Referee, Schommer (Chicago); umpire, Young (Illinois Wesleyan).

Captain Johnny Nykos upset a perfectly good ball game last night when he hoisted a beautiful heave from a goodly distance past the Iowa defense and left a surprised Old Gold basketball team on the wake end of a 19 to 18 score. And it all came after Coach Sam Barry's aggregation had battled its way to an 18 to 15 victory, only to let two Irish shots find their way through the hoop in the final four minutes of one of the most spectacular games ever played on an Iowa court.

It was Bray, a substitute, that paved the way for victory, when he slipped past all the lines of defense for a close in shot. Then the Irish captain settled the matter with "one of those things." With only a minute left to go, the South Bend quintet played "keep away" while the Hawkeyes tried in vain to recover the ball.

4,000 Fans See Battle

Before 4,000 fans, the largest that has yet congregated in the new athletic stadium for any game, the Iowa team started out with quick passing and close guarding of the Notre Dame five. But the Irish were not to be outdone and after two consecutive goals by the Hawks, the South Bend team came back with two free throws and a basket, and the score stood at four apiece.

"I think it is a great advancement in the field of journalism," said Mr. Kaiser, "when publishers realize the value of newspapers as records of current history. Libraries have long been aware of this fact and have the best papers bound for permanent records."

"Even with the best of care," he continued, "the paper in the daily papers crumbles away with age. This new edition which The New York Times is offering to libraries will be much more permanent."

Though the price will be about three times that of the newspaper sold on the street, the university considers it valuable enough to have subscribed to the edition for the library files.

Through Life, Till Death

CLINGING to life for days by "nothing stronger than a cobweb," as she herself repeated, yesterday the slender threads snapped and Mrs. Lafayette Young, Sr., died only five weeks after the death of her husband, late editor of the Des Moines Capital. Her passing is proof that when the vital part of life is gone, life itself follows.

Mrs. Young had been for fifty-six years the indispensable help to her politician-journalist husband that the wife of such a man needs in order to give him encouragement, inspiration, and guidance. She had made her home the center of a social life which was necessary to her husband's standing, had made it for decades the haunt of such Iowa leaders as the late senators Dolliver, Allison, and Cummins. The Young home was headquarters for the entertainment of visiting notables, for there they met congenial friends, and quiet comfort, blended by the charming personality of the hostess.

Not only the social side of his life found its complement in hers, but his business as well was practically aided. While her husband was in Cuba and Porto Rico as war correspondent in 1898, Mrs. Young, aided by her children, edited and directed the Capital for several months. She herself carried the principal responsibilities of the newspaper.

Yet when the incentive for her activity was gone, her magnificent energy, spent by her eighty-two years, had no more reason for enduring. The flickering life-flame was snuffed out, so ending a life as truly devoted to service as that of her husband.

Some World-News

IF we should tune in on a London station some night and hear the announcer speaking of the "evolution of patent devices since the last centenary celebration" we should probably come to the conclusion that either the man spoke very strange English or that the batteries were low. Neither of which would be correct. The announcer would simply be following the instructions of the British advisory committee of spoken English. This committee includes Bernard Shaw, Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, and poet laureate Robert Bridges. Its purpose is to tell British announcers just how to pronounce the words they project into the ether each night.

This committee has decreed that the first syllable of "evolution" shall sound exactly like the name of Adam's companion in the Garden of Eden. The first syllable of "patent" must not rhyme with "hat" unless it is used in "letters patent" or "patent of nice." The second syllable of "centenary" must rhyme with "seen."

Other officially sanctioned pronunciations include "missile," the last syllable of which must rhyme with "mile" and "patriot," the first syllable of which must rhyme with "hat."

The decisions of the committee have created quite a sensation in England. Many perturbed individuals have sought the secretary of the organization, only to be told that no shoemaker, except in America, would think of allowing the first syllable of "patent leather" to rhyme with "hat."

If these suggested pronunciations are adopted—and stranger things have happened—it will necessitate changes in all of our dictionary guides to pronunciations. They differ in every case from the decrees of this British advisory committee.

Overtime Professors

SOME professors in this institution are perpetually guilty of holding their classes overtime. When this practice becomes habitual rather than accidental we must necessarily accredit it to thoughtlessness or carelessness. In failing to dismiss a class on time the instructor is doing an injustice to the student, to his co-workers, and to himself.

Due to the scattered location of many of the university buildings it requires the full ten minutes allotted to get from one class to another. Especially is this true during this cold weather when three or four minutes are consumed in "bundling up." Strange as it may seem, there are some students who take pride in being on time to their classes—and when the preceding class is held over five or six minutes this is impossible.

It is trying even in the case of the best natured professor to have the students straggling in all the way from two to five minutes after the recitation has begun. The instructors who are inconvenienced in this way are generally the ones who are conscientious about dismissing their classes on time.

The overtime professor is unfair to himself. Even though he does not glance at his watch as often as he should, the students do, and when it is time for the class to be over they are ready to go. Various ones here and there will start collecting their books, notebooks, pens and pencils; others will be slipping into their coats, putting on their hats and gloves, and an atmosphere of disorder and confusion prevails. The professor then loses rather than gains by taking more than his share of the time, for no student's mind is upon what he is saying.

We have no system of class bells such as are found in many colleges and universities. A system of this kind might help, but it is not really necessary. All that is needed is a little more thoughtfulness and a keener sense of fair play.

Dad's Dough

COLLEGE, according to the wits of Princeton, is the composite flower of youth in a four-year loaf made from father's dough.

What about the loaves? The colleges are shipping them out wholesale these days, baked and otherwise, according to report. Every A. B. pays more than $4,000, every A.M. in excess of $5,000, and the Ph.D. around $7,000. If they take root and work after graduation they can average $1,500 a year on the A.B., and $3,000 and $4,500 on the other two. At that rate, counting out the pledge money for the Collegiate Jijitsus and the Greater Seabears, these persons will at length reach redemption.

In the meantime Dad is furnishing the dough. He may or may not be inconvenienced in the paying, but he's backing you.

Appreciation of his gift means that you are spending his money in the honor of the family, and in the business of fitting yourself for independence.

