George Souders Wins Speed Classic

Lockhart, Victor Last Year, Forced Out After Thrilling Race; Earl Devore, Veteran Driver, Takes Second

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY Associated Press Sports Editor INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 30—George Souders, a shy, unassuming boy from Lafayette, Ind., became somebody in the business of automobile racing today.

Souders, a former student at Purdue university, driving his first major event won the fifteenth annual five hundred mile grand at the Indianapolis motor speedway before a record breaking crowd of 145,000 spectators. Souders' victory was spectacular because he did not figure to have any more chance to win than Earl Devore.

This 27 year old youth from the slacks, driving the entire distance without relief, and making only two quick stops, piloted his tiny racer, painted a dusty shade of gray, two spirited perilous trips around the twenty two and one-half miles of track in 5:07.33 for an average of 97.54 miles an hour. He had a lead of seven and a half miles when he got the checkered flag as signal of victory.

By a strange twist of fate Earl Devore of Los Angeles, an old timer in the major league racing game, grabbed second place and his prize of $10,000 due to the misfortune of Babe Stapp, who, having second place within his grasp, was forced out of the race with only two laps to go because his motor began to sputter trouble. Stapp, working handily was forced to see the $10,000 flash past him and go to Devore.

Third place went to Tony Gulotta of Kansas City, who graduated into the racing business by acting as a riding mechanic to famous drivers. Gulotta got $5,000 in cash for his first win. Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis finished fourth. Dave Evans, another veteran finished fifth. There were twelve of the original thirty-three starters in the race to finish and they were strung out all over the place from ten to fifty miles behind the winner.

For a time it appeared as if Frank Lockhart, winner of the 1926 event, was going to repeat his victory of a year ago, but after leading the 27 miles he threw a rear wheel and was forced out of the race, to the disappointment of the great throng. Lockhart's services were offered to Souders as a relief pilot but Souders promptly decided that he start at the race and would finish it.

Another Cycle

WHEN, a year ago tomorrow, a new editorial and business staff grasped the controls of that organization which directs the fortunes of THE DAILY IOWAN, it was with a full realization of the task before them. Today the task is complete and seems singularly small.

Twelve months since the present staff stated its policies thus:

"No newspaper can hope to approach perfection unless it serves a community alert, alert, and growing. * * * If at the close of this year of service the present staff can be assured that it has contributed a bit of accurate information and clear reasoning toward a greater University of Iowa, a better Iowa City, and a more efficient DAILY IOWAN, then that year will have been a success."

How nearly the 150 individuals who made up the staff this year approached that goal is a question only the community can answer. If progress has been made, the credit goes mainly to them.

Tomorrow another group, capable, eager, and energetic, takes the reins, and THE DAILY IOWAN begins its twenty-seventh year of publication. During those twenty six years, the publication has experienced steady development with varying fortunes. During the past ten years its maturity has been assured, with only a question of time intervening.

The past twelve months have seen nothing spectacular in its path. Slowly, steadily, and surely another cycle has been completed. To have sat at the wheel for a short period, to have watched the spirit of the publication breathe, move, and grow, to have been assured that we were playing a part in that growth, is satisfaction enough.

And so it is with pleasant confidence that we step aside as new hands take up our work and fresh minds begin the task of bringing THE DAILY IOWAN another step nearer the goal of twenty-six years.

Cooperation

ONE phase of the university training that is little heralded by the student body or the faculty is that of cooperation. Often roommates or good friends, and more frequently those of opposite sexes who are quite attached to one another, find that they can accomplish a great deal more in the day's work if they team together. At times it is a matter of references at the library or a long reading assignment that can be nicely handled by two people. There are some courses that require a note book to be handed in. Again there are extra long assignments toward the close of the year when the instructors are trying to crowd in the rest of the year's task, that can be gone over by two or more people for a number, and a great amount of time saved.

A number of courses in the university necessitate a quantity of mechanical tasks that are time-wasters for the average student who takes them, for they are requisites for something else.

There is an old story to the effect that "he travels fastest who travels alone," but in this complex college life a little combining at the right time will eliminate long hours of grind and will assure us good results if proper care is taken.

There are those who frown upon this policy and insist that the student do his work alone. They argue that unless one learns to do one's work he will not know how to do so when the time of necessity comes. But later, in the walks of this world, all students will be confronted with the problem of cooperation with their fellows. Now is a good time to learn this requisite.

The Woman's World Fair

THE third Woman's World Fair was opened by Vice President Dawes with the tribute: "I see in this exposition not only a splendid demonstration of the rapid advancement of women in business, industry, and the professions, but also a great contribution to the improvement of the American home."

This fair is the outgrowth of woman's increasing interest in work outside the usual household duties and the work-a-day world. This year more than 125 activities in which women are engaged have exhibits.

American Indian women have an art exhibit, as do the women of the isolated mountain districts of Kentucky, Tennessee, and the Carolinas. A "Grandmother's room" has been set apart for representatives from a different home each day. Here, where one finds a marble-topped table, a family album, and a large Bible, with portraits looking down, the grandmothers themselves show the quilts and rugs they have made.

Even ten years ago such an exhibit would have been unheard of; women had to content themselves with seeking the admiration of their neighborhood friends or exhibiting at petty little fairs. It is well that facilities have been increased whereby they can exhibit to the world their accomplishments.

