Cosmopolitan Club Gives Benefit Play

Groups Will Present Entertainment of Native Lands

"Glimpses Around the World," will be presented at the Cosmopolitan club, international night, Friday evening, Dec. 3, in the auditorium of St. Patrick's school.

The funds from the entertainment are to be used to maintain a Cosmopolitan club students loan fund.

The students of the club have been divided into six groups, each to provide entertainment illustrative of the life of his native land. The special features of the program will be as follows:

"Pageant of Freedom," will be presented by the American groups under the supervision of Ida Mae Case, G of Iowa City; Mildred Augustine, G of Ladora, will give several solos on xylophone.

A one-act play, "Typical Chinese Well-to-do Family," will be shown by the Chinese students in charge of Hsi Cheeh Lin, Cms3 of Pekong, China.

Living pictures giving an account of seven countries of Europe: France, Italy, Germany, Switzerland, Russia, Austria and Spain, will be exhibited by the European group. Amy Zimmerman, graduate assistant in the romance language department, will give an interpretation of each picture.

Cosmopolitan melodies will be played on Philippine guitar and on a violin by the Ocampo brothers of Laog, P. I.

Josephine DeFralco, Margaret Freeman, of Iowa City, and Yodoriano Almazan, Sr. of Laog, P. I. will give folk dances under the direction of Adriano Ocampo, A1 of Laog, P. I.

Selected Japanese scenery, and a life of a Japanese school girl will be shown on the screen. D. J. Kaneko, B13 of Japan, will be in charge.

Platitive strains of Hawaiian melodies will be strummed on native Hawaiian stringed instruments by A. M. Kubo, D4 of Hilo Hawaii, T. H.

Quadrangle Makes Up Small City of Many Businesses

A town within a town; that is the relation between the quadrangle and Iowa City. The dormitory on the west campus is a small town in all its important features, even including self-government and popular elections.

The small metropolis has its own postoffice, cafeteria, shine parlor, barber shop, kodak service station, clothing, optician, and several other businesses and professions which go to make up the regulation small town. In fact, in many ways it is far more complete in its various services than are most towns of its size in Iowa.

Last year, its postoffice department handled over eight thousand outgoing packages, while many times this number were received for the citizens of the town.

Councilmen are elected from each ward and in turn choose one of their members as president. These men serve as the law-making body for the small city.

The council also sponsors the sports of its town. Football games are held between each ward for the supremacy of the whole town. Baseball and basketball games are also arranged by the councilmen, as well as tennis matches and the annual cross country run.

Gwen Stewart, Pi Beta Phi, Finds New Modes for the Coming Thanksgiving Season

THANKSGIVING GIFTS—

—are sometimes hard to choose, as it is so near Christmas and some stores are holding back their supply until afterwards, but Phyllis Herrick's Gift and Art shop is ready now and at all times to help you select that hard-to-select gift which you have been worrying about. The difficulty is, there are so many dainty and feminine things to choose from after you get there.

As you enter the door there is a glass case of the loveliest things to behold that you scarce get any further. Tiny dainties, hand-painted and perfume vases, which smell so sweetly of the orient, and cover the many shelves. Then just at your elbow are some gorgeous genuine ostrich feather fans, long and graceful in their delicate colors.

It is so nice to remember Mother, sister or room-mate with a little gift on Thanksgiving, and so symbolic of true feeling, don't you think? Just a wee tiny remembrance is enough and with careful selection you will be ever so thankful.

RUTH'S FROCK SHOP—

—is featuring dainty imported hankies this week, in voiles, georgettes and nets, which are so dainty and sheer, one cannot help exclaiming. And have you seen the clever little chests of imported Coty's soaps, done up so cleverly, and each one a different odor?

Here's good news too. Miss Oaks has received her supply of formal jewelry. Hurry up!

ZIPPERS!

—are the easiest to put on, you'll confess, when you are in such a hurry to get to your eight o'clock. But take my advice and stop in at the Dombey Boot shop and get them now before your size is gone and you are one of the unfortunate ones.

Weather like this is zipper weather, and they are made so attractive this year, that it really is not such a task to have to wear them. Some are in tan tweed, neatly fastened, and are not heavy like the old fashioned kind. And too, Dombey's have the same pattern in black, if you like it better, and with lining of red Scotch plaid.

Now don't forget, that its my advice to get them now, while they last, for they tell me the next shipment will be hard to get.

SUCH WIDE BRACELETS

—I have never seen, as the beautiful yellow gold ones at Hand's jewelry store, all set with blue sapphires and done in filigree work. They would complete that party frock costume to a "T." They are quite the newest note from Paris too, and one of the accessories that count.

I was pleased beyond words with the handsome corduroy picture frames and the hand-tooled purses, which are of any size you wish. And do you keep a diary? If not, now is the time to start right. You could not resist one of these little Florentine diaries which are provided with lock and key, so that you and only you can read them.

They are five-year diaries too, made so you can see on the same page, what you had done five years ago. Wouldn't it be fun to keep one like that? Let's start now, and make one a Christmas present to one's self.

President of Pi Phi Tells of the New Style Ideals

Burr! The cold breezes and snowy chills of winter have arrived, and we begin to be thankful for our warm goshaws and fur coats and all. It is now

Gweneth Stewart

Thankful season, and soon it will be giving season which is the loveliest season of year! Many are starting their shopping and others are making their selections early.

Gweneth Stewart, A4 of Centerville, president of Pi Beta Phi, well known on campus and prominent in activities, was drawn as The Daily Iowan style representative for Thanksgiving week. As Thanksgiving is a forerunner of the holidays, the stores are already aglow with their new holiday supplies. You'll be interested to learn of the many new things Miss Stewart discovered.

THE FIRST FORMAL—

—will soon be at hand, and if you haven't bought your new frock, you'd better get busy! Yetter's have a large group of party dresses which almost dance off their hangers to meet you; they are so alive with color and are so light and filmy.

None of the delicate rainbow shades have been slighted in this selection, so whether it be a blue, rose or yellow frock you wish you will have no difficulty in choosing from these. They are in georgettes with fluffy tulle flounces and flower trimmings, some are of taffeta in bouffant styles, in gorgeous color combinations. And there were some velvet ones in black and in rich scarlet with scallops around the bottom lined with silvercloth.

Yetter's seems to have the air of Thanksgiving and Christmas already and large mysterious looking boxes are arriving every day filled with Christmas ideas. The needle art department is nearly bulging with things to make for presents and for bazaars.