The four thousand dollars is cold proof that your Dad is trusting you. The proof is so convincing that you may take it as matter of fact. You may think of him in terms of checks.

"Honor thy father even as thy banker honor's thy father's check" is the fatal creed for you.

Hot or Cold

SOMEONE with a flair for the sarcastic or the statistical has tacked on a bulletin in the liberal arts building a last summer's headline—"Midwest Swelters—Twelve Die." Not so many mornings past it was "Midwest in Cold Grip—Twelve Die."

Such is seasonal consistency in the temperate zone. Hot or cold, twelve deaths at a stroke is temperate.

And we have much to live for, this side the equator. There will be the Minneapolis symphony, this breathing space before mid-years, the Christmas stocking and those other stockings, two colors to a pair that the Parisians are suggesting.

When the next sub-zero blows in, we may be among the twelve. But every one must die sometime, be it from freezing, or sunstroke, or liver, or prussic acid.

Now we're alive!

Colorful Mail

SCATTER Christmas cheer with greeting cards. This type of Christmas remembrance has increased enormously in popularity in the last decade, and it is only natural that it should. There are such a host of friends that we wish to remember at this holiday season, and what better means is there than to send some appropriate message on an attractive greeting card? Greeting cards afford untold pleasure, especially so if the one who sends them has found time to write a little personal note to accompany each.

The greeting card as an institution originated many years ago. The first Christmas card which we have any record appeared in England in 1846. The first in America was printed ten years later. Whatever the past of the greeting card, its flourishing present began in 1906, when it was taken up in a serious way by our population as both a substitute and an extension of Christmas giving.

One would almost think that it was the Christmas greeting card which inspired Charles Dickens to remark, "Though Christmas has never put a scrap of gold or silver in my pocket, I believe that it has done me good; and I say God bless it!"

Phoebus

A word like Phoebus brings to me
A whiff of rare antiquity.
I sniff it curiously and then
I place it on the shelf again;
For I would never care to choose
A vintage word like that to use
In speaking of my friend, the sun.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor—In your editorial of Dec. 14 captioned "China Withdraws" there are some points that need some discussion. Let us enumerate them as follows.

1. You say that China "is the most intensely populated country in the world. It is over crowded." Please observe the following figures taken from the Literary Digest for Jan. 21, 1922.

NATION	No.	Per Sq. M.
China	450,000,000	54
S. America	100,000,000	5
United States	100,000,000	33
Japan	70,000,000	270
France	40,000,000	49
Belgium	6,500,000	658
Netherlands	16,000,000	536
England	47,000,000	374

From the foregoing statistics China is authoritatively recognized not "the most intensely populated country in the world." There are some portions in China today with population of 2 per square mile. The present tendency in China regarding population is to migrate from a dense populated place to a less populated, in other words, to even up. China does not at all worry about such problem as "crowded" population.

2. You say: "In a short time its natural resources will be exhausted." Let us again refer to the Literary Digest for Jan. 21, 1922. It says: "It has been estimated that the plains of Manchuria and Mongolia alone, when properly developed, could raise enough food to supply 300,000,000 people, and the entire country sufficient to feed a billion and still have some left for export."

3. You say: "In a short time its natural resources will be exhausted." Let us again refer to the Literary Digest for Jan. 21, 1922. It says: "It has been estimated that the plains of Manchuria and Mongolia alone, when properly developed, could raise enough food to supply 300,000,000 people, and the entire country sufficient to feed a billion and still have some left for export."

4. You say: "China has set a precedent." From the Current History for October, 1926 we are informed that Spair withdrew from the league on Sept. 3, Brazil, then, followed. Perhaps, the editor meant to say that China has a precedent, and the typographer set the mistake. But, we do not know.

5. You say: "If one nation can renounce its responsibility to the league—any agreed country may withdraw. The connotation is disastrous." The encouraging effort on the part of the editor to save the league is very admirable, but he did not review the fact, when he put down this statement, that the U. S. is not in the league.

6. You say: "If many withdrawals should occur, the purpose of the league will have failed." We solemnly suggest that the U. S. take part in the league, and the league will be saved.

We expect that the American intellectual public knows all these points, and our purpose in this letter is to correct any misconceptions of the U. S. position in the American public mind. In conclusion permit us to say that we wish you would read up more and know the truth about China and her international relations before you comment on any of her problems.

Yours Sincerely,
C. Chen.

Views and Reviews of the Latest in Print

THE HOBIMA
The Habima, a group of Jewish actors has been the sensation of Berlin and Paris. The company has just arrived in New York. Among the plays in its repertory is "The Wandering Jew" by David Pinski. This appeared originally under the title "The Last Man," in a volume called "Ten Plays" published by The Viking Press.

THE FEMINA VIE HEUREUSE PRIZE
Just about a year ago LOLLY WILLOWS, by Sylvia Townsend Warner was published. Shortly thereafter it was chosen as the first Book-of-the-Month Club selection. Now word has been received that it is one of three books to be recommended to the French committee for this year's Femina Vie Heureuse Prize, awarded each year to the outstanding English book of imaginative and literary quality. The other two books under consideration are "Adam's Breed" by Miss Radclyffe Hall and "The Informer" by Liam O'Flaherty. Miss Warner is at the present time finishing a novel which will be published in the near future.

LEWIS BROWNE ON "POWER"
Lewis Browne, author of This Beleving World, says of POWER by Lion Feuchtwanger: "It is a great book. I did not know there was a writer living who could reproduce a past age with such fidelity, richness and glamour. It is a glorious romance woven around one of the wildest and most fascinating characters in late Jewish history. I congratulate the Muirs (Ira and Edw.) on their almost incredibly good translation."

THE HARMON AWARD
Each year the Harmon awards are bestowed upon individuals among the Negroes who have done outstanding work in various fields. This year the second prize in the field of literature goes to James Welton Johnson for his editorial and interpretative work on Negro spirituals. Mr. James Welton Johnson is the editor of THE BOOK OF AMERICAN NEGRO SPIRITUALS AND THE SECOND BOOK OF NEGRO SPIRITUALS. Each volume contains an introduction by him and sixty-one songs set down for all time by his brother, J. Rosamond Johnson, the well-known composer and concert singer who will appear in Iowa City with a program of negro spirituals this spring.

