Prosecutor Finds Murder Clues

National Guards Control Northern Colorado Mines

Four Killed, Twenty Wounded in First Open War

DENVER, Nov. 21 (AP)—National guardsmen were in control tonight of northern Colorado's strike-ridden coal fields where four strikers were killed and twenty wounded in the first open hostilities since the strike was called five weeks ago by Industrial Workers of the world.

Gun-ties by twenty officers blazed into the ranks of 600 onrushing pickets who, according to state officers, attempted to storm the Colorado mine, in Weld county, the only coal mine still operating in the northern fields. Of the wounded brought down by the hail of bullets, four were not expected to live.

Strikers Blame State
Full blame for the shooting was laid on the state officers in a statement issued by the committee representing the strikers which denied the miners were marching toward the mine.

Soon after the smoke had cleared, five companies of infantry, two troops of cavalry, two armored tanks and a medical detachment of the Colorado national guard were on their way to the scene.

Guardsmen took charge of the situation and were declared by state officials to have the same jurisdiction as under martial law.

State of Riot Exists
Governor W. H. Adams issues an executive order declaring a state of riot and insurrection existed in Weld and Boulder counties and gave Adjutant General Paul P. Newton full power to proceed as he saw fit to command the situation.

Reports from state's representatives, describing the skirmish at the Colomine, declared the strikers massed near the gate of the mine property at dawn and began an advance. Louis N. Scherf, chief of the state law enforcement department, in command of twenty state policemen, gave the order to disperse.

Strikers Officers Fight
The advance of the strikers continued and hand-to-hand combat followed, officers using their guns for clubs while the strikers, the officers said, used rocks, sticks, and knives.

Overwhelmed by the larger force, Scherf called his men together and formed a line in front of the mine gates. The order to halt again was given and two warning shots were fired over the heads of the strikers.

Falling to heed the warning, the strikers swept toward the property and Scherf sounded the order: "Fire."

A hail of bullets felled the ranks of the pickets and the advance was stopped.

Oil Trial Brings Surprise Move

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 (AP)—A new and surprising move in the Fall-Sinclair oil trial jury inquiry is under consideration by District Attorney Gordon. Its precise nature was not divulged today but it was known that it would be independent of the grand jury investigation and also of the inquiry being made by a committee appointed by Justice Frederick L. Siddons of the supreme court of the District of Columbia to determine whether contempt of court had been committed.

The committee composed of James E. Laskey and James E. Easty-Smith, began its work today. Laws involved in the proceedings were gone over and the affidavits alleging juror Edward J. Kidwell Jr. talked too freely in the trial, were examined.

As on the closing day of the last week there was no visible signs of action by the grand jury in the surveillance case.

Voters of Warren County for Issue of Paving Bonds

INDIANOLA, Nov. 21 (AP)—By an overwhelming majority, Warren county voters today approved a bond issue of $1,200,000 for the paving of federal and state primary highways. The final unofficial poll was 3,733 favorable, 1,360 opposed.

In sixteen of the twenty precincts of the county the majority of voters favored the bond issue. The city of Indianola registered a top-heavy count in the affirmative.

Hard surfacing of the Jefferson highway across the county is expected to result, giving a paved stretch from Kansas City to Des Moines, with the exception of Clarke and Decatur counties. Clark county has already adopted a $360,000 bond issue, and Decatur county is planning a bond election in the near future with a view to completing the stretch. The highway is already paved from the state line south to Kansas City.

Police Nip Gang Scheme to Slay Gambling Rivals

Round Up Gangsters to Prevent New Gun Fights

CHICAGO, Nov. 21 (AP)—Rival Chicago gangsters, opening a new war of extermination for gambling supremacy, today carried their feud to the doors of Chicago's largest police station, where it was nipped by the authorities who for two days have been making a separate effort to prevent the initial crack of gangsters' pistols and the roar of their sawed-off shotguns.

A series of raids of machine and shotgun nests by the police last night to frustrate an assassination plot believed directed mainly against Al "Scarface" Capone, notorious gangster, culminated today in the arrest outside the south park street police station of three armed men believed to have been Capone's bodyguards, and the unsuccessful attempt of one of them to shoot his way boldly out of the office of William O'Connor, chief of detectives.

Killers Await Man

After questioning the three men the police said they had obtained information there had been a plot to kill Capone when he appeared in court today, and that two killers were in the courtroom actually waiting for him. The police said however, that he did not appear, despite statements of his attorney that he had been there and left.

Tonight the police, with orders to round up every known gangster, were searching the city for them.

"It is very fortunate there has been no murder today in the detective bureau of the city's largest police station," said Chief O'Connor.

"We won't follow the old plan of letting them fight it out. The next floundering is going to bring police pistols to serve as extinguishers."

Remnants of Old Gang

The latest feud, the police said, is a result of the efforts of the remnants of the old O'Banion-Weiss-Drucci gang, which turned from liquor running to gain a foothold in the gambling world.

The assassination plot was revealed last week when an arsenal was found in a rooming house across the street from the home of Antonio Lombardo, head of theUnione Siciliana, the largest Italian fraternal order in Chicago, of which Capone also is a leader.

Several arrests were made and last night, in a downtown hotel, across the street from a cigar store frequented by Capone and Lombardo, police found a second nest of rifles and shotguns trained on the store.

Arrest Gangsters

Half a dozen gangsters, mostly Italian, were arrested and Capone, called to the station to try to identify them, refused to do so. Police booked Capone on a technical charge of disorderly conduct, Sam Martin, alias Samuel Marcus, of New York, alias of Capone's alleged bodyguard tried to shoot his way out of the detective bureau where he was being questioned. He was overpowered, however. Another was identified as Tony "Little New York" Campagni, ex-convict and convicted bank robber.

Shortly afterward Andy Aiello and Tony Calafora were arrested outside a criminal court room. As the men were arrested an automobile with shotguns protruding from its sides was driven rapidly away from the building. The police said the three Aiello brothers, attempting to supplant Lombardo and Capone in control of the Italian society, have been directing the feud against this faction.

Court Rules for Race Segregation States May Establish Schools for White Pupils Only

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 (AP)—Race segregation of children in public schools was sustained today by the supreme court.

The ruling was on a case from Mississippi, where an attempt was made to compel the state to permit Martha Lum, daughter of an American citizen of Chinese descent to attend the Rosedale consolidated high school in Bolivar county, provided exclusively for white children.

Declaring that "the right and power of the state to regulate the method of providing for the education of its youth at public expense is clear," Chief Justice Taft, in delivering the opinion, said it "was within the constitutional power of the state legislature to settle without intervention of the federal courts whether it will require a Chinese citizen of the United States to send his children to public schools provided for the colored races."

The court held it was within the discretion of the state to set aside schools exclusively for the use of white children provided equal facilities are furnished children of other races within the school districts, and that when schools are provided for races other than white, the state may require children of Chinese birth to attend them.

The probability of snow tomorrow was a general prediction for Iowa.

McCormack, Famous Irish Tenor, Evokes Hushed Emotion, Applause

By THEODORE KOOP
An audience of 2,000 music lovers who had been vigorously applauding was suddenly stilled. The clear notes of an Irish melody floated through the lounge room of Iowa Union.

"Kathleen Mavourneen the gray dawn is breaking," "The horn of the hunter is heard on the hills—"

It was John McCormack, world famous tenor, singing "Kathleen Mavourneen" as the climax to the first recital last night in the university's 1927-28 concert course.

This selection, together with "Mother Machree," "Just for Today," and Rachmaninoff's "To the Children," were the high spots of his program, which included well balanced contrasting groups of modern art songs, Irish folk songs, and ballads.

During his first number, Handel's "O sleep, my dost thou leave me," McCormack soon overcame a slight hoarseness, and executed his remaining selections with clear enunciation and purity of tone. "Sentirsi il petto accendere," by Vinci, followed.

Sings Children's Numbers
"To the Children," a prayer by Rachmaninoff, was his second group selection in his second group. The second number was another children's song, Merikanto's "A fairy story by the fire." Variety was introduced by "Desolation," by Bantock, and "Pans Angelicus," by Franck, the latter having cello obbligato.

"Has Sorrow thy young days shaded?" and "The next market day" were two sprightly folk songs in which McCormack demonstrated a most amiable and cheery mood, as well as delightful Irish brogue.

Following these with "Kathleen Mavourneen," he rose to a high emotional pitch, which did not lower during one of his encores, "Mother Machree." In these selections McCormack showed his ability to raise almost banal songs to a point of artistry and beauty.

The singer's closing group included "When the dew is falling," by Edwin Schaefer, his accompanist; "Bird songs at eventide," by Eric Coates; "Now sleeps the crimson petal," by Quilter, and "The Quest," by Phillips. Prolonged applause brought two encores at the finish of the program.

Genial Personality
Throughout the program McCormack's genial personality was woven. A twinkle in his eye as he glanced at the audience was contrasted with his serious but relaxed mien while singing. He sang with no apparent effort, the notes thrilling in a flow of melody.

Assisting the artist was Lauri Kennedy, cellist, who in three groups won the generous response of the audience. He opened the evening's recital with "Sonata," by Sanmartini. His second group consisted of Rachmaninoff's "Melodie," "Nana," by de Falla, and "Serenade Espagnole," by Glazunoff, with Von Goens' "Scherzo" furnishing a striking contrast as an encore.

Re-united After 44 Years, Two Die in Accident

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 21 (AP)—Re-united only a few hours after being separated forty-four years, Clayton H. Nichols, 62, Emmetsburg, and his 85-year-old mother, Mrs. Sarah E. Nichols of Los Angeles, went to their deaths in an automobile accident near here today.

Mrs. J. W. Giddings, 58, sister of Nichols, also was killed. Her husband was injured.

Nichols left home when he was eighteen and saw his mother last night for the first time in nearly half a century. There was a happy re-union and Nichols started with his mother and Mr. and Mrs. Giddings early today to drive to Burlingame, Calif., to spend Thanksgiving with Frank G. Nichols, a brother, whom he had never seen.