And by the way, have you seen the new ice-land wool scarfs they just received on second floor? They are already going fast, so do not hesitate!

CAN'T YOU JUST—

—smell the odors of the wonderful home cooking, coming thru the cracks at the new Food Shop, when you go by? And doesn't your mouth water when you see those luscious little individual like your mother makes?

And haven't you tasted those fresh potato chips which fairly melt in your mouth when you eat them? If you haven't, don't wait a day longer for this wonderful sensation. It's just a new shop, and perhaps you haven't discovered it yet, but do stop in on your way home from classes tomorrow.

A COSMOPOLITAN ARRAY

—of lovely things which are actually imported from every country imaginable, are to be found at the Davis shop, Berkeley Place. Everything from Taly jugs to the beautiful India tapestries, just fairly breathe foreign atmosphere. Tiny pieces of old Dresden china, Japanese brass painted trays, and stationery from Germany, are included in this unique little shop. I'd like to take each one of you personally and watch the expression on your faces when you step inside the door of the Davis Gift Shop.

IF YOUR CLOTHES—

—are getting to look rather shabby, after their heavy fall wearing, and you simply can't go home for the holidays to the round of social activities, characteristic of the Christmas vacation, you must be yourself up to Strub's ready to wear department, and choose the very frock you need to fill the gap in your wardrobe.

Mr. Sprague has ordered and received just the type of dress you will need for these occasions and they are ready for your approval. Some are in black satin with the newest notes of trimmings and sleeves, and too, they are beginning to get the dresses in the lighter shades which are forerunners of spring.

I saw one in the most delicate shade of rose and one in blue which were adorable in their simplicity, yet stylish and appropriate.

Discovered—

—a new kind of sport, yet dressy oxford at Stewart's yesterday. They had just received what is called the new "Baltimore" pattern, which is very clever indeed. It is a sort of soft shade of brown in a tie and with very attractive stitching on it. I really cannot describe it but I'd like to take you in and show it to you. I'll guarantee you'll want a pair before you go home Christmas.

And too, I must tell you about the adjustable colonial buckle slipper which can be worn with or without the large buckle and gives you a change for your best black satins. Or you can get them in with a one strap pattern with tiny dull silver buckle to fit over the button.

Just the thing for varsity or a party, is the new "damsante" patent leather high-heeled slipper with one strap to keep them on firmly and which are of this short vamp which we all like. Whatever style slipper you want I'm sure you'll find at Stewart's for they know what the college girls like, I've found. And if you haven't goshaws yet—Stewart's have them in every size and description!

IF YOU WANT—

—a light flower to go with your coat and to gladden your countenance, you can find such lovely ones at Bishop's Millinery shop. A flower is such an inexpensive accessory and yet adds so much to the costume, don't you agree?

And if you need a school felt, especially in the new light shades, or a metal hat, (metal hats are so good now), you can certainly find what you desire here, in any style and description. This shop is tiny but is so full of new things!

KEURGERS HAVE—

—just received a new line of formal slippers, in time for your selection for the first formal.

They are so attractive and at such a price that you will not be able to resist. A paleysy pattern of soft blues and rose, and other shades which will harmonize with anything, are trimmed with silver heels in the newest "panel-spike" idea. And too, there is the plain but rich looking silver kid pump which is always good.

A new gypsy pattern which Mr. Krueger says is very new, is the black patent and cherry patent combined in a clever high heel pattern and they really were quite distinctive.

And don't forget that Krueger's stress the popular prices especially for students who have to keep within their allowance!

JEWELRY SEEMS——to be the predominate thing at Denekke's college shop this week, for everywhere I looked I saw lovely jade rings or sparkly pins and bracelets, of all kinds and descriptions.

And so many girls have asked for dinner rings in grotto blue that Mrs. Gibson has gone to special trouble to obtain them for you. Mosaic brooches make such handsome accessories, don't you think, and they go with anything one desires to wear them with.

Mrs. Gibson is beginning to lay in her supply of rhinestone jewelry for formals which is just as popular as ever, only with the handsome sparkling ear-rings added this season. And too, I must add, have you seen the tiny old gold and silver dories set with sapphires, some for rings and some for powder? They are so dear darling, and would make a thoughtful Thanksgiving gift for a friend.

IT WOULD BE—

—a pleasure to write letters if I owned one of those handsome writing tablets of hand-tooled leather with delicately tinted designs on the cover and lovely stationery inside.

Beautiful representations of Theims cathedral and ships in colors are on the covers of these tablets and they can be neatly tucked into a traveling bag when you go on a trip. They would make lovely gifts for those far-away friends who never write and might serve as a hint!

A table cannot be set without a good looking pair of salt and pepper set, and china ones are easily broken, so shiny silver ones are just the thing, the ones they have at Deorak and O'Hara's are of such graceful patterns, too.

Family gifts seem to be a specialty at this little store and it is just chock full of intimate things waiting for you to see them.

Dr. Samuel Atkins Eliot To Speak At University Vesper Service Today—

He is the son of the late Dr. Charles W. Eliot of Harvard and is one of the leading educators of his age. His reappearance on the Vesper program is an assurance that he has some exceedingly interesting things to say. Furthermore, he knows how to address college students, having talked to them for years.

Bring Your Dad To Hear Him—

Because Dad will enjoy hearing this eminent speaker. Dad, too, will enjoy the splendid music offered by the University Orchestra and Vesper Choir.

Poker Football

THE Nebraska halfback and the substitute end, who were arrested with five other students on the charge of gambling, face suspension from the university.

What about glory? The "five other students" duck behind the shelter of mediocrity. A masked session with the deans, absence from their refectory tables, and their families will receive them home without the taint of publicity.

Not so the grid men. "Jug" Brown, cheered by the Husker thousands, has slugged the family name, threatened the chances of the squad, and focused another glare light for the college life crabbies. Substitute-end Roy Mandery has done his bit.

So that's fame—the attendant light that shows up what your right and your left hand do alone and together. It keeps you in the acceptable paths, or it ditches you with a vengeance. It gives all men 101 per cent interest in your comings and goings.

So "Jug" and Roy play the courtroom gridders now. All for a poker game—with a police lieutenant looking in the transom.

The Goose-Girl Ascends

A BEAUTIFUL goose-girl in Saxony puts her papa's fowls through their prettiest waddles and the unseen passing movie magnates sign her for a metropolitan latest. A bricklayer in Minneapolis takes time to write after supper and wins an international literature prize.