Henry Kittredge Norton who was the leader of the round table on China at the Williamstown Institute of politics last summer and is a well-known writer on conditions of the Far East, writes concerning Gowen and Hall's "An Outline History of China": "I find it fascinating. I did not believe it was possible to present Chinese history to American readers in so interesting a fashion."

LITERARY DIGEST NUMBER CURRENT OPINION

Professor Regine Indies Revolt.

"The nerve of some professors," remarks the A. F. I. A. B. C. "giving examinations immediately before Christmas." It is to be expected that drastic measures will have to be taken to curb this menace. We have three exams in the last two days and a half besides six long papers to turn in," remarks the San Francisco Earnack.

RELIGION AND SOCIAL SERVICE
"This organization will fill a long-felt want," says Pooh-pooh Hoovey, commenting in its usual clever manner on the organization of Sigma Omicron Lambda. "Its colors, black and blue, are so charmingly sentimental and recall almost painfully the aroma of memories," says the Odor Ono. The Musicbox Review challenges this. "The odor of stinkweed is a more accurate statement," it declares, "since that is the appropriately chosen flower of the organization."

FOREIGN COMMENT
Ames Clothing Question Perturbs Co-educational Institution.
"Regardless of our rivalry with Iowa," reads a touching communication from the Ames Y. W. C. A. "We are sure you will sympathize with us in our valiant fight to discard bloomers." A vote was recently taken unofficially in one sorority house on the question of retaining the edict and the vote stood against the government eight-three to minus forty-six, the chaperone casting the latter ballot. It is not known yet whether the Dean's Cabinet will resign.

Who's Who AT IOWA

Prof. H. L. Rietz

H. L. Rietz, professor and head of the department of mathematics, is one of the leading authorities in his field in the United States. He has just sent to press, a work, Mathematical Monograph on Mathematical Statistics, which is the third of a series being sponsored by Mrs. Mary H. Garus. The purpose of the series on mathematics is to make the essential features of various mathematical theories as accessible and attractive as possible.

Of course all scientists are not mathematicians, but the problems of science is becoming mathematical. As a thing tends to be scientific it tends to be mathematical.

We Americans have neglected the fundamentals of education more than the people of other countries. I do believe that the interest in mathematics here is greater at present than at any time since I came to the university. We have more graduate students and the general interest is higher."

Professor Rietz is a golf enthusiast. Much of his recreation comes from playing the game. "I play more of it than any other member of the faculty with the possible exception of Dean Seashore."

Professor Rietz was born at Gilmore, Ohio, Aug. 24, 1875. He received a B.S. from Ohio State University in 1899 and a Ph.D. from Cornell University in 1902. He has taught as an instructor at Cornell University, and as a professor at Butler College, and the University of Illinois. He served at the latter school fifteen years, where he developed the first courses on mathematical statistics ever given in the U. S.

He was a member of the Illinois Pension Commission, 1915, and 1918. He is a fellow of the American Institute of Actuaries, and A. A. S., and was president of the American Mathematical Association in 1924. He was also vice-president of the American Statistical Association in 1925, and served in the same capacity in the American Institute of Actuaries (1921-22).

Professor Rietz is a member of Alpha Tau Omega, Sigma Xi, and Phi Beta Kappa.

By LAURIDS BRUUN

CHAPTER X
The Grand Duke Sergius and the great banker, Ivan Kusmin, are bitter rivals for the love of the beautiful Olga Balashova, dancer of the Imperial Opera at St. Petersburg. But Olga has spurned their attentions in favor of the true love of Alexei Okuneoff, Lieutenant in the Imperial Guard of the Grand Duke. Her lover is broken-hearted by the arrest of his brother as a revolutionist and Olga visits the Grand Duke to intercede for the life of the prisoner. Alexei suddenly enters and accuses Olga of infidelity. He insults the Duke with curses and resigns his command with the threat that he will join the revolutionists. While the police hunt for Alexei the sorrow-laden Olga calls on the banker Kusmin and promises any favors he may ask if he will save her lover from the Duke's wrath.

"Like a thief you stole to the palace, safe in the knowledge that I would not find out about your secret meeting!"

The following day St. Petersburg was stirred by two exciting occurrences. Although taking place in different parts of the city, and involving two men, occupying widely different positions, a certain coincidence existed between the incidents. This added a spice of mystery to the animated gossip which flared up in the military clubs, as soon as the tidings were heralded. The most baffling piece of news was the sudden and unexplainable disappearance of Count Lutov, the Minister of War. The government had not succeeded in keeping the information of his vanishing from the papers, which announced the occurrence in flaring headlines, but it veiled under cloak of impenetrable secrecy the details of his flight and the immediate reason for it. It was merely stated that a search for Count Lutov was instituted, and that the government desired his presence in St. Petersburg at the earliest possible moment to render account for certain important transactions. The nature of these transactions was not divulged but St. Petersburg readily sensed a government scandal hidden, and with a shrug of shoulders, decided that as far as the administration was concerned, Count Lutov might have been swallowed up by the earth. It was the common opinion that the minister had planned his disappearance for a long time, both in regards to funds and to the modes of transportation, and that he was by now well outside of Russia with no intention of ever returning.

friends and followers had bribed the prison officials.

At the time that Olga was waiting with impatience for the promised news from Kusmin, which would mean that the banker's agents had discovered Alexei's whereabouts and arranged a safe passage for him out of the country, this young man was present at a meeting staged by the Nihilists in an old building, formerly a cigarette factory, in a part of St. Petersburg, which was unfamiliar to him.

The conference this particular night took the aspect of a rally and the large, dimly lighted hall was filled with a noisy, enthusiastic crowd. Rustic benches were arranged on the floor. Red flags and large signs bearing fiery, denouncing words against the Imperial family and the administration, covered the walls. A rank odor of mold and dampness filled the air, which was soon rendered opaque by the smoke of cigarettes and pipes. In one corner of the room, the Nihilists had erected a crude pulpit.