Coming down a mountainous highway, the car in which the four were riding struck a truck. The truck driver was not seriously injured.

Hawes Introduces Flood Relief Bill

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 (AP)—An expansion of the "Missouri plan" for flood control legislation, which would create a new governmental agency and set up a billion dollar fund to finance the program, was made before the house flood control committee today by Senator Hawes, democrat, of Missouri. The senator contemplates introducing a bill along this line in the new congress.

Senator Hawes said he favored the placing of flood control completely under the supervision of the federal government and the payment of all costs through a billion dollar bond issue which would be expended at the rate of $100,000,000 a year.

In order not to retard tax reduction and farm relief, he said his bill would call for liquidation of the bonds over a fifty year period. The issue would be effected under the federal loan act.

The proposed commission, he said, would be comprised of five members, including two army and two civilian engineers, and one civilian of national reputation for executive ability. Besides flood control, he added, his plan called for development of bird, animal and fish conservation and promotion of reforestation.

Secretary Testifies

The first witness of the case, comely Mrs. Ethel Bachmann, who served Mrs. Remus as secretary a year and a half, testified that she spent the last two nights of Mrs. Remus' life in her hotel suite here.

The high point of Mrs. Bachmann's testimony seemed to be that at 10 o'clock on the second night before Mrs. Remus was slain, she left her hotel and was away several hours on an errand which "would be very valuable if it materialized."

Mrs. Remus did not make any telephone calls the night before she was killed, Mrs. Bachmann testified.

The story of how Mrs. Remus met death was elicited from Charles Stevens, taxicab chauffeur, who testified that he had driven for her for a year.

Chauffeur Describes Tragedy

Remus' automobile first followed his taxi as he drove Mrs. Remus from her hotel toward the divorce court in which she was to have faced her husband the fatal morning, Stevens testified. Once the Remus machine sought to block the taxi and failed, only again to shoot forward and crowd it to the side of the road, where Stevens said, he was forced to pull up.

"Remus got out on the running board of his car and Mrs. Remus left my cab," said Stevens. "Remus came towards my cab with his right hand in his right hand outside coat pocket. He passed toward the back of my cab and I lost sight of him."

"He was swearing and I heard a shot. Mrs. Remus, before the shot, cried: 'For God's sake don't do it; Daddy, what are you going to do?'"

Father Relents, Pays First Visit to Accused Son

DUBUQUE, Nov. 21 (AP)—F. C. Cota, father of Leonard Cota, who with his chum, Howard Kramer, is in Dubuque county jail charged with the murder of Mrs. Elizabeth McKittrick, aged Zwingle recluse, released Sunday and visited his son at the jail for five minutes, it was learned today. The youth had been ostracized by his entire family since his arrest along with Kramer in St. Louis two weeks ago.

The father refused to state whether he will come to the defense of his son. Earlier he had said he would not spend a cent to aid the youths. They confessed to local and St. Louis officials that they attacked the aged woman, Cota's grandmother, and stripped her home of $24,000 in cash and $30,000 in securities which had been secreted there.

The elder Cota made no effort to see Kramer, who has not yet communicated with his parents who live at Malta, Mont. Cota's mother and sister at Zwingle decline to say whether they will visit Leonard and offer help.

Remus Surprises Court by Refusing Opening Statement

Associate Counsel for Defense Makes Insanity Plea

CINCINNATI, Nov. 21 (AP)—The first evidence upon which the state depends to send George Remus, former "king of bootleggers," to the electric chair, was adduced today after Remus had sprung the biggest surprise of the trial by declining to make the opening statement for the defense.

Six times last week Remus electrified the spectators in Judge Chester R. Shook's court by clashes with the prosecution but the surprise of none of them excelled that of today when Charles H. Elston, associate counsel, opened for the defense.

Remus, suffering from a heavy cold arose just after Walter K. Ribald, deputy prosecutor, had concluded with an appeal to the jury to vote for the execution of Remus for the cold blooded murder of his wife here last October 6.

Quickly the defendant, who is his own chief counsel, sat down. He leaned over and whispered to Elston.

Elston Not Warned
"I don't believe I can make it," Remus said. "Can you do it?"

Elston addressed the jury, without a moment's warning that Remus would not make the opening statement he had planned.

He outlined a defense solely of transitory insanity. His most startling statement was that evidence would be introduced to prove that Remus had been insane for two years prior to the time he shot Mrs. Remus.

The chief factors upon which Elston erected his structure of temporary insanity, however, were Mrs. Remus' alleged association with Frank L. Dodge, Jr., of Lansing, Mich., former department of justice agent, and the alleged persecution of Remus by Dodge after the federal agent had obtained the conviction which sent the former lawyer who turned bootlegger to the Atlanta federal penitentiary.

The first witness of the case, comely Mrs. Ethel Bachmann, who served Mrs. Remus as secretary a year and a half, testified that she spent the last two nights of Mrs. Remus' life in her hotel suite here.

The high point of Mrs. Bachmann's testimony seemed to be that at 10 o'clock on the second night before Mrs. Remus was slain, she left her hotel and was away several hours on an errand which "would be very valuable if it materialized."

Mrs. Remus did not make any telephone calls the night before she was killed, Mrs. Bachmann testified.

WHO May Lose Membership in National Chain

DES MOINES, Nov. 21 (AP)—A ruling recently made by the federal radio commission jeopardizes the position of WHO as a member of the national broadcasting chain, according to Francis St. Austell, president of the Iowa radio listeners' league.

The order forms a national band of broadcasting stations composed of those stations which operate within the range of 600 to 1,000 kilocycles. WHO operates on 560 kilocycles.

"Unless the ruling is amended to admit the Des Moines station Iowa listeners will be deprived of the service they have been getting, and especially of the New York concerts," Mr. St. Austell said.

Gold Helps Bank Officials on Trial

Claims Huston Knows Money Markets; Not Crooked

MANKATO, Minn., Nov. 21 (AP)—Pictured as a man possessing the key to eastern money markets, Guy Huston found a defender in William H. Gold, who testified at the Huston-Gold-Smith conspiracy trial today.

As former officers of the Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land bank, both are defendants in a criminal action involving charges of scheming to defraud investors.

Huston, former fiscal agent of the bank, Gold said, brought $17,000,000 to Minnesota and South Dakota farmers through the bank. The money, raised through the sale of stocks and bonds, was loaned to the farmers on first mortgages.

Bought Stocks

It was Huston, Gold testified, whom he persuaded to buy outright at $140 a share an 11,000 share issue of capital stock in 1925 under a plan designed by Gold to put the bank in "a splendid condition."

The government has endeavored to bring Huston into the picture in a different light, charging that he had already arranged to sell the stock at a profit of $10 a share before he contracted with the bank to handle the big issue.

Gold said the bank found Huston's services indispensable. When Huston's first contract of two years expired, the bank tried to be its own fiscal agent but he testified "this did not work out," with the result that a new contract was promptly drawn up with Huston.

Replying to government evidence involving charges by V. R. McHale, chief examiner for the federal farm loan board, that he had difficulty at the bank because of interference by the officers, the witness declared McHale was given access to the records in the "most minute details." "He was given every assistance," said Gold. "I always welcomed these examinations."

Pennsylvania Klan Actions Dismissed

Court Decision Denies Counter Claims of Antagonists

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 21 (AP)—Counter actions of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and five "banished members" against each other were thrown out of federal court today. United States District Judge W. H. S. Thomson dismissed the suit of the Klan against five western Pennsylvanians seeking to have them enjoined from interfering with the affairs of the organization and asking $100,000 damages from each of them.

The court likewise denied the application of the "banished members" for an injunction to bar the Klan from Pennsylvania and the appointment of a receiver over its properties in this state.

The action by the Klan was filed against the Rev. John P. Strayer, Charles S. Hunter, Charles F. Oyer, William C. Davis and Van A. Barlickman. The damages were sought upon a claim that they collected funds of the organization after their dismissal.

Denying the allegations, the defendants, supported by affidavits from others, sought a court order barring the Klan from the state, charging the Klan incited riots, lynchings, kidnappings and other acts of violence.

"The plaintiff is asked for equitable relief, and must come in court with clean hands," Judge Thomson said in his decision. "The averments of fact in the answer and counter claim, if established, would clearly deprive the plaintiff of any relief in a court of equity."

Grand Jury to Take up Murder Mystery

frightened by the events of the past half-hour, ran down the road, caught a ride into Oxford, and reported the happenings to Slezak's brother Joe.

Slezak Fires Once

Accompanied by Kinney the latter hurried back to the scene of the fatality, after notifying the coroner and Sheriff Frank Smith. There they found Slezak's body moved from the position in which it had evidently fallen.

As soon as the officers arrived a search of the locality was begun. A .22 caliber target pistol, pearl handled, and compared to a forty-five, of about as much use in a life fight as a bow and arrow against a rifle, was found on Slezak's person.

But one shell was found discharged.

Slezak's gold watch and more than twenty dollars were also found in his clothes.

Back in the pasture, some distance from the road, officers discovered another automatic. The gun was loaded, oiled, but had not been discharged.

Of the 125 gallons of alcohol with which Slezak's car had been loaded, but 105 gallons were recovered by officers. At current wholesale rates, it is said, this would amount to approximately $1,050. Sheriff Smith brought Slezak's machine to Iowa City where action is to be begun to confiscate the car and contents.

Slezak's body was sent from a local mortuary to his home in Baraboo, Wis., yesterday afternoon. He is survived by a wife and two children.

Members of the coroner's jury Sunday were Dick Lee, Frank Greabel, and William Lumsden.

Testimony was presented by Joe Slezak, the coroner, sheriff, mayor of Oxford, Alex Johnstone, medical student who went to the scene of the slaying with officers Saturday night, and Tom Curry and R. J. Dwyer, of Oxford, thought to be the last two persons with whom Slezak talked before he and Kinney drove their cars out to transfer the liquor.