There's something in the offing for the person who dreams and acts to realize his dreams.

There are others, looking for an easy place to loaf for good wages. They want the dollars without barking their knuckles. Sometimes they're college students. After graduation they start typing with a self-allotted number of letters to do. Then the boss looks over to their little mahogany desks and dictates some others.

The Frauleins Marks and the Knut Hamsons carry away the beauty trophies and the Nobel prizes because they are sincerely impatient with their work, and are looking for a job that will test their powers. In the meantime they are laying their bricks and ratching their geese as these things should be done.

When We Are Forced to Think

THINKING, for most of us, is a painful procedure to be delayed until the latest possible moment.

Psychologists say that the cortex of the brain, that part with which we pass judgment and make decisions, is the latest development of evolution. In fact, it is so new that most of the human race has not learned how to use it. It is like a new car which still runs stiffly.

The actual powers of this new mechanism are manifest in the surprising things it can do in critical times. Before examinations, students can "eram" a whole book into their memory in the usual time allowed for one or two chapters. Christmas shopping, which at another time would cause weeks of indecision, can be carried on at high speed on the day before Christmas.

Public opinion on political matters wavers ineffectually until a crisis (which might have been averted) forces it to become fixed.

People make excuses. The mind works better in this way, they say. It must circumscribe a subject slowly and with dignity until it has considered all sides. The world would be a sad muddle if we jumped to our conclusions.

True. It is a muddle and largely for that reason. Because we do make snap decisions in most cases.

"Matters will work themselves out," says our American citizen comfortably. But they never do. They merely arrive at such a point that decision is necessary, and not until that minute do the people decide. Generally their decision is almost a leap in the dark, because the time which they have allowed themselves for "meditation" is actually spent in hasty glances at the subject between long periods of dreamy emotionalism and sentimentality.

There are many problems before the people of America today. International relations, prohibition, misused and unused suffrage privileges, and official graft. "Let them evolve," we say. Time will tell.

When men learn to use their thinking powers steadily and consistently; when, in other words, they have conquered mental laziness and mental sloppiness, our problems will be solved as they appear on the horizon—and the millenium will have arrived.

Ponies: Time-Savers

USE of "ponies," English translations of books supposed to be read in the original language, as time savers, seems a bit obvious. Of course they would save time, for the student wouldn't ever have to bother to read the original. Yet the method has always been frowned upon as dishonest by instructors. Now a University of Chicago professor comes forth endorsing their use and pointing out their benefits.

The 6,000 lines of Caesar may each one contain a new word for the average student, who must turn back to the vocabulary just 6,000 times during the course of the reading. So much waste motion, for he isn't expected to remember every word anyway, and a translation near at hand would supply those meanings.

The study of a language and its literature should yield three things: a working knowledge of the vocabulary; thorough understanding of its constructions; and an intelligent interpretation of the literature itself. Every one of these things could be acquired as well through use of "ponies" as without them. An interlinear translation right in the books would be valuable, the Chicago man asserts, for construction study could be made this way with ease, vocabularies would be learned just as easily, and studying the books as literature would be much more simple.

As it is, study of a book written in a foreign language is apt to be merely a memory test, or else after looking up the words, the student writes them between the lines himself. Books prepared with interlinear translations would pave the way for a simpler, quicker, method of language study.

A Quadful of Bards

IN APRIL of 1552 the community authorities of Stratford-on-Avon fined John Shakespeare twelve pence for allowing an over-sized dunghill to accumulate in front of his house. The sanitary conditions of those times, judged by modern standards, were simply terrible. Yet in this environment William Shakespeare grew to manhood.

Did such conditions help him attain his literary supremacy? Men of the Quadrangle sometimes wonder, as they walk up the brick pavement immediately west of Iowa avenue bridge. Here, on the south side of the street, there runs an open sewer which continually wafts in the breeze one of the most medieval perfumes we ever have smelled.

John Shakespeare allowed such a condition to exist at his home, but he was not in advance of his neighbors, for two of them suffered similar fumes. This community harbors a like condition—whether it be conducive to the developing of literary talent or not—but in this we are alone, for where is there another university town with such a Shakespearean bit of environment for its students? Surely, if this kind of thing enhances the development of poetical ability, the Quad men will be veritable Miltons—and we shall have a plausible explanation of their high scholastic standing.

Spuds and Sawdust

A LONDON chemist issues the statement that a sugar made from sawdust may soon be a commercial success. He secured sixty-five pounds of sugar from one hundred pounds of the worried wood.

From Paris comes the report that vegetable oil can produce a fire-proof fuel highly practicable for the motors of airplanes, automobiles, and motor-boats. For gasoline-importing France the discovery is a life-saver.

People have the notion that the world's fuel supply will soon dwindle away. Fatalistic, they hope it'll last out their day.

Without a doubt, natural resources exist today, whose availability is conditioned only by the ingenuity of man's brain.

Science will discover the process for utilizing these supplies. But the scientist will need the paraphernalia of the laboratory. These, money and the people can provide.

Pulling together we will get somewhere. There's even the chance that some potential trillionaire will find a way to release the reserve energy stored in mud through years of slithering through Iowa roads!

Poems That Live

Afternoon on a Hill
I will be the gladdest thing
Under the sun!
I will touch a hundred flowers
And not pick one.
I will look at cliffs and clouds
With quiet eyes,
Watch the wind bow down the grass,
And the grass rise.
And when the lights begin to show
Up from the town,
I will mark which must be mine,
And then start down!

Indelible Moments

By ELSIE GRAY

Curls Gone

In another town of the state he had known her—long curls, long lashes and deep eyes. Yes, and just the least suspicion of a lip when she said, "Please sharpen my pencil." He had moved away still knickerbockered. He had always wanted to go back to the old home—and this he never added aloud—the girl with the curls. He had meant to when he was quite a man and could speak for himself with ease and authority.

Now, here she was—of course, why not? She would have graduated from high school the same June as he. Even in curls she had said she was going to college, and here she was—curls gone, long lashes less long, eyes more deep because more knowing. His own eyes and ears refused to believe his brain when he heard her name pronounced with his in introduction. Then because the chaperon seemed to expect it he asked her to dance.

"This isn't quite like grammar grades, is it," she said as she touched his shoulder, and she lisped the least noticeable bit.

