member of that body to make sure that his or her picture will appear in the junior section.

The three local photographers are already taking pictures. There are more signing up every day. Let's make sure that every member of the class is represented! It's up to you!

theme. Here, the Vanity Fair type of art work has been carried out. A wood-cut of collegiate figures in natural, life-like poses makes it one of the most unusual things imaginable. The ideas in the art work are the cleverest of all. With the theme of the university student of today, it was not hard for the artist to make his work humorous. No hint as to the ideas carried out in the art work can be divulged, due to the fact that the editor and business manager have refused to let anybody not "in the know" see the work.

Not only in the art work, but throughout the book the theme idea is carried out. A whole new section, the "Achievement" section, has been added. In this, the student will get an opportunity to see himself as others see him.

Clever Theme
Paul Otto, annual division manager of the Waterloo Engraving company, in a letter to the 1928 Hawkeye, said: "The theme is the cleverest one I have seen worked out in college annuals in years. The originality of it, combined with its appeal to every loyal co-ed and Eddie, must surely make it a real success. It affords an opportunity to use humorous and serious ideas, and both kinds are being used by you."

The undergraduate reader of the 1928 Greater Hawkeye will see himself on the pages of the book. As one freshman assistant on the staff naively put it, "There'll be things about the Gamma Phi's and things about the Tri Delta's."

Include All Societies in Forensic Section

The saying "bigger and better" things can well be applied to the forensic section of the Hawkeye for the year 1926-1927, for the section will surpass that of any preceding year, in every way. A new feature will be the individual rather than group pictures of debaters.

Last year the teams were photographed as groups. The new way will enable one debater to get as much publicity as the other. Besides the pictures, a complete account of each contest will be given. The matter of subject, procedure, decision, and all other points of interest will be fully discussed.

In the forensic section of the book will appear the Men's and Women's Forensic Councils, Phi Delta Gamma, Zetathian, Irving, Philomathean, Rhoterian, Hesperia, Erodolphian, Hamlin, Whitby, Athens and Octave Thant Literary Societies, and a "write-up" on the history and purpose of each.

Every effort possible is being made to make this section of the Hawkeye so complete and interesting that any book in the years to come can not equal to, let alone surpass, this year's work.

Contract for Engraving Work Let to Waterloo Engraving Company

After considering the proposals submitted by nine different engraving companies early this fall, the Board of Student Publications Incorporated let the engraving contract to the Waterloo Engraving company of Waterloo, Ia.

Two officials of the company are working in cooperation with members of the staff to produce the work on scheduled time. Mr. Paul Otto, head of the school annual department, formerly with the John-Oller

New Organizations to be Introduced in Annual Section

Usual Greek Section Will Contain Many Innovations

With the various fraternities and sororities on the campus having pledged respectively "the best ten" eds or co-eds in this year's flock of eligibles, and the pictures of all of the aforesaid "best tens" appearing as new scenery in the 1928 Hawkeye, it stands to reason that the Hawkeye this year will be "bigger 'n' better 'n' more beautiful" than ever before. A number of delightful surprises are planned for the organization section, which includes sororities, fraternities, honor societies, professional sororities and fraternities, and the various clubs and organizations on the campus. These new features will be kept unrevealed until the publication is off the press.

Double Page Pictures

Each sorority, fraternity, and organization will have its own double-page again this year, with group pictures of the fraternities, and individual pictures of the sororities. In this way, the annual will be able to fulfill its usual function as date handbook: the proverbial eye-opener for otherwise "blind dates." According to well-versed campus authorities, terrible calamities have been known to follow the failure to consult the latest Hawkeye about such matters.

House Pictures
In addition to the new pledges, a number of the sororities and fraternities have new homes to highlight their particular corner of the Greek section. Excellent pictures of both the exteriors and the interiors of the new houses are being taken. These pictures will be of especial benefit and interest to the alumni who signed the checks, and to those students in the university who find life too much of a bustle and flurry to spare the time to inspect new houses. New pictures will also be taken of all the other fraternity and sorority houses on the campus, with a "shot" of the interior of each house, featuring the best looking piece of furniture slid into the most impressive corner for the photographer's especial benefit.

With the advent of the 1928 Hawkeye, the ranks of the numerous professionals and honoraries will be complete, and these various groups of new "brilliant" will shine forth from the pages of the new Hawkeye. Because of the reticence in talking of their own accomplishments, shown by university students every once in a while, it will doubtless be necessary to consult this section of the new Hawkeye to determine just "who's who" in the university halls of fame.