Anti-Saloon Head Denies Attempts to Sway Courts

Superintendent Fights Recent Contempt Citation

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 21 (AP)—Conflicting testimony, including a denial by Dr. Edward S. Shumaker, superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League of several statements made by Sen. James E. Watson in a deposition taken at Washington Thursday, tonight was taken under advisement by the Indiana supreme court.

The court heard the testimony of five witnesses, which was topped with an hour of attorneys' arguments, on the motion of Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom to increase the sentence of sixty days at the state penal farm and fine of $250 imposed on Shumaker for in-lodgment of contempt of the Indiana supreme court.

Denies Everything

The testimony was a succession of accusations and denials. Dr. Shumaker, who is accused by the attorney general of corruptly attempting to influence the decision of the court in his case, when portions of the deposition of Senator Watson were read, variously commented: "The senator's recollection is very faulty," and "The senator said nothing of the kind."

Shumaker categorically denied he had asked the senior United States senator from Indiana over the telephone to call the republican state committee together to pass a resolution condemning Gilliom for his attack on the dry leader; that he told Watson the Anti-Saloon league or any one else would hold him personally responsible if the contempt case was pressed; that he had said the supreme court ought to be called back from its vacation to decide his case and that he wanted it decided in his favor. He said that he had made no request of Senator Watson.

Belies Republican Chairman

Shumaker also branded as "absolutely wrong" the testimony of Clyde A. Walb, republican state chairman, given today, regarding a conversation between the two prior to the 1926 general election in Indiana.

British Envoy Admits Infection of "Anglo-American Friendship" Disease

BOSTON, Nov. 21 (AP)—Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador to the United States, admitted tonight that he was "badly infected" with the "terrible disease known as Anglo-American friendship," and in more serious vein expressed the belief that "the peace of the world depends largely upon friendship and understanding between our two countries."

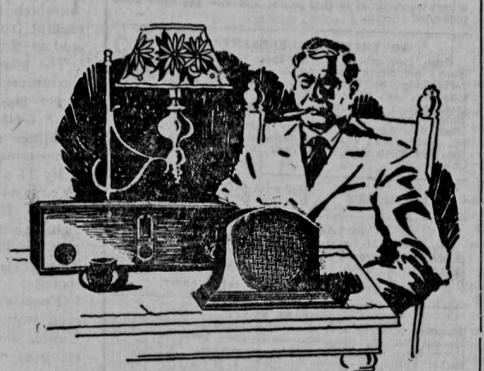

Speaking before the Massachusetts society of Mayflower descendants the ambassador said: "We have heard so much lately from another place of the danger of British propaganda in this country that I was beginning to wonder whether the descendants of the Pilgrim fathers gathered here to celebrate the landing of their ancestors at Plymouth might not have feared that the presence of the British ambassador tonight might bring with it some dread infection of the terrible disease known as Anglo-American friendship. It is of course a most dangerous malady and may lead to results almost too appalling to contemplate.

"I fear nevertheless I am badly infected with it and may perhaps spread the microbe. Indeed I am bold enough, unashamed enough, to say that I should be glad to do so. My reason for desiring friendship and understanding between our two countries I have never sought to hide for the last three and a half years that I have been British ambassador here. It is not only on this side of the water, because I have continually met with real frank unadulterated kindness wherever I have been, but also and even more particularly because I believe that the peace of the world depends largely upon that understanding.

"It is therefore difficult for me not to believe that those who seek to undermine it are, consciously or unconsciously, actively promoting a state of things which will make permanent peace far more difficult to realize, and the possibility of a new world war, whether for us or for our children, would be disaster so incalculable that even such a dangerous propagandist as a British

Police Find No Clue in Shooting

INDEPENDENCE, Nov. 21 (AP)—Authorities here are without a clue to the identity of the person responsible for the shooting last night of Mrs. Roy Esch as she was retiring through a window.

Each husband of the woman, asserts that just before the shooting, he heard an automobile drive up to the house, but on looking out of the window could see or hear nothing further. A few minutes later, the shot was fired and the car was driven from the place.

The shooting took place in the home of Esch's mother.

Injunction Hearings in Iowa Mine Case Ordered Postponed

CENTERTVILLE, Nov. 21 (AP)—Preliminary hearing of twenty-one miner union officials, miners and sympathizers charged with violating an injunction granted the Winifred coal company during the recent strike, was postponed today until Dec. 6.

The score and one defendants appeared in court today in response to warrants charging them with contempt of court for alleged picketing in undue numbers, and hooting and jeering men at work in a manner that constituted intimidation.

The Winifred mine had been operating under the 1917 scale of $8 per day, while the United Mine Workers were striking for reinstatement of the Jacksonville scale of $7.50 per day, which expired March 31.

Alaska Feels Quake

JUNEAU, Alaska, Nov. 21 (AP)—A severe earthquake at 6:15 a. m. today awakened many residents of Juneau. The motion lasted about 15 seconds. The tremor was strong enough to shake moveable objects, but no material damage was reported either in Sitka or Juneau.

The grand jury convened at 2 p. m. yesterday. O. C. Boyd was selected as bailiff and J. M. Leonard as foreman.

Grand jurors are: C. F. Burns of Hardin township, Charles Cerny, sr., of Fremont, Fred C. Cilek of Graham, Arthur Garwood of Sharon, J. M. Leonard of Cedar, Frank Lord of Scott and Frank Scanlon of Oxford township.

Flood Control Needed

HERBERT HOOVER has reported the decision of the Mississippi flood committee to the president, and the decision calls for the building of levees all along the river, a project which will cost in the neighborhood of $550,000,000.

This money will have to be taken from the pockets of those people in the east and the west, as well as from those of the Mississippi vicinity. Every one in this country should be willing, however, that the money be spent for this work.

This catastrophe endangers the lives of 1,500,000 citizens. In the great flood plain are 20,000,000 acres of the nation's richest land. This land and these people give to the nation practically 90 per cent of the total food supply. The Mississippi region is the nation's greatest asset and must be aided by the entire country.

Economically, the destruction rears throughout the country, on producers, consumers, manufacturers, distributors, and investors. It is bound to deduct something from the wages or the wellbeing of every citizen. This is the reason why the nation can not tolerate the destruction and shock which comes from the periodic recurrence of the Mississippi flood.

It is possible for the people in the river territory to add, not merely millions, but hundreds of millions to our national wealth—and support many millions of Americans in comfort. Flood control is a national problem and a national responsibility.

Co-eds and Football Success

EVERY word that Knute Rockne utters concerning football is swallowed as absolute fact by the general hero-worshipping public. Much of it is well worth digesting, but Rockne slightly exaggerates the great co-educational bodies of innumerable institutions when he attributes the success of his Notre Dame teams in great part to the fact that there are no women to take up the time and attention of his players.

Rockne has expounded many theories for the reason of the long lines of victories his teams have shown. Last year he believed that silk pants as part of the costumes of the players would help them win, and this year he has changed the color of the costume to green for some psychological reason.

As a matter of fact, Rockne seems to be wracking his mind continually for unusual reasons concerning his success, whereas the plain truth might very well be that Rockne is himself the cause, with his football sense and power of instilling it into his players, coupled with the fact that he has some thousands of excellent players to choose from each year.

A Native Theatre

THE production of foreign plays and the appearance of foreign actors and actresses on the American stage is drawing criticism from the corners of the republic. The great American masses would erect a Chinese wall around the nation's theatre.

The purpose of the theatre is to present to the public the literary art of the world, and not merely that of one nation. When any one country restricts its theatre to productions of its own authorship, that country sounds the death knell of its drama. Just as human beings and animals die of too much inbreeding, so does art.

That country which makes its theatre entirely native, deprives itself of the beauty created in other lands and consequently narrows its own viewpoint. We lose a much needed standard of comparison. Much that is worth while in an art sense has been produced in foreign countries. We do not compete with Italy, France, Germany, England, and old Greece in things aesthetic. American art is in its infancy. It must be nurtured and carefully cultivated to make it develop. To do this, we need to apply to it the enriching influence of the art of other nations.

Airing the Classrooms

THERE is one usual winter complaint which students at the university are exempt from making, and that is "It's too cold in this building."

The men who keep the fires burning in the university heating plant are certainly direct contrasts to the typical landlord. At 8 o'clock on the coldest mornings the buildings are warm even to the point of being uncomfortable.

By 11 o'clock, the atmosphere in certain classrooms is anything but conducive to study. Heat has been coming in as it should, but the instructor has failed to open any window for the foul air to get out. This happens particularly in large lecture rooms.

Fresh air fiends among the students are even worse abominations. The instructor himself should supervise the opening or lowering of windows, and he might find it easier to speak to sleepy, drooping classes if he occasionally does let in a little fresh air.

Imagine!

IMAGINE the stately ghosts of Washington, Lincoln, and Jefferson gazing in wonder on President Coolidge's latest and least elegant breakfast party. We wonder just what impresses the three got of "Big Bill" Thompson, Chicago's loud speaking papa; of Len Small, Illinois senator tried and acquitted of criminally embezzling his state's funds, but made to restore $650,000 of such funds by United States supreme court; of William Lorimer, ejected in 1911 from the United States senate for bribing the Illinois legislature which elected him.

Perhaps the shadowy eyes of Dolly Madison looked anxiously to the silver—perhaps if they didn't they should have.

Who can fancy the sentiments of that silent ghostly company when the departing "Bill" asked if anyone knew where he could "have a good time tonight?" and "where can I get a drink?"

What can have been the Spirit Lincoln's thoughts when, a few hours later in the house office building, Mayor O'Keefe of New Orleans affirmed that "Big Bill" will go down in history with Lincoln, Washington, and Roosevelt? Who will hazard a guess?

Let us earnestly pray that the gentlemen of the white house may sleep in sweet oblivion of the presence of rampant politicians and that the gay, the fair, the modest mistresses of the white house may continue to cast watchful eyes on the silver.

Fair and Warmer

SIR OLIVER LODGE, the authority on matters spiritual, predicts that man will soon have the weather under his control. He advances no theory on how it will be done, but he seems to consider such a state of affairs highly desirable.

On the contrary, it would be the greatest calamity that has ever struck the human race if man had to decide his own weather. Since the weather heaven sends meets with such universal disapproval, what would happen if mere man had the responsibility?