He scanned her face for what had been written there since last he read it. Chin high—that was as always. Questioning—yes. Upper lip poised like a butterfly on a blossom—it was a dance without words. "Did you know I was coming here to school?" he asked when the music ceased.

"I thought you would." She smiled without molesting the butterfly.

A Parable of Education
Two angels were standing by the parapet of the pre-earth world painstakingly hanging two little round-bottomed bundles on the bills of two sagacious and experienced-looking storks.
"There," said one, "We have but to wait and see who wins."
"My choice was well made," said the other.
"It may be, but I believe you are mistaken," replied the first. One cannot come to successful accomplishment any more without money. My fledgling has been sent to wealthy parents, and I am content."

"Where there is a purpose there is a way," remonstrated the other. "It is now as it has ever been."
They walked away in friendly disagreement and serious mood. Wealth or a great purpose—which should do the greatest good thing in the world?

Two bright children came to early maturity. The parents of one said, "Have it if you wish. Choose and I will buy." Those of the other said, "We cannot afford it, dear." One child went on to college because it was a conceded fact not needing explanation that father would pay. The other said, "I must educate myself, for only thus may I hope to understand all that these wise people are saying and doing in the buzzing world about me."

Thus it was that in a democratic university a rich man's son and a serious young woman met through the medium of a common text book which both thought particularly dull. The waiting angels folded their long skirts about them and put finger to lips as they listened. Often they cast questioning glances at each other as they followed the trend of events.

When the wedding was over the rich man's son came to his bride and said, "What are you going to do now, dear, to keep from getting bored?"

"Oh," said she, "I have a perfectly gorgeous idea to make the world better. I've had it for ever so long, ever since I was born, I guess."

"Well," replied the kind husband, "you'll need some cash, won't you?"
"Oh, yes, I nearly forgot that."
"How much?"
"Perhaps about a million dollars worth to begin with."

"All right. I'll be smoking in the library when you come back. Success!"

The two angels leaned on the parapet and listened until it was quite dark, but they never heard any-

STATION R. L. S. BROAD-CASTING
Our roommate vouches for the truth of the following: At the Armistice Day program a lovely lady was weeping mournfully. His thoughts at once drifted over to Flanders fields and hovered awhile over a poppy covered grave with a plain woolen cross at its head. "I can sympathize with you," he ventured consolingly. But this seemed only to augment her grief. And he was just getting to be a b-b-b... "May I ask the name of your brave soldier son?" he interrupted in an effort to comfort her. "Tom," and he w-w-was the b-b-best c-c-c-ent I ever h-h-hand."

He had just planted Kiss No. 11 when she began to object. "Don't thing more. They groped away in the darkness without settling their wager."

To Grow and to Change Not
A slim trim bob-haired woman had been darting about the campus all day. Others not so slim, and looking more husky than she, said it was exactly as she used to do. "On her way to classes she seemed to just skim the cement with her toes—the pacer, we called her."
"How do you do it?" two old classmates demanded of her at once, "keep so young and spirited? And buried in a small town, too?"

"Young! I don't know how I look, but I feel young. I feel like buying an armful of books and starting in all over again." A restless animation hinted that she would soon be off again. "I wanted to come back and see things just as they used to be. Here it all is, and here am I. Oh, it is wonderful!" "It is sad to find some of the old profs bending with age, but they're just as inspiring. I've gone back into some of their classes. There's the same old charm." The fire of inspiration was in her eyes that kept talking in the near and the far. "They have grown with the years, so there is no room for me to look back and feel it was all the glamor of youth. Small town!" She raised her voice like the parson from her own village. "I've been thinking all this time about young people here on this campus where I used to be. My son will soon be here. Why should I be bothered with the smugness of a small town? I knew I'd come back sometime and see it just as it was. There's the bell. I'm going to a biology class—want to come, any of you?" They did not.

"I suppose she skims the roofs of her small town just as she used to skim the cement walk." The alumni expressed their unanimous desire to go out to the chapter house and taw with "the girls" until train time.

you think you're a bit too forward and anticipating too much?"
Just then the old cuckoo announced the arrival of midnight. "Why, no," he said, taking No. 12. "I'm just keeping up with the times."

Dear A. S. A.—This morning on our way to our humble labors we saw a most encouraging sight: a student attired in sport knickerbocks valiantly bucking a snowdrift with a snow shovel. At last we have found a valid excuse for the existence of sawed-off pants.

Who's Who AT IOWA

Burton A. Ingwersen, head football coach of the University of Iowa, is one of the university's most popular men. He is a gentleman, personality plus, and a born fighter. On the football field Ingwersen is the man supreme. Nothing misses his careful eye. He carries a fighting spirit into his coaching ability. He is an inspiring leader.

Mr. Ingwersen and the writer were discussing the probable 1926 All-American football team. The coach believes that Jessing of Minnesota will be picked as fullback because of his powerful plunging ability, and his worth as a defensive back. The writer mentioned Flora, of Michigan as a possible selection at end. Ingwersen shook his head. "Oosterbaan is a better man," he said, "both defensively and offensively. I do not believe that he will be selected as All-American, however." Hoss, Ohio State's All-American guard in 1925, is also a possibility again this year, although Meyers his running mate showed up much better in the Iowa-Ohio game at Columbus. These men will, he thinks, be the possible selections from the Big Ten.

"To be a good lineman," the coach continued, "one must possess a good head, aggressiveness, speed, determination, be able to use his hands, and be willing to stretch himself at all times." To illustrate the last point Ingwersen got to his feet and said, "Now, suppose I've been blocked out by an opposing player. I must be willing to throw myself over to get the man carrying the ball." He lunged to the left as if in the play and this writer dodged, narrowly escaping a collision. That is Ingwersen. He lives and dreams football. "The ideal back," he went on, "is first of all, a brainy player, one who can size up well, the opposing attack. Then he must have speed, he must be a good ball carrier, a determined blocker, and tackler, and a man who can pass and kick."

He believes that Notre Dame and the Army are the two strongest teams in the country and that the National football title will fall to one of them.

The writer brought up the question of the attitude which Frazier Hunt, a nationally known writer, took following the turn of Red Grange to professional football, in that he did not believe that he wanted his boy to attend a university. Mr. Ingwersen replied, "One can't blame Grange in the least. I do not agree with Mr. Hunt in that respect. One is trying to establish himself in life by a college career. If Mr. Hunt does not wish to allow his son to attend a college of a university he is hindering him from at

"The Petter"

By BEATRICE BURTON
Author of "Love Bound," "Her Man"

READ THIS FIRST:

MERRY LOCKE, pretty and gay as her nickname, is a born flirt. She has no ambition beyond having a good time and plenty of beaux. At 20 she fails in her business course, because she does not study. Then, when her father dies, she goes into LILLIE DALE'S beauty shop at a tiny salary.