Men apparently engaged in a multitude of professions, swarmed through the door into the crowded hall to capacity. There were longshoremen and factory workers, in coarse blouses, with the smudge and grime of their labor covering their large hands and bony faces. There were sailors from the merchant ships, young men with tanned skin, and the blue, intent look which years on the sea renders. Many soldiers were present, not a few of them in their stained uniforms. But there were also men from other walks of life. Office workers in neat business suits, carrying their soft hats and white collars with an apologetic air. School teachers, bent figures with unkempt hair and a searching look behind heavy steel-rimmed spectacles. Some artists, wearing flowing neckties and corduroy trousers. Young gangsters, boys in their teens, with red muffers, felt-soled shoes and half-smoked cigarettes behind their ears.

The reason for the gathering displayed by the Nihilists was twofold. A notice had been circulated among them that the brother of Nickoli had forsaken his duties to the Czar, denounced the government and the army, and was to join the revolutionists. This caused an exuberant joyousness, but it was not until the excited rumor about Nickoli's escape had been verified that the enthusiasm reached the proportions of wild ecstasy. Small red flags waved frantically over the eager faces, and loud cheers for Nickoli and Alexei were raised. The audience was in the throes of a tumultuous demonstration which increased in power as a tornado of voices greeted Nickoli, who had mounted the pulpit. Outlined against the vivid canvas of a red banner, his tall body suddenly raised itself over the crowd. His black, piercing eyes swept in one long, satisfying look over the upturned faces, and his lips showed the signs of a faint smile. Slowly his arms lifted, and immediately a hush fell over the crowd.

CHAPTER XI
"Friends," he began. His voice was hard and even, and carried clearly to the far corners of the room. "I did not expect to be with you here tonight, but thanks to the help rendered by our financial committee, I managed to escape last night. General Volpi, the Commandant of the prison was not adverse to receiving a package of crisp ruble notes, and so eager was he to count the money, that he forgot to instruct the keepers to have all gates and doors locked."

A volley of throaty laughs greeted his words. "I am happy to be with you again," he continued. "Never have I felt that our holy cause demanded my energy and time more than in these days. Russia is awakening. The time is not distant when we shall throw off the tyrant's yoke and liberate our brethren from the crush of the iron heel. The light of the revolution is already flaming in our breasts. We shall now set the torch of destruction to the rotten framework of the government. We must not rest until the sparks are flying and we see the building crumble to ashes and cinders. Long enough have we watched our divine rights scorned and our freedom trampled by traitors and murderers. Let us rise, a fight to a glorious victory of the battle of light and truth. Bring the message of the new dawn into every city, every home. Let our call to arms ring from St. Petersburg to Vladivostok and from the steppes of White Russia to the frozen wastes of Archangel. The day of freedom is here and we are the lords of the day."

Heflin Gives Murder Evidence

For several minutes the room reverberated with loud cheers and a storm of applause, and here and there husky voices intoned the song of the Nihilists. When the noise had somewhat subsided Nickoli spoke again. "Tonight," he said, "we are welcoming a new member. With blinded eyes he used to serve the tyrants. Shame and sorrow fill me when I think of his slavish devotion to the suppressors of liberty. As a lieutenant in the personal guard of the Grand Duke Sergius, he stood under the command of that coward and seducer, that libertine and murderer. But the young man has raised himself out of his hateful surroundings; he has forever denounced the slimy, degraded ogre which we call government. His eyes have been opened and he is here with an eager heart waiting for us to call him one of our own. My brother Alexei is our new member. Is he welcome?"

A hundred-voiced "Yes" echoed through the hall, and amid a tumultuous storm of voices, Alexei mounted the platform.

His eyes were filled with a brilliant, defying light, and his voice rang clear and convincing, as he said: "Friends. My brother Nickoli let fall hard words, when he spoke of my past life and the loyalty with which I used to serve the enemies of liberty. I had chosen my way of my own free will, and I believed it was the road of honor. But those whom I trusted, deceived me. I showed them faith and devotion, and I was rewarded with lies and broken vows. Friends," his voice rose, "my life has changed. Those days are beyond me. The injustices I received, however, are not forgotten. They glow like open wounds, and shall spur me to help you to cleanse and purify our great Russia from the cancerous growth which is now eating at her very vitals. My services may be small. My efforts perhaps of not much account. But all I can give, I shall give gladly. With pride will I lay down my life for our divine cause."

When the ear-ringing noise that followed his words had died down, Nickoli again mounted the platform, next to his brother. He laid a hand affectionately on Alexei's shoulder, and said: "I thank you for your signs of friendship. I know that our new member shall serve us faithfully. I also know that he is anxious to prove his loyalty to us, and I propose that we let Alexei head the delegation which departs next week for the Nihilist meeting in Moscow."

This was Alexei's initiation accomplished, and a few days later the young man was prepared to leave for Moscow.

Other way of saving Alexei stood open to her, she speedily discarded from her mind the thought of the banker and prayed that she would soon receive the news she so anxiously awaited.

One morning early her prayers were answered. She had not yet arisen when Anisya entered with a note. Olga opened it immediately, and read the following lines: "Beloved Olga, "My efforts to locate Alexei Okuneoff were at first not crowned with victory. In vain my agents searched for him, until I was nearly forced to give up. But my love for you spurred me to make a fresh attempt, and after unsparring work and patience, I finally managed to have his whereabouts discovered. In great secrecy he has boarded my yacht, and is now ready to be carried to Finland, where I shall have him deposited unharmed."

"He has expressed to me," the letter went on, "a desire to bid you farewell. If you should want to see him once again before he leaves Russia, let me know. In that case, I shall wait for you here and we will go to the yacht together."

"In closing, Olga," Kusmin wrote, "I send you all my love. I can hardly wait for the arrival of the happy hour when I shall call you mine."

Courageously combatting the sickening feeling Kusmin's lines wakened in her, Olga wrote hastily an answer which she dispatched to him. Then she dressed hurriedly and told Anisya in a happy voice that Alexei was alive and safe, and ready to leave the country. The old woman did not reveal the thoughts which passed through her mind, but had Olga observed the expression of doubt and suspicion which was written on her face, she might not have left the house in the same elated spirit. Filled with anticipatory joy over her early meeting with Alexei, Olga gave no heed to the warning look in Anisya's eyes, but set out at a brisk pace for Kusmin's palace.