New Faces for Old

JOHN RYAN had been a burglar. He served his sentence and had experienced a desire to go straight. But Ryan had been in many a battle in the underworld, and had a face that was posted in every rogues' gallery in the country. Boasting the cauliflower ear of the fighter, a squint, a broken nose and innumerable scars, it was not one to win the confidence an employer should feel in his workers. The convict's plea was heeded. As carefully as though they were remodeling the fragile features of a cinema star, doctors of plastic surgery began to re-shape the battered features of the man. Ten days after the operation Ryan returned to the prison yard a changed man.

Convicts—many of them victims of circumstances—have learned within the prison walls the meaning of citizenship and have been taught honorable trades. And when they are discharged honestly wish to "turn over a new leaf." But due to their repugnant faces they are often doomed to their return to crime.

Such surgery is a boon to the reformed criminal. Life is opened anew to him; and hope awakened.

Then there is the other extreme. The convict may change his face without changing his heart. He could escape apprehension for some time. Here is a fertile field for the writers of mystery tales.

Editorial Notes

A Brooklyn grand jury discharged four chauffeurs charged with killing four children, stating that "drivers cannot be held responsible for parents who allow their children to roam the streets." Evidently streets are not for people; they are for automobiles. Some system should be devised whereby people could cross the street without crossing the street.

One of the earliest symptoms of spring fever is the patient's high temperature when he is told how much it will cost to overhaul his car.

Women now are discussing whether to let their hair grow out. Many men are interested in knowing whether there is any way to let their hair grow in.

H. G. Wells believes the Bible should be rewritten. It might also help to re-read it.

The policy of the New York boxing commission seems to be "Peace at any price."

A crank under the back seat is worth two on it.

Poems That Live

You Are Old, Father William
"You are old, Father William," the young man said,
"And your hair has become very white;
And yet you incessantly stand on your head—
Do you think, at your age, it is right?"
"In my youth," Father William replied to his son,
"I feared it might injure the brain;
But now that I'm perfectly sure I have none,
Why, I do it again and again."
"You are old," said the youth, "and your jaws are too weak
For anything tougher than suet;
Yet you finished the goose, with the bones and the beak—
Pray how did you manage to do it?"
"In my youth," said the father, "I took to the law,
And argued each case with my wife;
And the muscular strength, which it gave to my jaw,
Has lasted the rest of my life."
—LEWIS CARROLL.

New York Today

By BURTON RASCOE

(Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1927)
NEW YORK, May 29 (EFS)—There is a war on between some of the writers who advertise Broadway in a left-handed way as a street where suckers are landed, sealed and fried, and the men who have capital invested in night clubs and cabarets. The latter are deriving aid and comfort from the writers who find Broadway a homey and interesting place to spend their evenings and who make copy out of the joys and sorrows of the "Main Stem."

On one side it is maintained that the night clubs are all going out of business because the suckers have been used up to the gip methods of the night club promoters; and on the other side it is maintained that the good clubs are cashing in nightly with all tables full.

From the accusations hurled back and forth, the facts, which have not been brought out in the arguments, are these:
1. The night club racket is not the prosperous game it used to be. This fact was recorded in this column over a year and a half ago, and it is truer now than it was then. The reasons are:
a. The number of clubs multiplied too rapidly for the law of supply and demand.
b. After Buckner began his padlocking operations it became increasingly difficult to sell liquor and get away with it, and many clubs refused to take the risk.
c. In order to meet a terrific overhead, the promoters of night clubs, who refused to sell liquor, had to boost the cover charge and put extortionate prices on show meals, scrambled eggs, and mineral water.
d. Without liquor to blind the patrons to the negligible qualities of the entertainment and forget the size of their checks, they had to keep improving the quality of the revues to draw patronage. And these revues were, and are, costly.
e. Competition between the clubs caused hi-jacker methods to be in-

ANSWERS

To Questions on Page 1

1. Acting Secretary of War Harold MacNider escaped uninjured when the plane in which he and Lieutenant Ira C. Eaker were traveling crashed.
2. Miami, Fla., was threatened by fires in the Everglades section of the state.
3. Pope Pius XI has denounced bathing beauty contests in general and the one recently held at Galveston, Tex., in particular.
4. Vice President Charles G. Dawes opened the woman's world fair, which was recently held at Chicago.
5. Anti-snake bite serum was recently taken from Bronx Park zoo in New York to save the life of a man bitten by a rattlesnake at Milford, Pa.
6. Governor Jackson and Attorney General Gilliom of Indiana have been accused of violating the dry law because they secured whiskey to save the life of the governor's wife.

Lains called it. The ancients ordained that at least once a year, as a ritual, the people had to break out like the monk of Siberia, to keep them sane and healthy, and without morbid thoughts the rest of the year.

5. There are probably 20 cities in America with cabarets or night clubs, where one can see a better show, get better liquor, and have a better time on less money than in any night club on Broadway; but Broadway is a tradition, and it is a tradition that New York City, from an economic standpoint, would do well to cultivate. Before the war the cabarets of Berlin were subsidized by the government and money was spent to advertise the night life of Berlin as more healthy than that of Paris, to draw the American tourists who spend millions on entertainment and guzzling every year in Paris. What is more, the advertising was effective and Berlin began to draw money that formerly flowed into Paris until the war stopped the tide.

6. There is no law compelling anyone to go into a night club and to spend $35 for an opportunity to dance on an over-crowded floor, see some semi-nude girls cavort about, and to drink a couple of pints of mineral water. Any one who complains that he ought to be allowed to "enjoy" himself that way for 50 cents or a dollar has as much sense as anyone who complains that every time he wants to make a phone call he can't run up and use the phone in J. P. Morgan's private office. Nor do I see any reason for anyone who doesn't want to get gyped in a night club should complain because other people enjoy this being gyped, and, in fact, do not consider that they are being gyped.