At that time, she is having the first real love affair of her life. The man in the case is TONY GAINES, an ambitious young lawyer who wants to marry her. Their engagement ends when Merry goes out with other men, and Tony goes to Montana to live. A year later Merry hears that he is engaged to another girl. She tries not to care.

HELEN, the oldest of the Locke sisters, marries and later dies in childbirth. CASSIE, the second oldest, marries her rich employer, MORLEY KAUFMAN. Merry envies her her soft, easy life, although she knows that Morley is having a secret love affair with MRS. PIFELL. JINNY, the youngest, elopes with DERRICK JONES, who lives next door, and goes to live with his parents.

Through Cassie, Merry meets BILL ERSKINE, a wealthy bachelor much older than herself. She becomes engaged to him, but he keeps putting off the wedding day.

MOMS takes Lillie Dale and a MR. HEFFLINGER into the house as boarders. A year later she marries Mr. Hefflinger. With her step-father "ruling the roost," the house is no longer the pleasant place it once was to Merry.

She meets LES PURCELL, a hero of her high school days, and goes out with him, more to escape from the house than for any other reason. She does not know he is married, until his wife threatens him with divorce and then tries to kill herself. Morley's sister, MURIEL, tells Bill Erskine the story. He goes to Florida, when his father dies there, and writes to Merry telling her that he is sure she is the wrong girl for him. Moms promptly announces the engagement and writes Bill a letter to let him know that he can't jilt Merry in that fashion. One night Merry goes out dancing with Jinny and Derrick's "crowd," and finds herself a wall flower for the first time in her life. She flirts with a man at the next table, to amuse herself.

CHAPTER LI

Merry gave the man at the next table a swift, side glance from under satiny lids and dark curved lashes. Then she looked quickly away. She took out her little vanity case, and as she powdered her short tilted nose, she could feel his eyes on her, still watching her. A dimple flashed in and out at the corner of her mouth.

She turned her head and looked at him again. He was a dark heavy set man with intent brown eyes and a bulldog sort of face. No one to wave flags over, as Merry remarked to herself.

"Here! What are you doing—flirting with that man?" Jinny's high voice asked suddenly, just behind her.

She and Derrick had stopped dancing in the middle of the dance, and she dropped down on the chair beside Merry, still flushed and panting.

"No, I'm not exactly flirting with him," Merry answered with a toss of her head. "I just happened to look up at him, and he smiled at me. But who could blame me if I DID flirt with him? I'm not having much of a time sitting here by myself, you know!"

Jinny turned her head and spoke to her husband. "Go and bring Angus back here where he belongs," she said sharply.

Derrick started off but Merry called him back. "No, don't take him away from the blonde. You aren't doing me any favor by bringing him back to me!" she said. "I'll tell you what you can do for me, thought—get me a taxicab. I'm going home."

"Indeed you're not!" piped up Jinny. "You're going to stay right here, and Angus Miller will just have to come back and dance with you! I wonder what he thinks he is, ditching the crowd this way!"

But Merry wouldn't listen to her. Nothing, she declared, would make her stay at the White Peacock a second longer.

"I have a beast of a headache anyway," she fibbed, "and really I'm not having a good time. I don't know your crowd, and—well, I'm just going home, that's all."

She swayed to her feet, a little faint and dizzy from the "juney" she had had in her ginger ale.

Jinny and Derrick took her to the door, arguing with her all the way. Insisting that she stay. She kept shaking her head, even after she was inside the taxicab and on her way home.

She never remembered the ride. But all at once the cab stopped, and looking out, she saw that they were in front of the Chester street house. The headlights hit a path before them on the rough pavement.

The driver sprang out and opened the door. He had the slip in his hand. "A dollar and a half," he said, pointing at it.

"But I haven't any money," Merry answered stupidly. Her head was going around and around as the cheap liquor she had drunk, began to take effect.

There was a light in the sitting room of the house. Moms must be waiting for her.

Walking as if she were very tired, or very sick, she went up to the front door and rang the bell.

"Got a dollar fifty?" she asked, when Moms opened the door, looking startled and puzzled.

"How did you happen to come home so early?" her mother asked, taking her old brown purse from the pocket of her apron. "Aren't you well?"

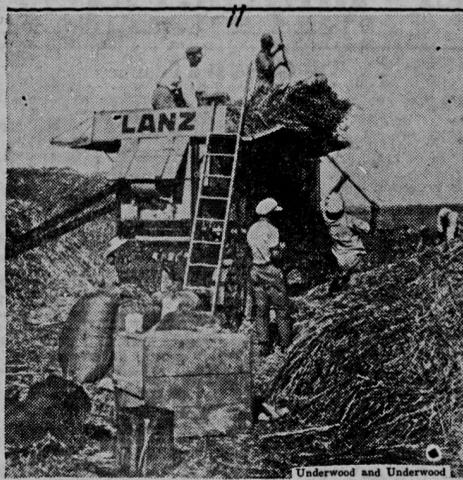

"She turned on every light in her room, locked the door and walked over to her dressing table.

The mirror gave her back the reflection of her face, the soft purple shadows under her eyes, the tired droop of the lovely mouth, the whiteness of it.

Then she thought of Jinny's face that night under its tiny green sports hat. She thought of the faces of the three other girls in Jinny's party. The pert pointed faces with the unmistakable stamp of extreme youth on them.

"Why, I'm old compared with them!" she knew, suddenly.

stairs to bed! What have you had to drink?"

But Merry pushed her away with a weak little movement of her hands.

"I haven't had much to drink, Moms," she said, shaking her head and closing her eyes wearily. "Not as much as you think I've had. I'm really pretty sober."

But Moms insisted that she go to bed, and so finally she went. Dimly she listened to her mother's voice, going on and on about the evil of drinking strong liquor.

"It's wrong for anyone to touch it," she was saying, while Merry slowly and clumsily undressed herself. "It's had enough for a man to drink, but how much worse for a woman! There's nothing on earth so low as a woman who drinks."

