Fuller's Committee Finds Thayer "Indiscreet"

Declares Action of Judge During Trial Scrupulously Fair

Advisors Admit Court Erred in Talking With Outsiders

BOSTON, Aug. 6 (AP)—Judge Webster Thayer, of the Massachusetts superior court was "indiscreet in conversation with outsiders during the Sacco-Vanzetti trial," but in his conduct of the case the judge tried to be "scrupulously fair," the advisory committee named by Gov. Alvin T. Fuller to conduct an independent investigation of the trial reported. The findings of the committee were made public at the state house tonight.

The committee found that the trial of Sacco and Vanzetti at Dedham in 1921 for murder, was fairly conducted.

Believe Motions Inadequate

It was the opinion that all the evidence given in support of the various motions for a new trial was inadequate to impress a jury should retrial be granted, after a review of the testimony which concluded that both Sacco and Vanzetti were guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

Touching on charges of bias the committee reported:

"From all that has come to us we are forced to conclude that the judge was indiscrete in conversation with outsiders during the trial. He ought not to have talked about the case off the bench and doing so was a grave breach of official decorum.

"Did Not Affect Conduct"

"But we do not believe that he used some of the expressions attributed to him, and we think that there is exaggeration i nwhat the persons to whom he spoke remembered. Furthermore we believe that such indiscretions in conversation did not affect his conduct at the trial or the opinions of the jury who indeed, so stated to the committee.

"The committee reviewed and dismissed allegations that District Attorney Katzmann had unduly emphasized the fact that Sacco and Vanzetti are radicals and that there have been collusion between state and federal authorities to 'railroad' the two men. It found that the alibis presented on behalf of both Sacco and Vanzetti were not supported."

Sacco-Vanzetti Seek New Trial

BOSTON, Aug. 6 (AP)—Moves to stay the execution of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, whose respite expires Aug. 10th and to obtain a new trial for them were made today by their counsel in three Massachusetts courts and before Gov. Alvin T. Fuller.

A motion for a new trial and a stay of execution was filed at the governor's offiec, a petition for a writ of habeas corpus was filed in the state supreme court, and a request for a stay was presented to a justice of the superior court in Boston.

Fuller Acts Monday

Monday at 10 a. m. was set as the time for a hearing on the habeas corpus petition. Goveronr Fuller, who was at his summer home in Rye Beach, N. Y., sent word to his secretary, Herman A. MacDonald, that he would not act on the petition for a stay until Monday.

Justice Edward T. Broadhurst of the superior court at the Suffolk county courthouse in Boston, told Arthur T. Hill, chief counsel for the defense, that he was without authority to act on his request for a stay of execution.

Another development in the case came late today when the 40,000 word report of the advisory committee which Governor Fuller appointed to make an independent investigation of the case was released for publication in tomorrow morning's paper.

Agrees With Committee

In his decision refusing clemency, the governor said that the committee had unanimously reached conclusions which agreed with his own.

The report says that the committee found that Sacco and Vanzetti

Wife, Paramour to Hang for Murder of James Le Bouef

FRANKLIN, La., Aug. 6 (AP)—Mrs. Ada Bonner LeBouef and Dr. Thomas E. Dreher were found guilty of murder by a jury in criminal court here tonight and James Beadle, the third defendant was found guilty with recommendation of life imprisonment.

The trio were charged with murdering James J. LeBouef, husband of the woman defendant. The verdict automatically sends the physician and the woman to the gallows.

Cincinnati Greets Colonel Lindbergh

CINCINNATI, Aug. 6 (AP)—Cincinnati today greeted Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and took full advantage of its opportunity by giving him one of the most enthusiastic welcomes ever accorded a visitor here.

Coming from Dayton on his tour of the country in behalf of aviation Colonel Lindbergh in his "Spirit of St. Louis" landed at Lin Lunken airport at 2 p.m. today for a 2-day stay.

New York Police Attribute Blast to Traction Enemies

Hold Russian Worker for Investigation of Bombings

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (AP)—The explosion of two bombs that last night wrecked two subway stations, tied up for several hours the two main underground arteries of Manhattan, and injured a score of persons provided police today with a mystery as perpelxing as any they ever tried to solve.

Hours after the explosion no trace of the two bombs have been found, and although one man was under arrest, police vacillated between belief that sympathizers for Sacco and Vanzetti had set the bombs or that the bombings were the work of persons with a grievance against the traction companies, finally switching to the latter.

Found Peering in Church Window

Morris Seigel, the man under arrest, was taken into custody a few hours after the explosions. A patrolman found him peering into a window of St. Patrick's cathedral about a mile north of the bombed stations. He was described as a Russian, fourteen years in America.

A search of his rooms disclosed a newspaper photograph of a bombing scene and a book, "The Life of a Traitor." This was the story of a Russian spy.

Police said Seigel told of working in western harvest fields, that he declared he was not convinced that Sacco and Vanzetti had a fair trial, and that he expressed himself as opposed to capital punishment.

Attorney Lacks Proof

After a rigorous examination Seigel was held on charge of being implicated with the explosions, but William Ryan, assistant district attorney, said he had no proof that Seigel was guilty and asked that he be held as a precaution.

The New York Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee ridiculed the idea that the bombs had been placed by friends of the radicals.

"We have waged a peaceful struggle for seven years," Rose Baron, secretary of the Sacco-Vanzetti emergency committee said, "and it is ridiculous to think that we would now resort to outrages."

Shortly after a threatened strike was settled several days ago a bomb was found in a subway, but police declined to give information regarding their switch to the theory that persons with a grievance against the traction companies had placed bombs.

Iowa City Offers Advantages Says Proposed Booklet

Fifteen thousand copies of a booklet, featuring Iowa City as Iowa's ideal home city, will be off the press Tuesday, according to the plans of the Greater Iowa City committee, sponsoring a publicity campaign.

The pamphlets will be sent to the parents of the freshmen and sophomores enrolled last year in the University; to 2000 persons who have sent inquires to the registrar's office; and to persons who have answered advertisements appearing in twenty-six Iowa newsapers.

Among the items mentioned in the booklet are; increasing property values, the airport, opportunities for recreations, sports, and athletics; religious and fraternal opportunities, favorable living conditions, and cultural and educational advantages.

The direct mail campaign is being carried out in connection with the newspaper advertising.

Colorado Miners Call for Strike

Walsenburg, Colo., Aug. 6 (AP)—Members of the I. W. W. working in the coal mines of southern Colorado, today were called upon to strike, probably on Sept. 1. At the same time a call for a mass meeting was issued.

Operating officials said they understood the strike was called in sympathy with Sacco and Vanzetti.

Major General Wood, of Philippine Fame, Dies

One of the latest photographs to be taken of Major General Leonard Wood (left) clearly shows the illness under which he was laboring. An automobile accident, added to the strain of his long and trying service as governor-general of the Philippines, combined with a previous illness and last night's operation caused the government official's death in a Boston hospital.

The picture on the right is an earlier one, made after the General's acceptance of the Philippine post.

Iowa Station Seeks WSUI Wave Length

Shenandoah Company Asks Division of Program Time

Whether WSUI, University of Iowa broadcasting station will be allowed to continue the development of extension education by radio will be decided in a hearing to come before the radio commission in Washington, Thursday, Aug. 11. This statement was given out yesterday by Prof. Edward H. Lauer, director of the extension division.

Professor Lauer was formally notified of the hearing yesterday morning. He will leave for Washington tomorrow accompanied by Carl Menzer, instructor in the college of engineering.

The hearing was instigated three weeks ago by KMA, broadcasting station of the May Seed company of Shenandoah when it asked for a reallocation at 710 kilocycles in order that it might cover more territory. Such an allocation would call for a division of time with WSUI which already occupies that wave length. KMA now broadcasts at approximately 1,100 kilocycles.

Meet Commissioner

Dean Paul C. Packer of the college of education and Mr. Menzer went to Chicago last Sunday to present their brief of the case to H. H. Bellows, member of the radio commission. Mr. May came to Iowa City to confer with Dean Packer, Professor Lauer and Mr. Menzer. He admitted the fairness of the claims made by WSUI when he was here Professor Lauer said.