7. And besides, the big spenders in the night clubs are not the "occasional" who can ill-afford it, but mostly men who make their money easy along Broadway, and whose motto is "easy come, easy go." That is to say, gamblers, bootleggers, gunmen, Wall street raiders, bondsmen, movie stars, movie magnates, theatrical producers, music publishers, song writers, and prize fight managers, and promoters. Why should anyone be interested in urging such fellows to save their money by staying out of night clubs?

8. Lastly, the average young couple, or young married couple, can call up some other couples, roll up the carpet, and tune the radio in on any one of three of the best night club orchestras in New York city and have a better time than they would be having if they were at the clubs. And if my eyes and ears do not deceive me that is what a great many of them are doing.

Queen Marie's Own Artist Here to Paint Types of American Children

Jean Negulesco, court painter for Marie of Rumania, has been commissioned by the queen to do for her ten portraits of American children. In the picture are Jean, Queen Marie, and a few of the kid types which the artist is studying.

By HAZEL CANNING

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927 NEW YORK, May 31 (EP)—Jean Negulesco is young and a Rumanian. He is also court painter to the wandering queen, Marie of Rumania. That is why he is in New York.

Being an artist, he has quite a bit of the eccentricity, or, at least, of that strange energy which is said to go with genius.

"Go to the United States and paint for me the ten most typical American children," said Queen Marie.

And Jean went. Being, as before mentioned, an eccentric and a genius, he didn't present her majesty's letters to American notables and then wait while they marshalled the typical children.

Instead, armed with an imperfect understanding of English and an even more imperfect ability to express himself in it, he started out by himself. As luck would have it, he invaded the East Side.

And children aren't hard to find there. By no means. He found himself one evening watching a group of dirty little urchins playing hop-scotch, way over on one of the dirtiest, smallest, most prolific East Side streets.

"Kidnapers! Help!"

Suddenly he touched one little girl on the arm.

"Votre mere?" he asked. "Paint moi you pose?"

The child shrieked, for the mixture of French and English was quite beyond her understanding. She didn't have the teeniest little idea that the Rumanian court painter was addressing her and asking her to pose for him, so she rather naturally conceived the idea that she was face to face with one of the kidnapers against whom she had been warned. The other children began to shriek and the circle broke up. All ran.

But the artist, being nimble, ran, too. He chased his little girl around a block, past crazy push carts, into a long, lean, dark entry, and finally up a flight of stairs, where a large indignant woman suddenly faced the artist bristling. In a flash she waved her fists. In another flash, half a dozen angry East Siders panted up those stairs and stood, jabbering. Other fists waved, and blows might have been struck, but just then the strange young man broke into an

Daughter to Follow in Father's Footsteps

Since that day the artist has visited children's hospitals, schools, the mall in Central Park where nurses bring their youngsters, all places where children gather, to find nine other "pure American types," as he calls them. And hunt for his types he has formed his idea of why American children look so differently from European children.

Crushed Childhood

"Over there," says Negulesco, "we crush our youngsters with too many centuries. Their childhood cannot cope with the weight of tradition they are born to. Our children are polite and stilled. Your children are impudent and self-expressing. Don't worry about their monkey-shines. Thank the good Lord for them. In Europe a child may never use the telephone. In France we have few radios, and little other household machinery. But here your children are what I call—"civilized mechanique"—that is, the machinery which surrounds them has made them keener, cleverer, more alert than a European child can ever be."

Already, in addition to his first little Rumanian-American, Mr. Negulesco has painted the young son of Rockwell Kent, the distinguished American artist. That boy he calls his "radic child—sharp-eyed, quick at the uptake."

Susanna, a little red-haired girl, he calls "Young Imp." She's a type of young, feminine, American self-expression. So it goes, though the list has only half been chosen. In addition, this rather naive painter has been accorded permission to paint "the avenue" high up.

New York a Cubist City

"Because New York is a perfect cubist city, all buildings are made on angles. And true justice to the spirit of the city cannot be done, except the artist see it looking down. I hope to paint the skyline from the Statue of Liberty and the market from some happy crow's nest which shall overlook the gut of fruits and vegetables."

Since his arrival Negulesco has been chosen official artist for the American Child Welfare Week, and he has promised to paint the healthiest child chosen, for the good social workers. In the meantime, he keeps up his quest for other children, and while searching, he imbibes ice cream sodas.

"The American ice cream sodas in Paris," says the artist, "they are worse than bootleg. But in New York—ah—here the ice cream soda is the drink of vital men."

CHILLS and FEVER

We did intend to publish a complete schedule of pipe courses in the column before we officially expired. We have not yet prepared it, however; but at any rate, let us advise: Practical Zoology, Freshman Spanish, any course under Dr. Bose, Life Insurance, Argumentation and Debate, Hygiene and Sanitation (its reputation has fallen a little lately though), stee clear of Accounting, Calculus, any course in German, American Diplomacy. We believe our function in life is to be amusing and instructive; and at least we have crashed through on the instructive feature.

This, dear readers, is our official exit. We might very easily grow sentimental which after all is the most delicate form of humor; but the university population has enough of that sort of thing thrust on it this week. We might on the other hand get complimentary and speak in glowing eulogiums of the intelligent readers we have had, the pleasure we have taken in knowing the critical appreciation with which we were received, and so on out, but being no George Washington—in either the Huguesian or the popular conception—we will make no such statements. We realize that among our readers perhaps a third read us because they wanted to, and the other two thirds was equally split between those who hoped we would mention them, and those who feared it.