Merry paid no attention to her. Her tired brain kept repeating: "I was too old for that young kid tonight. He thought I was too old for him. Think of it! Me! Too old for him! Think of it!"

At last she was in bed, the lights were out, and the room was silent. She slept as soon as her head touched the smooth coolness of the pillow.

It may have been three or four hours afterward that Merry woke up.

The house was perfectly still and the curtains at her bedroom windows swayed back and forth like ghosts in the soft air of the spring night.

She lay there for a moment idly watching them. Then she swung her feet out of bed, and slipped into her kimono.

She turned on every light in her room, locked the door and walked over to her dressing table.

The mirror gave her back the reflection of her face, the soft purple shadows under her eyes, the tired droop of the lovely mouth, the whiteness of it.

Then she thought of Jinny's face that night under its tiny green sports hat. She thought of the faces of the three other girls in Jinny's party. The pert pointed faces with the unmistakable stamp of extreme youth on them.

Phi Delta Gamma Elects Woolbert as Honorary Member

C. H. Woolbert, professor of speech was elected to associate membership of Phi Delta Gamma, an honorary forensic fraternity, at their bi-weekly meeting at Youde's inn.

Professor Woolbert is one of the outstanding men in the speech field of the country, having written several nationally accepted text books on speech, and the writer of many articles concerning his special line. He came to Iowa this fall from Illinois where he was head of the speech department.

Harold Reussenlein, A. A. of Burlington, Dwight M. Bannister, A. A. of Ottumwa, and Homer K. Biddinger, L. S. of Detroit, Mich., were elected to regular membership of the fraternity. Reussenlein is a member of Phi Kappa Phi and former member of the men's forensic council. He was president of the men's glee club and carried the leading roles in "Faust" and the "Mikado." Bannister was in the freshman, sophomore, and peace oratorical institute. Biddinger is a Zeta Psi member and competed on the I-M-I, and Grinnell debate teams two years ago.

Des Moines U. Gets Surprise Victory

DES MOINES, Nov. 20 (AP)—Des Moines University upset all the hopes today and won from Nebraska Wesleyan, 6 to 6. The Tigers winning score was made in the fourth period after a Nebraska fumble had been recovered on the visitors 20-yard line. The Nebraskans once got within range of the Des Moines goal and attempted a field goal, but the ball went wild.

Quadrangle Resembles Town in Makeup, Management, Activity

A town made up only of gentlemen is in reality what the quadrangle is. There are six hundred men living in the walls which much resemble the walls built around cities of ancient times for protection.

In the town are all the features found in a small town of six hundred people. There is a postoffice which probably does more business than a postoffice in a town much larger. Last year with a population of only 450, eight thousand packages were received at the office to be shipped out. This did not include the packages received which doubtless were much greater. Over fifteen hundred dollars worth of stamps were sold during the nine months. This year over six hundred letters are received each day.

Have Cafeteria

In the town there is a clothier, an optician, barbers, all of whom are doing a good business. There is also a kodak service, artistic lettering, and a professional shoemaker. There are many typists and salesmen.

One of the new features of the town which has been added during the last year is a cafeteria. The citizens of the town claim that there is no town of its size with such an artistic and serviceable cafeteria. Over five hundred meals a day are served here according to Owen Scott, director of the cafeteria. The place is modern in every respect.

Sponsor Athletics

Some of the activities which the council sponsors are athletics and contests of different natures. Since they believe that the future and development of a town is dependent on a well rounded, and physically developed body, football games, basket ball games, tennis matches, and so forth are fought between the different wards for the championship of the town. One of the most interesting events of the year is an annual cross country run in which any man in the town is qualified to run.

Buckeyes Triumph Over Illinois in Thrilling Grid Battle 7-6

Last Minute Rush Fails Aggies as Ames Wins 3 to 2

MANHATTAN, Kans., Nov. 20 (AP)—The Kansas Aggies in the fourth quarter today came within four inches of what would have given a last minute victory over the Iowa State college eleven, only to have the Cyclone line stiffen and prevent a score. The game, the last of the season for the Aggies, ended 3 to 2 in favor of Ames, a decided upset.

After the two teams had battled throughout three periods without scoring, Coe, Ames captain started things near the middle of the final quarter by booting a long field goal, giving his team a three point lead. A second later this same lad dashed 50 yards to the Wildest goal, only to be called back because one of his mates was offside on the play. Opening a desperate offensive onslaught the Aggies drove to the goal line, only to be halted, and Ames resorted to the strategy of downing the ball behind the goal line for an Aggies' safety, carrying two points, rather than risk a fumble and a possible Wildcat touchdown. The Aggies offense, which worked so smoothly against all previous opponents failed to get going today except in the one desperate rush which availed nothing. The Ames squad leaves tonight for Los Angeles where it meets the University of California, southern branch, next Saturday.

Frozen Field Hampers New York in Tilt with Nebraska

[By The Associated Press] LINCOLN, Nov. 20 — The eastern invasion of a western gridiron was unsuccessful here this afternoon when New York University, previously undefeated, went down before the onslaught of the University of Nebraska Cornhuskers, 15 to 7.

Playing on a rough, frozen field blanketed with a steadily falling snow, the Huskers displayed their best brand of Missouri Valley football, while the powerful Violets took their first defeat in nine straight games.

Although the visitors showed enough speed to bear up the enviable record with which they came into the fray, the Nebraska team outplayed them throughout.

The Game at a Glance

Notre Dame Adds Drake Game as Win

Irish Army on Way to National Title with Eight Victories

[By The Associated Press] SOUTH BEND, Nov. 20—Notre Dame was a step nearer its goal of another football championship when it disposed of Drake today, 21 to 0. Knute Rockne's roving grid warriors now have high hopes of annexing the title of football champions of the United States as did the canny 1924 team.

Carnegie Tech on Nov. 27 and the University of Southern California on Dec. 4 are the barriers remaining on the path to a championship this season. Drake's scalp was added to those of Beloit, Minnesota, Penn State, Northwestern, Georgia Tech, Indiana and the Army.

Drake did not let the Notre Dame Homecoming crowd off without a thrill. Early in the second period the Iowa lads worked the ball to within a yard or so of the Notre Dame goal line but their threat was finally stopped when the Notre Dame defense stiffened. Other threats were made but none came close as did this drive of the Drake team.