Probably a congressional committee on determination of the weather would be appointed, but the members would soon be buried under an avalanche of conflicting petitions on how to manage each day. Whether we should have a wet or a dry year would perhaps be made part of the platform for the political parties, and the people could vote their own weather.

If congress were arranging the climate, probably the wet and dry parties would disagree, bring each other to a deadlock, and a period would ensue without any weather. After a year's trial, man would certainly be willing to put the weather into the Lord's hands again.

Movie Won'ts

HERE are a few of the things the movies won't do in the future, according to an offer made before a federal trade commission conference by Louis B. Mayer, representing the picture producers:

- They will not disseminate profanity.
- They will not portray nudity.
- They will not ridicule the clergy.
- They will not show traffic in drugs.
- They will not give offense to any nation, race or creed.
- They will not picture seduction.
- They will not show arson, the use of firearms or methods of smuggling.
- They will not demonstrate the technique of murder.
- Nor is this all. Such things as theft, robbery, safe-cracking, and dynamiting of trains, mines and buildings will be portrayed with special care.
- With a program such as this few people can quibble. And it would be probably, ungracious to suggest that the pledge carries with it tacit admission that the "won'ts" of the future have been common practice in the past. The important fact is that the movie people are realizing that bad taste does not pay. They are beginning to clean house from within. Which is much better than cleaning house from without.

Chills and Fever

Confessions

Then there's the case of this new pavement down at Fairfield. They're going to christen it this week. And it's claimed that they're going to use milk instead of champagne. The Milky Highway as it were.

That's news—it wouldn't be news if it were champagne. Now, that's a startling statement to make in these a. v. years. It sounds like all the recent paving programs included champagne in the menu. It seems, though, that when anything of vital interest like warships or paving programs gets named, there always has to be a lot of breaking glass. Well, it's the same principle when you're a kid.

The folks used to tell us how we lay in the crib sucking the baby bottle, and then sucking like—with a whoop—we'd toss the bottle for a loss across the room. Crash! Another fifteen cents. But the folks didn't care . . . not much! Dad owned a drug store . . . and bottles came easy.

Sometimes George—that's the big brother—the works in the furniture business up home . . . dollar down and two bits when you catch me! Sometimes George would be stationed by the crib to catch the bottle when I started on the war-path. And if Mom didn't happen to be looking, he might smack me one. Just to keep peace in the family.

Well, we got back to George. We grew up. Big brothers don't like their baby brothers to grow up. Usually they grow bigger than the big brothers, and then "Babe" affectionately knocks the daylight out of him—compensation for all his past misery.

But we had brains—and so we swiped the car one evening when he had a hot date. And his girl threw him over. And we, elegantly perfumed as only 16 years can be, performed, cruised down Fourth street, Fourth street is the main drag in our town, and we were looking for something to pick up. Finally, we found her and went for a ride. It was our first date. (See Freud on compressions.) We certainly did some tall compressing that night. And heard a lot of funny stories that are only fit for young ears.

Well, we got to find out, this filly was George's girl. Boy howdy! It was made up for all the tall treatment we got in that crib! . . .

George finally won out, though. He didn't have to go to college.

And Dad—

Then there was Dad. Prohibition forced Pop out of the drug business and he became a traveling man. We often wondered about those traveling men until we became bell hop in a hotel. Then we were amazed. . .

For example, there was the time the House of David baseball team came to town. And THEY weren't worrying about suppressions . . .

Near the hotel there was a blind pig. The East calls them "speak easies," but the East always was high hat. Most people thought this joint was a pool hall—a gentleman's game. Well, that was where a lot of folks got fooled. But we still maintain it was a "gentleman's game."

The guy that did the "business" wore overalls. Overalls. And he wore hat-pint farmers. How do I know? Ask me another!

Then there was the respectable traveling man. (Joke.) One night he had some trouble with his girl friend. He came in, mourned awhile, and we fixed him up. He went out, but came back in a few minutes later and shook hands with the elevator. And it was then that we became conscience-stricken. Said I: "If that staff makes a fellow shake hands with an elevator, I quit."

That was the evening the night clerk won $5 at poker. He wanted to celebrate. So next day he got woody and threw a dinner.

But we didn't quit after all. There was too much excitement—and we were seventeen. And besides, we still had the delusion about the glories of a college education.

There were also those two women on the third floor. They came in at midnight one evening and rang for a bellhop. It was my "front" and I answered the call. We bellhops were always scrapping over this particular room. It seemed they wanted some chicken sandwiches; and they wanted some more; and after that they ordered a few more. By gosh, they threw a regular chicken sandwich orgy that night.

Have you ever been on a chicken sandwich party? Well, take my advice and stay away from them. It was my first chicken sandwich . . . ah, I can never forgive myself.

I hung around a couple of hours. We were telling stories. I remember one atrocious thing that run something like this—

No. 1—What's the matter with Dora?

No. 2—Aw, another gold-digger jumped her claim.

We've done other things. Once we cleaned cisterns. Another time we were short-order cook in a restaurant. (The restaurant went bankrupt, the night after we started work.) And we worked in a sausage factory.

But after that summer in the hotel, we were well prepared for college.

The Book World

Legitimate Adventure

Fifteen years ago mothers were destroying stray copies of "Peck's Bad Boy" that had been smuggled into the hands of eager youngsters. Our own volume of "Alice in Wonderland," dragged from a box of text books in the attic, its coverless pages spotted by brown rain drops that had seeped down the rafters, was confiscated and used to start a fire in the kitchen range. The pictures were considered bad for us, and they would have driven a modern commercial illustrator to drink and consequent delirium tremens.

We were supposed to get the delirium tremens directly through suggestion from the crocodile and serpent-things that crawled over Alice's margins. The picture of Alice, balancing on a distorted head and shedding great, round tears, while her uneven leg waded in the chimney above, and monsters from the imagination of the artist's pen swarmed the grounds below, was considered especially immoral.

There were approved books for us: Elsie Dinmore, Ruth Fielding, campfire girls, the Alger series, Boy Scouts, and whole troves of anaemic characters who wielded good influence, and we were allowed to browse through sets of Dickens and Cooper, printed with small, dirty type on creased and cracked paper.

Companies like Scribner's (New York) have opened a new era of artistic, legitimized fancy and adventure for youngsters. Old favorites like "Grimm's Fairy Tales" and "Treasure Island" are published in bindings so pleasing and with pictures so beautiful, that no parent need fear that his child will get terror complexes from them.

Maxfield Parrish, whose offensive jars, columns and nudes reproduced to fit walls of any size, has come into his own in the illustrations for Arabian Nights, where deep blues and mists and lovely nude figures are one with fantasy and magic. In Eugene Field's "Poems of Childhood," he has painted Wyndken, Blydenken and Ned as lovable, human boys, boating on a sea of mist with a proper background of crags and castles.

N. C. Weyth creates Long John Silver and the famous members of the pirate crew vividly to give the most satisfactory shivers.

Beard, Henty, Stevenson, Cooper, Scott, and Barrie—Scribner's has made them glow with the color and romance these men felt weave into their black and white word patterns.

An American Doll Festival

Prof. Edwin D. Starbuck, head of the institute of character education, has received a letter from Sidney L. Gulick, secretary of the committee for "World Friendship Among Children," which urges the promotion of international good will by letter acquaintance among children. The world federation of education associations, which recently held its third biennial meeting in Toronto, is also sponsoring the movement.

The letter describes the presentation of thousands of dolls to Japanese children, as follows: "The success of the 12,641 doll messengers of friendship in arousing the friendly thought for America of the entire Japanese people is almost beyond belief."

"At the official welcome in Tokyo on doll festival day (March 3) Ambassador MacVeagh made the presentation speech and many princes and princesses, scores of other distinguished ladies and gentlemen, and 2,000 children attended.

"As a return gesture of friendship, 5,000,000 school girls have given one each (about $25,000) with which about sixty doll ambassadors of good will have been specially made, with wonderful kimonos and lacquer furniture, who will come to America for our Christmas celebration. This has on us the duty of preparing for a welcome comparable with the Japanese welcome to our American dolls."

"In order to give the little Japanese ambassadors suitable receptions in Washington, New York, and a hundred other principal cities of our land, we estimate that we shall need at least $5,000."

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman is president of the organization, and George W. Wickelmaier is commission chairman. Donations are being received by Professor Starbuck or Mr. Gulick, 339 Fourth Avenue, New York, according to the Iowa educator.

