Ames Man Charges Inquisition in Sigma Chi Liquor Scandal

Says Bottle of Alcohol Was Intended for Face Lotion

AMES, Nov. 14 (AP)—The charge that he had been questioned by the head of the Iowa State college disciplinary committee for nine hours without being permitted to go out to dinner, in connection with the disappearance of a quantity of alcohol from the college's chemistry department was made today by Charles A. Funk of Ottumwa, testifying in his own behalf at his preliminary hearing on a charge of maintaining a liquor nuisance at the Sigma Chi fraternity house.

The fraternity house was raided while Funk was detained, and a quantity of alcohol was found in the rooms of Funk and several others, resulting in filing of nuisance charges against him and five other students.

Nine-Hour Grilling
Funk related from the stand that he had been called from class and taken to the office of Prof. G. B. McDonald, chairman of the governing committee, where he was subjected from 2 to 11 p. m. to accusations that he had taken alcohol from the chemistry building, where he was employed. He was told by McDonald that keys to various alcohol storerooms had been found in his locker, but denied knowledge of the keys and offered alibi to prove that he had not taken any alcohol on the date alleged, he said.

Funk admitted under questioning that he had taken a pint of alcohol from a container marked "denatured alcohol" near the end of September, and said he made the same admission to McDonald a week ago.

Laboratory Bottle Found
He intended to use the alcohol as a face lotion, he testified. It was this bottle of liquid that was found in his room during the raid he added.

Funk will resume the stand tomorrow to be cross examined by County Attorney Smith.

Preceding Funk on the stand, Prof. W. F. Coover, head of the chemistry department, testified that pure alcohol sometimes is kept in the container from which it is alleged Funk took the denatured alcohol. He was unable to say which kind of fluid was in the container when the stock was pilfered.

Bootleg King Goes on Trial for Life
CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 14 (AP)—George Remus, "bootleg king" who deserted a promising legal career in Chicago to amass millions by violating the national prohibition law, today helped choose a jury to determine whether he shall die in the electric chair.

Five weeks ago Remus traced down his estranged second wife, Imogene Holmes Remus, pressed a pistol to her body, and fired a bullet which caused her death two hours later.

At adjournment of court today the jury box was half filled with tentatively accepted jurors. Six of fifteen veniremen examined, two women and four men, were locked up overnight. They could be removed only by use of peremptory challenges of which the prosecution had four and the defense sixteen.

Corn Belt Committee Renews Contest for McNary-Haugen Bill
DES MOINES, Nov. 15 (AP)—Two plans of action were proposed today by the Corn Belt committee, in session here, for renewal of the congressional fight for passage of the McNary-Haugen farm relief measure. The first proposes to raise a fund among farm organizations by assessment on membership, to finance congressional activities, and the second is to carry the fight into districts where the bill's support is in doubt.

An assessment of two cents per member in large farm organizations and a lump sum for smaller organizations is proposed.

Girl Walks Home Alone After Dark First Time--Slain
PORTAGE, Wis., Nov. 14 (AP)—Walking home after dark alone for the first time in her life last night, 15-year-old Helen Leng was ravished and slain and her mutilated body left in an obscure spot where it was found today. A search for the slayer was being conducted today, with few clues to guide investigators.

The girl apparently walked to her death from the home of her chum June Moran, whom she had good-bye at the Moran home after they attended a moving picture show. That was 6 o'clock and no trace of her was found until William McLaughlin, one of the searchers, struck across lots toward the Leng home and came upon the body this morning.

It was lying on a grassy knoll about fifteen rods from the street. Evidence of a struggle with her attacker was found near the street and marks on the ground showed that her body had been dragged from there to the knoll. Her clothes were torn, her face scratched and covered with blood. Buck shot from a small gauge shotgun had pierced the back of the head.

Four physicians who conducted the autopsy said she had been criminally assaulted. The mother of the girl was prostrated with grief.

Two high school boys, one of whom is said to have claimed he knew who committed the crime, were questioned by police tonight. Tom Chamberlain was held and questioned throughout the day, and was to be brought back for further examination tonight.

Taft to Conclude Lectures Today
The descent of art and sculpture from the time of Michelangelo to that of the present day will be discussed and illustrated by Lorado Taft in his final lecture today. The address will be given in the lounge of Iowa Union at 4:10 o'clock.

The work of Cellini, Bologna, and of Bernini will be explained by the sculptor. "Today Italy is producing some very remarkable monumental works which raise impressively from a sea of meaningless productions," the lecturer explains. "It is our privilege to learn to distinguish the good from the bad, the significant from the insignificant."

This lecture will conclude the course of six addresses by Lorado Taft which have been arranged by the history of art department.

Coolidge Presents Hubbard Medal to Lindbergh, Gives Introduction
WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP)—The accomplishment of Charles A. Lindbergh in making the first non-stop flight from New York to Paris brought him to a new pinnacle of honor tonight when President Coolidge, in presenting him with the Hubbard medal of the National Geographic society, eulogized him as a "modest young man of high and unselfish purpose."

Lindbergh not only was honored with this high award, but had the distinction—believed to be an unprecedented one—of being introduced to his audience by the president of the United States.

Extolling the aviator
Taking the rostrum after the president had concluded his presentation address, the youthful hero once more extolled the possibilities of aviation on the same platform in the Washington auditorium where in May he was the guest of the National Press club after his memorable return from Europe and was presented with more than a score of medals, trophies, and other gifts in tribute to his historic flight.

Prosecutions Secretive
The secrecy which the prosecutors threw about the new witness convinced observers that his testimony is regarded as of high importance in corroborating if not extending that already given by McMullin against Burns, his son, W. Sherman Burns, and the Burns operatives.

Opening the third week of its inquiry, the grand jury was in session only a brief time today and heard only two witnesses. William J. Burns and his sons, W. Sherman, and W. Raymond, appeared at the court house and finally obtained permission to go before the grand jury tomorrow under certain stipulations as to their testimony.

Burns Changes Front
The attitude of William J. Burns today was in sharp contrast with that of a week ago when he first appeared here to testify before the grand jury. Then he talked freely with the newspaper men and set up a back fire against the government with a charge that federal employes had made contact with one of the jurors.

Today Burns' manner was subdued and he talked very little with the correspondents. Before he left the court house he instructed all of his men to meet him outside. He called especially for Charles G. Ruddy, of Philadelphia, who was in charge of the jury shadowing operation. There was a corresponding change in the attitude of the operatives themselves.

New Witness in Oil Jury Scandal
U. S. Guards Identity of Stranger; Burns Talks Less
WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP)—Another man of mystery appeared today in the picture of the oil conspiracy jury scandal.

He was introduced by William J. McMullin, government informer against William J. Burns and his detectives who shadowed the Falk-Sinclair trial jury. His identity as well as his connection with the case was carefully guarded by the federal attorneys.

The stranger came here from Philadelphia with McMullin in the latter's automobile, was crossexamined by the jury, and then left the District of Columbia supreme court with a government agent and under strict injunctions not to talk. He probably will go before the grand jury tomorrow.

Dean Williams, Schneller Decry Monument Fire
Two protests were registered yesterday against the burning of the corn monument, which occurred early Sunday morning.

"After the winning of a Homecoming game and had been in the nature of a formal proceeding, in which all the students and Homecomingers might take part, he would be in entire sympathy with it."

"I see little or no justification for the action of a few students, after a game not played in Iowa City and at a time when a very small group of them could participate. Homecoming tradition and such an action can not be judged by the same standards."

"Pi Epsilon Pi, national pep fraternity, had nothing to do with the burning of the corn monument. Many of the members were at Madison at the time, but even had they been here, the fraternity would not back such an enterprise. All accusations against the organization are false," says Frederic A. Schneller, J. C. Mason City, president of the fraternity.

Jessup Addresses Educators' Clinic

CHICAGO, Nov. 14 (AP)—An educational clinic assembled here today to dissect the student bodies of the National association of state universities.

The first declaration that a malady exists came from the president of the association, Walter A. Jessup, president of the University of Iowa. In the opening address of the convention he asserted that state universities, while providing education along mass production lines, must devote themselves more and more to providing for the individual needs of their charges.

Mr. Jessup referred briefly to the development of higher education in the United States as a mitigating circumstance of a system that produces degree holders like factories turn out commodities.

Hoover Advocates Inland Waterway
St. LOUIS, Nov. 14 (AP)—A modern inland waterway system that would solve the transportation problem and give aid to farmers by reducing grain shipment costs was visualized here tonight by Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, in an address before the Mississippi Valley association's ninth annual convention.

"I believe that the statement that by the modernization of the Mississippi and Great Lakes systems of waterways we shall decrease freight on grain to world markets by ten cents a bushel is not far wrong," declared Secretary Hoover.

"And by so doing, we should increase the price of all grain to the farmer by ten cents a bushel and this ten cents is the profit end of the price," he continued.

"One single year of such increase to midwest farmers," he asserted, "would more than equal the entire capital outlay which we propose."

"I believe," he said, "the whole of the United States is unanimous in that we must undertake such engineering works as will give security."

Reformers Battle to Stop Fight Films--Lose on Judge's Decision
SIoux CITY, Nov. 14 (AP)—Charges of illegally exhibiting a prize fight film, filed against officials of the Elks lodge and Monahan post of the American Legion here by the W. C. T. U., were dismissed today by Justice of Peace Charles Lockie.

