Committee Goes to Des Moines to Recommend Judge

Johnson County Bar Endorses Byington to Governor

A committee of four attorneys appointed by Henry G. Walker, will go to Des Moines today to present to Gov. John Hammill the recommendation passed by the Johnson county bar association endorsing O. A. Byington for appointment as judge of the eighth judicial district to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Ralph Otto.

Henry Negus, Walter M. Davis, Edward L. O'Connor, and P. B. Olson comprise the committee. In an effort to keep the matter as nearly nonpartisan as possible, the group appointed is composed of two democrats and two republicans.

A resolution passed by the bar at the opening of its meeting Wednesday provided that a majority vote for any candidate would suffice to endorse him and that all members of the bar would support the candidate so selected.

Of the forty-five votes cast in the final ballot, Byington received twenty-four; Frank Messer, eleven; Harold Evans, nine; and William R. Hart, one.

Byington was graduated from the college of law in 1881 and has been practicing law here continually since that time with the exception of acting judge of the eighth district one term from 1903 to 1907. He is also president of the Citizen's Loan and Trust company of Iowa City.

While nearly two-thirds of the Johnson county bar association is composed of republicans, the attorneys felt that a democrat should be recommended to fill Judge Otto's vacancy as he was affiliated with that party. Byington is a democrat.

Jessup Announces Robert E. Neff as Head of Hospitals

Former Indiana Man Assumes Position Here in Month

Announcement was made yesterday of the appointment of Robert E. Neff, of the University of Indiana, to the post of administrator of the university hospitals here, by President Walter A. Jessup and Dean Henry S. Houghton of the college of medicine.

For the last nine months the hospitals have been under the supervision of a college of medicine executive committee.

Dr. Neff, a graduate of the University of Indiana, has been administrator of the James Whitcomb Riley and Robert W. Long memorial hospitals at the Indiana state institution at Bloomington for the last fifteen years. He also served as the registrar of the college of medicine there.

Resigns from Indiana

His resignation was announced at Indianapolis yesterday. He will begin his work on the Iowa campus within the next four weeks.

The appointee is at present serving his third term as president of the children's hospital association of America; he is president-elect of the Indiana hospital association, president of the Indiana council of social agencies, vice-president of the Indiana state health council, a member of the state purchasing committee of Indiana, former president of the Indiana chapter of the American association of social workers, and is a member of the Indiana society for mental hygiene and the Indiana State conference of social workers.

Likes New Hospital

It is understood that Dr. Neff decided to accept the position at the University of Iowa because he regards the work in Iowa's new $4,500,000 medical and hospital plant as offering the best opportunity in this country in his particular field.

His work in Indiana received the praise of President W. L. Bryan of the University of Indiana, who said that it would be difficult to find a man to fill the place vacated by Dr. Neff.

The new administrator is 42 years old, married, and has two children. His offices will temporarily be made in the university general hospital.

Hiram Reed Starts Battle to Escape Life Imprisonment

OTTAWA, Ill., March 1 (AP)—Hiram Reed began his fight to avoid imprisonment today after the state rested its case against the young farmer, charged with bombing a school house.

A dozen witnesses testified for the prosecution that Hiram admitted placing dynamite in the stove of the Pleasant Valley school to avoid marrying the teacher, Iola Bradford. Reed was also quoted as saying he had never intended to wed the girl, as he had promised. His first confession made to the state's attorney at the county jail was admitted as an exhibit and read to the jury. After describing graphically, in the confession, how he stuffed the dynamite into the top of the stove, young Reed said: "I intended that the dynamite should explode when the stove was started by Iola Bradford the next morning."

The confession was the only one of three obtained from Reed that bore his signature. The parents of both Iola and her former lover were in court today.