But at any rate, "Sunday school is over, now we're taken home." Commencement Day is coming, and we can never hope to rival its inherent humor. You who go back to the dear old home towns will get much juicier gossip in the customary corners than we can dispense. You who do not will make no such statements. We will make no such statements. We realize that among our readers perhaps a third read us because they wanted to, and the other two thirds was equally split between those who hoped we would mention them, and those who feared it.

CHAPTER 32

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR By means of a plot engineered by James Mulholland and five aides, Ames, Chester, Fenne, Quantrill and Vereker, Robert Masterton is sentenced to Atlanta. While there, Vereker, who has been sentenced on another charge, reveals while dying, the names of the plotters on Masterton's promise not to invoke the law, but to take vengeance into his own hands. Masterton is in love with Cynthia Knowles, a rich and beautiful young woman. Her faith in him shattered, she marries Mulholland.

On her wedding day she gets an anonymous note accusing her husband of the plot to railroad Masterton to jail. Masterton's grandfather dies and leaves him six million dollars. He is freed. Back in New York he gives Sadie Hicks, hungry and out of a job, a position as his private secretary. He meets Cynthia, refuses to allow her to blame herself for her lack of faith in him and tells her she is the only woman he will ever love. Fenne offers information to Masterton, who goes to his rooms. Chester, calling the next morning, finds Fenne murdered. Quantrill, Ames and Chester begin to fear Masterton's vengeance. Fenne is declared a suicide. Ames offers $5,000 to Talbot. Masterton's valet, for papers of Fenne's he thinks Masterton has, Ames mysteriously disappears. Cynthia sees Masterton and realizes the only thing she cares about is his love. Masterton leaves town and gives Sadie $500 for personal expenses. Chester sets out to wreak vengeance on Masterton, but the latter makes him a prisoner. Chester mysteriously vanishes and Masterton is reported missing. Cynthia is greatly worried but he returns safely. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER 32 Airlines, Ltd.

Sadie closed the door, and stopped dead. Masterton rose to receive her, with the quiet yet welcoming smile that she had told him was his most attractive personal asset.

"You seemed surprised to see me?" he said.

"No," said Sadie. "I'm not. I knew you'd come back—I've known that the last hour, in fact I knew it all the time. In the face of this newspaper stuff, you can't be surprised."

"I've got past being surprised at anything," replied Robert. "Who has been inquiring for me? Not my busy friends the police again?"

"No," Mrs. Mulholland, replied Sadie briefly. "I promised she should be advised if I mean when you came back."

"I understand," said Masterton. "You did the right thing, Miss Hicks, as usual."

He moved across, rather deliberately, to the telephone. Sadie unlocked her desk; somehow she did not wish to hear what he said. He got the number quickly and his message seemed very brief, in fact he hardly uttered half a dozen words.

"No... report about me quite untrue," she heard him say, and he hung off abruptly.

"What's this nonsense in the papers?" he asked. "I haven't seen a newspaper for four days, and I had not been back five minutes when you came in. Have you there?"

Sadie handed him her clippings. Robert read the paragraphs carefully. He remained for awhile lost in thought, and seemed just a shade disconcerted. Then he handed the papers back to her without comment. She shut them up in her drawer, and turned to face him.

"There was a gun, with a discharged shell, in the yacht's cabin," she said suddenly. "Whose was it, Chester's?"

"Yes."

"And was that the only gun on board?"

"No," he answered, in a tone that forbade further questioning. But Sadie persisted.

"Chester wasn't alone?" she said.

"The place where that wreck happened, isn't far from Osea. And you've come back and he hasn't. Who fired that gun? Was it you, or he? What was the gun for anyway? You're the only man who knows that. See here—the papers say, from the position of the wreck, that there's no doubt he's dead. But they can't know—until they find him."

"Exactly," said Masterton coldly. "And the sea is slow to give up its dead."

Sadie was very white. She turned away from him.

"My goodness!" she said, "you're—"

"What?" asked Masterton.

"Inhuman!" said Sadie. "This thing has got beyond me. I never quite sensed it till now. Three of them gone... what do you think you're doing? There was good in that boy too—he wasn't rotten like the others. What's to be the end of it? And you can talk of it like that! You're just—inhuman."

"Do you think so?" said Robert quietly. "You are probably right. But whose fault is it? Mine's an exceptional case, it can't be judged by common standards. Here I am free again, but with nothing left except a long memory and a large fortune."

"More's the pity!"

"I am not of the forgiving type, if the law can't give me justice, I have hands strong enough to take it for myself—at least, I believe that I have. One never knows when one may be tripped up."

Sadie, who had believed herself so hard, did not look at him, and her lip trembled.

"I'm through," she said. "You've been mighty good to me, I thought a lot of you. Don't be afraid I'd go back on you. Anything I know about you Mr. Masterton, I'd never speak of, not if I was cut to pieces for it. But I can't see the end of this thing; it's getting just awful. I'll have to quit."

Robert shook his head.

"It's too late for that."

"What do you mean?"

"I can't afford to lose you now, Miss Hicks. I shall have to tell you the facts. And though I never doubted your discretion, what I am going to tell you will place me in your hands."

Sadie looked at him; the big erect figure, the strongly cut features and straight, inexorable eyes.

"Sit down there," said Robert, "and listen. You explained to me once that you came of a fighting stock. When you have heard, you shall be the judge."