Justice Lockie held that four women appearing as witnesses, had failed to prove that the films were those of the Dempsey-Tunney fight as charged; that the bout was a prize fight; that the defendants were responsible for bringing the pictures to Sioux City; that the defendants were officers of the Elks lodge and Monahan post, or that as such officers they had anything to do with showing the films.

One of the witnesses testified she knew the films depicted a prize fight because the principals were boxing gloves like those belonging to her little son. Defense attorneys

Wife Slayers Get Life Imprisonment After Guilty Plea

Sentence Comes Just Week After Death Plot's Climax

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 14 (AP)—Wisconsin's court machinery moved with customary celerity today to send Alvin Greenwald, 35-year-old liquor runner and Arthur Betzold, 24 years old, former convict, to prison for life for the slaying of Greenwald's wife whom they took on a death ride.

Less than twenty-four hours after the denouncement that came Sunday afternoon with their confessions, the two men faced Circuit Judge A. M. Davison who made a special session of court in Waukesha and sentenced them to life imprisonment at Waupun on their pleas of guilty.

Maximum Penalty
They were charged with first degree murder and the court gave them the maximum penalty, drawing no distinction between Greenwald, the plotter and accessory, and Betzold, the "hard boiled" youth whose hands strangled the woman last Monday night.

Sentencing of the men in the courtroom at Waukesha this afternoon was accompanied by applause and cheers and brought censure from Judge Davison. The men were represented by attorneys who entered pleas of guilty for them, quoted the men as saying they had had a square deal and that there was no defense. The men made no statement.

Sheriff Alvin Redford expected to deliver Betzold to the prison tonight and take Greenwald there tomorrow after he puts his business affairs in order.

Killed for Insurance
Their sentence was just a week from the day on which Greenwald and Betzold carried out their plot in the slaying that was to bring the murderer $500 from Greenwald, who hoped to collect $25,000 through insurance on the life of his 35-year-old wife. The three went for a ride ostensibly to Madison and Betzold throttled the woman as they sped along the road near Dousman and then threw her body out on the highway.

It was found next morning, a few hours after Greenwald had appeared bearing wounds on his head and with a sensational story of how he and his wife were held up and she kidnapped after he was knocked unconscious. For five days Greenwald stuck to his story and then admitted it was fictitious.

Professor Pollock Reads at Meeting
"Capitalism and Religion" was the subject of a paper read by I. L. Pollock, associate professor in the political science department, at a meeting of the political science club last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Wassam.

In his paper Mr. Pollock considered the fact presented by R. H. Towney, English economist, that "only a system of values with a religious sanction can moralize society."

Property Loss of Pittsburgh Blast Passes a Million

Disorder at Morgue Brings Call for Police Reserves

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 14 (AP)—The amount dead in the disastrous explosion of a huge gas tank on the north side of Pittsburgh stood at twenty-one tonight, although there were reports that additional bodies had been seen in the debris by rescue workers.

One report had it that seven bodies had been seen in the wreckage of the collapsed building of the Pittsburgh Clay Pot Co., but officials declined to increase the official death list until the bodies had been recovered.

Police Reserves Called
PITTSBURGH, Nov. 14 (AP)—Police reserves were called out late today to control the milling mobs in front of the Allegheny county morgue in downtown Pittsburgh, where the bodies of twenty-one victims of the north side gas explosion rested.

Thousands of persons, many merely curious, fought to get into the death house. When Coroner W. J. McGregor's appeal to the mob to be fair and permit those seeking missing relatives and friends to enter, went unheeded, the police were summoned.

Finally the crowd was informed that none of the bodies would be placed in the chapel cases, and a majority of the crowd turned away. Some, however, their faces marked with lines of anxiety, stood first, and these were admitted. They were taken to the embalming rooms in groups.

Entire Section in Ruins
—An entire section of north side Pittsburgh lay in ruins tonight and the bodies of twenty-one persons rested in the Allegheny county morgue, mute evidence of one of the most disastrous explosions in the city's history. Debris and devastation swept the old Manchester district when a mammoth storage gas tank exploded.

Tonight, as hundreds of victims of the disaster nursed their injuries in hospitals and in other havens of refuge supplied by relief agencies, firemen, policemen, and volunteers continued the work of exploring the wrecked district in the belief that other bodies would be found in the mass of twisted debris.

Rescuers Use Dynamite
As nightfall descended, rescue workers erected emergency lights. Many of the debris-choked streets and tumbled down buildings resisted the efforts of the firemen, and they resorted to dynamite in an effort to remove masses of wreckage. Police redoubled their vigilance to prevent looting.

The quiet of a November morning was shattered throughout the Pittsburgh district by the terrific blast. For a moment the city held its breath as buildings rocked and windows crashed. At first it seemed that an earthquake had gripped the city. Telephone lines were broken and the fire alarm system was crippled.

General Alarm
Then a glass alarm box in the downtown district on the Allegheny river front sounded, to be followed a minute later by a general alarm. With the first shock, firemen started the motors of their apparatus, and, as the gong sounded, they rushed to the area. Automobiles, trucks, taxicabs, ambulances, and all available motor cars soon sped through the downtown district, bearing the injured to hospitals.

When firemen reached the scene they were halted by the appalling sight. Streets had been heaved into the air, breaking water mains and sewers, and flooding the entire district. Homes, factories, warehouses, and industrial plants lay in ruins. Men, women, and children, many with blood streaming from face cuts and other injuries, ran screaming through the streets as if mad.

Repairing Tank
The cause of the disaster was soon apparent, for, in the midst of the ruins lay a twisted mass of steel, some of the supports of the giant gas tank, said to be the largest natural gas reservoir in the world.

Thirteen men went to work repairing the tank at 8 a. m. Forty-three minutes later, as the workers handled their blow torches on the steel frame, the shock came. Eye-witnesses said that the tank, with a capacity of some five million cubic feet, shot into the air like a balloon. A ball of fire traveled higher than the tip of Mount Washington, across the Ohio river to the scene. Sections of the steel framework went up hundreds of feet, to crash in the descent through the roofs of houses and buildings and in the streets.

Hospitals Filled
Within a brief period, all north side hospitals were jammed to capacity. Nearly every doctor in the city, as well as nurses, responded to the call for help. Some of the injured were treated on hospital steps

Edwards Charges Dry Agents With Wholesale Killing Says Enforcers Shoot Victims in Back in Cold Blood

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (AP)—Senator Edward L. Edwards of New Jersey in an article published today in the December issue of the magazine "Plain Talk," estimated that the toll of lives taken by prohibition agents "must run into four figures."

Senator Edwards said that no nation-wide research has been made to establish the accuracy of his estimate, adding "as long as prohibition lasts statistics will never catch up with the number of persons killed by prohibition officers, federal state and municipal."

"The federal men to date," he said, "have slain about 200, and I have read the 'dispositions' from the treasury department by 152 killings by federal agents, with some eighty-four other cases where deaths have occurred at the hands of local officers."

Answering the question, "How do men die when prohibition agents shoot?" He wrote, "they die, many of them, in cold blood, shot in the back."

"The reports of the treasury department do not, it is true, ever say that a victim was shot in the back, for it would not look good. But investigate the court records and see what you find."

The cause of the large number of killings, in the enforcement of prohibition he declared "lies in the character of the men who enforce it: grafters and busybodies."

Drys Dispute Senator's Claim

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14 (AP)—Prohibition officials here tonight disputed the statement made by Senator Edwards of New Jersey, in a magazine article, that the number of persons killed by dry enforcement officers "must run into four figures."

In the absence of Assistant Secretary Lowman of the treasury and prohibition commissioner Doran, James E. Jones, deputy commissioner, said no accurate figures were available as to those killed by all kinds of enforcement agents, but he was certain that the number killed by federal officers "is nothing like a fifth of a thousand; it is more likely around a hundred."

for the corridors and every available inch of space within was occupied.

Panic stricken men and women forgot their hurts in their efforts to locate relatives and several hours after the blast occurred, mothers and fathers, their faces cut by flying glass, were wandering through the wreckage, seeking children and other loved ones.

Find Victims
Near the ill-fated gas tank the first victims were found—nine men—their bodies burned and mangled. These were rushed to the morgue. Later the body of a woman was picked up from a sidewalk. The rescuers found almost insupportable conditions in their path. They carried the injured through water waist deep. Tottering walls menaced them. Dangling electric wires sputtered on all sides, yet the firemen, the policemen and private citizens engaged in the work of rescue, forgot their own danger in their feverish effort to rescue others.

When it became evident that the capacity of every hospital in the city was taxed, the Red Cross and the Salvation Army established first aid stations on the outside rim of the devastated area. Here scores of persons were given medical attention. Many doctors braved the perils of the region, and carrying emergency kits, they entered the danger zone to seek out and help victims of the disaster.

Treat 438 Injured
A check-up of hospitals tonight showed that 438 injured persons were given treatment. Some were so badly hurt that doctors feared they would not survive. Among the injured were many school children, who were just about to enter class rooms as the tank, 233 feet in diameter and 200 feet high, let go. The pupils were showered with flying glass. The panic stricken children added to the general confusion. They ran through the streets and were endangered by falling walls until rescuers finally rounded them up, sent the injured to hospitals and the others to residences outside the stricken region.

Declares Banquet Caused Historians to Favor England

CHICAGO, Nov. 14 (AP)—That institution of persuasion and good will—the banquet—was employed by the British government to influence 100 American history professors to deal generously with the island empire in depicting Anglo-American relations, the William McAndrew school trial recorded today.