Becky

A Serial of the Price of Glory
by RAYNOR SELIG

What Has Happened So Far

Becky McCloskey, young and goodlooking, trying to make her way alone in New York, meets Dan Scarlett who lives by his wits. He realizes she has a beautiful voice and offers to finance her for a share in her profits. Becky has made an ideal of John Estabrook, a very rich young man of high social standing. Through Scarlett's influence she joins a Broadway chorus. At the studio of Boris Abelard, a close friend of Estabrook's, Becky meets her ideal. She interests him and he kisses her. She stands dumbfounded. She expected him to be different. He apologizes. He hears her sing and little by little falls in love with her. Scarlett warns her that Estabrook will never marry her and begs her to get what she can out of him, but Becky turns a deaf ear. She meets Nan, Estabrook's sister, loved by young Lord Travers. Scarlett makes an introduction. He forces violent love to Nan, receives numerous love letters from her and is about to elope with her when Becky confronts them, convinces Nan that Scarlett is a scoundrel and blackmails her own character in doing so. Nan escapes. Estabrook tells Becky he loves her but says it in such a way that she imagines he does not wish to marry her. He offers her $100,000 provided she will leave the country and educate herself abroad. Becky misunderstands him and asks him to let her know the name of the bank where the money will be deposited, and leaves him heartbroken. Scarlett follows Becky who throws herself into the river. He rescues her, takes her to his apartment and reviving her tells her how they can clean up a fortune by using Nan's letters to him as blackmail. She indignantly refuses, offers him half the $100,000 Estabrook has deposited in her name, provided Scarlett will marry her and burn Nan's letters. She stipulates he is to be a husband in name only. Scarlett agrees. He pretends to burn the letters. Becky plans to make a great singer of herself. She goes to say goodbye to Boris. He asks her to marry him. She tells him she is already married. After several years of hard work in Paris, Becky becomes famous as a prima donna. One of her good friends, a Princess, is robbed of a wonderful jewel. Scarlett tells Becky that Abelard and Estabrook are visiting Nan, now Lady Travers, in England. At Lord Travers' country place Estabrook learns from Boris that he himself was to blame for driving Becky away. Becky's friend the Princess tells her Scarlett has stolen the jewel. Becky makes Scarlett promise to return the jewel and tells him she is going to divorce him at once. Scarlett leaves Paris and pretending his automobile has broken down appears at Nan's home in England. Lord Travers asks him to spend the night. Scarlett tells Nan he still loves her. She repulses him. He offers to sell her the love letters she wrote him which he has failed to destroy for $50,000.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER II
Nan did not stay very long with her guests. The great clock in the hall had hardly chimed ten before she arose, made an apology, and went to her room.
Geoffrey, who had been launched onto a prolonged discussion of the Manor's charms, offered to take Scarlett and Boris Abelard were left alone, and the former proposed that they follow the example of their hostess and retire, as they were rising early in the morning.
Abelard thought he would wait for the return of Geoffrey and Scarlett, he wanted to have a little chat with the ex-agent; he still hoped to glean some information concerning Becky McCloskey.
"I think you're doomed to failure," Estabrook remarked. "He's a easy sort of bird, this Scarlett. I don't know why, but I can't cotton to that fellow. I don't think Nan, for all her boldness, was pleased to have him here."
"You never told me he knew Nan, by the way."
"That's another queer thing, Boris. I never met the fellow but once in my life, and that in your studio. I thought I knew every chap who'd ever looked at my sister, but I'm afraid I was as blind there as . . . as I've been other ways."

"Young g-g-g-girls are subtle creatures, Jack. I always told you you kept Nan too closely caged up. It looks to me as though she's slipped out on the sly."
"I don't believe it. Nan's so awfully square. No, that can't be it. But there's something infernally strange about the matter, Boris, and I'll be glad, for one, when we're well rid of Mr. Scarlett."
"Y-yes. He's a t-t-trifle too familiar, for example. There's something deuced s-smooth and insinuating that I don't like."
"That's true, and Geoffrey, playing the host so gracefully, doesn't like either. Geoffrey smoked too much while Nan showed our Mr. Scarlett the garden. I'm afraid he suspects him of being an old flame, and me of being in on the secret."
"R-rubbish. Geoffrey never suspects anyone. He's so trusting that it's d-d-downright pathetic . . ."
Nan, in her large old fashioned bedroom, was thinking in almost the identical terms Abelard had used. She had not undressed, and her perturbation was too great to allow her a moment's rest. In the rosy lamp light she paced back and forth distractedly weighing the past and the future, wearily sinking into a chair only to arise almost immediately and resume her agitated motion.
Geoffrey was so good, so trusting. She loved Geoffrey, she was sure of it now. Scarlett filled her with a sort of mingling pity and terror, he seemed so insensible, so mad and reckless in his attack. She thought of him as she might have thought of some strange, savage animal, obeying impulses mysterious to her, destroying for the joy of destruction, crouching in wait. And Geoffrey, her own, her precious Geoffrey . . . must he suffer for this?
Irrelevant phrases ran through her mind . . . between the devil and the deep sea . . . out of the frying pan into the fire.
A wave of rage animated her; she should have refused outright, never have considered it. She should have defied Scarlett, out there in the garden, dared him to do his worst, his very worst. But, at once, her feeling of anger gave way to a lost yearning of terror. She saw Scarlett going to Geoffrey, worst still, Scarlett making a horrible scandal, dragging the honorable mansion of Travers through the dirt. No . . . it was unthinkable. How could she do that to Geoffrey Travers?
She flung open the window, leaning across the sill, allowing the soft wind to fan her face, drinking in the silent murmur of the oak leaves. She breathed deeply of the night.
And leaning out there, a sound floated up through the stillness, Geoffrey's laughter, young, buoyant, secure. She drew back, quaking, sinking on the floor. She put her hands over her face and prayed, frantically, desperately, sobbing into her hands. When she lifted her face, a little later, resolution was stamped in every line, on every curve of it. She knelt, listening attentively. The footsteps in the corridors had echoed and died. The house was still.
Resolutely Nan got up, sponged her face with cold water, and dusted powder over it. Then, very stealthily, she opened her door, and looked out into the hall. It was perfectly dark, but from under Geoffrey's door, opposite her own, shone a slender thread of golden light.
She crossed the hall, creeping, looking about her like a guilty person, like a thief. Outside of Geoffrey's room she stood motionless, her hand over her palpitating heart. Then, not daring to knock, she opened the door and slipped in, closing it silently behind her.
Geoffrey, in white pajamas that opened over his throat, giving him a sort of childish, helpless look, was lying back on a chintz-covered couch. He had a book in his hands, but his head had fallen back, and his eyelids drooped.
Nan fell on her knees beside him, putting her arms about him, tears starting to her eyes as she whispered: "Oh Geoffrey, my dear, my dear Geoffrey . . ."
He opened eyes heavy with dreams, smiled suddenly, and put one hand behind her head, pulling her down to him, pressing her face against his bare throat. He felt her tears, warm and moist on his skin, looked up and saw her agonized face, would have spoken loudly but that she pressed her mouth on his, smothering the words.

Then she drew back. "A dear kiss, Geoffrey," she said, terribly still, "dearer because you may not ever want to kiss me again."
He sat up, startled, half teasing, thinking it a whim of hers. But the earnestness of her face frightened him a little. She knelt at his feet looking up, holding his two hands against her. She whispered: "I want to be here, to touch you, while I say it."
"Say what, love? What has happened?"
She stared at him, ignoring the tears that welled up into her eyes, and ran down her cheeks.
"Geoffrey . . . this man Dan Scarlett . . . it wasn't an accident. He came on purpose . . ."
He crushed her hands in his.
"What are you saying? Wasn't an accident? Are you out of your senses?"
The tears dripped on their hands.
"I don't know. Perhaps I am. But I'm telling you the truth, Geoffrey darling. He came on purpose . . . to see me. He used to love me . . . tonight he said he still did . . . he wants me to . . ."
Geoffrey Travers smatched away his hands, his boy's face convulsed with amazed wonder.

Alleged Floggers Face Prosecution

Alabama Courts Try Thirty-four Men for Assaults

LIVERNE, Ala., Nov. 21 (AP)—One of thirty-four alleged masked floggers tonight stood at the bar of justice as Alabama, incensed by more than a score of floggings in Crenshaw county, sought to convict on charges of assault and battery.
After a day given over to several minor cases, organization of the jury and other preliminaries, the state today began to look among the thirty-three defendants present for its first case. The thirty-fourth man under indictment, the Rev. L. A. Nells, Georgiana, Ala., has been a fugitive since the grand jury action against him.
Gov. Bibb Graves, called by the state's attorney general, Charlie C. McCall, who is here personally prosecuting the cases, failed to answer a summons. Word from the executive mansion in Montgomery said he was slightly ill with influenza.
Among the more prominent of the men indicted for alleged complicity in masked violence in the county is Ira B. Thompson, Liverne attorney and reputed exalted cyclops of the Liverne Klavern of the Ku Klux Klan.

Arrested Mayor Waives Hearing

DES MOINES, Nov. 21 (AP)—Mayor Fred Hunter, and City Commissioners W. F. Mitchell and John Jenney, arrested Oct. 31 on charges of embezzlement in connection with the alleged diversion of sewer funds to pay expenses of an investigator of a sewer system, have waived preliminary hearing. Their cases now go to the grand jury for consideration.
Complaint was filed E. F. Dudley, a taxpayer, who alleged that the mayor and commissioners illegally diverted more than $1,000 to reimburse Howard Green, a Cedar Rapids engineer, for his expenses in investigating the construction of the Des Moines southeast sewer.

Horack Returns From Law Trip

Prof. H. Claude Horack returned Saturday night from a two weeks' trip to law schools in the southern states. Professor Horack inspected and visited schools as representative for the American Bar association, of which he is advisor to the council on legal education. The colleges of law in Virginia, North and South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, and Tennessee were visited.
The inspection by Professor Horack consisted of an investigation on the way the schools are complying with the American Bar association. He also offered suggestions to the colleges for bettering local conditions. The teaching force and the maintenance of standards and equipment were observed.
"Most of the schools of the south are not coeducational," Professor Horack reported. "There are very few women in the colleges, and especially is the number limited in the colleges of law."

The county's quota of 1,250 members was exceeded by approximately 300. Mrs. W. S. Slagle of Alton is chairman of the chapter and Mrs. Edward Fisher of Orange City served as director of the roll call.

Grange Re-elects Taber as Head

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 21 (AP)—Re-election today of Louis J. Taber, Columbus, O., as master of the national grange for the third successive two years term was looked upon by grange leaders as an endorsement of Taber's sustained fight for an "export debenture as the most logical solution to the farm relief problem."
The national grange voted to back the "export debenture plan," designed to give agriculture favorable tariffs on exports such as those now enjoyed by industry, at its 1926 convention in Portland, Ore. Re-indorsement of the debenture plan at the present convention was expected from indications seen in re-election of Taber. Taber represented the grange before congressional committees and presented the debenture plan in a nation-wide campaign.
Jesse Newsum of Indiana, introduced a resolution calling upon congress to provide for a great merchant marine to be operated by the government under the shipping board, with adequate appropriations from government funds.

Sioux County Red Cross Tops Quota

DES MOINES, Nov. 21 (AP)—The Sioux County Red Cross chapter is the first in the state to reach its membership quota in Iowa's eleven annual roll call. Hubert Utterback, state chairman, announced today.
The county's quota of 1,250 members was exceeded by approximately 300. Mrs. W. S. Slagle of Alton is chairman of the chapter and Mrs. Edward Fisher of Orange City served as director of the roll call.
Sioux City also exceeded its membership quota. Mrs. J. L. Brown is chairman, and Eugene Kelly, director. Mrs. Oscar Ruff, Sioux City, is district director. Both chapters are in her district.