"We have no quarrel with Mr. May concerning the principle of direct advertising by radio," Professor Lauer stated, correcting a Washington bulletin to the effect that WSUI would challenge KMA on those grounds.

"We would have taken the same stand if any other station asking such a division of time whether they carried on advertising or not," Mr. Lauer added.

"Handicap in Work"

The educational program carried on by WSUI in cooperation with the college of education and the extension division, he explained, is such that free use of the air at any time is necessary. Sometimes only a few minutes notice is given in which to present some educational project. A division of time with any station would handicap us in our work."

WSUI is state property, Professor Lauer pointed out, and as such, the tax payers have a right to benefit by it.

"Whether radio education or direct advertising is to be given preference, will be decided incidentally, Professor Lauer admitted, but he was positive in his affirmation that WSUI officials were not concerned about that phase of the hearing. It is the future of the new project in education that is their concern.

Pioneer in Courses

"Educational institutions all over the country will watch the case with great interest" Professor Lauer said, "because it will decide the future of this field of work."

The University of Iowa is one of the first schools to offer college courses for credit by radio and the first Dean Lauer stated, that has a graduate who completed the work for his degree in this manner.

WSUI is ideally equipped to handle this kind of work Professor Lauer affirmed. It has power to cover the entire state, and reserve power if it is needed, the personnel of instructors to present the courses, and direct contact through high school and teachers throughout the state to make the work effective.

As an example of the nature of their projects Professor Lauer mentioned a course in the teaching of sixth-grade arithmetic to be given this fall by Prof. Frederick B. Knight of the college of education.

Red Cross Plans Safety Measures

City Refers Action to Committee for Investigation

Taking the initiative in an attempt to make the Iowa river safe for swimming, the local Red Cross society has drawn up a plan for establishing a bathing beach in a limited area in the Iowa river.

The proposal is to rope off a space in a shallow place near the sand barge, to fasten the ropes down by barrels, and to have a life-guard in attendance during the hours when swimming is permitted. According to the plan a fine would be imposed on any person swimming in any area outside of the ropes.

Although a patrol boat is maintained on the river at the present time, it is impossible for the lifesavers to keep watch on the whole extent of the river. The limited area, with life-savers on duty, should eliminate the danger of swimming, the Red Cross committee believes.

Speaking in behalf of the Red Cross, David A. Armbruster, university swimming coach, presented the plan to the city council at their regular meeting Friday. Mrs. G. W. Ball and Harry D. Breene of the Red Cross chapter, also urged that some action be taken.

The petition was referred to the ordinance and finance committee of the council and the city attorney for investigation. A report of their findings will be made before the council meeting Friday, Aug. 12.

Death Penalty for Dog

WINCHESTER, Va. — Solemn judges of the circuit court of Frederick County have imposed an official death penalty on a dog. The animal was accused of "running, wounding and killing" sheep of Newton Long.

Coolidge, Wilbur Discuss Navy Plans

Propose Changes in Form of Island Possessions

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 6 (AP)—The opportunity to discuss plans for an adequate American navy in view of the failure of the Geneva conference will be afforded President Coolidge early next week when Secretary Wilbur arrives to be a guest at the summer white house.

In addition to Mr. Wilbur, the president will confer with Secretary Work of the interior department concerning the Boulder canyon dam and other problems including the proposal to place jurisdiction of American insular possessions under the interior department.

An engagement has been listed on Thursday for Representative William E. Hull of Illinois, who was expected to discuss the Mississippi river flood situation with Mr. Coolidge.

The Illinois representative is a member of the house rivers and harbors committee whirch will have an important part in any flood legislation to come before congress.

At the end of the week Mr. Coolidge will discuss the 1928 appropriations with Brigadier General Herbert M. Lord, director of the budget whose suggestions may be the basis for the president's recommendations to congress.

The president will also have the opportunity of taking up with Director Lord a number of items outside the budget which are considered vital by some of the executive departments.

Registrars Figures Show Mail Increase

Charles H. Maruth, assistant registrar, yesterday announced an increase in the mail content of 11.2 per cent over that of the same period last year.

The registrar's office, up to Aug. 1, received 16,576 letters compared with 14,802 letters for 1926.

During June, the period of heaviest mail volume, 3,079 inquiries were received, according to the records while in the last two months the registrar's staff answered nearily 6,000 letters from correspondents requesting information about every conceivable phase of university life.

The books show an increase of 8.6 per cent over the figures for June and July, 1926.

Home Study Draws Older Student Type

The student who earns his university credits through home study work is a more mature type than his brother who attends classes is indicated in the report compiled recently by the extension division.

Taking the enrollment cards of thirty-two students in English as a basis for comparison it was learned that the lowest age of the student was eighteen years while the highest was fifty years.

Ten Hurt in Auto Crash Near Kiron

DENISON, Aug. 6 (AP)—Ten persons, all victims of one automobile collision near Kiron, tonight, are in the hospital here. One woman is in a critical condition.

In one of the automobiles, driven by Charles Robinson, of Hamburg, were his wife and daughter and two sisters of Mrs. Robinson. The Rev. Mr. Faielkorn, Monrovia, Calif., was the driver of the other automobile in which his wife and four children were passengers.

Friend Believes Civil War Veteran Victim of Foul Play

Coroner's Jury Denies This; Say Shock Caused Death

QUINCY, Ill., Aug. 6 (AP)—Although a coroner's inquest into the death of Charles Turneure, 82 year old Civil war veteran and last survivor of the famous "Hornet's Nest Brigade, fife and drum corp" ended today with a verdict that Turneure came to his death as a result of shock following his being struck by a freight car in the Burlington railroad yards here late Friday night. Colonel F. O. Smith, superintendent of the Illinois Soldiers and Sailors home is convinced that Turneure was slugged and then laid on the tracks.

Obtained Leave

According to Colonel Smith the veteran had obtained a leave of absence from the Soldiers home to visit friends in Iowa. He had more than fifty dollars in cash when he left the home Friday evening Smith says. Only a few coins were found in his pockets when Turneure was taken to a local hospital.

The location of the accident, a long distance from the passenger station, convinced Smith that Turneure had been robbed and beaten before he was struck by the freight car switching in the yards.

Turneure is described as the last survivor of the Hornet's Nest Brigade drum corps formed after the Civil war and for many years a feature of the Iowa G. A. R. encampments. The brigade was organized at Waterloo by five members of the Hornet's Nest brigade who had fought at Shiloh where the brigade repelled the Confederate attack until two-thirds of its members were killed or wounded.

Enlisted in Iowa

Turneure enlisted in the 14th Iowa regiment when the Civil war started and after being discharged in 1863 he re-enlisted in Company F, 142nd Illinois infantry and served until the end of the war. He fought at Shiloh, Corinth, Pilot Knob, and in many other engagements and carried a bullet in one leg as testimony of his valor.

Funeral arrangements are waiting word from Mr. Turneure's brother, Albert J. Turneure, of Waverly.

Ames Dormitory Offers Plans for Self Government

AMES, Aug. 6 (AP) — The new $150,000 men's dormitory soon to be completed at Iowa State college, here, will offer opportunities for developing a democratic self-governing body of student, in the opinion of J. E. Foster, dean of men.

Each unit of the building will have a governing organization of students and will solve its own problems. In order to add success to the system, a group of upper classmen will have rooms in the building. It will be their duty to guide freshmen along lines conducive to a well-rounded education.

The new dormitory is styled after the English Gothic type of construction and architecture with brick walls and stone trimmings. It has three wings, all complete with separate community living rooms. There is a central dining hall, which will be in charge of Miss Florence Walls, who superintends the dining halls in the girls' dormitories, also.

The contractors promise the building to be ready for occupancy of students when the fall term of the college opens late in September.

Ford Coupe Crashes Into Telephone Pole

Wilbur Cerny of Iowa City was uninjured late last night when the Ford coupe which he was driving went over the curb on S. Madison street crashing into a telephone pole.