And in making that event a part of the prosecution of McAndrew, superintendent of schools, who is charged with insubordination, the minutes of the British parliament were quoted.

Charles Grant Miller, president of the patriotic league for the preservation of American history was the only witness.

He substantiated the claim of John J. Gorman, former congressman, that English propaganda had entered the Chicago schoolrooms through the history courses.

The London gastronomic subsidy was used in 1921 at the Savoy hotel, and among those dined were Prof. Andrew C. McLaughlin, head of the American history department, University of Chicago; Prof. Carleton Hayes, of Columbia University; Prof. David S. Muzzey, of Barnard college, and Prof. Willis M. West, of the University of Minnesota, Miller said.

Between 1918 and 1920, when many histories were rewritten to include the World war, some authors made extensive alterations in chapters dealing with relations of the United States and Great Britain, Miller asserted.

One hundred history authors "were vined and dined at the expense of the British government, in such a degree of gratitude as to provoke comment in parliament at the extravagance," Miller added.

Arrest Janitor in Probe Death Blaze

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 14 (AP)—Working on the theory that the Garystone apartment hotel fire here early Sunday morning was of incendiary origin, police tonight arrested Clarence Mead, former negro janitor at the hotel, on a vagrancy charge and held him under high bond. The fire resulted in the death of eight persons and the injury of thirteen others.

Mead was discharged several weeks ago and because of complaints of occupants of apartments that he refused to keep sufficient fire in the furnaces for heating purposes, the police said. He is charged with having told several residents of the building that he would get even with them by "burning you out one of these days."

'Bus Queen' Wins Appeal in Suit Against Railway

CHARLES CITY, Nov. 14 (AP)—Reversal of the state railroad commission's granting of a certificate of convenience and necessity for the operation of a bus line between Waterloo and Mason City by the Waterloo, Cedar Falls and Northern railway company of Waterloo, is contained in a district court decision of Judge C. H. Kelley, filed today at Mason City.

The case came before the district court on appeal of Mrs. Helen Schultz Brewer, Iowa "Bus Queen," and owner of the Red Ball Transportation company of Mason City, who lost her protest before the Iowa rail board.

Decision of Judge Kelley is regarded as of vast importance to bus line transportation interests in Iowa.

Within a very brief time after the city learned of the extent of the disaster, relief agencies and others were at work, seeking to help the injured and the homeless. Escape From Boredom

HUNDREDS of Iowa students attended the Wisconsin game. As many or more will witness the Northwestern game.

Why? It is fair to say that very few students attend out-of-town games merely because of an insatiable craving to see the team in action. A thorough check would undoubtedly show that although most students make the trips ostensibly for the purpose of seeing the game, they are actuated at heart by a deeper, more personal motive.

There are, of course, the inevitable few who make the trips simply to acquire new experiences with which to monopolize conversation when they return. Then there is the weak-backed element who go because they think it is the fashionable thing to do. Add to these the more designing group who leave town because an exam was assigned for Saturday morning.

All these elements are in a minority, however. The great majority of students attend out-of-town games for the same reason that they evidence such an insane desire to have a full day set aside in which to celebrate Armistice day. It is a legitimate excuse to break away from the monotonous routine of class work.

There are a few classes in the university which are conducted in such an interesting manner that the students begrudge the loss of a single class period. When all instructors acquire the happy faculty of making their subjects live, students will be content to watch out-of-town games on the grid-graph and there will be fewer demands for holidays.

A Plea for Loneliness

Loneliness is the first requisite for greatness, and when we say loneliness we mean that pride which leads a man to discard soul crutches and body crutches and walk alone.

The art of loneliness is—thanks to the organizers—an almost forgotten art. We take pride now in a something called co-operation, which, in terms of minepines means an orderly arrangement whereby all minepines may topple over on each other at an identical moment.

Fortunately there are a few men to whom loneliness is a heritage. They live and die unorganized, unstandardized, and in the eyes of the world uncivilized. Nietzsche dared to say, "My wisdom became pregnant on lonely mountains; upon rugged stones she bore her young."

The most majestic figures of history and literature are essentially lonely. What more lonely figure in the world than Jesus in the Garden of Gethsemane? "Couldst thou not watch one hour," The words were lost among the olive trees. The disciples slept on and the Man of Nazareth, knowing full well that not one of his disciples could fathom the unutterable loneliness of his heart, wondered back into the shadows of the garden.

Man is by nature a gregarious animal and a conformative one. Neither swords nor blasting words can awaken in us the fear inspired by loneliness. We doubt one who walks alone as Beethoven walked. We fear with Caesar that "He thinks too much; such men are dangerous." Every little hour of our little lives is spent in intruding upon the loneliness of some finer soul. Much as we pretend that organization is the perfect state and "team work" the finest watch word of a nation our self-conscious mediocrity cringes less before the multitude than before the silent aloofness of one who, unconscious of his silence or aloofness, forgets the world of men, and ponds on the mysteries of the stars.

Such a one should shun organizations as he shuns the devil. Dreams cannot be organized. The tragedy of Woodrow Wilson was the tragedy of a lonely man—a dreamer of dreams, caught in the whirl pool of politics, defeated by the petty jealousies of those who feared his loneliness, his independence, and the quiet assurance with which he ruled a supposed democracy. What wonder when at last he advanced his long meditated plan for the preservation of peace that his country men betrayed him! The first and greatest commandment of the political world to its executive is, "Thou shalt neither think nor voice any new thought that might disturb the peaceful slumbers of the senate, and the house of representatives. Thou shalt be—not necessarily a man, but a model of conformity."

Loneliness has in all ages been not only a fearful thing but a quality to be admired. What a mistake the history books make when they show us Napoleon standing moodily on the rocky coast of St. Helena, his eyes brooding on the sea. His loneliness lends him a majesty—an almost godlike quality—the throne of France and a thousand fawning courtiers could not have lent him.

These silent, lonely men—some are lonely in a multitude, others live their lives in solitudes as Fiona Macleod lived his on the island of Iona in the Irish sea. But those whose heritage is less,—perhaps only a yearning for loneliness, cry out against the conformity of life and the eternal intrusion of men. Wordsworth voiced his protest when he said, "The world is too much with us."

But whether ours is the heritage of that aloofness, or merely the desire for it, or a vague sympathy for him who craves it, we look with silent wonder and adoration at the great loneliness which is either Genius, or God, or both. No man knoweth.

Political Dope

WHILE doping politics is as risky as doping Big Ten grid games, a few points relative to Al Smith versus the republicans might be borne in mind. It takes just 266 electoral votes to make a president. And there are writers who aver that Smith—whose nomination seems cinched because McAdoo is gone and big democrats are few and far between—could carry the crescent of states from Virginia to Texas, probably including New Mexico and Arizona. Add Nevada and Montana and Arkansas, all democratic territory, and Smith could count on 135 votes.

But that is not all. Smith has New York and New Jersey cinched, which would raise his total to 194. Oklahoma and Missouri are possibilities—while heaven alone knows what the Dakotas will do next. But barring the Dakotas, and granting the former, Smith would be within ten votes of the white house. And he can still play for New England, Delaware, and Wisconsin, which is wet and plain peeved at the republican party.

Then again, the republicans are nearer the splitting-up point than they have been for many a year. Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, and Wisconsin republicans want farm relief. In other words, they want Lowden. The northeast wants Hughes. Some want Daves. But the question is, can Daves, Hughes, or Lowden—admittedly in the favorite son class—outstrip Smith? Probably not.

And that is the reason that Senator Fess and company, though officially gagged, choose to believe that Coolidge can and will be drafted. Or rather, must. And that is the reason that Senator Fess and company are still contributing his bit to the garrulous factions.

Like most of the political platforms, nobody knows what the new football rules are about.—Milwaukee Journal.

With Other Editors

Freshman Football

(From The Indiana Student)

LARGELY because varsity sports far outclass them, freshman athletic activities at large universities have been relegated to a place of minor importance, and in the case of Big Ten schools the yearling squads are sent against the upperclassmen frequently, using plays of the opponents of the varsity the next Saturday.

One notable exception to the customary procedure is the plan used by grid mentors at Ohio State, where freshmen teams compete between themselves instead of taking the daily pouncing at the hands of their varsity backs and line. Only once in about two weeks does a yearling eleven enter the Coliseum.

The Buckeye plan has its merits. With less time to be devoted to practice, freshmen have more time to become used to the surroundings, to say nothing of getting started right in their academic work. The year ends at Ohio State with freshmen having a good working knowledge of football, if not a great deal of experience, and the percentage of eligibles for the next fall is much greater than under the system used in most places.

There is evidence each fall that some of the freshman football men come to school with the primary purpose of playing, hoping that the university will take care of their academic standing. And it usually takes them at least a month to get any different notion in their heads, by which time their failure in class is imminent and only heroic efforts of interested faculty members keep them in school.

Some method should be devised to raise the scholastic standing of the freshman football players, either by giving them less hard practices or dropping them from the squad whenever their scholastic work is not satisfactory.

Chills and Fever

Where Collegiate Slang Originates

One misty, moody morning, When cloudy was the weather, I met an old man Dressed all in leather— He began to curtsy, And I began to bow; How d'ya do, And how d'ya do, And how d'ya do, —AND HOW!"

WELL, WELL!