Mortar Board
Mortar Board, senior girls' national honorary society, will appear for the first time this year, replacing Staff and Circle following the latter's initiation recently into the national organization. Pages dealing with Mortar Board, A.F.I., senior men's honorary society, and the new lists of Phi Beta Kappa will be of the usual interest to the entire student body of the university.

The well-thumbed pages of the organization sections in the past have proved the popularity of this section of the book.

Unique Sketches Form View Section

Special Engravings to Feature Scenes of Iowa Campus

The view section of this year's publication will be outstanding for its newness. No college annual has ever before used the type which will dominate the view section.

"Bill" Schutte, a nationally known artist with the soft pencil, is working on pencil sketches from which the plates will be made. The president of the Federated Art School, the largest in the United States, will choose the spots to be exemplified. Eight full pages will be devoted to this section.

The views will be done in high-light half tone, the most expensive type of engraving. A high-light tint block will silhouette the picture, which is to be run on off-set paper. A special press is usually required for this kind of work, but through experimentation it has been found that the work can be done on the ordinary color press of the Student Publications shop. Due to the fact that there are but five offset presses in the country, the discovery of the special process is especially fortunate.

Iowa Life Section to Show Student Life

Due to the fact that the 1928 Greater Hawkeye is to be dedicated to the modern university student, the Iowa Life section will endeavor to portray as nearly as possible the true life of the student. Numerous pictures and an interesting biographical diary will constitute the main portion of the section.

As before, a central theme will run throughout the entire division, binding it together and creating a separate and distinct story. A new arrangement of double spread pages is being considered.

Lissome Lassies to Cavort in Becoming Bathing Suits

One of the high-spots of the year, the selection of the most beautiful co-eds in the university will again transpire this year with the pictures of the winners placed in the pages of the 1928 Hawkeye. A new type of engraving will be used to offset the beauties, one which resembles closely the art work of Vanity Fair, the popular fashion magazine.

There is also promised an unusual portion of the women's section devoted to athletics. Instead of lissome lassies cavorting in "middy and bloomers," the entire campus will be given the pleasure of seeing some of the most shapely of the "corn-fed co-eds" in the most becoming of bathing suits.

Open Fall Sales Campaign of 1928 Greater Hawkeye

The fall sales campaign of the 1928 Greater Hawkeye is being inaugurated with this extra number of The Daily Iowan. The campaign will be conducted for an indefinite period of weeks, the exact time for its finish being decided by the spirit of the student body in subscribing.

A prize of a $250 fur coat or a student tour of Europe will be given to the person selling the largest number of books. Anyone is eligible. If interested see the business manager in The Hawkeye office, 201 Journalism building, any afternoon between 3 and 5 o'clock.

All Major and Minor Sports to Be Included in Greater Athletic Section

While the heat of the football season is reaching a white-hot point, and the cross-country runners are priming themselves for the most important struggle of the season, while basketball, swimming, fencing, gymnastic and wrestling teams are getting preliminary preparations well under way for the busy winter season, the athletic staff of The Greater Hawkeye is striving to augment the quality of the sports section last year by several innovations in the way of covering the big games.

Competent writers are preparing the seasonal and individual contest reviews while special outside sports scribes are being negotiated with for under way for the busy winter season. Several well-known athletes, coaches, and newspaper and magazine authorities have already signified their interest in The Greater Hawkeye and the complete list of writers is expected within a short time.

The athletic section will contain carefully recorded word-pictures of the major football, basketball, baseball, and track contests and brief, inclusive reports on every minor sport on the campus. Special attention will be paid this year to the intramural and interscholastic contests. The recent high school cross-country water polo tournament now under way and all of the other numerous types of sports not purely university will be included in the section.

Individual, team and action pictures are special features to which the staff is devoting particular planning. New layouts and original, clear-cut photos are being made daily for the athletic department's "morgue." Dozens of photos are being assorted in an effort to select the picture which "tells the greatest story."

John Held, Jr., Characters Resembled in Art Work

Included among the innovations featuring the pages of the Greater Hawkeye will be found an art section unique in its expression of modern college life. Unlike the old cut and dried cartoons, the present picture include a style of work closely resembling the John Held, Jr. style, yet noticeable by the absence of the fantastic characters.

A graduate of an eastern art school, known for his true-to-life caricatures is doing the work. And along with him is "Bill" Schutte, a pencil artist supreme who, by adding a line here and there, creates a different business, final, the office closed at other times of the day.

Hawkeye Office Hours

The 1928 Greater Hawkeye office in room 201 of the Journalism building will be open daily from 3 to 5 p.m. Between these hours a member of the staff will be on duty every day. This information is given because of the fact that a great many persons, wishing to transact business, find the office closed at other times of the day.