Grange Re-elects Taber as Head

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 21 (AP)—Re-election today of Louis J. Taber, Columbus, O., as master of the national grange for the third successive two years term was looked upon by grange leaders as an endorsement of Taber's sustained fight for an "export debenture as the most logical solution to the farm relief problem."
The national grange voted to back the "export debenture plan," designed to give agriculture favorable tariffs on exports such as those now enjoyed by industry, at its 1926 convention in Portland, Ore. Re-indorsement of the debenture plan at the present convention was expected from indications seen in re-election of Taber. Taber represented the grange before congressional committees and presented the debenture plan in a nation-wide campaign.
Jesse Newsum of Indiana, introduced a resolution calling upon congress to provide for a great merchant marine to be operated by the government under the shipping board, with adequate appropriations from government funds.

$333,333 Dempsey - Kearns "Bout" Ends With No Decision

Trial Ends Without Guilt Connotations

Counsel for Plaintiff to Push Case Further Against Former Champion; Attorneys for Jack Chuckle Over Result

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 21 (AP)—One of a pair of Jacks called the other a knave today and the ensuing uproar completely obliterated, at least for the time being, the $333,333-33 damage suit against Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, by Jack Kearns, his erstwhile manager, for breach of contract.

After counsel for Kearns had charged Dempsey and his lawyers with deliberately "framing" the court, and Tex Rickard, boxing promoter, with having boasted that he had the case "in the bag," both sides agreed to end the trial in a "voluntary non-suit," a polite form of mistrial carrying no connotations of guilt.

Counsel for Kearns announced the case would be brought to trial again as soon as possible, but Dempsey's lawyers intimated that legal obstacles would be found in the path of such action and chuckled that Kearns had unintentionally got himself "up salt creek without a paddle," and would have a hard time getting back into the legal stream.

Driscoll Causes Postponement

The trial had been put over to today from the middle of last week, after jury selection and opening statements had been completed, on the statement of Arthur Driscoll, chief counsel for Dempsey, that he was suffering from grippe. The adjournment was made over objection of the plaintiff, Kearns. Arthur Sager, chief counsel for Kearns, requested that the jury be sent from the room and when they had filed out, said: "What I have to say 'your honor' is against the wishes of my client, the plaintiff Kearns, but we, his lawyers, overruled him."

"Last week this case was adjourned after Mr. Driscoll had delivered a most energetic opening address. He pleaded sickness, though he was to all appearance in the most robust health. The adjournment was granted over our protest and our subsequent demand that a juror be withdrawn and a mistrial was refused."

"I now charge that since that time the defendant Dempsey has been traveling about the state trumping up public sentiment for himself; he has appeared at political meetings and has talked over the air. I charge his attorney with most unethical action in arranging this postponement. I charge his spiritual advisor, George L. Rickard, with having openly boasted that he had the trial 'in the bag.'"

Rickard's ire up At this point the court was thrown into an uproar by Rickard's jumping to his feet and shouting "You're a contemptible liar." Rickard was pulled back into his chair as Sager continued.

"Your honor," Sager said, "I move for withdrawal of a juror and declaration of a mistrial because if this trial is not halted such a scandal will develop because of the actions of this defendant, these lawyers, and this George L. Rickard whose sinister shadow has been cast over this court room, that by comparison the actions of the Burns jury shadowing detectives in the Fall-Sinclair trial will smell like attar of roses."

Lengthy argument followed the making of this motion, counsel for Dempsey charging that Sager had made his charges, unsupported by affidavits, solely for the newspapers, and that Kearns never had the case brought to trial, but hoped by keeping it hanging over Dempsey's head to force him to make a settlement out of court.

May Select Iowa City as Scene of '28 Olympic Try

Prepare for Selection of Lawson as Head Coach of Team

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 21 (AP)—Accompanied by sharp and sometimes acrimonious debate, the American program for participation and preparation for the 1928 Olympic games took definite shape today so far as it is controlled by the amateur athletic union, in annual convention here.

Robertson's corps of assistants will be selected from about a score of nominees, including: Walter Christie, (Calif.); Dean Cromwell, (Southern California); Henry Schulte, (Nebraska); George Bresnahan, (Iowa); Steve Farrell, (Michigan); Harry Gill, (Illinois); and George Littlefield, (Wisconsin).

Three of the major Olympic try-out "plums" were awarded to Boston, including the final track and field trials, to be held in Harvard stadium July 6 and 7, the amateur boxing tryouts, probably in May and the marathon trial, to be held in conjunction with the annual Boston A. A. grind on April 9. In each case the national championships as well as Olympic tests will be involved.

The final track and field tryouts at Boston will be preceded by ten sectional preliminaries, to be held on or before June 23 in the following locations: New York city, Dallas, Detroit, Cincinnati, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Ore., Lawrence, Kansas, or Iowa City, Atlanta or Birmingham, and Denver. In addition, such college championships as the intercollegiate A. A. A. A. in the east, will be recognized as sectional qualifying trials.

The principal Olympic decisions consisted of paving the way for selection of Lawson Robertson of the University of Pennsylvania as head coach of the American track and field team that will go to Amsterdam, Holland, next July and in awarding sectional or national Olympic tryouts, which in the case of track and field sports, boxing, wrestling and gymnastics, will be combined with the 1928 national championships.

Fraternity Soccer Teams to Play in Tournay Thursday

Playing in the interfraternity soccer-football tournament will start Thursday on the grounds west of the field house. No definite schedule has been announced by the director, Bruno G. Marchi, but all fraternities will be given a chance to compete.

On account of the varsity team using the field in preparation for its game with Illinois, the interfraternity games which were scheduled earlier in the season were postponed. If bad weather prevents playing outdoors Mr. Marchi plans to use the field house for the remainder of the games.

Twenty-one teams have entered and for facilitating the making of a schedule they have divided into two groups. The winner of each group will receive permanent possession of a team trophy and in the final game between the group winners the victors will be awarded the large championship trophy.

The next four men to finish will also get a free Thanksgiving dinner. Second place winner will carry home a goose; third, a duck; fourth, a hen; fifth, a rooster; while the man leading the other end of the line will receive a tasty fresh egg.

Last year Jack Moulton, a member of the 1927 cross country team, won the cup and a turkey.

Armbruster Cuts Swim Squad Today

Coach David A. Armbruster will announce today the cut in the freshmen swimming squad. The coach has now completed all the time trials which he has been giving them to ascertain which members of the squad should be dropped.

Last night the first year men continued drilling on starts, endeavoring to get speed and distance on the push-off. As the polo men did not get much practice last week on account of the time tryouts, they will be given more attention this week.

Barry Plans Long Hawk Cage Drill

Promising Candidates Seek Vacant Guard Positions; Wilcox, Twogood Show Form in Hitting Basket

Determined that his men will regain the prestige which Iowa lost on the gridiron Coach Justin M. Barry has finally taken his cage aspirants into the field house for a long group of practice sessions before they meet Knox here on Dec. 5.

With their eyes set on the coming season and realizing that considerable work will have to be done every man on the squad is out to battle for a position. The gap left open by the loss of Charles McConnell and Ralph Hogan at the guard berths, and George Van Deusen at forward, is being sought by a goodly number of promising men.

The return of Frances Wilcox to take care of the center position and the offense and defense was given a chance to work against competition and several out of bounds plays were introduced. The success with which these plays met was promising, the first string taking the ball down the floor for a basket time and again. The plays were typical of the Barry style of basketball, with short pass and pivot, to get through the opponent.

The practice session last evening found such new men as Doyle Plunkitt, Morton Koser and Fred Lawson acting as teammates to Captain Twogood at forward. J. V. Addy was given a chance to replace Wilcox at center, and the guard berths were filled by Virgil David, Robert Kinnan, John Kunau, and Roy Hoffman. All of the men showed ability and a battle is looming for the defensive posts.

Schroeder Points Soccer Team for Initial Tilt With Illini

Iowa Mentor Gives Hawks New Plays

Varsity Shows Strength in Saturday's Game With Frosh; Lineup for Opening Fray Remains Undecided

With the first inter-collegiate soccer football game ever scheduled for an Iowa eleven but five days off, Coach E. G. Schroeder last night began pointing his Old Gold soccer team for the tilt with Illinois next Saturday at Urbana.

Using the fast freshman squad as opposition, the Hawkeys were sent through a long practice game. The coach is drilling them this week on some new plays for use against the Illini.

Forward Line Weak

The Old Gold team showed up good in the exhibition game Saturday against the freshmen, defeating them 4 to 1. Their chief weakness is in the forward line. While composed of several fast men they have failed to get together on some of the plays, but the work this week should smooth things over so that they will be able to put up a good battle with the Illinois team.

The coach has not announced a lineup for the Saturday game and there are several positions that two or three men are striving for. Len is certain of playing center forward, and Young will probably act as left outside. Young has been playing the position most of the season and looked good there in the game Saturday. Len will have little opposition for this position.

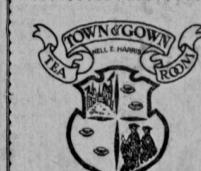

Margolin at Center

Margolin will undoubtedly perform at center half with Bector, Sheldon, Herr, Zalesky, as possible men for mates on the halfback line. Heywilde was goal guard for the freshmen Saturday and turned in a good performance. He will have a good chance for goal custodian, but Zurieky, who was playing for the varsity in that position Saturday has been working hard for the berth.

The Hawkeys will go onto the field next Saturday against a team having a slight advantage over them in experience. In the initial game for each school since the sport was revived this year, the Illinois team lost a hard fought battle to Ohio last Saturday by a score of 1 to 0.

We've devoted most of the space in this column to football, but now that the season is virtually over we'll try and give a few side lights on other activities. But before closing the column altogether to football we have a few remarks to make regarding Saturday's activities on the gridiron.