The front of the coupe was badly damaged. Both lights were smashed, the right front wheel splintered, the radiator demolished, and front axle broken. No one was with Cerny at the time of the accident.

Succumbs Following Operation for Tumor

"Splendid" Physique of Governor General Unable to Overcome Ravaging Attacks of Seventeen Year Illness

BULLETIN

BOSTON, Aug. 7 (AP)—Major General Leonard Wood, governor-general of the Philippine Island, died at Peter Bent Brigham hospital here at 1:20 a. m. today following an operation performed at the institution yesterday.

A statement issued last night by Dr. Alexander Lambert, of New York, read as follows:

"Governor-general Wood seventeen years ago had a tumor which was removed by Dr. Cushing. It was then found that the growth had involved the bone of the skull and a probable re-occurrence of the trouble was anticipated. For some time he had evidenced a return of his former lameness but owing to his high sense of duty was unwilling to leave his post in the Philippines until he felt the situation there justified a temporary absence.

"The operation was a serious one and in spite of his splendid physique his condition is critical."

The hospital's statement said the general was admitted two days ago for observation. Dr. Harvey Cushing, a noted surgeon who was mentioned in last night's bulletin on the general's condition, was reported to be in charge of the case.

The spectacular rise of Major General Leonard Wood from an obscure post in the medical corps to a commanding rank in the combatant branch of the United States army was one the outstanding features of American military annals. Appointed an assistant surgeon several years prior to the Spanish American War, Wood rose to the foremost rank of American generals, his active duty culminating in the Governor Generalship of the Philippine Islands after he had served four years as Chief of the General Staff of the army, the topmost military command.

Rose to Peak

While his rapid promotion, ascribed largely to his close friendship with Theodore Roosevelt, was the subject of frequent criticism in military circles, General Wood's service was recognized throughout the establishment as of the highest type. His first official commendation for gallantry came during hostilities with the Apache Indians in 1885, when he was given the Congressional Medal of Honor for bravery, and his work throughout the World war, limited as it was from the General's standpoint, won him the Distinguished Service Medal "for especially meritorious and conspicuous service."

The placing of a medical officer in command of troops— a prerogative jealousy guarded by line officers—was a departure so exceptional in the military establishment that it has since been prohibited by army regulations; but that General Wood justified the trust and proved his value as a part of the fighting arm is conceded by many of the highest military authorities, and was shown even more conclusively by his unusual rise to the peak of the profession.

General Wood was born in Winchester, New Hampshire, October 9, 1860, the son of Charles Jewett and Caroline E. Wood. His preliminary education was obtained at the Pierce Academy, Middleboro, Mass., following which he attended Harvard university and was graduated from the medical school in 1884.

For a year thereafter he acted as house surgeon at the Boston City hospital and then began the general practice of medicine in that city, but the lure of adventure, aftermath of his intensive study, induced him to join the army as an assistant contract surgeon in June, 1885. The fortunes of war cast his lot with General Miles in Arizona, where he served until 1891 in the field of active operations against the Apaches and also as commander of an infantry detachment and a scouting party with the famous Lawton expedition against Geronimo in Arizona, New Mexico and below the border.

Had Contempt of Danger

Throughout these hazardous campaigns Wood displayed a capacity for endurance and a reckless contempt for danger which won for him the admiration and respect not alone of the hardy frontiersmen but of the friendly Indian trailers who accompanied the expedition as well. His ability as a fighter and his qualifications as a commander won speedy recognition at the hands of his superiors, especially during the terrific forced marches through the desert wastes of the southwest, hence the young officer was invariably selected to lead expeditions against the fierce Geronimo, chief of the most ruthless and bloodthirsty tribe of Indians in North America.

Beloved by his men for the persistency with which he followed their fortunes and endured their hardships, and respected by his superiors for his inborn ability as a leader, General Wood capped his first few months of active service with a master-stroke—the taking of Geronimo and most of his troublesome followers. His reward came in the form of the Medal of Honor and promotion to the rank of captain.

For the next two years, ending with 1889, he was attending surgeon at several posts and forts in the Southwest and at the Presidio, San Francisco, later serving in the same capacity at Fort McPherson, Georgia.

Friend of Roosevelt's

General Wood has been the friend and upon many momentous occasions the confidant of three American presidents—Cleveland, McKinley and Roosevelt. When the first named was elected in 1892 he selected General Wood for assignment to the White House as physician and aide to the president, an appointment he continued to fill when McKinley came into office.

As a result of the close friendship that sprang up between himself and Theodore Roosevelt, then Assistant Secretary of the Navy, it was General Wood who was chosen to command the world famous "Rough Riders" of the Spanish-American war, recruited by Roosevelt from the frontiersmen and cowboys of the plain states. In this outfit Roosevelt contented himself with the subordinate rank of lieutenant colonel. The brilliant achievements of the regiment at San Juan Hill and Las Guasimas were accomplished with the energetic doctor-soldier as the actual directing head, serving as a colonel of volunteers. His promotion in July, 1898 to the rank of Brigadier General of the U. S. Volunteers was the direct result of this gallant command.

Upon the surrender at Santiago of the Spanish forces, General Wood was made military governor of the city, later becoming civil governor with the rank of Major General and finally assuming command of the entire island as military governor. In this difficult position he continued to show the same cool, clear-headed judicial ability that had marked his leadership in the past, with the result that he soon persuaded the natives to accept such sanitary and other conditions as he saw fit to impose and at the same time retained the friendship of all factions—an achievement considered nothing short of marvelous under the circumstances. His jurisdiction over Cuba ended in 1902, when he turned the government over to the first Cuban president.

Receives Promotion

The admiration Mr. Roosevelt bore for General Wood had been materially increased through their association on the battlefield, consequently there was no great surprise when the latter was nominated to the rank of General officer in the regular army shortly after Roosevelt entered the White House upon the death of President McKinley.

From 1901 until 1906, during which he was again promoted, this time to the rank of Major General in the regular establishment, General Wood was busy straightening out Cuban affairs, serving as governor of Moro Province in the Philippines, and later attending European army manoeuvers as official observer of the United States. From 1908 to 1910 he commanded the Eastern Department and in the later year was sent to Argentina as special envoy of the government.

Subsequently, when Elihu Root was Secretary of War and undertook the creation of an Army General Staff, he depended largely upon the advice and theories worked out by General Wood. When the law was enacted creating the staff, Wood became the first Chief, and thus set in motion the machinery upon which the government placed its main reliance in the war preparations of 1917.

Previous to and also in the early days of the European war, General Wood repeatedly risked censure from the war department because of his untiring efforts to promote national defense and preparedness measures in the Eastern Department, which he then commanded. It was his personal influence alone that resulted in the establishment of civilian training camps at Gettysburg and the

Conquering Iowa River

IOWA river may yet be made to lose its death-dealing power. A suggestion from the Red Cross chapter to the city council raises the hope that the number of drownings may be lessened, if not actually removed. Three proposals are made: that an area in a shallow part of the river be roped off, that a life guard be placed there, and that fines be imposed for swimming in other parts of the river.

The council has deferred action on the matter, but an earnest plea is made that the plan be accepted immediately. There are many pressing problems before the council, but none affects so much as this the actual lives of Iowa City residents. To overlook the suggestion is to court death.

Although summer is waning, there are yet many swimming days. Many chances remain for swimmers to be drowned this year. If no action is taken now, while the subject is uppermost in the minds of everyone, the problem will be forgotten until another drowning takes place next summer. And that tragedy is sure to occur!

The idea of roping off a spot in the river for swimming is a practical plan. With proper supervision by a life guard, the place would be crowded. But why stop with this suggestion?

Here is the nucleus for a municipal bathing beach where all may enjoy themselves without expense. If a suitable spot along the river is found, a sandy beach created, bathhouses erected, and life guards provided, Iowa City will have public swimming utilities second to none in the state.

Outfitting such a beach would cost a few hundred dollars, but what is that amount of money if two or three lives can be saved annually? If the death in Iowa river can be removed or lessened, count not the cost, but carry out the necessary project. The river must be conquered.