There was apathy in last week's air—apathy that approached asininity. Chills had it; everybody had it; for faith in the tin gods of the campus was selling below par. Nobody said very much about beating Wisconsin; talk was cheap and they'd bought an over-supply earlier in the season; some folks thought the Madison trip would make a pleasant week-end; more went home. On the whole, nobody seemed to care whether we played Wisconsin or not—even when Mr. Dorcas issued a veiled invitation to cut Saturday's classes.

The best part of the game was, of course, when Iowa had Wisconsin 9 to 0, and the Badgers became offensive. In fact, they were using Iowa's ten-yard line for a parading ground. The miraculous happened; Grimm grabbed a Wisconsin pass, wiggled loose from whatever there was to wiggle from, and—zip!—he had a one-man marathon in eleven flat.

Well, they say the game was won on breaks. Maybe yes, maybe no. Outside of the walloping the Hawks have received from Minnesota the last two years, it appears as though every Big Ten game we've played has been lost on breaks.

What we need is "Bigger and Better Apathy." We don't need a fighting spirit. We can win games without it. Let's all forget there's going to be a game this Saturday, and let the team do it!!!

If Adam had lived until the present, according to Biblical estimates, he would have been 5,931 years old. The question rises: "to what would he have attributed his longevity?" Certainly, not the fact that he ate an apple a day?"

End Words

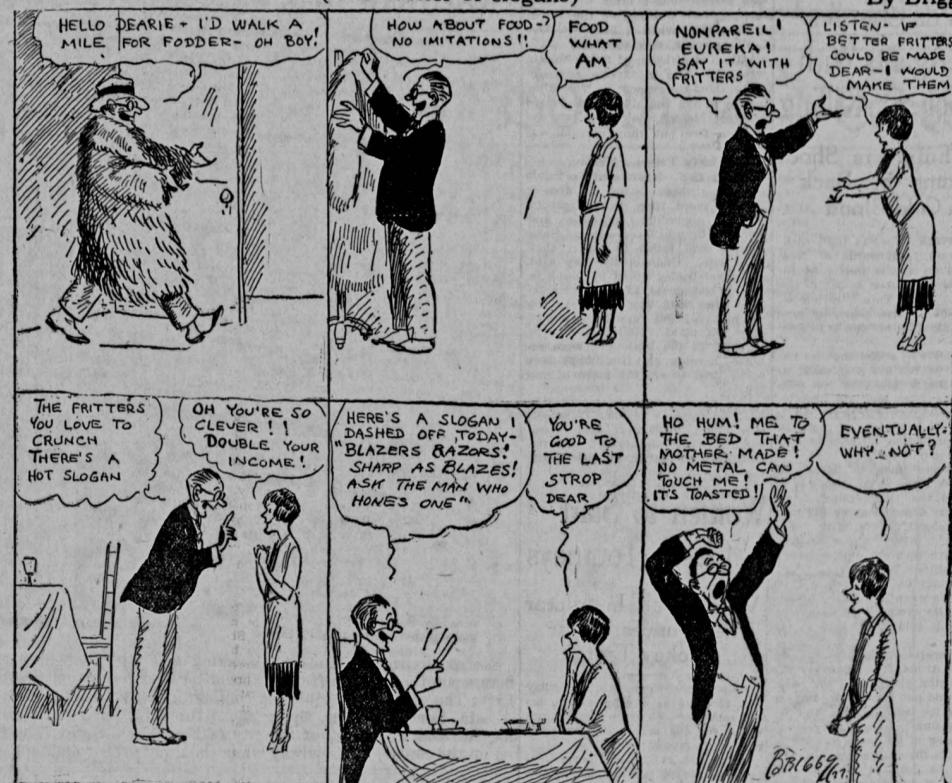

Anyhow, everybody seemed to get back from Madison okay. It might have been decent, however, to burn the corn monument when there were more than half a dozen in town to do the fool thing honor. And it's rumored that the Engineers will never, never, build another one as long as they live—which is a good reason for moving them down to Ames.

On the other hand—you have the medics. And what they do with corn is an entirely different thing. So maybe the rest of the varsity had better make up with the engineers. Ain't there something we could let the engineers burn? —F.L.G.

Minnesota Paper Says Iowa College Purchases Building
ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 12 (AP)—The St. Paul Pioneer Press Sunday will say it learns from "an authoritative source" that Cornell college of Mount Vernon, acting through its holding company, the Emmert Foundation, has purchased the Builders Exchanges, a nine-story modern structure in the downtown section of St. Paul.

The land includes 62,000 acres, all within thirty miles of Winnipeg, Man., which was given to the college by H. L. Emmert, who went into Canada from Sibley, about thirty years ago. Title to the land is said to pass to the Hackney Investment company, headed by J. M. Hackney, of St. Paul, and the Federal Bond and Mortgage company.

Iowa City Policemen Have Many Duties Besides Enforcing Laws

By GORDON GAUSS
Not all of a policeman's life is spent chasing bootleggers, tagging the cars of careless motorists, and thwarting burglars, as the members of the Iowa City police force are well aware. Far more often the officers are called upon for information, or to lend assistance of doubtful value. During the summer months they are called upon to find lost children, cure sick dogs, or chase chickens out of some enterprising gardener's lettuce patch.

During the fall months irate citizens phone the station to demand that their neighbor's bonfire be extinguished, as it is blowing soot all over their washing out on the line. Again, a "pernickety" property owner demands that his next door neighbor be compelled to remove the tin cans from his yard.

Duties Are Innumerable
Every few days, a hysterical voice over the phone announces that some small boy has knocked a window light out of his barn with their baseball, and demands that police officers arrest them and see that justice is administered. Nine times out of ten, the owner has no idea of the identity of the culprit, nor where they are at the time.

In the fall, the football takes the place of the baseball as a bone of contention. Usually however, the boys have trampled down a pet bar-bary bush while intent on retrieving the pigskin which has landed in the yard.

Elderly persons often complain of the younger generation endangering life by riding bicycles on the sidewalk. One of the cases which still gives Chief of Police C. F. Benda a laugh, happened after a mongrel dog had made the mistake of running in front of an automobile. One of the officers said that the remains of the beast had proper burial. Two days later a woman called over the telephone and demanded that the body be "exhumed," so that she might determine the color of the animal.

Want a "Cleanup" Squad
Another unflattering source of complaint to the police comes whenever the garbage man fails to arrive as per schedule in the summer. Patrons then expect to have the police come for the refuse.

In the fall and winter, police are often requested by property owners to haul away piles of leaves and ashes. Several complaints have come to the station that dogs have run over newly graded lawns, and urgent requests are made that the officers "do something" to stop the outrage.

Shortly after Homecoming a letter came to the department bearing police for their poor treatment of guests in town. The "poor treatment" mentioned turned out to be "a local car parked in front of the Burklely hotel for twenty-four hours, was taken to the police station by the officers."

Another favorite aversion of the "desk officers" is to answer the telephone and have the meek voice of some unsuspecting freshman say apologetically, "Excuse me, I thought I had Whetstone's on the wire."

Whenever a clock runs down, the police station is the place called to find out the correct time.

Should Supervise Play
Often some person interested in the public safety, calls the station to tell the police that children are playing in the streets, on such and such a corner, and that the practice ought to be stopped. The officer, if a motorist is unable to start his car, he invariably calls the police for help before he thinks to call a garage man. Many inexperienced drivers call the police station to get an officer to help them back out of a parking space.

Another duty of the policeman, in the eyes of many worthy citizens, is to bury all dead cats. After the spirit of the family feline has departed for the great beyond, officers are called to dispose of the remains. Recently a middle-aged negro entered the station in a distressed frame of mind. He had, he explained, paid $2 down to bind the bargain on a second hand overcoat, and returned several days later to find that the coat had been sold to another man. The man offered to pay the $2 back, but the negro refused. He came to the police station to get an officer to go back with him to collect "damages." He was uncertain on what grounds he wanted them, or to what amount, but felt sure he had something coming.

He did, the chief told him, and that was his $2.

Many Use Jail as Hotel
Voluntary jailers at the station are always a problem. During the cold nights many persons request that they be allowed to use a cell as a bed. Some even request that they be called at a certain hour in the morning.

Persons ejected from restaurants usually come to the station and express their indignation to the officers in no uncertain terms. A frequent complaint from persons living in the outlying districts of town is that a couple is "spooning" in a car "across the street" and ought to be arrested.

In the wee hours of the morning women often call up to find out what has become of their husbands. Several have expressed relief to find out their mates are reposing comfortably in a cell.

The Book World

By Edith M. Cobeen

Rebellion, by Mateel Howe Farnham. 310 pp. New York: Dodd, Mead and Co.

Youthful rebellion against parental authority has sat in on another deal and won in a game where freedom to do as it pleased was stakes, where freedom meant the marriage of the heroine, Jacqueline Burrell, to a young carpenter, Kent Allen, who needed only money to become an architect.

There is plenty of plot, but knowing the modern-generation novel, we suspect as soon as we learn that Burrell is a self-centered, leech-like father, and that Jacqueline is an intelligent, deserving daughter apprentice in architecture, the influence of her dead, mouse-like mother, that she is going to get her carpenter in architect form.

Mrs. Farnham draws probability into drastic contentions to bring the wedding about. Mr. Burrell won't hear of a Burrell marrying a carpenter. He puts both feet down and thunders. Allen can't become an architect without studying in Paris (why Paris, rather than New York or London or Rome isn't made clear), but at least, he can't become an architect of note without some $30,000 worth of study, even if we discount the Paris angle.