Yale Kicks Way to Win Over Harvard

Two Field Goals Save Game After Crimson Takes 7-6 Lead

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 20 (AP)—Thrusting two mighty feet out of the shadow of threatening defeat, a bruised and battered Yale Bulldog kicked its way to victory over Harvard before a throng of 80,000 in the New Haven Bowl today, 12 to 7.

The spectacular field goals by Jerry Wadsworth and Captain Tibby Bunnell rescued the game for the Blue in the second half after a sensational 20-yard pass had unexpectedly put the Crimson out in front by a single point, 7 to 6. Leaping into the fray, a minute man from the sidelines, who had only one task and did it well, Wadsworth, clinched Yale's triumph with a placement boot from the 23 yard line.

It remained for Bunnell however, to contribute a spectacular climax to the struggle. His drop kick was one of the longest of the season, the ball soaring over the cross bar in the fourth period from a point near the 40 yard line.

Summer Flivver Blackballed Now by Fraternity Men

The fraternity flivver finds itself relegated to the back yard since Iowa City's first heavy snowstorm. No longer does some victimized pledge have to rise early in the morning to wheedle it into life.

It remains undisturbed under its blanket of snow as the boys rush off to their eight o'clocks. What can a poor Ford expect if it does not have the "spirit" that would enable it to start cheerfully on its trek toward the campus?

Or, if the flivver does navigate, it is so disguised that one stops, looks, and listens before one is quite sure of its identity.

The latest thing out in snow-proof tops, as observed recently on the chassis of one of these models that infest the street of Iowa City, is a sheet, gracefully draped from windshield to rear, with the remnants of a top of days of greater respectability fluttering out behind like streamers of mourning.

Tops that were down all summer to give the collegian air have been urged out of their time worn creases to protect the fall headgear of their owners.

Battling Hoosiers Bow to Boilermakers 24-14

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Nov. 20 (AP)—In a sparkling battle Purdue, by virtue of a slashing off tackle and end circling attack, won from its historic rival, Indiana, here today 24 to 14. The Crimson, however, was no docile opponent and succumbed only after extending the Boilermakers.

From the sensational 56-yard run of "Cotton" Wilcox in the first period to the unsuccessful attempt of Wilson to boot a field goal from midfield in the waning minutes, Phelan's charges set a pace which Indiana gamely tried to match.

Daugherty Makes Illini Touchdown in Final Minutes

Peters Fails to Kick Goal After Mates Stage Comeback

[By The Associated Press] CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 20—Ohio State snatched a thrilling 7 to 6 victory from Illinois in the final game of the western conference season here today, but the 35,000 shivering spectators were given the thrill of their lives when in the last ninety seconds of play, Illinois came within an ace of tying the score.

The failure of "Frosty" Peters, the Montana Mercury, to boot the ball between the uprights after Russell Daugherty, the Illinois fullback had scored a touchdown on a pass in the closing seconds of the game cost Illinois the loss of a tie.

Eby Scores for Ohio

After a scoreless first half in which the Illini was on the offense the greater part of the time, Coach Wilce inserted his stylish running sophomore half back, Byron Eby, into the Ohio lineup, relieving Gram. It was only after Eby's entrance into the game that Ohio State started its march for a touchdown.

Illinois, beaten 7 to 0, and with the game drawing closer to its finish every second, opened with a devastating forward pass attack that was responsible for its touchdown. Peters, who was kept on the sidelines for the first three periods, came into the battle at the start of the fourth period and played a stellar role in the forward pass.

Peters in Stellar Role

The first pass Lanum shot to Peters gained 49 yards. The toss was for 30 yards and Peters, catching the ball off his shoestrings, ran 19 yards more, tearing down the side lines before he was forced out of bounds on Ohio's 25 yard line.

After Peters thrilling dash, Stuesey passed to Daugherty for 13 yards but his next heave was grounded. Then Gallivan slipped off tackle for three yards. Stuesey heaved another pass into Daugherty's outstretched hands and the Illini fullback shot to the edge of the field and tore across Ohio's goal for a touchdown with less than ninety seconds to play.

Peters made a valiant attempt to add the extra point with a dropkick, thus tying the score, but the ball went wide of the goal posts.

Missouri Smears Jayhawks 15 to 0

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 20 (AP)—Climaxing their 1926 gridiron season with a 15 to 0 victory over the Kansas Jayhawkers, the University of Missouri Tigers formally dedicated their new memorial stadium here today in the annual homecoming game, staged in a downfall of snow.

Approximately 25,000 spectators who braved the cold and storm watched the Tigers avenge the ten to seven defeat which Kansas administered to them last year at Lawrence. Missouri carried the fight from the starting whistle, and the Jayhawks at no time during the game seriously threatened to cross the Tiger goal.

Carleton Gets Midwest Grid Title by Win Over Cornell

NORTHFIELD, Minn., Nov. 20 (AP)—Carleton college won the mid-west football conference title for the second consecutive year today, defeating Cornell 6 to 0. Except for the Northwestern university game, Carleton's goal line was uncrossed this season.

Kansas Yearlings Win

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 19 (AP)—Kansas freshmen shutout the Missouri Tiger yearlings 13 to 0 on a muddy and snowy field here today. The game was a prelude to the annual Homecoming day gridiron classic between the varsity teams of both schools tomorrow.

La Crosse Normal Blanks Luther College 6 to 0

LA CROSSE, Wis., Nov. 20 (AP)—A blocked kick in the third quarter gave La Crosse Normal a 6 to 0 victory over Luther college. Tomlinson blocked Astrup's kick on the 45-yard line, and Carson covered and raced over the goal. Brown, tackle, under protest on ineligibility charges, did not play.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (AP)—Ted Morgan, brilliant little junior light weight champion of the Pacific coast, hammered Carl Duane, New York Italian, into defeat in a thrilling 15 round slugfests match before 15,000 fans here tonight.

Parsons Eleven Whips State Teachers 20 to 7

FAIRFIELD, Nov. 20 (AP)—Parsons advanced its standing in the Iowa conference today by winning from Iowa State Teachers college 20 to 7.

The Tutors scored first on a 30-yard run by McCaskey, in the second period. Parsons evened the count in the same period with a couple of long passes. Wallace, full back, smashed his way to a touchdown in the third period, and Russell, who substituted for him, did the same thing in the final quarter.

Stanford Clinches Coast Championship

BERKLEY, CALIF., Nov. 20 (AP)—Stanford University downed the University of California eleven here today, 41 to 6, clinching the Pacific Coast conference championship and remaining undefeated for the season.