Salvador Goncalveszarco

OURS is an age of disillusionment. The destruction of dead heroes goes on and on. Washington, so we are told, was not the man we thought he was. Buffalo Bill died from his own hand, the Indians say. Helen of Troy may have been a pretty girl, but she had a dangerous philosophy of life, we read.

The latest to fall beneath the sword of modern investigation is Christopher Columbus, discoverer of the new world, glamorous hero of history.

An announcement from Lisbon, Portugal, sets us right about him. Columbus never discovered America at all, it says. There never was such a man. The fellow who landed over here and claimed the hemisphere for Spain was a Portuguese by the name of Salvador Goncalveszarco. Columbus was only his assumed name, the story continues, taken on to hide certain dishonest actions which if revealed would have caused him great inconvenience.

Just what the offense was, has not been mentioned as yet. Doubtless we shall hear of it soon. The uncovering of a document long buried is the evidence upon which the Lisbon writer bases his statements.

What does all this disillusionment mean? Nothing. Absolutely nothing. School children will go on tomorrow chanting the same old rhyme how in 1492 Columbus sailed the ocean blue. The same old story of his romantic struggle for a chance to prove his theory that the world is round will be told and retold as usual.

February will roll around, and everyone will give a silent cheer for Washington, the father of our country. Mothers will go on telling the cherry tree story and urging their sons to follow George's example. Politicians will go on following his precedent of eight years as a limit in the presidential chair.

Classes in literature will pore over the same old story of the run-a-way Helen and the trick of the wooden horse that rescued her. Nothing will be changed.

What does it matter what the investigators tell us about the actual life of our heroes? It is the mythical attributes of a leader that we worship, not reality. And the myths, if such they be, will remain unchanged.

Cornstalk Riches

THE end of the rainbow should spread over Iowa, Illinois, and Kansas. It is claimed that cornstalks can be converted into high grade paper, artificial silk, explosives, celluloid, artificial leather and photographic films. Now the farmer is beginning to build his air castles. Maybe his financial worries are over.

There are no serious technical difficulties in the way of making any of these products. The real difficulties are economic and have to do with such matters as collection, storage, handling, bulk and yield in processing.

It is true there are plenty of cornstalks, but the problem is that of providing enough of them cheaply in one place to insure large scale operations throughout the year. The yield of fiber in cornstalks is small as compared to that of wood.

The principal value of the knowledge that cellouse can be made from such materials lies in the assurance that the world is far from being at the end of its rope in such matters, even when the forests of pulpwood have been used up. But the farmer may have a few more years to wait before his riches will come through cornstalks.

Radio English

A campagin to purify the English used by radio announcers was recently launched by Frances St. Austell, president of the Iowa Radio Listeners league.

Although the announcers of many large stations outside of Iowa are also at fault, the league will limit its efforts for a time to the Iowa stations.

Many children and adults who dislike using a dictionary depend on the pronunciation of radio announcers for their knowledge of the correct usage of words. The pronunciation that an announcer gives a proper noun is accepted, considered authoritative, and seldom questioned by the average listener. Persons adopt unconsciously the grammatical expressions of the persons whom they hear speak. Without realizing it, they use the words of the radio announcer in discussing what they learn over the radio.

Pupils often, having their grammar corrected, quote the radio announcer, believing him an authority.

It is difficult to impress on boys and girls the disfavor with which slovenly speech is regarded when they daily hear apparently respected and successful persons make the grammatical errors they have been told are unpardonable.

Agnes Samuelson, state superintendent of public instruction, said, "The fact is that poor English on the streets, over the air, and everywhere does more harm in a minute than our teachers can undo in days and weeks."

The proper standards of education should be emphasized in all public life. To raise the educational standard of radio announcers, regulations should be passed requiring radio announcers to pass a specified examination before entering the profession. They are instructors just as much as are the teachers who must meet specified requirements before obtaining certificates.

Horse and Buggy

(From The New York World)

Up Sixth avenue the other night came a thing strange to behold. It was a horse and buggy. Moreover, it was a real old-fashioned horse and buggy. The horse was a skittish colt, obviously unaccustomed to the city. He shied away from automobiles and appeared nervous about setting foot on the planking which covered the excavation for the new subway. Even for a colt he was small. He was about the same size, color and build as the steeds which colored gentlemen used to drive up the road on Sunday afternoon, the runty, goatish-looking steeds, whose heads were always checked too high. He was so small that every time he was reined in and the breeching tightened the shafts rose up beside his ears and he looked as though he would be lifted bodily from the ground. The buggy was a standard box-bottom affair, with top, dashboard and whip-socket all complete, maroon wheels and a cover strapped over the boot.

And when the boys of Sixth avenue saw this queer apparition did they stand and gape as though they were looking at Rip Van Winkle? They did not. They seemed to know exactly what to do about it. About a dozen raced after it, and one of them managed to perch for a few moments on the boot-cover. About fifty stood on the sidewalk and yelled lustily, "Hey, mister!"—at the same time pointing earnestly to the hind end of the outfit. And when the irritated driver peered out to see what was wrong they bellowed in triumphant chorus, "Your wheel's turnin'!"

Thank God, the young generation still remembers one fine old American custom!

What's What in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART
(Exclusive Central Press Dispatch)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The congressional joint committee which has charge of decorations in the capitol building is up against a tough proposition.

Fifty-eight feet above the floor under the dome is a frieze running clear 'round the rotunda—a belt eight or nine feet wide, and 360 feet in circumference, which originally was intended to be a complete circle of paintings, each representing some important event in American history.

Two hundred seventy-four feet of this work—it may seem awful to measure art by the foot, but in this case it's unavoidable—274 feet of it have been done, but 26 feet remain blank.

The joint committee's job is to get this space filled out appropriately.

It isn't as easy as it sounds.

The 274 feet of finished paintings include fifteen American historical events and they end with the discovery of gold in California in 1848.

Room for Two More

By skimping, maybe the remaining twenty-six feet can be made to accommodate two additional pictures—that is, two incidents in the last seventy-nine or eighty years—but certainly not more than two.

Now, what were the two outstanding events in American history since 1848?

Just consider, not to mention another thing, that you've got to take into consideration the Civil, the Spanish-American, and the World wars.

Clearly, two pictures are not enough to go around.

* * *

The truth is that the early painters were entirely too wasteful with space in that frieze. They ought to have left us a lot more room. Apparently they had a notion that history was going to end about 1850, at the latest.

Columbus' Landing First

They started with Columbus' landing, which was all right.

No fault can be found with the Mayflower's arrival off Plymouth Rock.

The reading of the Declaration of Independence was okeh, but the battle of Lexington was overdoing the revolution somewhat and Cornwallis' surrender decidedly was.

The Mexican war had to be noticed, so the capture of Chapultapec can't be criticized.

* * *

Recent Years Neglected

But we've had plenty more important happenings in recent years than:

Cortez laying down the law to Montezuma, Pizarro conquering Peru, De Soto's burial, Pocahontas saving Capt. John Smith, the settlement of the Plymouth colony, Penn's treaty with the Indians, Governor Oglethorpe making peace with the aborigines, Tecumseh's death and Sutter's gold strike on the Sacramento.

Put it to yourself—couldn't you suggest a more representative series than that, in the light of the last eight decades' doings in our midst?

* * *

Paint about two-thirds of those pre-1848 pictures out, is what I say, allow us half a dozen to bring us up to date and leave the rest to posterity.

Otherwise they'll be running the eraser over a lot of the specimens we leave in less than another century.

It would be interesting if we could be on hand to hear what the joint congressional decorations committee has to say in 2007 or thereabouts about our selections of today.

"Johnnie Goes to College"

(From an Article by Percy Marks in College Humor)

Time and again I have been asked to write something on the temptations of college life, and I have always refused the request, simply because I don't think there is anything worth saying on that subject. The temptations of college life are the temptations of life itself; college doesn't offer any temptations that are peculiar to it. A boy or girl can go to pot just as easily in the old home town as he, or she, can in a dormitory or a fraternity house. There is viciousness in college as there is viciousness elsewhere, and if the freshman is looking for it he will find it. It may even be thrust at him, but it will be thrust at him some time no matter where he goes.