She was immediately ushered into the banker's study, and beheld his imposing figure outlined against one of the large windows overlooking Nevski Prospect. At the sound of her steps, he turned around, a welcoming smile on his lips and his hands extended towards her. "My lovely child," he exclaimed. "How happy I am."

The method consists in reproducing standard art pictures in pairs in which one is a true copy and the other is altered. The pupil must decide which is the better.

Secretary Mellon Pictured Receiving Illegal Payments

Testimony of Attorney Boyles Shows Tangle of Conditions

(By The Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Unlimbering another attack on the Harding administration, Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama, told the senate today that attorney general Daugherty's friend, Jess Smith, was murdered "because he knew too much and that it would open the eyes of the nation" if the inside story of the recent Fall-Doherty oil conspiracy acquittal here ever were told. Secretary Mellon was pictured by the Alabamian as receiving funds collected by Smith "from brewers and bootleggers" in payment of advances to the Harding campaign fund. In all, he said, the treasury secretary advanced $5,000,000 to the republican national committee and Smith was delegated to get back $2,000,000 of it from the bootleg trade and through the agency of United States district attorneys.

Show Boyles Testimony
To support this statement, the senator produced excerpts from testimony given by former district attorney Boyles, of Southern Alabama, in a court proceeding at Mobile. The court record, he said, showed that Boyles testified he talked with Frank W. Berkin, a friend of Smith, about raising the $2,000,000. Reading from the record, Heflin said Boyles quoted Berkin as saying that the "plan is to have liquor men, the men in the liquor business and the breweries, contribute to this fund," and that United States attorneys in some place already "had been arranged with" to do the actual collecting.

Boyles Re-nomination Pending
All of this testimony, said Heflin, was read at a secret meeting of the senate judiciary committee last April, when Boyles' nomination for another term as district attorney was pending. Boyles himself was present and according to the committee record, he said at one point that he had not said the things attributed to him. The district attorney did say, however, according to Heflin, that he had asked Jess Smith to help his candidate for United States marshal. The jury that acquitted Albert B. Fall and Edw. L. Doheny in the oil conspiracy case here was described by Heflin as a collection of "dice shooters and card players," and he suggested the senate ask that the conspiracy charge against Fall and Harry F. Sinclair be tried in some other city.

Bar Hunters as Targets
DETROIT.—After it was alleged that dry agents acting under E. J. Heaton, Detroit river coordinator, had fired on hunters, a wire was sent to L. C. Andrews, dry czar in Washington: "Do you endorse shooting at innocent duck hunters?" "Most assuredly not," Andrews replied. "Innocent duck hunters are not within my jurisdiction." He warned agents to be more careful with firearms.

City High Cagers Beat Mt. Vernon Quintet 28 to 19

Excellent Form Shown by Locals; Expect Good Season

The Iowa City high school basketball team defeated Mount Vernon yesterday afternoon in the high school gym by a score of 28 to 19. Throughout the entire first half which ended 12 to 10 the game was pretty much of an even break, but the second half started with Reinhardt and Idema sinking baskets enough to give Iowa City a lead of 8 points. Reinhardt displayed flawless floor work beside sinking three baskets while Idema made five baskets for high point man. Although Idema failed to make only one basket in the first half he made four straight in the last half.

Hagerty Snatches Lead as Yearling Shoot Nears Close

Loris J. Hagerty, AI of Blanchard went into the lead yesterday afternoon in the third and fourth stages of the annual freshmen shoot in which 600 frosh have been firing since last Thursday, Hagerty, by virtue of his forty-nine out of a possible fifty in the kneeling and standing positions, and James O. Adams, AI of Newell, and Samuel V. Giltner, AI of Ottumwa, shot into a tie score of ninety-three out of 100 early yesterday morning when the matches were resumed after the week-end halt, and looked like possible winners,—but that was before Hagerty got into firing position. Giltner held a forty-four out of fifty total in the final stages, which gave him second place over Adams, who finished with a forty-three.

The matches will close tomorrow, when the remainder of the 600 complete their firing. Several men who finished the initial stages with top position totals have yet to shoot their kneeling and standing positions.

Chicago May See Lewis-Munn Bout

CHICAGO, Dec. 20 (AP)—A Strangler Lewis-Big Munn wrestling match is in prospect for Chicago next month, if the two promoters, each holding an agreement with one of the wrestlers and a date awarded by the state athletic commission, can get together.

Munn holds the only decision gained over Lewis in many years. Tossing the headlock, king out of the ring in Kansas City three years ago, Munn took the championship but lost it within a few months to the elder Zhyzsko. Joe Stecher took it from Zhyzsko, and a Stecher-Lewis match was arranged last fall in Los Angeles but it failed to go through.

Grinnell Halfback Plays in Annual East-West Battle

East's Stars Leave for California Classic

[By The Associated Press] GRINNELL, Dec. 20.—Gordon Meeter, Grinnell college football star and all-Missouri-Valley halfback, left tonight for San Francisco to play in the east-west all-star game New Year's day. Meeter was the only Valley man invited to play for the east.

CHICAGO, Dec. 20 (AP)—A score of the huskiest college boys of the east and middlewest gathered here tonight for an invasion of the west, seeking the scalp of an equal number of westerners in the annual east-west game at San Francisco, New Year's day.

Thirteen are from eastern schools and seven from the western conference. Taking their measurements tonight for the blue and gold jerseys they will wear in the game they showed that they are mostly "size forty-four," bulking around 180 to 200 pounds apiece. They left tonight on the Chicago and Northwestern Oriental limited. The line up of the eastern all-stars is as follows:

"Big Bill's" New Partner

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 20.—Junior Coen, 14-year-old Kansas City high school lad, and prodigy of this city's tennis courts, has been invited by the committee in charge of the Wimbledon exposition to appear in tennis matches against the best players of the courts in Europe.

And as a result the youth has been elected to serve as doubles partner with "Big Bill" Tilden—the appointment being made by "Big Bill" himself.