Jacqueline can't get her $30,000 without the permission of her father or until she is 30 years old, an "age of responsibility" more English than American but giving assurance that Allen cannot wait until she gets the inheritance by normal means and still become an architect. And without the $30,000 Allen can't have both Paris and Jacqueline. Then fate intervenes. Jacqueline finds a convenient marriage license through a convenient old negro with a convenient money. The license proves Father Burrell—one is tempted to write Father Bullamy in recollection of Pinero's Injurer in "The Magistrate"—for no other reason than that the name would suit Mr. Burrell—is an illegitimate child because his mother married twice, once from above and once from below the Mason Dixon line. Jacqueline threatens her father with blackmail, and one recalls the timid, Burrell-fearing mother who has been thrown into a shrinking background for contrast, when he pays $30,000 for the license.

Becky

A Serial of the Price of Glory
by RAYNOR SELIG

What Has Happened So Far

Becky McCloskey, young and goodlooking, trying to make her way alone in New York, meets Dan Scarlett who lives by his wits. He realizes she has a beautiful voice and offers to finance her for a share in her profits. Becky has made an ideal of John Estabrook, a very rich young man of high social standing. Through Scarlett's influence she joins a Broadway chorus. At the studio of Boris Abelard, a close friend of Estabrook's, Becky meets her ideal. She interests him and he kisses her. She stands dazed and tells him she expected him to be different. He apologizes. He hears her sing and little by little falls in love with her. Scarlett warns her that Estabrook will never marry her and begs her to get what she can out of him, but Becky turns a deaf ear. She meets Nan, Estabrook's sister, loved by young Lord Travers. Scarlett forces an introduction. He makes violent love to Nan, receives numerous love letters from her and is about to elope with her when Becky confronts them, convinces Nan that Scarlett is a scoundrel and blackens her own character in doing so. Nan escapes. Estabrook tells Becky he loves her but says it in such a way that she imagines he does not wish to marry her. He offers her $100,000 provided she will leave the country and educate herself abroad. Becky misunderstands him and asks him to let her know the name of the bank where the money will be deposited, and leaves him heartbroken. Scarlett follows Becky who throws herself into the river. He rescues her, takes her to his apartment and after revealing her tells her how they can clean up a fortune by using Nan's letters to him as blackmail. She indignantly refuses, offers him half the $100,000 Estabrook has deposited in her name, provided Scarlett will marry her and burn Nan's letters. She stipulates he is to be a husband in name only. Scarlett agrees. He pretends to burn the letters. Becky plans to make a great singer of herself. She goes to say goodbye to Boris. He asks her to marry him. She tells him she is already married. After several years of hard work in Paris, Becky becomes famous as a prima donna. One of her good friends, a Princess, is robbed of a wonderful jewel. Scarlett tells Becky that Abelard and Estabrook are visiting Nan, now Lady Travers, in England. At Lord Travers' country place Estabrook learns from Boris that he himself was to blame for driving Becky away.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 28

Meanwhile Paris made merry. Paris laughed, drank, danced, and extravagantly admired the singer whose first concert, in the great opera house, had drawn such a brilliant throng and scored such a sensational success.

At half past two the last of a long line of motor cars swung out into the Avenue Malakoff. The door was closed from the inside. Becky turned and walked up the marble stairway singing to herself, radiant, successful. It had been a nerve-racking and heavenly evening. Remembering, she could only visualize flowers, noise, faces, terror. And then the thunderous applause that answered all her fears, that filled her like some great spirit, so that she throbbed and burned. And afterwards a silence that was a still greater tribute, and the sound of her own voice flowing forth like a stream of golden, mellow wine.

Admiration, acclamation, flowers and compliments. Ah, it was all wonderful. And the people who had come to her house afterwards! Not only enthusiastic, but distinguished, those people; names among them that three years ago she would scarcely have whispered. Oh this, this was what she had lived for! The joy of her voice, of pouring music into ears thirsty for beauty, ever more and more of pouring herself ing a shudder of repulsion pass over her, released the woman's hands, and stepped back. "The robbery of your jewels has unnerved you. Come now, you must be calm."

"I have come to confess to you," Estabrook started at the carpet, her lips twitching. "I have been a wicked woman. Now I am being punished. When I was a child, in the convent, they told me it was so. That if I sinned I would be punished. But Louis—my husband—he has not been wicked. He mustn't be punished for what I have done. So I have come to you—to confess every thing."

A tight sensation constricted Becky's throat. She realized abruptly how tired she was, and said unsteadily: "Louis... punishment... confession? I don't know what you mean."

"I tell you I have been wicked. (I have had a lover.) I have been unfaithful."

Becky started back. "But Blanche—you mustn't. Why do you tell me?"

"Ah Dieu..." Blanche lifted up her head like a trapped animal. "You are blind. But blind... It is Dan... your husband."

There was a startled pause. Then Becky, a trifle coldly, said: "I'm sorry you were driven into making this confession. My husband's life is his own. All Paris knows," she added rather hardily, "that he has not been faithful, and I know too. So, if that is all—"

"But it is not all!" The woman faced her bony fingers together until they cracked. "It is nothing... the beginning, only." She looked up. "Yes all Paris knows his infidelity, and your purity," she said in a staccato, broken voice. "You are so good, it tortures me to thrust this hateful thing upon you. But it is true—my lover—your husband—he is a villain. A thief."

Becky was perfectly still. After a few moments she put her hand to her throat, moving the fingers up and down nervously. Finally, "You must be wrong. That can't be." She was shaking, and she gripped the table for support.

"It is true. Every word. And you must make him give it back... the Rajah's bracelet... before Louis returns. Otherwise I will be ruined, And Louis—"

"I'm sorry, Blanche, I can't believe... But Becky did believe. She knew. Horribly."

"I will tell you everything, then. The worst. It was the night of your dinner. My car broke down, you remember? Your husband... Dan, said he would take me home. It was a lie about the car. I wanted him to be alone with me. We did not go to my house. There was an apartment, a little place for us, across the river. And suddenly, when I was in his arms, he asked for it—for the bracelet. I would have screamed, but it would bring people, police, discovery, I pleaded. I protested. He said, 'For each refusal you will give me another jewel, sweetheart.' At last I saw it was useless. I gave him everything... everything I had. I would have kept it secret too, for I was terrified. But I have a young friend who is a journalist. The next afternoon he asked why I was not wearing my bracelet. In my terror I exclaimed that my jewel box had been stolen during the night. Immediately the papers were full of it."

The woman stopped, coughing. Becky, clinging to the table, waited in silence until the story was re-told:

"Louis returns from Morocco Saturday," Blanche went on desperately, rubbing her mouth with a lacy handkerchief. "I must be able to say the papers lied. I never kept the bracelet in my jewel box. I wore it—day and night. Louis knows... he said, when he gave it to me, that I must always wear it. And he mustn't find out—oh blessed Mary—he mustn't find out!" With a sudden twisting movement that was awful in its grotesque pathos, Blanche de Saint Sella flung herself on her knees at Becky's feet. "Help me!" She prayed, as though supplicating God, "Help me."

"Get up," Becky said, bending over the convulsed figure. "Get up and go into the adjoining room. I will do what I can. You shall have your bracelet if I buy it with my life."

"No... do not say that."

"Oh nonsense," Becky managed to laugh. "Only a figure of speech. Please leave me now."

Major Speculative Stocks on Up-Side With Bullish Trend

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (AP)—Curious cross currents of prices ran through today's stock market, but major speculative operations were again on the up-side. A sudden demand for U. S. Steel common, which rallied from a low of 138 1/2 to 143 1/2 and closed just below that figure for a net gain of 4 points on the day helped materially in bolstering bullish sentiment, and stimulating buying for both accounts in other quarters. Total sales again crossed the 2,000,000 share mark.

With the steel trade showing signs of marked improvement, and indications of a substantial increase in the farm wealth of the country this year, coupled with a plethora of credit at easy rates, operators on the long side confidently continued to mark up their favorites. Fears of so-called "tax selling" in the closing weeks of the year, have dwindled considerably, and even the motor trade expects record-breaking production next year, despite the competition likely to be furnished by the new Ford models.

Call money continued in plentiful supply at the renewal figure of 3 1/2 per cent in the face of the calling of about $10,000,000 in bank loans, and the vast preparations incidental to the new government financing tomorrow. There was no change in time money and commercial paper rates.

Establishment of a new low for the year by Japanese yen at 45.65 cents, or 13 points below last week's final quotation, and the continued firmness of sterling around the year's high of $4.87 1/16 for demand bills, divided interest in the foreign exchange market.

High Grade Bonds in Demand During Day's Lien Buying

NEW YORK, Nov. 14 (AP)—High grade bonds continued in brisk demand today. Recent investment buying having cut deeply into the available supply, particularly in the railway group, prices responded smartly to the day's accumulation and a number of new high records resulted.

Firmness of Treasury 3 1/2's, which reached 102-1/16 for the first time since they were issued, was attributed largely to demand by investors who have liquidated their Second Liberty 4 1/2's. More than $750,000,000 of the Second Liberties had been

Hawkeyes Sharpen Talons for Grid Finale With Wildcats

Burt Sends Regulars Through Light Drill

Squad Emerges From Wisconsin Tussle in Good Condition; Schmidt May Play in Northwestern Encounter

Anti-Northwestern maneuvers, in preparation for the season's finale against the Wildcats at Evanston Saturday, were started yesterday by the University of Iowa gridiron warriors, conquerors of Wisconsin. To prove to the world that its victory over the Badgers was no flash in the pan and to get revenge for the 13 to 6 beating last year these elements will spur the Hawkeyes on for a victory over the Purple aggregation.