There are people, I have been told, who have never been tempted. They must be very dull people. Anybody with any life or imagination is bound to find temptation dancing before him often in all her loveliness, and she is quite as lovely off the campus as on it.

There seems to be an idea abroad however, that a college is a peculiarly wicked place, and that many boys are ruined in one way or another as a result of going to college. I doubt it. A college reflects the life outside, and because a college community is usually small and the life somewhat restricted, the reflection is often intense, but it remains a reflection. Moreover, the intensity comes not so much from any restrictions that a college may produce but from the fact that the people who go to college are young; they are themselves intense; they are at a temptable age, and there is nothing in the world that the college authorities can do to change that fact or nature.

In other words, the world recognizes well enough that Johnnie may get a bit of an edge at a fraternity dance, but it calmly ignores the fact that he can get just as much of an edge at the local country club formal. Johnnie doesn't have to go to college to learn that liquor is intoxicating, or that women are sometimes very disturbing elements in the life of a young man. A good many Johnnies discover both those facts and many more like them long before they matriculate for college.

I have no defense for vulgarity that often obtains in the colleges all over the country, but it will continue to contaminate the colleges just so long as it continues to contaminate so large a proportion of society. If Johnnie comes from a vulgar home, he will probably be rather vulgar himself, and among his classmates he will find other Johnnies willing enough to be vulgar with him. Or if he is a little weak and a little temptable, he will find chances enough to test his weakness. It won't be the college, however, as an institution that will coarsen and cheapen Johnnie; it will be his own lack of strength, his own failure to take the opportunities offered to him, his own lack of appreciation of "the good, the beautiful, and the true," and it will be the inevitable consequence of living in a world that has a cruel way of crushing fineness.

Nobody does read any one's speeches nowadays.—Lord Birkenhead.

Letter to the Editor

Iowa City, Aug. 6, 192[illegible]

To the Editor:

One letter in reply to newspaper advertising of Iowa City comments on a statement in the ad, that "Iowa City has no factory district"—that it might be well to have one—that it would be as essential as being surrounded by an agricultural district.

I quite agree that Iowa City would be far better off with good factories and that to feature no factories is very poor advertising.

Factory employes are a good type of citizen and Iowa City should have at least a dozen manufacturing plants carrying good pay rolls. The university would not suffer because we had our share of people working in factories. They are hard working, law abiding citizens and desirable in every way.

Yellow Brothers Turn to Frogs

WASHINGTON — In Japan the hindlegs of the bullfrog have leaped ahead of all other table delicacies, and according to the report of the United States counsel at Nagasaki they now fetch $48 a pair.

So keen are the Japanese on the use of frogs as food that the legs have become a daily diet in many families and the paternal pocketbook has been drained dry in numerous cases.

Brothers in the Beer

LONDON.—The traditional rivalry between fleets of the world powers gave way before the influence of foaming British beer when the French fleet visited British ports recently. Naval authorities on the watch for incidents which have been known in the past to culminate in fist fights between members of the rival navies, found that the French and British sailors were fraternizing amiably over large mugs of beer, and in spite of the difference in languages, having no difficulty whatever in establishing a mutual basis of understanding.

Veteran Keokuk Lock Men Retire

Believe Mississippi's Glory Will Never Come Back

KEOKUK, Aug. 6 (AP)—Three veteran lock men who knew the Mississippi river in its hey-dey and who are convinced that it can never return to its former glory as an avenue of trade, are retiring this summer from the government service, having reached the sixty-five year age limit set for service.

Timothy S. Harrington, lock master, who retires after forty-nine years of service; Henry W. Weyland, lock master for thirty-one years and John F. McGee, lock man for ten years, are these book marks of the river log book, who hold the belief that the final chapter of the book of river traffic has long since been written and the log closed.

Served Thirty-one Years

Mr. Harrington lays claim to the distinction of having locked more boats through the Keokuk lock than any other river man. He was a messenger to Major Amos Stickney when the old Des Moines Rapids canal was built in 1874; a chief engineer of the old guard lock in 1900, and with the building of the Keokuk dam and construction of the first lock, became one of three lock masters of the big gate in 1913.

Mr. Weyland entered the government service in 1893 and has thirty-one years of service to his credit. For six years he was on S. S. Lucia, the official craft of Major M. Meigs, United States engineer in charge of the work between Keokuk and St. Paul.

Doubt Traffic Renewal

Mr. McGee, serving the shortest shift of all, began his river work as guard in the dry dock during the war, but after 1918, he became a lock man.

These men who are retiring are not very optimistic about the plans for renewed river traffic through barge line operation on the Upper Mississippi. They believe that when such traffic is a reality, it will never equal the river life and times of the past.

"Shun Self Pity," Advertising Head Advises Women Seeking Careers

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—"Any woman with fairly good health, cast suddenly into the business world after thirty, not only can make her way, but she can remake herself into a much more alert and attractive person than she might have been had she remained a home woman."

This encouragement is offered to the thousands of mature women who annually find themselves thrown upon their own resources by Mrs. Phoebe Cole, head of an advertising agency and an outstanding success among New York business women.

Mrs. Cole, widowed when she was 30 years old, and with two small sons to support, got her first job at $20 a week on a New York newspaper twelve years ago. Within three years she had become editor of the woman's department of the Evening Sun, later building her present prosperous business.

"Self-pity and pride are the two greatest handicaps the woman who enters business after years of home life must face," she says.

"Such a woman is nearly always sorry for herself because she must have a job at all. In any event, she isn't usually thrilled at the idea of getting and holding a job. Yet she must compete with eager, alert, attractive young things who are thrilled with their jobs and with life in general.

"I mention pride because such a woman usually has acquired a certain dignity as mistress of her home. She finds it distinctly unpleasant to take a job where somebody else is manager, telling her when and how she shall work, reprimanding her upon occasions, and treating her as an inferior."

Must Fight Self-Pity

The young girl entering business fresh from school has neither of these handicaps to face, she points out, and consequently is generally regarded as more valuable in an office than "a lugubrious woman who acts like an early Christian martyr, sighs over her work and quarrels with other employees over matters of authority."

But the woman wno can combat the handicaps of pride and self-pity with determination to succeed will find that the poise and experience she has gained as mistress of her own home, dealing with refractory cooks, children, neighbors and other domestic vicissitudes, can be adapted to business conditions with a completeness that will make them her most valuable assets.

Four Geologists Collect Specimens in Northern Iowa

Four geologists have returned to Iowa City after having traveled 900 miles in northern Iowa collecting specimens. The men were Prof. Earl T. Apfel, of Illinois Wesleyan university, Bloomington, Ill.; Prof. Merrill A. Stainbrook, Texas Technological college, Lubbock, Tex.; Prof. Oliver R. Grawe, University of Nevada, Reno, Nev.; and Prof. A. O. Thomas of the geology department of the University of Iowa.

Leaving Iowa City July 31 by automobile, the geologists visited and collected specimens of fossil corals at Monticello. Other points visited were Dubuque, Preston, Farley, Randalia, Clermont, Ossian, Decorah, Rockford, Nora Springs, Humboldt, Ft. Dodge, and Marshalltown.

Many boxes of materials were shipped to the three institutions represented as well as to the geology department here.

Professors Apfel and Stainbrook are graduates of the university with doctor's degrees from the geology department, while Professor Grawe will receive his doctor's degree at the close of the second summer term.

General Wood Dies Following Serious Operation

Presidio in 1913, and again due to his efforts that both camps blossomed out in the "Plattsburg Idea" of civilian military training in 1917. General Wood had the satisfaction of seeing more than 4,000,000 men trained under the theories first applied at his civilian camps, and he also accepted the responsibility of establishing some 30 divisional camp sites throughout the country.