Langdon Defeats Speakers in Jessup Oratorical Contest

Titles Speech "Broken Bulwarks"; Morris Bannister Next

Herschel Langdon, A3 of Gilmore City, was judged winner of the annual Jessup oratorical contest last night in the natural science auditorium and gained the right to represent Iowa at the Northern Oratorical league contest in Minneapolis May 4. In his oration, "Broken Bulwarks," he denounced the present system of education as not being the traditional bulwark of liberty.

Langdon argued that professors cannot train future citizens of democracy as long as they have no professional or personal freedom. He referred to them as having the humility of a penitent sinner at a Billy Sunday revival. He ended his oration with the statement, "If democracy is to be realized we must have freedom in education."

Honorable Mention for Tracy

Morris B. Bannister, A2 of Hamilton, was chosen alternate on his oration, "Intellect on Ice," which denounced the university as totally unfitting men for leadership of the common people.

James T. Tracy, A3 of Ft. Morgan, Colo., was given honorable mention for his oration, "Youth Passes the Buck." He described true emancipation for woman as partnership in marriage, but defended the eugenics mother. He roused the audience to laughter on his definition of the modern woman as not only raising the children but the "wherewithal."

Winner is Debater

The winner of the contest is a member of the intercollegiate debate team which will make the Western Reserve tour this year. He is a member of Acacia, Delta Sigma Phi, honorary forensic fraternity, Phi Delta Gamma, professional forensic fraternity, and Zetaganian literary society.

Judges of the contest were Prof. Chas. Woobert of the speech department, Arthur A. Hopkins, graduate student in speech, and Lester R. Breniman, graduate student in speech. Prof. C. M. Updegraff of the college of law, presided at the contest.

Dirigible Makes Trip to Capitol

WASHINGTON, March 1 (AP)—The dirigible Los Angeles was homeward bound tonight, having cast loose at 10:43 o'clock this morning from the mooring mast of the aircraft tender Patoka in Quacanayabo bay, Cuba. She is expected to reach her hangar at Lakehurst, N. J., sometime after noon tomorrow, the 1,650 mile lap from Cuba rounding out her Panama flight.

Turning westward along the southern coast line of Cuba after quitting the Patoka, the Los Angeles, at 2:30 o'clock was eight miles south of Cienfuegos, second largest city on the island. From that city her course led the dirigible across the island to Havana, which was reached at 6 o'clock and thence over the gulf stream at the Bahamas and up the Atlantic coast of this country. Prospects were for favorable weather during most of the flight, although the cyclonic disturbance that was over Bermuda yesterday caused concern to aircraft men here. The naval station at Lakehurst advised Lieut. Commander C. E. Rosendahl, commanding the Los Angeles, that conditions for docking would be favorable tomorrow night.

The Los Angeles has been away from her hangar since 6:15 o'clock Sunday morning, when she began the 2,200 mile non-stop flight to Panama.

While some of the stories shown in the photostatic copies of the newspaper pages tell of Mrs. Grayson packing an automatic pistol into her pocket before she took off, and saying, "there will be no turning back this time," Mason said these stories are not offered as allegations, but merely as part of the press chronology of the flight, the only history available.

"The Dawn" hopped off from Roosevelt field for Harbor Grace, N. F., on the morning of Dec. 23 on the first leg of a flight to Denmark. Lieut. Oscar Omland was at the controls and Fred Koehler, motor expert, was a passenger.

Royster Censures Language of Youth

Gives Wide Reading as Remedy for Vocabulary

Declaring that the youth of today has the most standardized, unimaginative language of any other group, Dean James F. Royster, of the graduate college of North Carolina, opened the ninth annual conference of English teachers.

"Anyone belonging to the group who is ten minutes behind the time 'is all wet,'" Dean Royster said, "and anyone who is ten minutes ahead is 'all wet.'" The problem is too big to suggest a cure off hand, but the biggest defect in the language of youth is its lack of individuality, its stereotyped phrases.

With the initial meeting of the conference yesterday at 11 a. m. in the north room of Old Capitol, 150 teachers of English and graduate students had gathered to hear the opening address of Dean Royster.