Only the lightest kind of work was dished out to the men who saw action against the Badgers, but the second and third elevens were put through a short and snappy scrimmage. Loosening up exercises and a short signal drill comprised the workout of the regulars.

The Hawkeyes emerged from the Cardinal tilt unscathed. A few minor injuries are being suffered by the candidates but they will all be in good shape for Northwestern. It is also possible that Schmidt, a defensive halfback, who sprained his ankle before the Illinois game, will be in condition for the fray.

Blue and White Gridders Record Mediocre Season

Skein Develops Team With Five Letter Men as Nucleus

Like the Old Gold machine, the Northwestern Wildcats who have been named by Illinois, Indiana, Purdue and Missouri this year, are expected to be in the best of shape for the game. The Purple aggregation has labored under extremely hard circumstances, at one time having eleven regulars on the hospital list. Only one has the Northwestern team had its full strength this season, in the opening game but indications are that the Purple regulars will be ready to entertain the Hawkeyes Saturday.

For both teams the game holds the same thing—everything to win and nothing to lose. In the Big Ten standings the two elevens are tied with Wisconsin for the cellar with one victory and three defeats as their record.

It will mark the first time in many Big Ten battles that Iowa will go on the field a favorite, but this is due largely to the fact that the Iowans knocked off Wisconsin last week. Northwestern has a team which is very powerful when it is able to muster its full strength and on paper the two teams appear equal. Iowa is given credit for having the best line but the Purple team possesses the best backfield.

Light Practice for Hawks

Believing that his men are in tip-top shape and that they will be just right for the Wildcats, Coach Ingwersen will ease up from the intensive drills for the last few weeks and let the men take it easy this week. Only light drills will be on the program, although the men will be called upon to meet the freshmen aggregation this afternoon.

Scout Sam Barry and Coach Otto H. Vogel spent their time yesterday in teaching the frosh eleven Northwestern plays which they will dish out to the varsity this afternoon. It is probable that Mayes McLain will help the yearlings against the varsity.

The Hawkeyes will leave for Evanston Thursday night immediately after practice and will workout Friday on the Purple battlefield. Indications are that there will be two special trains carrying Iowa rooters to the game and it is also probable that the university band will be on hand to spur the Old Gold eleven on.

Iowa Grid Notes

Arnill Pushes Glasgow

Trailing Willis Glasgow, halfback, by only forty-two yards in net gains from scrimmage, Paul Arnill, fullback, is threatening the lead held by the sophomore since the Denver game. Glasgow has made 393 yards in ninety-six attempts; Arnill has 351 yards in 124 tries. In third place is Don Smith, with 270 yards in fifty-six attempts. Smith played only a few minutes in the Illinois contest and not at all against Wisconsin.

Arnill Leading Scorer

But when Arnill plunged over for a touchdown against Wisconsin, he took the point-scoring lead which Glasgow had held since the first game of the autumn. Arnill now has twenty-four points made by four touchdowns; Glasgow has twenty-three, the result of three touchdowns and five of six goals after touchdown. Smith's eighteen points rank him third, and Cuhel is fourth with twelve markers.

Iowa's Charging Line

The charging Iowa line completely outplayed the Badger wall. Hawkeyes broke through and hurled Wisconsin backs for losses totalling forty-six yards.

Three Years Ago

Iowa's eleven is determined to imitate the team of 1924 which finished the season in whirlwind fashion by soundly whipping Wisconsin and Michigan. The squad leaves Thursday night for Evanston where the players hope to victimize Northwestern Saturday afternoon.

Northwestern Slides Down

Northwestern failed to show much against Indiana Saturday but with several cripples back in shape, Hanley's team will be strong, declares San Barry, Iowa scout. The Wildcats have encountered a series of injuries this fall, one of the reasons for the loss of three straight Big Ten games. Northwestern tied Michigan for the championship last fall.

Hawk Harriers Prepare for Big Ten Run Saturday

Stage Race Over Five Mile Course at Ann Arbor

Running over four miles of wet, gravelled road yesterday the Iowa cross country runners completed the first day's drill of a week of intensive practice scheduled as preparation for the Big Ten conference cross country run to be held at Ann Arbor Saturday, Nov. 19.

The Iowa team will journey to the Michigan city for the conference race which will be run over a course with a gravel construction similar to the course the Hawkeyes used yesterday. It will be five miles from start to finish.

Hawks Drop Third Run

Last Saturday the Hawkeye harriers were defeated by the Wisconsin team 22 to 33. It was the third setback of the season for the Iowans having been previously defeated by the Gophers and the Illini by the scores of 24 to 32 and 27 to 29.

The Iowa team was apparently not at its best Saturday when they let the Badgers gain the largest margin of points of the season against them. Captain Hunn, who last year led the whole Badger aggregation across the line, let both Captain Zola and Petaja of the Badgers lead him to the tape. He was closely followed by Bullamore of Wisconsin then Brady of Iowa. Coffie, Cue, and Moulton grabbed seventh, eighth, and tenth for the Hawkeyes to complete the scoring.

Should Race High

As it appears from the results of Saturday's dual the Hawkeye runners were scattered out a trifle. But seeing how close was the margin of victory for the Illini, who are undefeated this season and who got the best possible score last Saturday in a triangular meet, with Michigan and Ohio, it is apparent that the Hawkeyes have the stuff to place well up in the coming conference meet.

Captain Hunn received a slight spike injury on his right ankle yesterday while nearing the finish of the day's workout. But it will not hamper his running.

Tom Kelly of Parrell is captaining the frosh harriers over the second and third of the season. He is furnishing the varsity runners excellent competition in the daily drills and finished up near the front in yesterday's four mile jog.

Skein's roster next fall. Captain Virgil Bowers, end, John Stover, tackle, Calvin Kay, halfback, Dean Jones, center and Rush Dennis halfback, will receive their diplomas.

Dennis and Kay were perhaps the most outstanding of backfield men. Dennis was a triple threat and Kay was an end skirter of no mean ability. On the line Ernest Ford, tackle, Captain Bowers, end, Stover, and Blackmore, end, were the luminaries. Dean Jones at the pivot post was consistent and a bulwark on defense.

BOWLING

Two records crashed last night at the Dee Bros. bowling alleys when the American Legion pin toppers rolled a three game total of 2578 pins to break the record of Mac's Sporting Goods team which was 2562, and a single game total of 940 to break the previous high mark of 930 set by The Daily Iowan five.

Eddie Pellock of The Daily Iowan and John Dee of the Dee Bros. recreation team are tied for high single game individual score with a count of 236, and Norris of The Daily Iowan and W. Jones of the Black Bottom aggregation are tied at 235 for second place.

G. Kanak of the American Legion team and Bailey of the Eagles tied last night for high individual single game score by knocking 222 pins. Schmidt of the K. of C. team was high for individual three games with a count of 590.

The games played last night were in the Lodge league. The Moose pinmen took three

Big Ten Elevens Prepare for Tilts in Strict Secrecy

Dope Favors Illinois to Win Over Ohio State Team

CHICAGO, Nov. 14 (AP)—The contenders in the two leading Western conference football games next Saturday began preparations today under strict secrecy, with virtually all the regulars in fine condition, at Illinois, Ohio State, Michigan and Minnesota.

Two of the four, Ohio and Minnesota, had easy games on the program last Saturday and Illinois was hardly extended to win its affair with Chicago.

All omens point to an Illinois triumph at Columbus, and a clean cut conference championship, but there have been notable upsets before in his present season, and the Buckeyes might spring up just as hard as they fell.

Rain and a promise of a cold snap greeted the Chicago and Northwestern squads, both of whom wind up the season with home games. Each has been beaten three times this season and has scant hopes of victory next Saturday.

Iowa decided to resign as doorman of the conference, and the dash and power the Hawkeyes showed against Wisconsin Saturday will be augmented against Northwestern's crippled Wildcats by the inspiration of the victory over Wisconsin.

Indiana lost one important player from an injury in Saturday's victory over Northwestern. Ringwalt, star guard, limped around on crutches today with a broken ankle.

Twogood Supervises Hawk Cage Practice

Iowa Captain Leads Mates in Early Workouts

With Coach Justin M. Barry over on Iowa field showing the Hawkeye football team some of the Northwestern plays which he scouted Saturday Captain Forrest Twogood was leading his teammates through some early season basketball tactics in the field house. The fact that Coach Barry was not in sight did not hamper the Iowa basketball aspirants from working hard and every man went through a hard session.

The drill consisted of basket shooting and various reviews on offensive plays that have been given out already this year. Every man was given a chance to show his ability and several freshman aspirants were out to get in some early season ticks before their regular sessions start under the direction of Coach Rollie Williams.

Band Supports Team

When the Hawkeye team appears in Dyche stadium, it will be backed by the Iowa band. The musician have not played at any other out-of-town game this fall. Hundreds of fans are expecting to see the contest from the Iowa section of the stands.

Soccer Candidates Struggle for Berths

Frosh Display Teamwork to Halt Varsity in Check; Schroeder to Stage Exhibition Game Saturday

Fighting for berths on the Hawkeye team that will go to Urbana Nov. 26 to play Illinois, the varsity soccer candidates opposed a squad of varsity reserves and freshmen in the fastest practice game played on Finkbine field this season.