Sadie seated herself, and Masterton spoke, very quietly and clearly. His explanation did not take long, five or six minutes at most. Sadie still very pale, sat staring at him dumbly. But the expression in her eyes was quite different when he had finished.

"Now do you understand?" concluded Robert. "You remarked once that there was good in Chester. In a sense I suppose that is true. He could help to wreck the life of one who had been his friend, because he was to gain largely by it. However, when retribution was close upon him and he was in extreme danger of paying the penalty, he did find himself unable to commit a cowardly murder of the gun-behind-the-hedge type. Everybody has his limits. That much may be set to his credit side. It does not seem to me a very heavy balance on the scale of honesty. As for the rest, I've told you practically all the facts, so far as they relate to the past. You know these men. And now you can decide."

Sadie rose.

"Mr. Masterton," said she. "I stay by you. And believe me, I'll never kick again, I'm sorry for what I said."

Masterton smiled.

"Friends again!" he said, and moved to the door.

"Wait!" said Sadie. "You haven't had my report yet. I never saw you when you came back after that fortnight's absence, you only sent me written instructions. Those I carried out. Do you remember I asked you for an extra $500."

"I remember now. I hope you gave yourself a good time with it; that's what I meant it for."

"Well, in a way I did. I spent it looking pretty close after Jim Mulholland. I don't know whether it's your idea that Mulholland can do with watching; you don't seem to have given it any attention. I've always thought I was better cut out for that job than any of these big-footed police are. There isn't any where Mulholland went. Chicago included, and not much that he did during those two weeks, that I don't know."

"But this is amazing," said Robert. "I had no idea you were doing anything of that sort. And you say he went to Chicago at such a time. What happened?"

Sadie gave him a brief report; he listened and reflected.

"Well, I don't see anything in that. It sounds harmless enough."

"No, there doesn't seem anything to it," agreed Sadie. "I was disappointed; I'd hoped to find out something. And yet—you never know. Anyway I've got everything typed down in my report, in case."

"You would!" said Robert. "Wonderful little woman. All the same, I don't like this. Please don't do it again."

"Why?"

"It isn't a job for a lady. It might be dangerous. I don't want you to get mixed up with Mulholland in any way whatever. Leave him to me—leave him alone."

"Well, I have left him alone, lately. But do you mean I'm to do nothing at all?" said Sadie disconcerted.

Robert regarded her with a gleam of humor in his eye.

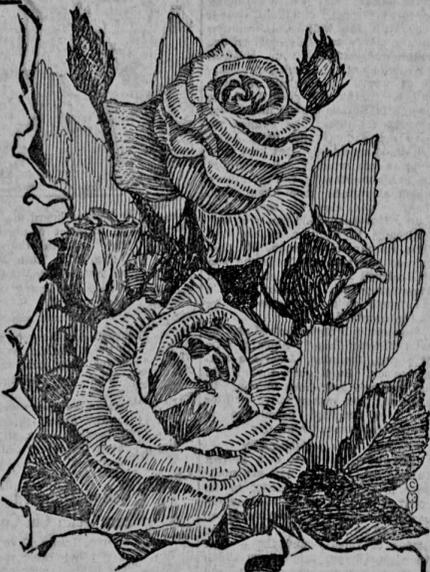

"I tell you what Miss Hicks," he said, "if you really feel you have a

Iowa State Loses to Kansas Aggies

AMES, May 30 (AP)—Marsh pitched a pretty game for Kansas Aggies here today, letting Iowa State college down with four hits and one run while his mates collected enough to win by a 6-1 count. Marsh fanned nine Cyclone batters and walked but one.

The Aggies shoved five runs across in the fourth frame when the Ames defense cracked four times and three singles were clouted out. Miller was heavy stick man for the visitors, getting three singles.

Iowa State played brilliant ball at times, three double plays being executed.

"I expected it," said Masterton. "Quantrill is a natural quitter."

"Not but what a man who's as spineless as that might be dangerous, cornered," said Sadie. "But he's going to quit—and this isn't merely a theory of mine, Mr. Masterton. When I saw Quantrill he was going into a ticket office and I learned he was making inquiries about Florida and Cuba."

Masterton's eyes had suddenly grown hard, and his mouth set tight.

"Thank you," he said. "I appreciate what you have done very much, and you'll do me a service if you keep me informed. Use your discretion."

"Discretion is my middle name," replied Sadie.

When Sadie had gone Masterton remained thinking, then he sent for Talbot.

"Talbot," he said, "I am going to send you on active service. I don't know what I shall do without you here, but needs must. Now listen to me."

Talbot listened. He heard without comment the surprising directions that were given him, and his eyes glistened with satisfaction.

"I understand sir," he said.

"Good," said Masterton. "By the way, you're a good bridge player, aren't you?"

Talbot smiled.

"Very fond of the game. A hobby of mine sir."

"Goodbye Talbot, and good luck," said Masterton, and shook him by the hand.

Hurdle Champion Stands Chance to Race at Olympics

Holds Four University Records in Dashes and Hurdles

Frank J. "Bab" Cuhel hurdled to more honors Saturday afternoon when his team-mates chose him captain of the 1928 track team. The election was held in the hotel in Madison last Saturday after the Big Ten conference meet. In this meet the new captain-elect gathered in the points, winning the low hurdles for the second time, and placing second to McGinnis of Wisconsin in the high.

Holds University Marks

Cuhel is the holder of four indoor university records, the 60-yard high hurdles, the 60-yard low hurdles, the 440-yard dash. In addition he served as anchor man on the mile relay team which holds the record at the Kansas, Texas, and Illinois relay carnivals. The same team has twice won the same event at the Drake games, and also at the indoor conference meet for the past two years.