Wide reading and accumulation of a good vocabulary were suggested as a method of overcoming this standardization of speech by Dean Royster. "It is not necessary to know all the intricacies of grammar, if one knows a noun from a verb when both are coming down the same street, but it is necessary to have a good background," he continued.

During the symposium on the subject of improvement of the English of the college and high school students, which followed the dinner at Iowa Union at 6 p. m., Dean

Give Extreme Penalty to Performer of Operation

CHICAGO, March 1 (AP)—After three and a half hours of deliberation, a jury tonight convicted Dr. Ament Rongetti of murder and fixed his punishment at death for performing an illegal operation on Loretta Enders, 19, causing her death.

The doctor, who owns the Ashland Boulevard hospital is the first man given the death penalty in Cook county since Illinois adopted the electric chair.

His case went to the jury shortly before 6 o'clock and it was reported that he was voted guilty on the first ballot, the remaining ballots being taken to determine the extent of his guilt and the penalty.

He was accused of performing an illegal operation on the young woman and refused to do another operation that may have saved her life because she did not have sufficient funds.

The doctor appeared stunned and dazed by the penalty of death. He remained quiet and did not say a word when taken back to his cell. His wife, however, who accompanied him to court, became hysterical and screamed after hearing the verdict. Reed Breaks Into Presidential Race

LOS ANGELES, March 1 (AP)—Senator Reed of Missouri today signed his declaration of candidacy in the presidential primary to be held in California May 1 and announced "we will fight it out."

He entered into a race expected by his followers to bring a show down among the forces of Governor Smith of New York, the follower of William G. McAdoo and the Reed supporters.

Friends throughout the state organized petitions in his behalf. While McAdoo, who battled with Smith for 103 ballots in the 1924 convention has withdrawn as a candidate, managers of Senator Reed's campaign said they understood some of the McAdoo followers would seek a delegation from California either pledged to a "straight-out dry" or instructed.

Silent on Rivals

Senator Reed tossed his hat into the presidential ring, after calling upon democrats in a speech his right to forget their differences of the wet and dry issue and to have tolerance on religious and racial questions. He did not mention either McAdoo or Smith whose followers have divided on these issues. He declared the campaign issue was "restoration of honesty to the government," and he argued that democrats "will never get anywhere if everybody wants everything in the platform."

All for Democrats

The Missouri democratic candidate of his previously sanctioned the entry of his name in the Wisconsin primary.

"I repeat what I have said on the platform through the west," Senator Reed said, as he signed the papers handed to him by Milton K. Young, chairman of the "Reed for president" club here, "that I am more interested in the democratic party welfare than in my own candidacy and I am fighting for the issues which I think will unite the party."

California has twenty-six votes in the democratic convention.

California Doctor Finds New Vitamin

BERKLEY, Cal., March 1 (AP)—Discovery of a new vitamin, the sixth known to science, was announced here today by Dr. Herbert M. Evans, head of the department of anatomy of the University of California.

Vitamin F is the designation given by Dr. Evans to the discovery and he says it is an essential food element for the normal growth of animals and particularly for the development of sexual faculties. Its special domain is the giving to nutrition of those qualities necessary to reproduction.

Experimented Three Years

The discovery resulted from three years of research and experimentation on small animals, chiefly rats and guinea pigs. In this Dr. Evans was assisted by Dr. George O. Burr, noted chemist, now with the University of Minnesota, and Dr. Samuel Lopkovsky of the chemical staff of the anatomy laboratory of the University of California.

Although the new vitamin has been found and classified, no claim is made that all is known about it. Studies are going forward to find out what foods contain it that are most suitable to animal, especially human, consumption.

Lettuce and Liver Effective

The experiments on the rats and guinea pigs disclosed that lettuce and liver are especially potent in their effects. It was announced. A caution was made, however, against assuming that this vitamin can be manufactured and sold readily as certain glandular extracts and their substitutes have been.