Intramural Athletics

The 1927 Inter-fraternity basketball tournament will begin immediately after Christmas vacation. More than thirty teams have returned signed entry blanks to the director's office. Plans are now being formed for the division of the teams, the schedule, the selection of officials, and general operation of the tournament.

As now planned the tournament will be a round robin affair. The teams will be divided into five major divisions. Each division will be conducted on a round robin basis. Each team will have an opportunity to play at least four games, even though they do not get to the championship division. The winners of the five major divisions will meet in round robin section finals.

A statuette, a figure of heavy silver plate on ebonized base, will be awarded the winner of the tourney.

Negro Stars Fight in Langford Benefit

NEW YORK, Dec. 20 (AP)—Present day Negro boxing stars will participate in a show for the benefit of Sam Langford, famous years ago as the Boston "Tar Baby" but now almost blind and in straightened circumstances. The state athletic commission sanctioned the benefit. Tiger Flowers, Chick Suggs, and Black Bill, all well known boxers are expected to take part.

Delaney Slashes Gorman for Two Round Knockout

Technical K.O. Gives Champ Sensational Victory

[By The Associated Press] JERSEY CITY, N. J., Dec. 20.—Jack Delaney, world's lightweight champion, scored a sensational two-round victory tonight over Bud Gorman of Wisconsin, gaining a technical knockout with a slashing attack that ended the scheduled ten-round fight after one minute, thirty-five seconds of the second round.

Andy Divodi, Brooklyn welterweight, pounded out a victory over Jack McFarland of Elizabeth, N. J., in a ten round preliminary to the Delaney-Gorman heavyweight bout featuring the Christmas fund boxing show tonight. Divodi weighed 142 1-2, McFarland 146 1-2.

In another ten-rounder, Johnny Green, 120 1-2 of New York, gained the newspaper verdict over Giovanni Salerno, 124 1-4, of Jersey City.

The four round opening preliminary resulted in a draw between James J. Braddock, 169 1-2, of Union City, N. J., and Doc Conrad, 170, of Elizabeth.

Stepping out of his class, Charley (Phil) Rosenberg, world's bantam weight champion, decisively outpointed Peite Mack, Jersey City featherweight, in the ten round semi-final which was fought to the accompaniment of booes and cat calls. Rosenberg weighed 124 1-2, Mack 126.

Yankees Complete Two Deals, New York World Says

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—(AP)—The New York World says the New York Yankees today completed two deals, sending infielders Aaron Ward to the Chicago White Sox and Pitchers Sam Jones and Walter Beall to the St. Louis Browns.

In exchange for Ward the New York team will get Jack Grabowski, catcher and an infielder from the Chicago club. Eddie Collins, deposed White Sox manager, may be the second player to come here in the exchange.

For Jones and Beall, St. Louis will exchange Cedric Durst, outfielder, a left hand pitcher and two other players, the World says. Joe Giard is mentioned as likely to be the moundman.

Religious Council Gives First Party at Union Saturday

The first all university inter-denominational church party was held Saturday night at the Iowa Union.

The party was sponsored by the Student's religious council, a new organization on the campus composed of representatives from every protestant church in the city.

The party began at 8:15. At 9:30 a grand march was staged which led to a Christmas tree in the grill room. Santa, aided by four helpers, appeared and distributed presents.

The Methodist church orchestra, directed by Dr. O. E. Van Doren, furnished the music. William Pressnell, M4 of Algona, led in group singing.

The committee in charge of the party included Thomas Thomsen, L3 of Iowa City, Eugene Grattan, L3 of Grinnell, Dillard Bray, and Harold Hodge, G of Denvere III.

District Winners to Meet Here in Round Robin Play

Four Teams to Battle for Championship in Field House

Final games to determine the state high school basketball championship of Iowa will be played at the University of Iowa, it was announced today by Paul E. Belding, director of physical education. The exact dates have not been determined, they will be sometime in March.

Definite announcement that the university had been chosen as the location of the final games came from George E. Marshall of Davenport, chairman of the Iowa state high school athletic association, under control of which the sectional, district, and state tournaments are held.

Section Winners Here About 700 high schools of the state will compete in thirty-two sectional meets. Winners of each section will compete in four district meets, northwest, northeast, southwest, and southeast. Then the triumphant teams will journey to Iowa City for the games which will decide the state championship.

Use Round Robin In the title affair, the round robin method of play is used. Each team plays every other team and the champion is decided on the percentage basis of games won and lost.

This marks the first time that the championship games will be played in the Hawk-eye court. The new field house, with its fine basket ball floor and huge seating capacity, will afford the best possible setting for the vital games.

Cardinals Trade Hornsby to Giants Following Disagreement

Ring and Frisch Go to Champion St. Louis Team

Card Manager Fails to Agree Upon Contract

[By The Associated Press.] ST. LOUIS, Dec. 20.—Within less than three months after he had piloted the Cardinals to a world's championship and brought St. Louis its first baseball pennant in thirty-eight years, Rogers Hornsby, star second baseman playing manager, has been traded to the New York Giants.

The action followed disagreement with Sam Breadon, president of the club, Rogers Hornsby over a contract. Breadon announced early tonight that Hornsby will go to the Giants in exchange for Frankie Frisch, infielder, and Jimmy Ring, right handed pitcher. No money was involved in the deal, the club president said.

Good Trade, Breadon Says

"I believe that to be a good trade," Breadon said. "We get a star second baseman to replace Hornsby and we get a first string pitcher to fill a first string pitching gap that has been on our club. I closed the deal with Mr. Stoneham, president of the Giants.

"I realize that it is a sensational trade, but it had to come. I did my best to reach an agreement with Hornsby but I learned at the conference with Hornsby today that a settlement was impossible. I offered what I considered a very fair contract. Hornsby still had a year to run on his old contract, which was at $30,000 a year in 1925 and 1926. I desired to combine this contract with new terms to cover the season of 1927 and to increase Hornsby's salary $20,000.

Hornsby insisted on a raise. Hornsby turned down this offer.

rollment of twenty-three students; the medical department, thirty-seven; the law department, forty-five; and the academic department, three hundred and thirty-five, making the entire enrollment four hundred and fifty students.