Thirty-Six Assistants Cooperate with Editors to Produce 'Greater Hawkeye'

The staff of the 1928 Greater Hawkeye, headed by the editor and business manager, is divided into two major divisions. The first, taking care of the editorial and the publication, is headed by George Anderson, A3 of Hawarden. Appointed as department editors are Walter Graham, A3 of Waterloo, associate editor, in charge of the administration, journalism and society sections; Ted Koop, A3 of Monticello, drama, music, and religion; Roy Porter, A2 of Waterloo, Iowa, life and publicity agent; Kermit McFarlane, C3 of Gowrie, covering athletics; Henry Neumann, A3 of Daventport, organizations; Ramona Evans, A3 of Ottumwa, women's section; and Richard Vetter, A2 of Daventport, military.

Working with the department heads are some thirty-six assistants, who are allowed to choose the section with which they prefer to associate. This system places only those interested in a type of work which they will enjoy doing and thus insures cooperation.

The second major division is the business department under the supervision of F. Roe Wiese. Work in this end of the publication consists of keeping accounts, management of sales campaigns, advertising, and controlling of receipts and expenditures. Carl Distehorst, assistant business manager, will be in charge of the junior section.

Roll of Assistant

Staff assistants are: Robert Shannon, Marion Honke, Estey Reed, Katherine Mueller, Wilbur Clausen, Ralph Young, Lorimer Gilje, Carl Sylvester, William Davidson, Natalie Albrecht, George M. Anderson, Louise Work, Roland White, Louise Glackemeyer, Doris Towne, Craig Lomas, Herbert Blades, John Furman, Lorne Kennedy, Helen Irwin, Louis Rich, Vernon Hunt, Margaret Bishop, Jean Chamberlain, Doris Rowe, Norman Waffle, Barnetta Kumata, Herbert Gee, Donald Farel, Donald Baird, Howard Williamson, Jeanne Doran, Bud Bischoff, Betty Baxter, Margaret Young, and Everett Pratt.

F. Roe Wiese Gives Confession After All-Night Grilling

Names Two Students As Accomplices In Scheme

Worn and weary after more than sixteen successive hours of intensive grilling, F. Roe Wiese, business manager of the 1928 Hawkeye, alleged "mystery man" of the publication, early this morning confessed to holding secret the date of the start of the sales campaign of the book.

Just as the first rays of a cold gray dawn slowly penetrated the dirty windows of the office of the 1928 Hawkeye in the Journalism building, seven hawk-countenanced individuals heaved a sigh of relief and reached for another cigar. They had been in the one room for nearly seventeen hours intensely concentrating their attentions on one man in an effort to determine the perpetrator of the infernal design on the university students.

Sprawled in a chair on one corner of the room was the object of their unwelcome attentions. His appearance had taken on the cares of several years since he had first entered the ill-fated room. This was F. Roe Wiese, this "mystery man" of the 1928 Greater Hawkeye, who had kept five thousand students of the university, eager for news of the sale of the first book, in anxious awaiting.

A Second Leapold
Dressed in a gray suit of fashionable cut which one can well imagine as being ultra-collegiate but which hung like a burly bag on his slender form, he presented the appearance of a Nathan Leopold after his confession to the murder of Bobby Franks. His blue butterfly bow was hanging limply inside a soiled collar. His hair was matted by frequent strokings. His face was pale and he had dark circles under his eyes. This was the man who several weeks ago thought himself to be secure in the position of tantalizer of the entire student body, but who, like a great many others, was susceptible to feminine flattery which finally led to his undoing.

Two Accomplices
In his confession, Wiese named two members of the student body as accomplices. The students are Roy Porter, press agent and George Anderson, editor. Warrants have been issued for their arrest but at a late hour no trace could be found of the men.

Cue Found
An unknown man calling The Daily Iowan by long distance telephone from a small town thirty-two miles south supplied a clue to the whereabouts of the two accomplices.

The message which stated that they had passed through the town ten minutes before the call was made was regarded as authentic and special detective Ferris Williamson was immediately dispatched to the scene.

Perpetrated Scheme
The effects of the scheme, had it succeeded would have no doubt been grave. Not only would the date of the sales campaign have been kept secret but a great many of those desiring to purchase one of the yearbooks would have been thwarted in their good intentions. Because of this reason it is expected that the maximum punishment will be asked for by the prosecution.

'Write-ups' Include Production Accounts

Headed by "In the Next Room" and "Hell-Bent for Heaven," and including "Hamlet," "The Romantic Age," "The Youngest," and "So This is London," the 1926-27 university theater season promises to far excel any of previous years. And along with all the productions will be a faithful account of each representation with both still and action pictures of the entire cast and the stars.