Narrowly Escapes Death

By his own selection General Wood was assigned to train and command of the 89th. division, then stationed at Camp Funston, whereupon he threw himself into the task with all the energy and enthusiasm that had marked his well rounded army career. While he might readily have expected, as senior officer of the army, to be given command of the forces sent to France, if he felt any chagrin at the selection of an officer so much his junior in the service as General Pershing, it was not reflected in his work at Camp Funston.

Pursuant to a war department order, General Wood, along with other division commanders, was sent to France on an inspection tour of the battlefront, and as it later happened, this was his only direct view of the World war, although his division reached France and participated in the fighting before the Armistice was signed. The general himself narrowly escaped death while on his inspection tour through the bursting of a large calibre gun which discharged prematurely through the breech and killed several officers standing near it. General Wood was slightly injured but carried out his orders to return home, where he testified before a senate committee as to the urgent need of rushing troops overseas.

While his friends were exerting all the pressure at their command to have the services of General Wood utilized in France, he was called upon to undergo an army medical examination which, despite his 58 years, he passed successfully.

He was then ordered back to Camp Funston, and when orders arrived that moved his division to the East coast for embarkation, General Wood himself was directed by Secretary of War Baker to proceed to Washington, where he was informed that he was not to command the division when it went overseas.

While Wood partisans in Congress and throughout the country were making the claim that he was being unfairly treated, the General was given permission by the war department to lay his case before President Wilson. Just what occurred during this visit to the White House has never been disclosed, but it was generally understood at the time that the officer merely made the President a further pledge of loyalty in whatever post he might be called upon to fill. At his request, however, the orders were changed to permit his return to Camp Funston for the purpose of organizing a new division, and his application for oversea service was placed "in the hands of the chief of staff."

While no formal official explanation of the incident ever had been issued, the Springfield, Mass., Republican, upon the death of Woodrow Wilson, published a letter written by the war president to the editor of that newspaper June 5, 1918, which disclosed the reasons for not sending General Wood overseas.

President Wilson's letter was a rejoinder to an editorial in the Republican calling attention to General Wood's abilities and popular following and observing, in substance, that if it was not the administration's purpose to send General Wood to the battle front, it should make that decision only on adequate grounds.

"I hope you will not be surprised to know that I subscribe almost in its entirety to the inclosed editorial from the Republican," President Wilson wrote.

"I am keenly aware of and keenly sensitive to the implications which will be drawn out of the fact that I am not sending General Wood to the other side, and I want personal friends like yourself upon whose approval I depend for my encouragement to know why I am not sending him.

"In the first place I am not sending him because General Pershing has said that he does not want him, and in the second place, General Pershing's disinclination to have General Wood sent over is only too well founded. Wherever General Wood goes there is controversy and conflict of judgment. On this side of the water we can take care of things of that sort, because the fighting is not done here, but it would be fatal to let it go on at or anywhere near the front.

"I have had a great deal of experience with General Wood. He is a man of unusual ability, but apparently absolutely unable to submit his judgment to those who are superior in command. I am sorry that his great ability cannot be made use of in France, but at the same time, I am glad to say that it is being made very much use of in the training of soldiers on this side of the water, a task for which he is eminently well-fitted and which he is performing with diligence and success."

Presidential Nominee

When the Armistice was signed and the task of demobilizing the huge army was under way, the country began turning its attention to the nation-wide primary campaign that was to supply presidential candidates for the next general election.

Many political booms were already stirring while General Wood was still active in demobilization work, but when he decided to seek the Republican nomination he received immediate permission from Secretary Baker to lay aside his army duties and devote all of his time to the campaign.

When the Republican National Convention assembled at Chicago and began voting on the long list of candidates before it, the trend showed that General Wood had a tremendous following throughout the country, and it was not until the convention—long deadlocked over the contending candidates—decided to turn to Senator Harding in the emergency that the possibility vanished for the nomination of the doctor-soldier-statesman.

After Harding's election, the problem of the Philippines presented itself again for solution, and it was to General Wood that the president turned for help. In the meantime, however, the officer had been honored in striking fashion when the trustees of the University of Pennsylvania offered him the post of Provost of that institution and he decided to accept. His decision meant either that he must resign from the army or defer his acceptance until he was eligible for retirement, and after much deliberation he decided upon the latter course.

This meant a delay of several months, and during the interval he was induced, with the acquiescence of the university authorities, to accept the post of Governor General of the Philippines for one year. General Wood found much to do in the islands, however, and announced shortly after his arrival their that his work could not be completed before the beginning of 1923 at the earliest. Again the indulgence of the university officials was sought and a further extension of his leave from the school was granted, extending until such time as his insular duties could be concluded.

As an author, General Wood has produced several books bearing upon the army, among them being "The Military Obligation of Citizenship;" "University Military Training;" and "Our Military History; Its Facts and Fallacies." Throughout the 35 years of his military career he received the honorary degree of LL.D. from Harvard, Williams, University of Pennsylvania, University of Georgia, University of the South, University of Michigan, Union college, George Washington and Wesleyan universities.

General Wood married, in 1890, Miss Louisa A. Condit Smith, a resident of Washington, D. C.

New York Magnates May Be Forced to Break Up Strong Yankee Team

By NORMAN E. BROWN

There is talk of the apparent necessity of breaking up the New York Yankees to protect the other clubs of the American league financially and the league itself against National league competition in cities where both leagues are represented.

Those who have broached the subject point out that such a move may become a matter of self-protection for the Yankee owner, Colonel Ruppert, as a decline in the attendance at the Yankee stadium already is noticed.

Were such a plan entered into earnestly and sincerely the Yankees would be forced—as the first step—to dispose of either Babe Ruth or Lou Gehrig. These two men, together, form virtually the bulwark of the Yankee team. Any other changes in the Yankee line-up would be of minor importance, as far as strengthening the playing and drawing power of other clubs were both of these men to be retained.

That is, any other changes that could possibly be made.

Consideration of the possibilities of such a proposed "shakeup" brings many interesting angles up. For instance, the case of Tony Lazzeri.

* * *

Ruth and Gehrig share the spotlight of fame around the circuit and the headlines at home. But the most popular man on the ball club today, in the opinion of many New York scribes, is Lazzeri, of second base and the Pacific coast.

Lazzeri's likeable personality, his reticent manner, his sterling play last season—his first year up, his losing battle with Grover Alexander in the grand finale of last year's world series, and his nationality all help to make him a popular favorite. Ruth is an institution. He is recognized as king and a power on the team, but New York fans have grown somewhat used to him.

I think New York fans could be told that Ruth, perhaps, had to go to help baseball. But a possible disposition of Lazzeri in such a shakeup, I believe, would draw the wrath of the fans.

New York wants to "raise" Lazzeri, if you will. The fans already call him theirs.

* * *

As far as Ruth and Gehrig are concerned it is within the range of possibilities that Colonel Ruppert would consider disposing of one of them — were sufficient pressure brought to bear.

Ruppert realizes that he will be faced next season with the problem of paying Gehrig a salary commensurate with his home run hitting proclivities. Babe Ruth draws a salary of $70,000 a year. Gehrig, at this writing, is topping Ruth in the maddest home run race in baseball history. Gehrig rightfully will demand some readjustment of his salary. And it shouldn't be a modest request.

If Ruppert finds himself facing decreasing gate receipts next season because of the runaway race the Yankees are making he may ponder deeply the matter of reducing his payroll.

You can bet your hat that any move the colonel makes will be prompted mainly by a desire to protect the gate receipts of his ball club. He is a shrewd business man and well aware that the other moguls aren't as much interested in protecting the Yanks as they are in replenishing their own larders.

Might Be Freshmen

LAKE FOREST, Ill.—Campus isn't a college word for camp. That has been decided by Lake Forest police officers who happened on a family of tourists pitching their tent on the grounds of Lake Forest university.

"Who told you this was a camping ground?" the officer asked.

"Well, look at the sign," the head of the family replied.

The sign indicated that the lawn was the campus of the college.

The layout is similar to that of recent years. The head-gear is of tan leather with strips of black crossing at the crown, the pants are tan, with stockings plain black.