Explains Freshman Course

A freshman in the academic department was required to take mathematics, physical science, Latin, and English, and to choose between German and Greek. During the junior and senior years a choice between a literary and a scientific course was offered.

At that time there were six literary societies and two fraternities on the campus. Athletics consisted only of baseball, with occasional contests between boarding-house teams.

The first student paper, "The University Reporter," appeared in 1868.

Mrs. J. H. Hill Dies

Mrs. J. H. Hill, 49 years old, died at her home at 918 North Dodge street Saturday at 9 p.m. Funeral arrangements have not yet been made on account of the illness of Mrs. Hill's daughter, who is at the hospital suffering from blood poisoning.

He still insisted on a three year contract and he asked for $3150,000 for three years. He said he would stand pat on this demand and I realized then that I would be unable to sign him to a manager's contract and that to protect the Cardinals' interests I would be compelled to trade Hornsby."

Following the conference, Hornsby said:

"I always have wanted to play in St. Louis. My friends and my family are here and my home is here. I cannot forget the great reception and support given to me and the Cardinals when we won the pennant and the series and I still feel I would prefer to play in St. Louis.

"Contract Not Fair"

"However, I do not think that a one year contract is a fair contract to offer a man who has done what I have done and that is why I have declined to accept it."

Hornsby pointed out that he had acted as manager nearly two years and had received only his players' salary of $30,000.

Informed of the trade, Hornsby said:

"If they want to trade me, it's all right with me, but it does not look right that I should be traded from a club that I just managed to rage of passing between Hogan and Wilcox was broken up by the close guarding of the Catholics and Jackyn made a long shot from the center of the floor to start a rally.

A pass to Nyikos and a quick dribble to the basket gave Notre Dame another goal with the Hawk cagers leading by only a single point. Hogan shot a free throw to end the Hawk scoring for the first half.

A personal foul on Harrison, who had replaced Van Deusen, gave Nyikos a free throw which the Notre Dame captain made good and the score with the end of the first period stood at 10-9 in favor of the Hawks.

Conroy Misses Foul

At the opening of the second half Van Deusen returned to left forward. A personal foul on Twogood at the opening of the period gave Conroy a free throw which he failed to make good, missing his third straight try. A close defense of Wilcox by Conroy gave the Iowa team a free throw in return, when Conroy was called for roughness, and with the throw being made good, Iowa had a 11-9 lead over their opponents.

Two more free shots gave the Hawks a 13-9 lead over their rivals. Conroy heaved a sensational long distance field goal beyond the middle of the floor and added two more points to the Notre Dame total.

Iowa Lengthens Lead

Wilcox and Dahman kept things even with a free throw apiece and then a series of quick passes gave Twogood a shot directly under the basket for another counter. Iowa held the four point margin until only four minutes were left to play, when Conroy made a free throw before he left the game in favor of Nyikos.

and his mate, Bray, then did their stuff. While the howling mob of Iowa fans gave vigorous moral support the two Indians shattered hopes for victory.

Present Cups

Twogood and Wilcox, Iowa's sophomores, led the Hawks in the battle. Twogood's total of seven points, three baskets and a free throw, was the biggest total amassed during the evening. Nyikos and Wilcox each contributed five points each, but the Notre Dame captain's scores came at opportune times and helped to encourage the slipping Irish.

Between halves Paul E. Belting, director of athletics, presented cups to freshmen athletes in the four major sports who led in scholarship while participating in athletics last year. The men are George M. Woodruff, Mason City, football; Charles L. Dollerhide, Davenport, basketball; Adolph L. Sals, Iowa City, baseball; and Gordon C. Armstrong, Britt, track.

Three Buildings Composed Campus Fifty Years Ago

The University of Iowa as it was over fifty years ago was discussed by Jacob A. Swisher of the State Historical society staff last evening before the Political Science club.

Mr. Swisher described the campus as it appeared in 1870 when only three buildings composed the university. Then as now, Old Capitol stood in the center. To the south, on what is now the space between the physics building and the liberal arts building, stood old south hall. This was the first building constructed for university purposes and was erected by an appropriation of $10,000 by the legislature in the late fifties. In 1901, it was destroyed by fire.

Describes Third Building

To the north of Old Capitol, was the third building, variously known as old north hall, old physics building, and university chapel. This building was constructed in 1866 at a cost of $25,000. The chapel was then described as "the finest audience room west of Chicago." Attendance at daily chapel exercises was compulsory for all students.

Expect Completion of New Swimming Pool in January

The swimming pool in the new field house is rapidly nearing completion. The contractors hope to have the tile all in by the end of this week. It is expected that it will be completely finished within two weeks.

Coach Armbruster plans to take the varsity to the new pool after the holidays.

The heating problem is the big factor, for the tank must be kept at a rather warm temperature and its size will make this difficult. The regular classes in swimming will not be taken over to the new pool until the second semester. The national inter-collegiate meet will be held here some time in March.

At Forty

"At Forty" the housewife in some sections of Europe wears a black bonnet to signify the end of her youth. Heavy tasks, indoors and out, have made her old—at forty.

Of all the uses of electricity in America, the most important are those which release the woman from physical drudgery. Electricity carries water, washes clothes, cleans carpets, cooks the family's food—better and quicker than could be done by hand.

Men and women who have had the benefit of college training and college life have learned to place the proper value upon rest and recreation. They appreciate the relief afforded by electricity.

Upon great generators which send out current to light the homes and carry the burdens of millions, you will find the G-E monogram. Upon industrial motors, on electric railway trains—wherever quality and un-failing performance are first essentials—the G-E monogram will be found.

A series of G-E advertisements showing what electricity is doing in many fields will be sent on request. Ask for booklet GEK-1.

Professor Clapp Gives Program at C. of C. Meeting

Students Assist With Musical Selections and Readings

A musical program interspersed with a series of short humorous readings was given yesterday at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon. It was arranged by Prof. Phillip G. Clapp, of the school of music.

Two selections were given by Ellen Jones, A2 of Iowa City, on the violin. In both numbers, the Slavonic Lament by Schutt-Friedberg and Tambourine by Kreisler, she was accompanied by Professor Clapp.