The freshmen working together in wonderful team work, broke up play after play for the varsity. Roose kicked the first goal for the varsity after nearly fifteen minutes of play. In the previous practice games the playing has been mostly on the freshmen ground but in last night's game the first year men with the assistance of several of the varsity reserve men, took the ball dangerously close to the varsity goal.

Feay on Varsity

Feay, who was put in as goal guard for the freshmen during the first part of the game, was taken out and put in the varsity lineup when he assisted in the offense along with Roose and Margolin.

Bad Taylor was center for the freshmen, being pitted against Lin, who has been center for the varsity aggregation since the first of the season. Taylor has been showing up very well in the work so far. He has played on Des Moines school teams and will undoubtedly be center for the frosh squad that plays the varsity next Saturday on Iowa field.

John Watt, freshman from Peeking, China, was performing for the freshmen at right outside last night and took part in several of the drives through the varsity line.

Frosh Threaten to Score

The first year men threatened to score several times, holding their own with the varsity with a steadiness that has been lacking in former practices. Within ten minutes after being scored upon by varsity the frosh forwards took the ball through the varsity line with a series of short passes and kicks to within twenty feet of the goal where Zaleski, full back for the varsity, intercepted the play by blocking Suselman, a varsity man, who was playing for the frosh. Quick work by Watt and Fred White, also a varsity reserve, resulted in a goal for the first year men.

Don Young who was playing left outside for the varsity men was one of the fastest players of the game. All through the scrimmage he was wherever the ball was in play. With the possible exception of Roose, Young is the shiftest man of the varsity squad.

L. White Looks Good

Louis White, a varsity man playing on the freshman team last night, was prominent in several of the drives of the second team. He has improved in attack ability during the last few practices and made some good plays during scrimmages last night.

Margolin is another promising varsity man. His most valuable trait is dribbling, at which he is probably the best man on the squad, with the possible exception of the center, Lin. He is quick and tricky, and makes long gains through the freshman line by his ability to dodge and evade the frosh.

Both aggregations put up a strong fight and a clean scrimmage with not one foul chalked up against either side. There were a number of snappy drives made by both sides. Kettleson, of the freshman

Skein Issues Call for U. High Cage Team Candidates

With the storing away of gridiron logs for one more year, Coach Jack Skein has lost no time in issuing a call to University high basketball a squad of twenty men priming for their work on the maples.

It is with no small degree of joy that University high men greet the arrival of the basketball season. After a football season of only mediocre success the candidates are lining up in good style for a banner year at the indoor sport.

Skein is certain that his athletes are more inclined to basketball. Their interest in football takes a back seat when the first hint of basketball is evident.

With the return of all but two veterans of a good 1926-27 squad prospects for a successful season loom favorably. Three captains will be back in uniform. Rush Dennis, who captained the team two years ago, Dean Jones, captain of last year's aggregation, and the present captain, Ivan Blackmere, will form the nucleus for this year's team.

Walter Johnson, who was first choice along with Blackmere for last year's all-city team will be back in the lineup. Regulars other than these who are reporting are Stanley Hunter and Virgil Bowers.

Rehearsals in dribbling, passing, pivoting, shooting and the general handling of the ball were on the docket for the first meeting. Scrimmages will begin in a week. The first game on the schedule is with M. Vernon, there, and is slated for Dec. 9.

We have noticed since Iowa has won a football game that the comment on the athletic situation here has quieted down a considerable extent. Even the papers that were calmed down somewhat and it just goes to prove the statement that when a man is a winner he is a hero and when a loser a bum.

For several years some papers have tried to cook up a game between Iowa and Ames. The persons behind the affair do not know the facts and it is natural that Iowa is condemned for not staging the affair, mostly because the papers have a grudge against Iowa.

This year, also, considerable comment is being made through newspapers pertaining to the athletic situation here, comment made by persons who do not know a thing about the subject.

The following letter written by "Stub" Barron, a man who knows more about Iowa athletics than any other man except those who are members of the coaching staff, wrote the following letter to Sec to See Taylor, sports editor of the Des Moines Register in regard to the things which Taylor has tried to cook up in Iowa athletics:

Nov. 10, 1927

Dear Mr. Taylor:— I was captain of the University of Iowa football team in 1915 and I believe that no man, not connected with the coaching staff at university, has spent more time on Iowa field, watching the development of the teams since then, than I. I am not sending you an anonymous letter to vent my spite, but am setting down my opinion, based on my observation of the situation, as I see it. I do not expect you to publish this letter, but I have no objection to your doing so, but I request that should you do so, I insist that the whole and not excerpts be printed.

I notice in your "Sitting in with the Athletes" of Nov. 8, that you again break out with the propaganda toward stirring up the Iowa-Ames football situation, which, as far as I am concerned, is and should be, a dead issue. I am not much surprised that you should publish your view points on the matter at this time, as it is right. I line with your policy of doing all you can to knock Iowa at every opportunity both openly and insidiously.

Your attitude, or the reason for it, has always been a mystery to me, but there is one thing about it that I can truthfully vouch for and that is that it is because the Iowa officials have not asked for your opinion on athletic matters, because they do not saluam your approach during the few times you present yourself on the Iowa campus each year.

I believe it would help you make your writings more intelligible if you would do a little first hand investigating yourself rather than depending upon valueless rumors and gossip.

How many times have you been at Iowa City this fall? Furthermore, since when has the Register run so short of men on your staff, that the Ames coaches and directors must be called in for critical essays? I do not think that has tended to better any feeling on the part of Iowa adherents.

You contend that an Iowa-Ames game would be welcomed by the football fans of this state. If so, why now, more than just after the break in athletic relationships between the two schools? Nothing has been heard from you advocating or demanding a game at that time. Just what has arisen in the past few years to make this game so advisable?

Such an authority on athletics as you should easily see, when considering the opponents on Iowa's football schedule for the next three years, that adding a game as difficult as an Ames team would provide would be suicide from an Iowa standpoint.

Nov. 10, 1927

How you can contend that such a game would be a great money-maker every year is more than I can understand in the face of the following facts. The Homecoming game at Ames this fall drew no more than a crowd of 8,000 persons. Could you guarantee that many Ames followers at a game at Iowa City? The Ames-Drake game, held in the largest city in the state drew no more than 8,500 persons.

If Ames is such a drawing card why could they draw only that many spectators from the center of population of the state? The largest crowd that ever attended an Iowa-Ames game was no more than 12,000 and it was played during the days when the Ames-Iowa rivalry was at its height. That was an Iowa Homecoming game.

The Homecoming crowd at Iowa during the last four or five years has never been less than 20,000. Just who would be the money-maker should the Iowa-Ames game become an annual affair? It is no secret that Iowa depends for her athletic income on the gate receipts of games played on foreign fields. Her football team must play at least three games away from home each season, from a financial standpoint.

If you were the schedule maker at Iowa, just how easy would it be for you to give up a $30,000 to $50,000 share in the gate receipts from a conference game for a $10,000 share from an Ames game? You know it is a fact that the boys at Iowa must go to school as well as play football during the fall and that the team cannot be traveling all the time. I remind you of this fact in case the thought should occur to you that Iowa might go to Ames in place of playing at home, in addition to the three games away from home.

Your thought that most of the old time Iowa grads want the game means nothing to me, as I do not believe you think that you have sufficient proof for that contention. It may be your "belief" that the state of Iowa never will be wholeheartedly behind the state university until this Iowa-Ames game becomes an annual affair.

You were cognizant of the feeling throughout the state when the game was being played and it is an insult to your intelligence to presume that you considered the feeling then as "wholeheartedly behind the university." I agree with you that there will always be a few to follow you

Cyclone Half Out of Grinnell Game

AMES, Nov. 14 (P)—Johnny Miller, flashy halfback of the Iowa State college football team, may not play again this year. He went home to Waterloo after the Missouri game, submitted to a minor operation on his injured knee and returned today with the leg in a cast, which under doctor's orders cannot be removed for a week. Hill took Miller's place in a brief signal drill and dummy scrimmage today. The remainder of the squad is in good condition to start preparation for the Grinnell game.

should you continue your attacks on Iowa, as every disturber has his following, and, of course there will always be some Ames men wishing the games would be resumed. Ames has been getting along, so has Iowa, why all the "holler"?

Your explosion on Nov. 9 is typical of your work. You would make a big thing out of a rumor without investigation to prove its worth. You refuse to quote any particular person. Why not let the public which you serve so well know just who gives you your information so that the source may be considered as well as the information? The only definite stand you take is "We do not believe that Ingwersen has been head coach of the Old Gold squad in anything but name." You are willing to publish your belief and allow it to be read by a public willing to take what you believe to be true, without even so much as to attend a practice game or a game during the whole season. Why not an interview with the subject of your article? I have no doubt that Mr. Ingwersen knows more about the matter than anyone else, and he is easily approached. Frankly, I think you are a poor sportsman and I do not think you can blame me for such an opinion, in view of the recent articles you have been writing.

I have not written this letter in the feeling that I should fight the Iowa coaching staff's battles, because I am quite sure they are able to fight their own, but I wanted you to know how one alumnus at Iowa feels.

Very truly yours,
I. J. "Stub" Barron

Who will scout this electrical frontier?

WHETHER in the Bell Telephone Laboratories, in the Western Electric workshop or in the various operating companies, telephone executives are scouts on the frontier of better methods to serve the public. It is significant that your true telephone man, he with the feel of the calling in his blood, never speaks of having "perfected the art of communication." And this in spite of the fact that America, by its solid achievements in telephony, shows the world. Work in the Bell System demands the bold curiosity of pioneers and the infinite pains of pioneers who, like Columbus, Lincoln and Lindbergh, prepared "and when their chance came they were ready."