The sole difference is that white instead of black tape is sewed on the front and inner arm of the jersey to make holding the ball easier. Included in the equipment for the Hawkeye players are silk pants padded with foam rubber. These are for use on wet days when canvas slows down the players. Special light-weight shoes of the latest design will be provided for backfield men while the field goal kickers will wear a special type of kicking shoe.

Manager Waller's Nine Plays Iowa County Team Today

Strengthened by the addition of McKenna, an outfielder, Manager F. C. Waller will send his Riverside baseball team into battle today against the Marengo nine on the Riverside diamond.

Manager Waller hopes that the addition of McKenna in the outergarden will bolster a weak spot in the Riverside defense.

Clark, local mound artist will be Manager Waller's choice for the pitching assignment with Brown on the receiving end. Clark hit his oldtime stride last Sunday against the Cedar Rapids Athletes and turned the Parlor City team down with six hits, and struck out eight batsmen.

With the exception of McKenna in the outfield the starting lineup will be the same as that used in last Sunday's game.

"I Told You So"

That old advice of Mr. H. Greeley's about "Go west, young man," sure was right on the beezer in the case of Johnny Miljus, late of Serbia and Brooklyn, and still later of Seattle and Pacific coast points. He sat on the bench of the Brooklyn Dodgers for five years—watching the other Red Red Robins go bobbing around but getting only an occasional chance to heave a few innings in some hopelessly lost ball game. After five years, he was waived out of the majors, and disposed of for $5,000 to the Seattle club of the Pacific Coast league. Today, the Pittsburgh Pirates, who spurned his services a couple of seasons back, are hailing him as their big chance in the pitching line—and they laid a cool $17,500 on the line for him, too.

Frisch Gains on Leading Corsairs Trio in Hitting

Trails Barnhart by Single Point Margin

CHICAGO, Aug. 6 (AP)—Frankie Frisch, who broke up the Pirate trio at the head of the National League's batting list three weeks ago, threatens to do it again. He was the only one of the leaders, with the exception of Harvey Hendricks of Brooklyn, to make an outstanding gain in percentage, in today's figures. He is but one point behind Clyde Barnhart, the trailing member of the Pirate trio.

Hendricks, who held a middle seat in the first ten for several weeks, a month ago and then dropped out, returned to his accustomed spot today displacing Eddie Farrell of the Braves.

The Fordham flash, as they used to call Frisch in New York before he was traded to St. Louis, didn't steal any bases this week but his mark of 31 is a dozen higher than the former base stealing leader, Kiki Cuyler of Pittsburgh.

The home run honors of the elder league still rest upon the brow of old Cy Williams. He would have had one more than his mark of 22 if the hickory hadn't given away in a game against the Cubs. When the bat broke, the ball, instead of sailing out into the bleachers, dropped weakly back of the infield. Cy had 22 Wednesday.

Rogers Hornsby, the crown prince of the Giant squad, was the first National Leaguer to cross the century mark in runs, with Frisch close behind him. Gehrig turned the trick in the American League two weeks ago, and Paul Waner, the Pirate star, was just on the threshhold Wednesday night, with 99 runs.

Rube Benton, on the Giants' successful western tour, slipped in between Lee Meadows and Carmen Hill, the two Pittsburgh pitchers who have been sharing the league honors, and Hill dropped to third. Meadows leads the regulars with 14 victories and five losses, Charley Root of the Cubs has 18 victories but nine defeats.

Leading batters of the National League: P. Waner, Pittsburgh, .385; Harris, Pittsburgh, .378; Barnhart, Pittsburgh, .366; Frisch, St. Louis, .365; Harper, New York, .349; Hornsby, New York, .346; Hendrick, Brooklyn, .344; Hafey, St. Louis, .343; Stephenson, Chicago, .338; Traynor, Pittsburgh, .338.

Scoring Feats of Hawkeye Gridmen Placed on Record

Three football players of the University of Iowa are ranked with the nation's leading gridiron athletes of 1926 and five scoring feats of Hawkeyes have been placed in the official records, published in Spalding's intercollegiate football guide.

The honored trio are Emerson W. Nelson, captain of the 1927 team, tackle; Nicholas A. Kutsch, halfback; and Harry H. Rice, end. Kutsch and Rice have played their final game of football on the Old Gold eleven.

The scoring feats of Kutsch placed his name three times in the list of touchdowns scored on runs from scrimmage. He raced 65 yeards against North Dakota, 60 yards in the Illinois game, and 15 yards to cross the Carroll goal line.

Clare T. Byers, quarterback, was one of 27 men in collegiate football last fall who ran back a punt for a touchdown. In the Carroll game, the Hawkeye dashed 50 yards through the ranks of the Wisconsin college's eleven.

The Iowa forward pass combination, Kutsch to Rice, functioned to score a touchdown against Northwestern, Big Ten joint champions. It was one of the three registered against the Wildcat eleven all season.

American Loop Now Has Hard Hitting Trio

Simmons Continues to Top List With Lou Gehrig Second

CHICAGO, Aug. 6 (AP)—The American League now has a hard hitting trio like the three Pittsburghers of the National league but the three Yankees lack one step of being at the top of the batting column. Al Simmons of the Athletics sits serenely on the throne there, though he has been on the bench the past week.

Right behind his chair, though, are Lou Gehrig, Babe Ruth and Bob Meusel, a first baseman and two outfielders, the same as the Pirate trio of old Joe Harris, Paul Waner and Clyde Barnhart.

Meusel joined his two mates in averages compiled today, including Wednesday's games, with a great hitting rally which ran his percentage from .363 to .371, eleven hits in six games. Earl Combs doubled Meusel's gain to make the fourth Yankee in the first ten batsmen, displacing Johnny Neun, the Detroit first sacker.

Still sliding, Ty Cobb who a month ago was in the first ten, today is down in 22nd place, but Tris Speaker still hangs around in fifth place. The Detroit pair, Harry Heilmann and Bob Fothergill, who used to be battling for leadership, also are still in the first ten but well down the list.

George Sisler is still waiting for an opportune vacancy among the leaders, but meanwhile continues to add to his stolen base string which now totals 20. Neun has displaced his team mate Tavener, as runnerup, with 18, a gain of two.

Lou Gehrig is only two home runs behind Babe Ruth's pace in the 1921 record year and led Babe by three on Wednesday night. Lou had 37 and Babe 34.

With all the New York batting power behind him, Waite Hoyt still holds the leadership of the regular moundsmen of the league with a mark of 14 victories to four defeats. Ted Lyons of the White Sox has the most wins, 17, but is charged with 8 defeats.

Leading American League batters; Simmons, Philadelphia, .394; Gehrig, New York, .387; Ruth, New York, .373; Meusel, New York, .371; Speaker, Washington, .369; E. Miller, St. Louis, .369; Heilmann, Detroit, .367; Schang, St. Louis, .364; Fothergill, Detroit, .351.

Independents Clash With Muscatine Nine

Manager Crawford will send either Klema or Hofer to the mound.

Former Gopher to Lead Drake Team Against Minnesota

DES MOINES, Aug. 6 (AP)—When the Drake university football team plays the eleven of the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis, Nov. 12, it will mark the first time that a former Gopher football star, now a coach, will direct an eleven against his alma mater.

Ossie Solem, head football coach and director of athletics at Drake university, won his football spurs at the University of Minnesota when Dr. F. L. Williams, orginator of the famous shift, was coach. That was more than a decade ago.

Fans around Minneapolis are enthusiatic about the football meeting of the two schools, since it will mark not only the start of grid relations between the two schools but also it will be the last home game of the season for the eleven now tutored by Dr. Clarence W. Speers.

Tentative plans made by Ed. C. Lytton, business manager at Drake, provided that the school will charter a special train to make the trip from Des Moines to Minneapolis.

Finish Two More Miles of Paving

Work Advances From Muscatine County to Scott Church

Two miles of new paving were opened yesterday on U. S. road No. 32, announces F. K. Preston, state resident engineer.