Speaking of the results on animals, Dr. Evans said that those used in the tests attained scarcely more than half their normal growth without the vitamin content in their food and remained sexually immature. Natural food was necessary to awaken their growth and convert them into heat by adult animals.

Hays Owns Up in Senate Probe of Sinclair Case

WASHINGTON, March 1 (AP)—Will H. Hays, former postmaster general, testified today before the senate oil committee that Harry F. Sinclair had handed him a total of $260,000 in liberty bonds for use by the republican national committee after the oil operator had leased Teapot Dome.

Of this amount $160,000 actually was used to help extinguish the committee deficit resulting from the 1920 presidential campaign, which Hays directed as chairman of the national committee, the remaining $100,000 being returned to the wealthy oil operator.

Occurred in 1923

The transaction occurred in 1923 after the continental trading company of Canada had made its $3,080,000 in profits and gone out of business, but Hays said and Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, agreed with him, that he knew nothing of the continental at that time.

When testifying before the same committee in 1924, the former cabinet officer and now a major figure in the moving picture industry, placed Sinclair's contribution at $75,000 and on that point was sharply questioned by Senator Walsh and Senator Bratton, democrat, New Mexico.

He explained that the $75,000 was all he was asked about at that time and he did not volunteer information about the other because the plan had been to return all of it to Sinclair.

Hays Admits Part

Reading a prepared statement to which he referred repeatedly during his cross examination, Hays explained that he took a hand in wiping out the 1920 campaign deficit because he felt a personal responsibility in the matter. Although he had retired as chairman of the party organization, Hays said he personally solicited funds from Sinclair, among others.

The oil operator's personal contribution toward the deficit was $75,000, the witness testified, but he advanced $185,000 in liberty bonds to be used by the committee in making a report to the country that the deficit had been wiped out in advance of the 1924 campaign.

Killer's Unconcern Cited as Grounds for Insanity Plea

LOS ANGELES, March 1 (AP)—William E. Hickman's purported unconcern over being convicted of murder, condemned to hang and accused of a second killing was cited by the defense as an indication of his insanity today at Hickman's joint trial with Wesley Hunt for the slaying of a druggist.

An older brother of the accused Hickman, took the stand to plead that the slayer of Marian Parker was of unsound mind. Alfred said:

"Only the other day my brother told me he had enjoyed his stay in the county jail more than all the last two years."

"I asked him if he did not realize how terrible it was for us that he should be sentenced to hang. He said it did not make any difference."

Hickman is under sentences of death for the Parker murder. He and Hunt are accused of killing C. Ivy Toms in a drugstore holdup.

As he did in the trial of the Parker case, Alfred today told of the change that had come over his brother, once a brilliant Kansas City high school student, following his defeat in oratorical competition.

"He was absolutely changed; his moral concepts were opposite to those he had held," the brother swore. "Alfred's testimony also went into the defense record, as in the former trial."

Second Child Body Found in Harbor

INDIANA HARBOR, Ind., March 1 (AP)—The body of another boy, about 9 years old and with a wire tightly twisted about his waist, was found in the muddy waters of the Indiana Harbor ship canal today. The body was found less than five blocks from the spot where a child of similar age and appearance was taken from the canal Feb. 22.

Women Elect at Ames

AMES, March 1 (AP)—Margaret Davidson of Ames, a junior in home economics, was elected president of the women's guild, student governing body at Iowa State college, today. Jean McKee of Cherokee was elected vice president, Ethel Jane Hinkel of Fort Dodge, treasurer, Margaret Stanton of Glenn Elyon, secretary, and Esther Cation of Spencer, elected point supervisor.

Ex-Superintendent Brands Education Board "Obsolete"

McAndrew Defends Self in Chicago School Trial

CHICAGO, March 1 (AP)—The greatest obstacle to education in Chicago is the board of education, in the opinion of its former superintendent, William McAndrew.