For two consecutive years he has been the king of the Big Ten hurdles, and last year was chosen a member of the all-American track team. He is one of the outstanding candidates for the American Olympic team, which will compete at Amsterdam next year. Last year in the dual meet with Illinois he came within one-fifth second of the world's record in the lows, being clocked in 23.2. His most outstanding performance, however occurred last year in the conference out-door meet, when he beat the tape in his net event ahead of Guthrie and Irwin of Ohio and Werner of Illinois.

A. F. I. Man

In addition to his track honors, he has been awarded a minor and major letter for his two seasons of work on the grid-iron. His speed makes him a dangerous open field runner. He will be a candidate again next fall for a position on Coach Ingwersen's eleven as a full-back.

The new captain has been elected a member of A. F. I. honorary men's fraternity; Scabbard and Blade, honorary military fraternity; is a member of Phi Kappa Psi, social fraternity, and of the Hawkeye club.

City Honors Memory of Soldier Heroes in Parade Ceremonies

Executive Leads in Nation's Rites Commemoration

Citizens Pay Homage in Memorial Day Exercises

Yesterday in the Arlington national cemetery at Washington before the veterans of the country's battlefields, standing amid the marble and bronze monuments, and the long aisles of freshly decorated graves, President Coolidge led the nation's commemoration of Memorial Day.

Iowa City stood silent in that same memory. Along the streets and before homes flags were flown.

All day, after the services held there in the morning, groups of two and three took their way to Oakland cemetery, lingered for a while before some one of the graves, freshly decorated with flags and flowers and fled home again.

Parade to Cemetery

Heading the parade which wound to the cemetery, marched reserve and army officers and the ranks of the cavalry and hospital units. Following in the line of march were the veterans of the Civil war, the women's relief corps, daughters of the revolution and some of veterans' auxiliary, taken with parade in cars.

During the march through the cemetery at the cemetery, the Civil war veterans, a remnant of that "glorious army which once sprang from the office, the farm, the forge, and the mart," gazed with upraised eyes at the overcast sky seeing, perhaps, that army again in the strength and fullness they knew it once to have marched over the line of the parade. There were tears on the wrinkled cheeks of the veterans. Their shoulders were once more stiffly, proudly thrown back.

A platform program was held on the west slope of the cemetery with the crowd of those who had marched gathered below.

Walker Gives Address

A salute to the flag by the gathering opened the ceremonies. A benediction by The Rev. J. G. Rhind brought them to an end. The address of the day by attorney H. G.

Civil War Veteran Dies in Home at Marshalltown

Orlando S. Hartman, 78 years old, who enlisted at Iowa City in the twenty-fourth Iowa infantry, company H, in 1864, died at the Iowa Soldiers' home at Marshalltown two days before Memorial day.

Hartman, who was captain of the Iowa annex building at the home, served during 1925 as state department commander of the Phil Sheridan post at Marshalltown.

He is survived by his widow, who is a member of the home, a son, Casper, and a daughter, Mrs. Mary Plummer, both of Des Moines. Hartman's home was in Des Moines. He was born in Richland county, Ohio.

Walker manifested the spirit of memorial.

Earlier in the morning, before the parade, services in honor of sailors' graves were conducted on the Iowa avenue bridge. The straining of flowers upon the river culminated in this rite.

Today flags have been furled. The flowers, newly placed upon the graves, are fading. Memorial day has passed for another year but the spirit of the celebration lives on.

Donovan, Missing, Returns to Home

Wife of Mail Carrier Says He Came Yesterday

Mrs. Edward J. Donovan of 1122 Sheridan avenue affirmed last night that her husband, Mr. Donovan, who has been reported as mysteriously missing for several days, was in Iowa City yesterday.

Donovan, who has been substitute mail carrier and special delivery messenger on the local force for the past four years, was missing from Iowa City during the latter part of last week. His wife refused to tell where he had gone.

Post office authorities were unaware of his whereabouts. Yesterday they had still heard nothing of him.

During her husband's absence Mrs. Donovan stayed with her sister-in-law, Mrs. C. E. Hincliffe.

A verdict of guilty was returned at 12:30 p.m. Sunday by the jury in the case of Ray McCook, charged in district court with larceny for stealing clover seed. The jury had been out since Saturday afternoon.

The finding of the jury was that McCook was guilty of stealing clover seed of the value of $96 from John Worrall.

Judge Ralph Otto instructed Sheriff Frank Smith to hold McCook until Monday, June 5, the date set for the passing of sentence.

It is indicated that attorneys for McCook may ask for a new trial.

Erect New Convent Home This Season

St. Mary's Plan Big Extension Project for School

As quickly as enough money to finance the project, either wholly or in part, can be raised, a convent home for the Sisters of St. Mary's parish will be built and their present dwelling on the northeast corner of Jefferson and Clinton streets will be converted into classrooms. The present school building on Jefferson street will be remodelled together with the convent home. Such was the decision reached by members of St. Mary's parish, at a special meeting held recently in the school auditorium.

Need More Classrooms

The need for additional laboratories, classrooms, domestic science and sewing rooms has pressed heavily on the congregation for some time and sentiment to relieve the school house congestion crystallized last Thursday when a finance committee was appointed.