Iowa has one consolation in the defeat handed them by the Wildcats and that is they met Hanley's gang when they were at their best. It was the first time since the struggle with Illinois that the Wildcats had their first string intact.

After witnessing this Purple machine in action it is clear how the Illinois-Northwestern tilt was so closely fought. And then we might add that it is easily discernible why the Illini downed the Purple. The Northwestern eleven is weak on scoring the point after touchdown as evidenced by the fact that they failed in both attempts against Iowa the same as they did after the touchdown registered against the Illini.

It was a well working machine that faced the Hawkeys Saturday and we do not hesitate to say that the Purple back field is the equal to either that of Illinois or Minnesota. It had all the precision and drive that the Illinois backfield displayed on Iowa field when they met Ingwersen's crew Nov. 5.

While in Evanston we heard that there had been much dissension among the Northwestern team during the current season. If so it is just another evidence of how dissension among the players can wreck the hopes of a possible Big Ten championship team.

We are still lamenting the fact that Arnill hesitated in his feat of taking the ball on the goal line and racing seventy yards to a clear field only to be tackled from behind. It is only problematical, but we believe that if Arnill had scored that touchdown the Hawks would have won.

When sport series begin picking their all Big Ten team they will have to take into consideration the entire Purple backfield. The quartet is composed of Lewis, Holmer, Gustafson, and Levison. Anyone of the four is worthy of a place on any football team.

An Iowa Boy, Archer, of Ft. Dodge, saw service against the Hawks Saturday in the last quarter of the Iowa-Northwestern game and he made a good showing against the boys from his native state. He lugged the ball four times for a total gain of 23 yards.

At the beginning of the season Coach Ingwersen was in hard straight for a dependable punter. He tried various men at the task, and finally decided on Arnill to do the punting. Arnill has come through with a very credible performance. Against the Wildcats Arnill's punting was outstanding and on nearly every kick he was rushed.

Arnill is in a tie for twelfth place with Gustafson, of Northwestern. In the number of total points scored during the season, they have both registered 26. "Shorty" Almquist, Minnesota halfback, tops the list with 73 and is followed by Gilbert of Michigan with 64.

uation Rockne declared that "The alumni of Iowa should direct their attack upon the faculty where the fault obviously lies. If the truth were known Ingwersen is probably to be found a tool of dictatorship. He is likely forced to accept an assistant coach whether he wants him or not."

The Notre Dame coach concluded his remarks by taking a slap at athletic departments at state universities.

"They're the bullies of college athletics. They've been trying to run things for a number of years—duy-ing and brow-beating. The practice should stop, for the sake of athletics, at least."

MacNider Christens Plane "Spirit of Unrest;" Flies 50,000 Miles in Year

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 21 (AP)—With a twelve-month record of 500 flying hours and more than 50,000 miles covered since September, 1926, Hanford MacNider, who describes himself as a "half baked pilot," feels that he is justified in having christened his airplane "The Spirit of Unrest."

The graphic record of his wanderings on official or unofficial business shows Bolling field, Washington, as the hub of more than forty flights for all parts of the country, and MacNider's home at Mason City, as a sort of secondary hub with a score or so of starts noted.

The trips had to do with inspection of regular army, national guard and organized reserve activities in most of the states of the union. On one or two of them, between Washington and Iowa and between Los Angeles and Salt Lake, Mrs. MacNider went along in an army transport ship, but most of the going was in "The Spirit," a $50,000 Curtiss O-1 with special marking indicating that it carries the assistant secretary of war.

Hawkeye Fencing Candidates Drill

Candidates for the Hawkeye fencing team are working out twice a week in the field house gymnasium. Due to the fact that the season is still far away only a limited number are reporting, the majority of which are new men.

Mason Matthews, who has charge of the rehearsals is drilling the men in the fundamentals of the sport. Instruction in advance, retreat, parry and thrust take up most of the time. Development in speed will come as the candidates get used to the various tricks.

Of the regulars who are expected to report there will be former Captain Kirschner, Captain Matthews, and Wykoff. One regular, Bailey, is lost by graduation.

Intensive work will not begin until the fore part of December as the season will not open until the latter part of January.

Hawkeyes Record Mediocre Season on Harrier Paths

Narrow Margin Losses Mark Old Gold's Dual Meets

The Iowa cross country team ended its season last Saturday by taking fourth in the conference run at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Captain Leonard E. Hunn, running his last cross country race for Old Gold, was first of the Iowa men to finish, placing fifth. Brady took eleventh for Iowa; Cue, twenty-third; McCammon, twenty-seventh; Coffie, twenty-eighth; and Moulton, thirty-second.

The three schools leading Iowa were the same that defeated the Hawkeyes in their three dual meets of the season, Wisconsin, Illinois, and Minnesota.

The season has been fairly successful in spite of the unimposing record of being defeated in all of the duals with other Big Ten schools. All of the margins of victory were close, not exceeding eleven points in any case.

On Oct. 22 the Gophers conquered the Hawkeyes by the score of 24-34 at Minneapolis. Brady took third for Iowa; Captain Hunn, fourth; Elliott, eighth; Cue, ninth; and Moulton, tenth.

Two weeks later the Illini defeated Iowa on Finkbine field by the score of 27-29. Captain Hunn easily captured first with Brady closely following for second place; Moulton was sixth; Cue, ninth; and McCammon, eleventh.

On the same day that the Hawkeye football team overwhelmed the Badgers the Iowa harrier were again defeated in their dual with the strong Wisconsin harrier team, winners of the conference race last Saturday. The score was 22-33. Captain Hunn took third; Brady fifth; Coffie, seventh; Cue, eighth; and Moulton, tenth.

Captain Hunn's record for the season is not so impressive as that of last year. In 1926 he was undefeated in the duals and tied for first in the conference. During the past season he was apparently not up to his stride, at least not in the conference race and the duals with Minnesota and Wisconsin. Only in the Illinois dual did he show that brand of consistent running he displayed the year before in winning the conference race, for against the Illini he finished far in advance of Dave Fairfield who took second at the conference Saturday.

Of the six men who have represented Iowa this season as point winners Captain Hunn and Coffie will be missing next year. But there will be a likely list of reserves from which to pick men to fill the vacancies. Depping, Derry, Fleming, Morrison, Paulus, and Waffle will return to school next fall.

And there is an unusual group of freshmen harriers to fill out the squad: P. Kelly of Parnell, W. H. Everingham of Ft. Madison, B. H. Turner of Anita, L. W. Burns of Council Bluffs, M. McCall of Gary, Ind., and F. H. Stutzman of Oshkosh, Wis., being the outstanding men.

Ohio Abolishes Team Captains

Act on Theory That Campus Politics Hurt Sports

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 21 (AP)—On the theory that campus politics has interfered with proper functioning of Ohio State athletic teams, the university athletic board has abolished the traditional election of captains in all sports.

Action of the board was taken Nov. 10 but announcement was postponed until the football season was concluded. The board made no explanation accompanying the announcement. Athletes and athletic officials have expressed themselves as feeling the old system had interfered on some occasions with selection of logical men as captains.

Sometimes the strife born during the annual elections of captains was carried over into the following season with a resulting bad effect on the team morale and its showing in competition, the officials believe.

The campus political situation, it is learned, from the officials, arises most largely from coalitions of fraternities and their division into hostile camps.

Under the new system to be used at the university, the coach of the sport involved will designate a field leader for each game. At the end of the season the letterman in the sport will select one from their number as honorary captain.

Ohio State is the first Western conference university to try the method.

Captains already elected will retain their titles.

Phi Kappa Psi and Delta Chi will play Wednesday at 7 p.m. and Sigma Alpha Epsilon will play Sigma Phi Epsilon at 7:20 p.m. Seventeen teams have entered the tournament and have been divided into two groups. One game will be played in each section every day.

The final game will be played Dec. 3 between the best team of each section for the tournament championship. Report Wheat in Argentine Spotted Damaged by Rust May Cause Deficit in World's Supply of Grain

CHICAGO, Nov. 21 (AP)—George C. Bryant, crop observer for Jackson Brothers, cables that houses today as follows from Buenos Aires: "Drove 1,300 kilometers in Santa Fe and Cordoba provinces. Condition wheat crop quite spotted. Black rust is prevalent in damaging quantities in Santa Fe, but negligible in Cordoba. Weather unfavorable now. Average yield indicated this time about eleven bushels. Frost has made considerable light weight wheat, samples running as low as fifty-four pounds per bushel with highest test sixty-four. Corn generally good but some quite late and badly needing rain."

Russell's News, New York, estimates the world wheat supply at 800,000,000 bushels and says the average estimates of world's requirements are 787,000,000 bushels. It is added that this apparent surplus might be turned into deficit by any serious loss in Argentine. Last year's world disappearance of wheat was 815,000,000 bushels. This year since July 1 the world disappearance has increased 7,000,000 bushels over last year and since Aug. 1 has increased to 8,000,000.

Railroads Vital, Says Executive

ST. LOUIS, S. D., Nov. 21 (AP)—The railroads, "whose business it is to handle everybody's business," were pictured as of vital importance in the development of this country by H. E. Byram, co-receiver of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, in a talk tonight before the association of commerce here.

"Manufacturers have come to depend upon the receipts of today's freight for tomorrow's operation of their plants," he said. "Interruptions of traffic have been eliminated almost entirely. Car shortages, for many years considered a necessary evil, are no longer experienced."

The Milwaukee road, he said, placed thousands of additional freight cars at the call of its patrons last year by increasing the number of miles per freight car per day 15 per cent above 1926. In the 30 months ending June 30, 1927, the roads expended $32,000,000 for new equipment, yards, tracks and other improvements, he said. He predicted that by this means and by efficient operation it would have lost none of the "good" will gained in 80 years of existence "when it emerges from receivership."

He reminded his audience that the Milwaukee road payrolls in South Dakota amount to $4,800,000 annually, and that the company pays the state $1,200,000 annually in taxes. He predicted an increase of 100,000-000 bushels over last year in the state's grain crop.