His protracted trial by the board on charges of insubordination and injection of British propaganda in the schools terminated yesterday with only a gesture of defense, but today Mr. McAndrew launched a broadside delineating the accusations as "lies, half-truths and ballyhoo" and meeting every allegation with a detailed statement of his version of "the facts."

The first public pronouncement offered by the ex-superintendent since his trial began five months ago was made in a 29 page letter to a commission formed by religious and civic societies to take the school system out of politics. McAndrew himself had walked out of the trial and his attorneys followed suit yesterday after producing two witnesses, denying charges of insubordination and protesting the eligibility of four of the judges.

Filipino Governor Gets Public Praise

Seeks Economic Progress in Inaugural at Manila

MANILA, March 1 (AP)—Praise for the inaugural address of Gov. Henry L. Stimson in which he pointed to economic development as the way to greater political freedom for the Filipinos was voiced today by both Americans and natives of the Islands.

While the new governor-general made it plain that the future relationship of the Philippines with the United States rests with the government at Washington, he stressed the view that only through industrial and economic progress could a large measure of self government be obtained.

As a typical American reaction to the speech, George S. Fahreld, secretary of the Philippine Sugar association said:

"I considered it a very sound, practical address. I have heard nothing but favorable comment from both Filipinos and Americans."

"The inaugural address of the new governor-general contains a message of good will and I am sure the Filipino people will receive it with no reservations, inspired by the same spirit of amity and sympathy which was apparent all through the speech," said Sergio Osmena, member of the Philippine senate and Filipino leader. "I am inclined to believe his administration will be a powerful instrument for promotion not only of harmony in government but also better understanding and mutual respect of Americans and Filipinos."

Editorial comment also was favorable.

London Experimenter to Teach Phonetics

Prof. Stephen Jones, superintendent of the phonetics laboratory at the University of London, will teach phonetics in the department of speech in the summer session of 1929 according to announcement made by Prof. E. C. Mable, head of the speech department.

Professor Jones is known for his X-ray pictures of the vocal muscles in action. He is author of a book on "Welsh Phonetics," and has contributed articles to the "Scientific American," and English scientific journals.

Professor Jones has served as visiting professor at the University of Wales and the University of Bonn.

Pharmacists Hold Annual Conclave

DES MOINES, March 1 (AP)—The old corner drug store today is the best friend of every citizen, George S. Jay of Shenandoah, chairman of the drug advertising committee, told delegates to the Iowa Pharmaceutical convention here today.

If you get a speck in your eye, you seek the nearest drug store; if you get a spot on your coat or dress you call on your favorite druggist; if there is an accident the victim is carried to the corner drug store and it is still the well known place nightly to meet the boy friend or the girl friend, he reminded them.

"We have been hiding our light under a bushel," he declared. "Druggists have never advertised as they should and consequently have never shown the public the great variety of their wares."

"Our publicity campaign is emphasizing the intimate service offered by the druggist. It is revivifying the whole drug business."

The advertising is being carried entirely in daily, weekly and farm papers, he said, and $25,000 is being spent in the campaign. The work started last September and will continue for three years with 645 Iowa druggists participating.

Tonight druggists attended the annual banquet.

The convention will close tomorrow with the annual business session and election of officers.

Sir Austin Objects to This Scene in "Dawn"

Scene in "Dawn" which has gained the disapproval of Sir Austen Chamberlain. The picture shows a German soldier who is about to shoot Edith Cavell after she has fainted in front of the firing squad.

London, March 1 (AP)—Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign secretary, who has been severely criticized in some quarters for his action in connection with the film "Dawn" depicting the life and execution by the Germans in Belgium of the English nurse Edith Cavell, declared himself in the house of commons as quite unrepentant. He said he was ready to take the same course again.