Dexter Shows New Social Interest

Advocates Interest in Community at C. of C. Luncheon

A social responsibility which consists of more than financing altruistic community organizations was shown members of the Iowa City chamber of commerce and their guests by Robert C. Dexter, who spoke at their luncheon yesterday.

Mr. Dexter is secretary of the department of social relations of the American Unitarian association of Boston, and was formerly secretary of the Social Service league in Montreal, Canada, and was once professor of sociology at Skidmore college, Skidmore, New York.

From the standpoint of his previous experience, Mr. Dexter visualized the need of Iowa City for social service and protection, in spite of its apparent high type of citizenry, economic prosperity, and the education center.

Responsibility of Spending
Mr. Dexter briefly outlined the responsibility taken over by the nation and state in the maintenance of institutions for the care of sick, poor, abnormal, and the criminal classes. Organizations such as the Red Cross have taken over the responsibility of caring for refugees in communities which are so devastated as to be unable to care for them. This leaves for citizens and local organizations the responsibility of seeing that the money received through taxes is wisely spent.

Social Organization Needed
Every community is in need of a group to advise and utilize its facilities in the assimilation of foreigners who find it difficult to adjust themselves, and in the care of those whom economic conditions have rendered helpless, was Mr. Dexter's opinion. He said also that the majority of persons do not know enough of what social organizations are doing and insist upon the giving of aid without their helping in its administration.

Following Mr. Dexter's talk, Lee Nagle, 917 E. College street, gave a short report on the Red Cross drive. Guests at the luncheon who were introduced to the members were Helen M. Crawford, the new secretary of Social Service league, and Mrs. Mildred Searle, assistant secretary. The Reverend Arthur L. Weatherly of 10 S. Gilbert street introduced Mr. Dexter.

Two Men Draw Fines for Part in Monument Blaze

Judge Paul Custer fined T. E. Spain and E. P. Welch each $5 and costs in police court yesterday. The two were charged with disturbing the peace. They were arrested early Sunday morning when police attempted to stop the burning of the corn monument at Iowa avenue and Clinton street.

A crowd of jubilant students made two attempts to celebrate the Iowa victory over Wisconsin by burning the monument, the last of which was successful. While one group attempted to start a bonfire of boxes at Burlington and Clinton streets, another crowd saturated the monument with gasoline. As soon as the police were safely out of distance the flame was touched and the monument went up in smoke.

Jones Speaks at Sunday Vespers

Building his talk about the fact that "your accent betrays you," Prof. Rufus M. Jones of Haverford college, Haverford, Penn., spoke on "The Gallian" Accent at the vesper services in natural science auditorium Sunday afternoon.

"There are differences in denotations, of course, and some are better than other. But it's not the stamp of your sect that settles whether you are a Gallian or not," Professor Jones said, "it's something more subtle. Your neighbors know because they know your accent."

Professor Jones is a member of the society of Friends, and has published extensively on Quakerism, according to Dean George F. Kay who introduced the speaker. He has taught philosophy at Haverford college for more than twenty years.

Professor Jones said, "If you want to lay the foundations of the new civilization for which we are praying you must get a new spirit and more brotherhood."

"I don't believe that we have played fair with the land who gave us the torch nine years ago when they died in the World war. I don't believe that university men are swept by a spirit of brotherhood."

"We know more about building bridges than building character. If we built bridges as we do character no one would dare go out on one."

The university orchestra opened the service with the strings playing Bach's "Prelude in C Major."

"When Thou Comest" was sung by Mrs. Onabelle Ellet, G of Iowa City, and the vesper choir. The choir also gave "Seven Fold Amen" at the close of the sermon.

Invocation and benediction were given by H. L. McCracken, acting president of Penn college, at Oskaloosa.

Red Cross Drive Passes $192 Mark

Red Cross headquarters reported last night that $192 has been received after the first two days of the roll call drive. In addition to the amount quoted in The Daily Iowan of Sunday, $5 more was received from the Johnson County bank. The First National bank turned in $23.

A sustaining membership, which costs $10, was taken up by the Burket-Uppergraft motor company. Two more $5 contributing memberships were received. One was from George Nagle and the other from Harry Breen.

Lee Nagle, director of the roll call, announced the appointment of Will Anderson as chairman for the canvass of the fourth ward. No one has yet been appointed chairman for the first ward east of the river.

No returns have yet been received from the house-to-house canvass of the city or from the outlying parts of the county. In addition to the canvass women are on hand in both the Johnson County and First National banks to receive membership.

Dean Rienow Leads Discussion at Quad Councilmen Dinner

Following the regular monthly dinner of the quad council last night, Robert E. Rienow, dean of men, opened an informal discussion upon the theme of "The Councilman and What is Expected of Him."

Among the several points discussed were those of discipline and delinquency. During the course of the discussion it was suggested that some method be developed whereby probation be inflicted upon the men reported delinquent. It was also pointed out that the councilmen had jurisdiction throughout the dormitory.

Those who attended the dinner were Dean Rienow; proctors Robert Needles, M1 of Fairfield; F. S. Beebe, G of Iowa City; E. H. Cates, G of Colfax; Wm. Latta, C4 of Logan; M. D. Taylor, G of Iowa City; E. W. Neumann, G of Chelsea.

Councilmen who were present were R. E. Westmeyer, G of Davenport; Arthur Kress, A2 of Rowley; Henry Wilson, A3 of Ossage; Arlyss Raeker, president of the council, D4 of Waterloo; A. P. Kehlenbeck, G of Williamsburg; Harold Anderson, A2 of Thompson; Howard Ben-then, A3 of Davenport; Don Wright, A1; Robert Sinclair, A4 of Garner; Rex Mitchell, A2 of Creston; Carl Sylvester, J3 of Muscatine; Dennis-ton Neal, A3 of Lake View; and Carl Nystrom, A3 of Calmar.

Wet Weather Does Little Damage to County Highways

Highways in Johnson county have suffered little damage from the prevailing weather conditions of the last few days. The principal trails, either paved or graveled, are impervious to anything short of a cloudburst. Traffic on these roads has been unhindered.

The only main highway which is not surfaced in this county is the Red Ball route, south. This route, as well as all of the dirt roads, is slick but passable with the aid of chains.

Most of the traffic to Chicago is passing over the Red Ball route to Cedar Rapids and the Lincoln highway. All roads by this route to the Illinois metropolis are surfaced.

Cold Wave With Snow for Entire State Coming Soon

DES MOINES, Nov. 14 (AP)—An all-day light rain, climaxed here tonight by an electrical storm and a heavy downpour, heralded what the weather bureau said would be a moderate cold wave accompanied by snow, affecting the entire state.

Cool temperatures prevailed in the northwest, Charles City reporting 32 and Sioux City 34. The high mark of the day here was 60 late in the day.

A heavy electric and rain storm struck Cedar Rapids in the evening, the precipitation sending creeks near flood stage. The storm climaxed a warm day which the weather bureau predicted would be followed by a cold period and a blizzard.

M. Ott's Sentence May Be Suspended

Then sentence of 120 days in the Johnson county jail and a fine of $400 which Judge R. G. Popham imposed upon Mike C. Ott, convicted of driving while intoxicated, will be suspended after sixty days of good behavior. Ott was arrested Sept. 19 and was held in the county jail until his trial before Judge Popham in district court.

Alleged Assassin of Obregon Dies

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 14 (AP)—Antonio Tirado, one of three men held at police headquarters for the attempted assassination of Alvaro Obregon, presidential candidate, died today from bullet wounds received while fleeing from the scene, according to information in possession of capital newspapers.

Police headquarters, however, refused to confirm or deny the report. They declined to make any official statement other than that investigations are continuing in an effort to determine who was responsible for the plot to assassinate the former president who is a candidate for election a second time.

The three men arrested are considered by police to be the tools of others, perhaps political enemies.

Dvorak Finds Ford Coupe Stolen Aug. 15 in Mason City

Dr. J. Dvorak, an interne at the university hospital, returned from Mason City Sunday evening driving back his Ford coupe, which was stolen here Aug. 15.

The car disappeared off the streets here and no trace of it had been found until the information came from the Mason City police late last week. Although the car had been in their custody for some time, they were unable to learn the identity of the owner until they heard from the factory and traced the motor number. All marks of identification had been stripped from the car.

Storm Stops Interurbans

A dozen passengers on two interurban cars were marooned at North Liberty until 10:30 p.m. yesterday because the rainstorm interfered with the electric power lines. The cars left Cedar Rapids at 7 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. respectively, and were able to proceed slowly for most of the trip.

Johnson County Bank Files Claim Against S. Rowe

The Johnson County savings bank yesterday filed a petition against S. E. Rowe, the United States National bank of La Gonde, Ore., and the Sawyer Homes Mercantile company demanding judgment of $1,000 from Rowe. It also asks that any claim or interest of the bank in Oregon or of the Sawyer Homes Mercantile company be declared inferior to its claim.

The plaintiff alleges that Rowe executed a note to it Jan. 10, 1925 and to secure payment gave them a mortgage on land in Iowa City. The plaintiff states that it has paid taxes amounting to $36.45 and asks that these be returned. The case will be heard in the November term of court.

Manolescu was charged with conspiracy to bring former Crown Prince Carol back to Rumania to restore to him his rights of succession to the throne.