Market and Financial News

Operators for Rise Boom Stocks, Heavy Sales Lower Prices

NEW YORK, Nov. 21 (AP)—Operators for the rise, aided by a series of favorable trade developments started to mark up prices from the opening of today's stock market, but heavy selling developed among the standard industrials during the afternoon, checking the rise and leaving final quotations irregularly lower. More than twenty-five issues, including a number of coppers, public utilities, foods, tobacco and medium-priced motors, attained new peak prices for the year, or longer.

Increases were announced during the day in the prices of brass and export copper. From steel centers also came unofficial reports of another increase in steel prices.

General Motors fell back more than three points to 128 1/2. Hupp and Packard, which have been widely mentioned in merger reports, attained new peak prices, the former climbing nearly five points to 32 1/2.

Although directors of Dupont declared extra dividends of $4.25 and raised the regular annual rate from $8 to $10, the stock broke seven points to 31 1/2 on the traditional "selling on the good news."

Rails yielded with the industrials, but the losses were not as large. Spanish and Japanese currencies were reactionary, but most of the other leading foreign exchanges gained ground. The increase in the premium on the Canadian dollar resulted in the further shipment of gold to Montreal. Sterling held firm around the year's high of $4.87 1/2 for demand bills.

Considerable Profit Taking Turns Bond Prices to Irregular

NEW YORK, Nov. 21 (AP)—Considerable profit-taking developed in today's bond market, and prices turned irregular after an earlier period of firmness. The sound position of the money market, with ample funds at easy rates, combined with a further falling-off in new issues to supply a solid foundation, and recessions were moderate.

The heavy demand for treasury issues appeared to have been supplied, as only a few of the bonds changed hands at firm prices.

Industrial issues supplanted the rails as market leaders, particularly some of the oils.

Rather brisk buying developed among Latin American obligations, particularly the eight and 7 1/2 per cent bonds of the Peruvian republic, both of which advanced about two points to new peak prices. German issues continued to drift downward, accompanied by some of the Italian and Japanese securities.

Benjamin Speaks to Hiller Club of Settlement Work

"The biggest thing in life is learning to understand one another and the settlement movement has done much toward achieving this," Prof. G. G. Benjamin, of the department of history told members of the Hiller club Sunday afternoon.

"Workers go down into these submerged districts," Professor Benjamin continued, "and by seeing into the lives of the people who live there, learn that the other half isn't so bad after all."

Professor Benjamin drew specific illustrations of his points from observations made at the university settlement in New York where he lived from 1907 to 1919 while he was teaching in the College of the City of New York.

Higher Wheat Price Result of Reports Argentine Damage

CHICAGO, Nov. 21 (AP)—Argentine crop damage reports, as well as an unlooked for decrease of the United States visible supply total, led to higher prices today for wheat. Closing quotations on wheat were firm at 8 1/2 to 8 1/4 net advance, with corn unchanged to 1 1/2 up, oats 1 1/2 to 1 1/4 off, and provisions varying from 1/2 decline to a rise of 2 1/2 c.

Wheat values ranged upward today from the start. Phenomenal hot winds were said to be injuring the quality of wheat in north Argentine, temperatures as high as 112 being reported.

Corn values had a late rally, ascribed to prospective rain or snow over the corn belt and to a decrease of nearly 2,000,000 bushel in the corn visible supply. Besides, shipping sales of corn here were the best in some time.

Much of the time today, corn lacked the active support it has had recently.

Broomhall predicted that the European demand for corn would continue good until prices became prohibitive. World's shipments were 7,269,000 bushel.

Legal Head, Former Klan Member, Plans Prosecution in Flogging Case

LIVERNE, Ala., Nov. 21 (AP)—Attorney General Charlie C. McCall of Alabama, a former member of the Ku Klux Klan, will direct personally the prosecution of thirty-four men who will go on trial here today on charges of flogging more than a score of men and women in Crenshaw county.

The trial will climax the state's fight to "stamp out masked violence," and follows action of a special grand jury which charged all the thirty-four men with kidnapping and assault and battery for alleged participation in robbed whippings.

Several men of prominence, including Ira E. Thompson, Liverne attorney and alleged cyclops of the local klavern of the Ku Klux Klan, are defendants.

Among the score or more of victims were several women, one of whom, Mrs. Fannie Clements Daniels, was taken from her mother's home and beaten into insensibility. Miss Daniels said she could ascribe no reason for the whipping.

In its report to Circuit Judge A. E. Gamble, who presided at the investigation, the grand jury said "all the men indicted are members of the Ku Klux Klan" and added that "in every instance except one the whippings were perpetrated by men wearing the robes and hoods of the Ku Klux Klan."

The report singled out James Esdale, grand dragon of the Klan in Alabama and other officials of the organization as being "derelict in their duty as citizens in their conduct of Klan affairs" and likened "barbaric conditions" in Crenshaw county to those existing at the time of the Spanish inquisition.

Soon after the grand jury report Attorney General McCall, who directed the investigation, resigned from the Klan, declaring his inquiry into numerous floggings had convinced him that the Klan "is the greatest single menace to constituted authority in the state."

In a series of swift thrusts covering virtually the entire state, and extending over a period of little more than three months, the attorney general has obtained a score of convictions and more than 120 indictments of persons accused of masked violence.

Scout Organization Revises Handbook

The "Handbook for Boys," published by the organization of Boy Scouts, has been revised and was released recently. William D. Murray of the executive board of Boy Scouts and chairman of the editorial board, estimated that the handbook is read by more than 5,000,000 boys.

C. of C. Entertains Coach Ingwersen, Team at Luncheon

"Win or Lose" We're Back of You," Says Breene

"Win or lose—we're back of you!" exclaimed Harry D. Breene, speaking for members of the chamber of commerce and the people of Iowa City, to Burt Ingwersen and his team, guests at the chamber of commerce luncheon yesterday.

Henry G. Walker in his talk told of having followed the Iowa teams since 1900, and of being acquainted with each of the twenty-eight captains.

"No captain has measured up to expectations better than 'Spike' Nelson," he affirmed. Mr. Walker continued with the reproach of outsiders who have criticized. He emphasized that business men are the first to be affected by the outcome of a football season. He asserted that those of Iowa City are satisfied with the present coaching program.

"The chamber of commerce and the people of Iowa City are behind the team and the coaching system, and are proud of you!" he concluded.

Coach Burt Ingwersen declared that his conscience was clear and that no apologies were needed. Continuing, he contrasted the Iowa team with others composed entirely of veterans, and pointed out the caliber of the men on our team. He said that he is proud of the team and the way it has fought, and does not consider this an unsuccessful season. Throughout he has told the men to look to the future, to next year's team, and think football all the time until next fall. Then go out and win.

Members of the team who were present were introduced, after which time was given to the introduction of Coach Walter Knox and his little Hawks, also guests of the chamber of commerce. Members expressed their desire to back this team in the same way they are backing the Iowa eleven.

Court Decides Suit for Divorce; New Petition Comes Up

Beryl M. Douglas, who was granted a divorce from her husband, Elmer E. Douglas, yesterday before Judge Ralph Otto in district court, was granted no alimony by the jury. The plaintiff and defendant were married in Iowa City, Nov. 28, 1926.

Mrs. Douglas asked divorce because of cruel and inhuman treatment. The divorce action of Clara Cross against her husband, Sidney Cross, of Hills, was started yesterday afternoon. They were married June 29, 1904, in St. Louis, Mo., and lived together until April 18, 1927. Mrs. Cross is suing for divorce alleging she has been cruelly treated. She asks $15 a week alimony and custody of the five minor children.

Iowa Death Rate Shows Increase

DES MOINES, Nov. 21 (AP)—An increase in the Iowa death rate during 1926 from 1,004 to 1,051 deaths per 100,000 population has been announced by the department of commerce.

The increase, according to the report, was largely due to increases in the death rates from influenza (from 31 to 46 per 100,000 population), diseases of the heart (from 149 to 164), pneumonia (from 68 to 75), whooping cough (from 4 to 7), and cancer (from 104 to 107).

Diseases of the heart again led the list of causes, with 370 deaths attributed to it. Cancers and malignant tumors were second with 2,593, cerebral hemorrhage and softening third with 2,516, pneumonia fourth with 1,811, and nephritis fifth with 1,719.

During the year 1,465 Iowans died from accidental and unspecified external causes. Accidental falls took a toll of 389 lives, automobile accidents 264 and railroad accidents 169. The death rate from automobile accidents decreased from 11.2 to 10.9 per 100,000.

Yoder Says Stage Set for Change in Italian Government

With agrarian, industrial, and political systems failing to meet the needs of the people, the stage is set for a revolution in Italy, says Dale Yoder of the college of commerce.

"Fascism gives few indications of understanding the situation or of removing the causes of dissatisfaction," Mr. Yoder asserts. In no sense of the word is the present government representative. The people are the victims rather than the masters. Elections are farcical, dozens of newspapers have been suppressed and plants have been destroyed.

A new history, glorifying Italy's past and Mussolini, at the same time that it sanctifies the Fascist doctrines, must now be used in all the schools.

$600,000 SUIT SPLITS THAW FAMILY

Decision has been reserved in the New York Federal Court in the action of Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw of Pittsburgh (left), widow of William Thaw and mother of Harry K. Thaw, to set aside a gift of $600,000 made by her to her grandson, Lawrence Copley Thaw (right). Mrs. Thaw declares she was "unduly influenced" by her grandson.

F. G. Reddick Gets Divorce; Must Pay Wife $15 Alimony

Frank G. Reddick was granted a divorce from his wife, Nellie Maud Reddick yesterday in district court before Judge Ralph Otto. Although the action was started by the husband and he was given a favorable decree he will have to pay his former wife $15 a week alimony as ruled by the jury.

The plaintiff and defendant were married in Morning Sun Nov. 1894 and have reared eight children. They lived together until July 1923 when the defendant left the plaintiff after having been refused a divorce.

William R. Hart was the attorney for the plaintiff and Will J. Hayek for the defendant.