Badger Passes Too Much for Maroons

CHICAGO, Nov. 20 (AP)—Wisconsin and Chicago, lagging far behind in the Western conference, today closed their 1926 season here with a 14 to 7 victory for the Badgers.

Although the Maroons made their second touchdown of the season of 1926 in the Big Ten, their seven points in the third quarter were the best they could do toward a fourteen point lead piled up by Wisconsin in the first ten minutes of play.

Today's game gave Wisconsin its third victory of the 1926 Western conference season while Chicago closed the year without a single conference victory. The Maroons made a desperate effort at a comeback in the last three quarters but a uniformly mediocre team was unable to overcome one only slightly better.

The game was fought in the air all the way and passes yielded Wisconsin two touchdowns at the start of the game.

It was Maroon passing that in the third quarter brought Chicago's second touchdown of the Big Ten season by the same method which made the first against Northwestern, a week ago. Marks received the throw from Anderson and ran across the Badger goal line.

taining something vitally necessary in our present complex association. Along that same line the influence of a university career is of tremendous effect. It broadens the student in character, personality, and ability through his association with other people. One cannot get everything necessary from books alone.

I told him that I had read the article, written by a professional critic, which asserted that the play of Minnesota here against Iowa Homecoming, was unbeatable, and asked him what he thought of it. This he answered, "Minnesota looked like an exceptional team here, the most powerful that I've seen for some time. Their play was unusually smooth and above the average. I do not think they were unbeatable but it would have taken an exceptionally powerful eleven to defeat them on that day. A team of power and experienced men always seems to be a 'wonder machine' against a weaker team."

Coach Ingwersen was born at Bryant, Ia., Aug. 29, 1888. He is a graduate of Clinton, Ia., high school, and of the University of Illinois. At the latter school he was a nine letter man, playing in football, captain, 1918, basketball, captain '19, and baseball. During his career on the gridiron he is said to be the only Big Ten man to hold the famous Slater on even terms. After his graduation from Illinois in 1920 (B.S.), he became assistant coach of the Illinois football squad (1921-24). He came to Iowa as head coach of football in 1924.

Kinmonth Presents Purpose of Rotary

Harry Breene Urges Membership in Red Cross

J. Lyle Kinmonth, publisher of the Asbury Park Press of Asbury Park, N. J., outlined the purpose of Rotary and some of the ways in which Rotarians may reach the goal for which they are striving, in a short impromptu speech before the Iowa City Rotary club recently.

Mr. Kinmonth stressed the fact that in the Rotary club's work among boys, the under-privileged boy should not be the sole object of consideration. In his opinion, the over-privileged boy presents a problem of equal, perhaps greater, importance. The boy with too much money is beset with just as many dangers as the boy who hasn't enough, said Mr. Kinmonth.

Mr. Kinmonth, a former resident of Iowa, has had considerable experience with the practical side of Rotary work. He was formerly district governor of the old third Rotary district, which included the states of New York and New Jersey. An appeal by Harry D. Breene, urging Rotarians to re-subscribe to membership in the Red Cross resulted in an almost unanimous response from the members of the Iowa City club.

Mr. Kinmonth was the guest of Rotarian Merritt C. Speldel at luncheon. Other guests were W. G. Clark, Eldora; A. C. Fuller, Cedar Falls; Thomas Green, Ackley; E. E. Mendes, Hawarden; Charles M. Neveln, Iowa Falls; and V. S. Stansbury, Mount Vernon. All the above men except Mr. Kinmonth are visiting Rotarians who are here this week attending conferences of the Iowa State Teachers' association.

According to an announcement by President James Luscombe, the next meeting of the Rotary club will be held next Wednesday at 6 p. m. at the Jefferson hotel.

Continue Action to Evict Mrs. E. Frey from Dooley House

F. J. Belger and George A. Falk Bring Suit as Referees of J. T. Dooley Estate

After a partial hearing before Justice C. C. Roup yesterday afternoon, the case of F. J. Belger and George A. Falk, referees for the estate of the deceased Joseph T. Dooley, against Mrs. Ella Frey, Iowa City, was continued until Monday morning.

The referees are suing for forcible entry and detainer against Mrs. Frey, who has been occupying the Joseph T. Dooley residence on S. Clinton street since the owner's death.

Mrs. Frey had been employed as housekeeper by the late Mr. Dooley. Attorneys Thompson and Thompson of Muscatine, appearing for the defendant, filed a demurrer in the case, charging that the referees who were appearing as plaintiffs had no legal authority to sue, contending that only the heirs themselves might bring such an action against Mrs. Frey.

Justice Roup over-ruled the demurrer filed by the defendants and upon motion made by the defendant's attorney the case was continued until Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

Hunting Licenses Much in Demand as Snow Falls

Twenty-one hunting licenses were issued yesterday from the county recorder's office. Business has been brisk in the issuing of licenses ever since the snowfall on Nov. 17 made conditions ideal for rabbit and squirrel hunting. In all, fifty-seven hunting licenses have been issued since that date. The total number of licenses issued by the county recorder since July 1, which began the present season, is 1765. Yesterday there was the biggest demand of the season for licenses.

Chemists Discuss Coal Liquefaction at Pittsburg Meet

That fuel oil for automobiles and for other commercial purposes will, for a large part, in the future be extracted from coal was the contention given at the international conference on bituminous coal held this week at the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh.

Prof. Hubert L. Olin, head of the department of chemical engineering of the University of Iowa, who has been doing research in extraction from coal by hydro-generation during the past year, attended the conference.

fifty to sixty per cent of the coal into oil by hydrogen under high pressure.

Dr. Bergius, who invented the process of extraction in 1913, told the assembly that the expenditure of millions of dollars had made economically successful the liquefaction of coal.

"One ton of bituminous coal," he said, "will yield an average of 140 gallons of oil. Deducting the coal consumed in the process, the net yield is 104 gallons per ton of coal. Of this, thirty-five gallons consists of aromatic compounds, and the remainder is gas, lubricating oil, and fuel oil."

"The problems of high pressure, continuous feeding of coal, removal of residue, and temperature control have been solved. A method of manufacture of hydrogen has been worked out employing the gaseous by-products in the liquefaction of the coal itself."

County Finances Reported Excellent

The grand jury adjourned yesterday afternoon. Reports filed at the county clerk's office indicate the county farm and county jail to be in good condition. The steward's books were examined at the county farm and showed the finances of the institution to be in good order.