The new paving lies between the Muscatine county line and the Scott township church.

With the completion of paving past the Ford avenue crossing, four miles from the Muscatine line, only four and seven-tenth miles of work remain to be completed on the project handled by the Wright company.

About four miles of paving remain to be poured on road 161 between Iowa City and Cedar Rapids, Mr. Preston announced yesterday. The Harrison Engineering company has completed one mile of the work.

Property owners along road 161 for one and one-half miles north of North Liberty will be given the use of that road, Mr. Preston said.

Move Location of Quality Bake Shop

Moving from its old location at 110 E. College street to new quarters at 215 E. College, the Quality Bake shop will open its doors tomorrow.

For five and one-half years, P. A. Bocco, the owner, has been in the bakery business in Iowa City. Because of increase in trade, a larger amount of space became necessary. The new brick building is especially constructed as a bakery, in size 110 by 20 feet.

A Hubbard Portable oven, in which 400 loaves of bread may be baked every forty minutes, is a part of the modern equipment.

Mr. Bocco plans to have both a wholesale and a retail business, supplying the stores and surrounding towns with bread, and maintaining a retail shop in the front of the store.

Wieneke Owns $1,500 Stamp Found on Grandmother's Austrian Newspaper

In 1856 the grandmother of H. C. Wieneke of Iowa City spent a few cents for an Austrian newspaper stamp. Today the stamp is worth $1,500, the most valuable one in Mr. Wieneke's $10,000 collection.

The hobby of stamp collecting, never interfering with his business, and yet ever increasing in value, has occupied the spare time of Mr. Wieneke, newsdealer, tobacconist, and stamp connoisseur.

When he was a small boy, he started a modest collection and grew so interested that he took up stamp gathering as an avocation. Today he owns three huge volumes, containing 10,000 stamps, all different, valued at $10,000, in addition to 30,000 or 40,000 stamps which have not yet been placed in a book.

Mr. Wieneke was born in Iowa City, and has lived here most of his life. In 1882 at the age of 21 years, he went to Kansas City, where he remained until 1893. At that time he returned to Iowa City and opened his present business. The stamps which he had accumulated before leaving Iowa City were carefully stored away in his father's attic to await his return, and since then stamps of every description have been added.

Receives Most by Exchange

The stamps have come into Mr. Wieneke's possession through several means, most of them by exchange. He has purchased a great many, some of them now valued at $100, which he obtained for seventy-five cents. He explains that rarity rather than age determines the price of the stamp.

Other newspaper tax stamps besides the $1500 copy, in the collection vary in size from the regulation to stamps as large as playing cards. Among the samples of all the newspaper stamps issued from 1865 to 1867, are five, ten, and twenty-five cent stamps and also $2, $5, $10, $20, and $100 stamps.

A specimen of practically every stamp issue made for the celebration of some particular occasion is found among those belonging to Mr. Wieneke. He has copies of the five and ten cent stamps of the first general issue, made in 1847. These are the ones purchased for seventy-five cents, which are now worth $100. He also has specimens of the 1851 issue made by private persons.

Owns Confederate Stamps

Other unusual stamps in the accumulation are the original issue of the Confederate states; the Columbian issue for the World's Fair exhibition at Chicago in 1893; the Trans-Mississippi issue of 1898; an issue commemorating the Battle of Lexington; the Pilgrim Tercentenary of 1920; the Harding Memorial in black, issued for one day when the nation was mourning the death of a president; and the Sesquicentennial issue of 1926.

Among Mr. Wieneke's exhibits is a letter bearing the special cancellation stamp of the first air mail flight, July 1, 1924. This year when the first flight under contract from Chicago to San Francisco was made, a special cancellation stamp was issued. Five letters, two sent out from Iowa City, and the others from Cheyenne, Chicago, and Omaha, all bearing the Lindbergh stamp and the special cancellation of July 1, 1927, are now in Mr. Wieneke's collection.

In 1873 a special stamp was issued to each of the different departments of government, executive, agriculture, interior, justice, post office, state, navy, treasury, and war. With the exception of one stamp belonging to this group, Mr. Wieneke's collection is complete.

From Gambia to Cape of Good Hope

Stamps entered in the volumes have been gathered from practically every country in the world, even from such little-known places as Gambia, an island in the East Indies. Some Cape of Good Hope triangular stamps, which are rare, have their place in the collection.

Another exhibit is a sheet of twelve stamps issued in 1914 showing a mistake made in printing. Without being detected until after the sheets of stamps had been circulated, one five-cent plate became mixed with a group of twos. The color is the usual red, making the error almost unnoticeable. The issue was called in by the government, and today the sheets containing the mistake are worth $25. Mr. Wieneke went over 20,000 sheets of stamps to find his specimen.

The stamps are arranged in the volumes by the initial letter of the country represented. Volume one contains the issues up to 1900 for countries having initials from A to M, and volume two, for countries having initials M to Z. Volume three has places for all stamps issued from 1900 to 1909. There is a fourth volume for bringing collections up to date, but Mr. Wieneke's stamps are placed on loose sheets. Later he intends to have them bound.

In 1897 a news story appeared in the columns of the Chicago Chronicle telling of Mr. Wieneke's stamps. At that time he had about one-third of his present collection. The clipping from the Chicago newspaper is among his exhibits.

One Per Cent of Students Receive Discipline--Jessup

Charges of Misconduct Involved Fifty, Say Reports

(Editor's note: The following article is the first of a series by the Associated Press on conditions at the University of Iowa, dealing with the agencies exercising control over the student body.)

(By The Associated Press)

Less than one per cent of the 8,678 who attended the University of Iowa last year were involved in disciplinary trouble of any nature, announced President Walter A. Jessup.

This small percentage represents less than fifty students and is taken from records kept by Robert E. Rienow, dean of men, and Adelaide L. Burge, dean of women.

Of the fifty students involved in misconduct charges, a third were girls.

Among cases coming to the attention of the Iowa City police, the percentage of students involved compared with the total number of cases, is even less than one per cent, official records show.

These figures furnish but one of the answers of the university to criticism directed against moral conditions in the university city. It furnishes the proof, the deans say, that the University of Iowa is doing its full share toward the youth of the state intrusted to its care.

Thirty-three Men Involved

Thirty-three men students were involved in the fifty cases decided by the senate board on discipline, the university court in which all cases of students are heard. Eleven were suspended outright; seventeen were suspended with sentence held in abeyance. Five were found not guilty. The cases heard embrace issuance of bad checks, drinking, stealing, and infractions of the social regulations of the university.

In the list of sixteen women hailed before the senate board, five were sent home and eleven were officially reprimanded.

The disciplinary system among students of the University of Iowa is the best in the country, President Jessup declared. The university, he said, aims to give its young men and women plenty to do to keep them out of trouble. It takes the full responsibility of rigidly enforcing the standards of discipline and thoroughly investigates every case coming to its attention.

Extensive Student Supervision

"We have the most extensive system of student supervision in the United States," President Jessup said. "There is maintained here a large staff which undertakes the task of looking after our students. At the head of this are the deans of men and women.

"The university on the positive side is organized to assist students in maintaining a high order of self control. Rigid discipline is in force. All social activities are chaperoned by the most worthy persons we can find for this work. All disciplinary enforcement is carried on through a student board on social activity, a social committee of the faculty, and the senate board on discipline.

As soon as a student registers at the university his history and church affiliation are noted on a card kept in the offices of the deans of men and women. Here, the church comes to the assistance of the university, and pastors are busy in the next few weeks seeking out the students of the several church denominations.

Factors In Moral Standards

Other factors which President Jessup claims are aids in maintaining the high moral standards of the University of Iowa, based on facts gleaned from university records, are these:

One-fifth of the total enrollment is of students already graduated from college before coming to the university.

One-third of the total enrollment of 8,676 students, last year, was of persons more than 25 years old.

Among the students are married persons, some with families.

The university is fully equipped to take care of its students, morally, socially and educationally, President Jessup declared. On this point he said.

"We aim to solve our problems with students without parental aid. If we cannot handle the situation,