Adelle Kimm, of the department of physical education, sang two pieces. They were: My Beloved, by Handel, and Little Star.

Kingsley Walter Gibbon, who gave several readings of a humorous type, was introduced by Chester A. Phillips, president of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Phillips said, and the statement was later confirmed by Mr. Gibbon, that Mr. Gibbon received his first ambition along an oratorical line from Clarence W. Wassam, assistant professor in the college of commerce.

able to achieve the same excellence. The program was concluded by two vocal selections by Mrs. Annabelle Elliot, who sang Thou Brilliant Bird, by David, and a series of Chinese Mother Goose songs by Bainbridge.

Holiday Decorations

The Chamber of Commerce rooms were decorated in holiday colors. Red and green in wreaths, bells, and chains were found on every wall of the rooms. A beaming silver string tree increased the festive appearance. There were red candles on the table.

Wizard Entertains Iowan Staff With Weather, Other Predictions

W. T. Chadwick, of Ottumwa, unbeknownst to him, but in communication with the stellar constellations, was a guest at 12:30 this morning of the entire night staff of The Daily Iowan.

Mr. Chadwick's memory is perhaps the most marvelous thing about him, for question after question was hurled at him from unbelieving reporters, copy readers, and editors, and the answers were each time correct.

Mr. Chadwick specialized on the weather, told the positions of certain stars on any given date in the last fifty years, and gave the lowest temperature for every year since 1917.

Questions relating to the late war were fired fast and furiously at the visitor and the dates of the sinking of such ships as the Lusitania were given without a moment's hesitation.

The dates of each Thanksgiving in the past thirty years were given together with the exact weather conditions in the middle west on those days.

When asked as to what he owed his remarkable faculty of memorizing everything, Mr. Chadwick replied that he did not know.

"I think it's the planets," he replied, later, waving a cob pipe. "I can tell anything about them any one wants to know."

Agricultural Issue of Business Journal Appears Tomorrow

The Journal of Business, a college of commerce publication, will make its second appearance on the campus for this year tomorrow afternoon. This issue is especially devoted to problems of agriculture.

Another agricultural article is "A Price Index of Iowa Farm Products," arranged by Carl S. Dakan, statistician in the college of commerce.

This number also contains a discussion on "What Iowa Has to Offer for Its Industrial Development," by Arthur M. Huntington, member of the Agricultural and Industrial commission, and an article by L. S. Lambert on the "Opportunities for Commerce Graduates." Mr. Lambert is assistant to the president of the Northwestern Bell Telephone company.

Alderman Gallaher Favors Increase of Ladder Equipment

Asserts That Expense Should Be Borne by Taxation

Miss Ruth Gallaher, chairman of the finance committee of the city council, believes that the fire department is not adequately supplied with ladders and that there should be no difficulty in financing their purchase.

"Fire equipment must be paid for in just one way, that of taxation," said Miss Gallaher. "The city is equally authorized to levy a tax of one and one-half mills each year to equip the fire department. No tax for next year has been levied and the minimum levy would bring in about $4,000 which would pay for a moderately priced fire truck in two years."

"It is largely inability on the part of the council to agree on the style of ladder truck that has prevented its purchase. At no time have four members of the council voted for the same kind of truck. The chief insists on one of standard make and there seem to be few of the assembled trucks in use in Iowa. The chief arguments for them are that the initial cost is less, and that a local firm would be benefited by the purchase of a truck they handle."

"The question before the council," said Miss Gallaher in conclusion, "is first, whether the risk of loss of life in a fire justifies the expenditure of approximately $6,000, and second, whether the council should buy a standard six cylinder seventy horse power truck at a somewhat higher price or a four cylinder forty-five horse power truck which is assembled by different companies."

Rev. Shannahan Holds Service for Pioneer Iowa City Resident

Mrs. Cash was a long-time resident of Iowa City having lived here sixty of her eighty years. Interment was made in St. Joseph's cemetery.

Fire Causes Smoke Damage in the Home of George Keller

A fire, beginning in the basement of the George Keller residence at 221 S. Lucas street, Sunday evening at 9 p. m., caused considerable smoke damage, but no great fire damage resulted.

According to Chief James J. Clark, the fire evidently started in the clean-out place, which connects with the fire place on the first floor. The exact amount of damage has not yet been ascertained.

Iowa City Will Have New Silver Fox Farm

With the arrival of a pair of silver foxes, which are now on display at the Velle garage, added to a pair of blue foxes which have already been purchased, a co-operative fox farm is being started at the George Hughes home, 1122 St. Clement alley.

The silver foxes were purchased for $1,500 from a man in Davenport. They were born in Winnepeg, Can., and raised in Eagle River, Wis. The blue foxes which Mr. Hughes has had for about a year and a half, have about the same value.

Each pair averages from three to five young a year, and the pelts sell for about $400 each. If pairs are sold for stock, they will bring about $1,500.

Five or six pairs of foxes are expected here by the first of January, and ultimately the ranch will probably increase to fifteen or twenty pairs.

Farm Products Drop Billion in Value This Year

Figures Show Slump Caused by Low Prices; Cotton Loss Greater Than Corn

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—A slump of $1,148,000,000 in the value of the country's important farm crops this year as compared with last year, was shown today by the department of agriculture's December estimates.

The decline was due principally to lower prices of most farm products, rather than to decreased production, although production of many crops was below last year. More than half of the decline was on account of the low price of cotton.

The principal crops, based on Dec. 1 farm prices, were valued at $7,801,313,000 for this year. Revised estimates of last year's crops placed their value at $8,949,321,000. Cotton, devalued as king last year by corn, failed to regain its crown this year despite record production.

The drop in total crop value due to cotton was $681,324,000; cotton's total value this year being placed at $1,016,346,000 as compared with $1,597,670,000 last year. This year's crop is more than 2,500,000 bales larger than last year's.

There was a decline of $263,331,000 in the corn crop's value as compared with last year. Value of the present corn harvest is placed at $1,703,420,000 while last year's was $1,966,761,000.

Wheat was one of the crops showing larger production and greater total value. This year's crop is valued at $397,539,000 compared with $357,370,000 for last year.