Members of this committee are as follows: Fred Racine, chairman; J. A. Parden, secretary; L. W. Hoffelder, treasurer; W. P. Sheridan and Paul Schmidt. Pending a second special meeting tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. in the auditorium, the exact amount of money needed cannot be announced. Representatives from the various church societies will confer with the finance committee at this meeting tomorrow to help formulate a money-raising plan.

The new convent home will be erected on Jefferson street east of the present building. Also included in the expansion scheme of the parish is an adequate gymnasium to replace the present small one located in the assembly hall.

No Definite Plans

Little definite as to the style of building to be erected could be learned last evening, but it is expected that both new home and gymnasium, will harmonize architecturally with the present structures. It is likely that the total expenditures will approximate $100,000 although the exact figure and plans for raising the amount, depends on the parish meeting tomorrow evening.

The present school building accommodating elementary and high school grades was built in 1892 and the convent home which contains the auditorium and assembly hall was joined to the old building in 1911.

The twelve Sisters of Charity living in the convent have full charge of classes in the school house.

Sunday Closing Law Violator Arrested

Walter Oliver, in charge of the shoe shining department of the Lane Shoe Repair shop, 126 S. Dubuque street, was arrested Sunday on an information which charged him with violating the Sunday closing law. He will have a hearing before Police Judge Paul Custer at 9 a. m. today.

An information was also filed against J. A. Lane, proprietor of the establishment which houses the shoe shining parlor.

Indians Divide Bill With Detroit Tigers

DETROIT, May 30 (AP)—Detroit earned an even break with Cleveland in the memorial day double header by winning the afternoon game 11 to 3 after losing the morning contest 9 to 8. In the second engagement the Tigers made nineteen hits for a total of twenty-seven on bases off Uble and Kurr; Uble was driven from the box in the seventh when the Tigers clinched the second game with seven runs. Two triples and a double were included in the seven hits Detroit made in this inning.

Fight Costs La Vora Thirty Day Sentence

After pleading guilty to a charge of disturbing the peace by fighting, Elmer La Vora, Iowa City, decided that he would rather spend thirty days in the county jail than pay a fine of $100 and costs imposed by Police Judge Paul Custer.

La Vora was picked up by police at the carnival grounds Saturday night, given a hearing by the judge Sunday, and taken to the county jail by sheriff Frank Smith the same day.

Lindbergh to Direct New York-St. Louis Air Passenger Line

ST. LOUIS, May 30 (AP)—When Captain Charles A. Lindbergh returns here he will find a job awaiting him that of inaugurating and managing a passenger air service between St. Louis and New York.

Major William B. Robertson, president of the Robertson Air Craft corporation and Lindbergh's former employer in the air mail service, said today upon his return from New York that air plane manufacturers there favored the idea and that Lindbergh himself had approved it.

"We have worked it all out together," Robertson said. "His plan was to carry ten passengers in a three motored plane and make the trip to New York in nine hours, charging $100 a passenger. Rate here is $38.06.

"His idea of a schedule was to leave St. Louis at midnight, reach Pittsburgh about 5 p. m. and New York at 9 a. m. The flying east of Pittsburgh would be done in the day light, he said, because of the rough character of the country in Pennsylvania.

"The weather is the only remaining problem and the thing needed is an improved information service for air pilots as to weather conditions ahead of them. This can be established by a system of communication to aircraft from meteorological stations."

Hubbard Will Face Intoxication Charge

Charles Hubbard, 320 E. Prentiss street, will have a hearing on a charge of intoxication before Police Judge Custer at 9 a. m. today. Hubbard's arrest followed an automobile crash with a car driven by Joe Eisenhofer Saturday night in which Mrs. Eisenhofer received cuts about the face.

The accident occurred on S. Madison street at the foot of engineering hill.

Old Walter Johnson Shuts Out Red Sox

WASHINGTON, May 30 (AP)—Washington won both games of today's double header with the Red Sox, Walter Johnson shutting out the visitors in the first game 3-0, while Hadley, a recruit, pitched the Senators to 13-5 victory in the second. Johnson, hurling his first American league game of the season, having been laid by injuries sustained in training, held Boston to three hits. The Red Sox made seven hits off Hadley. One of the Senators' seventeen hits was a homer by Harris in the seventh with a man on third.

Dirt Track Driver Killed in Accident

of the world this is not a vision which will be immediately realized, yet little by little, step by step, in every practical way, we should show our determination to press on toward this mark of our high calling.

"Our government has recently been attempting to proceed in accordance with these principles in its relations with China, Nicaragua, and Mexico, and in inviting Japan and Great Britain to participate in a three-power naval limitation conference.

Morality at Home

"While the foreign relations of this country are becoming more and more important, and constitute a field to which it will be necessary for our government and our people to give much more attention than is now realized, yet it is our domestic affairs that must always assume the first rank. Nations which are torn by dissension and discord, which are weak and inefficient at home, have little standing or influence abroad. Even the blind do not choose the blind to lead them.

"Foreign people are certainly going to seek assistance only from those who have demonstrated their capacity to maintain their own affairs efficiently. If we desire to be an influence in order and law, tranquility and good will in the world, we must be determined to make sufficient sacrifices to live by these precepts at home. We can be a moral force in the world only to the extent that we establish morality in our own country."

George Souder Wins Speed Classic

Souders made only two stops at the pits for 3 minutes, 24 seconds, once to take on oil, gasoline, and water and the second time to change tires. Lockhart started out to make a winning race of today's event. He shot into the lead on the very first lap and retained it except for a few minutes when he was forced into the pits to change tires. The youthful Lockhart profited to the extent of $10,000 in winning lap prizes for the time that he was showing his back to the balance of the field.

Batten Drives Flaming Car

The race was replete with thrills, spills and death defying speed. There were three serious accidents and the display of gameness that stirred the emotions of thousands. Norman Batten of Brooklyn, won the admiration of the spectators by his courage in driving his car engulfed in flames, refusing to desert it to save his life.

The car, speeding at nearly 100 miles an hour, caught fire on the back stretch in full sight of the thousands in the grandstands.

Batten standing erect in the driver's seat and steering the flaming car with flames licking his hands, brought it to a stop in front of his pits so the fire could be extinguished. Batten steered the car with first one hand and then the other until they were so badly blistered and burned that he finished steering with his left foot.

Batten grandly refused to jump out of the car, producing the drama that has had no equal in automobile racing. He stood erect in the seat when the flames began to envelope the car plotting it as best he could. If he had decided to jump out, he might have been dashed to death by the cars speeding behind him, leaving his driverless machine to smash into the grand stand and perhaps kill or injure spectators.

Ellingboe Injured Seriously

Jules Ellingboe, of Memphis, Tenn., was the most seriously injured of the three victims of the race. Ellingboe suffered a smashed chest and other internal injuries when his car crashed into the wall on the south turn.

H. Kohler of St. Charles, Ill., a garage owner, driving as relief for Fred Leckleider of Elgin, Ill., was another victim of a smashup. One of the tires of his machine exploding caused it to skid and then turn over with Kohler beneath it. It was first reported that his skull had been fractured, but it later developed that he was seriously if not fatally injured internally.

The race was extraordinary because of the fact that all the veterans—Harry Flartz, Leon Duray, Benny Hill, Peter De Paolo, and others were forced out before one hundred miles had been reeled off because their cars cracked under the strain or were in smashups.

Ten Balloonists Still Racing for National Honors

Five Bags Land After Staying Up Twenty-Four Hours

AKRON, O., May 31 (AP)—With only five starters in the national elimination balloon race reported down after more than twenty-four hours in the air, another night of flying seemed in prospect for the remaining ten entries as darkness came over the region of the St. Lawrence river where they apparently are striving for victory.

On the basis of meager reports from along the line of flight a balloon sighted at Winoski, Vt., just over the state line from New York said about twenty-five miles from the Canadian border, was leading the field. It was believed to be the Scripps-Howard entry. The bag passed Winoski, about 500 miles from Akron, in mid-afternoon. Since then no report has been received.

Storms Cause Landings

There was every indication that the race was being flown in the same bad weather that marked its first day. Storms were reported for two of the landings, and the absence of radio reports from any of the balloons indicated the weather the pilots were experiencing.

The four balloons that have landed are U. S. Navy No. 1 and U. S. Navy No. 3, both from Lakeside, U. S. Army No. 4 from Norton Field, Columbus, O., the St. Louis Rotary Club entry, and the Akron Beacon Journal entry.

Captain Honeywell's landing at Brockton and the sighting earlier in the day of the Detroit No. 1 over Wheelabrast, Pa., apparently marked the limits of the district over which they are moving.

Final authority in declaring the winner of the race rests with the contest committee of the National Aeronautic association.

Balloon No. 2 Lands

AKRON, O., May 31 (AP)—Navy balloon number 2, an entrant in the National balloon elimination race, was reported to have landed at Keatsburg, Pa. about 7:30 o'clock this morning, according to messages received here by officials of the flight.

Lancaster, Mass., reported at 6:50 daylight savings time tonight that the army number 3 balloon had drifted over the place and was headed toward Portsmouth, N. J. The Akron Beacon-Journal entry landed at Harpersville, N. Y., at 2:29 o'clock this afternoon.

The message from the balloon said the landing was made during a violent thunderstorm, causing officials to believe the landing was a forced one.

Bag Flies Over Nashua

The Detroit number 1 entry reported tonight it had come down one mile northwest of Parkville Station, N. Y. in Sullivan county, at 2:29 this afternoon.

NASHUA, N. H., May 31 (AP)—One of the United States army entries in the national elimination balloon race passed over this city about 1:30 p. m. tonight, eastern daylight time, heading north. A message dropped from the balloon read: "U. S. Army balloon No. 10, passing over Nashua going north."

Van Orman Lands at Bar Harbor
AKRON, O., May 31 (AP)—Mrs. Ward T. Van Orman, wife of the pilot of the Goodyear entry announced tonight that she had received word from her husband to the effect that his balloon had made a safe landing at Bar Harbor, Me. at 5:55 p. m. eastern standard time. Flight officials here also received word of Van Orman's landing.

CLANBERRY LAKE, N. Y., May 31 (AP)—Two balloonists in the National elimination race, operating army number 1, reached the Adirondacks village of Cranberry Lake shortly before 8 o'clock tonight after they had spent hours in finding their way out of the woods where their balloon came down, 15 miles north-east of here.

The men, Lieut. Paul Evert, pilot, and Lieut. R. R. Gillespie, aide, were unhurt when their balloon landed in a tree top about 11:40 a. m.

Chancellor Praises Religious Workers

SAN FRANCISCO, May 31 (AP)—Women have played a mighty part in carrying Christianity to the fringes of civilization, Dr. W. O. Thompson, Chancellor Emeritus of Ohio State university and Past Moderator of the Presbyterian church in the United States, told the general assembly of the church here today.

"Those who do not understand have complained that we should start our missionary work at home," Dr. Thompson said. "We can assure them that there are merits in sending workers into the wilds of Africa and that in so doing we have not forgotten the home field."