Sir Austen made a full disclosure of the motives which animated him in his efforts to prevent the exhibition of the film. He frankly declared that as an English gentleman, meaning not in his official capacity, he considered the film an outrage on humanity.

Repeating details of the particular scene of the execution as it had been described to him—one soldier refusing to point his rifle, and being himself shot down, the other members of the firing squad leveling their rifles at her head, the nurse falling in a faint and being despatched by a German officer—he deemed it to be wholly improper. He felt it was an outrage on a noble woman's memory to turn to purposes of commercial profit so heroic a story.

Reuter Delivers Baconian Lecture

Gives Explanation of Modern Social Viewpoint

The development of the science of sociology from an ill-defined point of view for the study of social problems to a definitely defined scientific discipline, will be traced by Prof. Edward B. Reuter of the sociology department in his Baconian lecture tonight at the chemistry auditorium. The topic of Professor Reuter's address is "The trend of thought in sociology."

An explanation of the modern social viewpoint will form the central theme.

According to the speaker, the general public uses the word "sociology" in a vague manner to cover almost any subject of social interest. However, the scientific student of society is interested in the abstract processes by means of which the human personality is formed and the cultural changes in the group are determined.

"The new ideal of the sociologist's task," says Professor Reuter, "is a purely scientific one of analyzing and describing the social processes."

American Legion of Iowa Compiles Historical Record

The Iowa department of the American Legion will be the first in the union to have a history of their activities. A 250 page account of the Iowa Legion's accomplishments in the nine years of its existence is to be published by the State Historical society within the next six months.

The task was undertaken at the request of Donald McClain, local attorney and state historian of the legion. J. A. Swisher of the State Historical society is already at work gathering material for the book. He asserted yesterday that the history would be off the press by September when the state convention of the American Legion is held in Cedar Rapids.

The account will contain a complete record of the Iowa Legion from its founding in May, 1919, and the first state convention at Des Moines in September of the same year to the present time.

A chapter on the women's auxiliary will be included in the work. The edition printed will be large enough to supply all the demand from members of the Legion and auxiliary.

In being the first to write its state history, the Iowa Legion is living up to its slogan: "Iowa leads the Legion."

Afraid of Politics

"I was warned by persons familiar with the school system in Chicago that a superintendent who kept politics out of the school management would be ousted in a few weeks," Mr. McAndrew declared today.

Naval Committee Votes Expenditure

WASHINGTON, March 1 (AP)—An increase of ten thousand yards in the firing range for the big turret guns on the battleships Pennsylvania and Arizona would be provided for under a $14,800,000 expenditure approved today by the house naval committee for the modernization of the two vessels.

Approve Gun Range Increase in Two Battleships

Representative Britten of Illinois, ranking republican on the committee, said this would prevent the ships from being outranged by those of any other power and also would approximately equalize the "extreme range of all battleships of our own fleet."

German Student Refugee Tells of Escape From Death in World War

The escape from death by rifle fire at the expense of a soaking in Ruhr river is only one of a number of experiences that have crowded into the life of Otto Gursch, 31 of Davenport.

He is taking a liberal arts course in the university preparatory to study in the medical college, in which school he will enroll in 1929. Since his arrival in the United States four years ago, he has mastered the English language.

He is not what is known as an "exchange" student from Europe. He has come to make the United States his home. It is his intention never to return to the land of his adventures, "except, perhaps, for a visit."

Father Killed

When the World war ended, Otto was sixteen years old. His father, a Hamburg restaurant owner, had been killed in the battle of Verdun. Shortly before the armistice was signed the Kaiser had fled to Holland.

The people of Germany took this opportunity to rid themselves from monarchical government and met their only opposition in the returning troops who remained faithful to the monarchical regime.

Battles ensued. Although Gursch was taking a stroll with several of

Royster Censures Language of Youth

HOYSTER expressed much the same sentiment that his afternoon address contained. He had, he said, no panacea for the English of the modern youth—the best plan lies in the prevention of bad language habits.

The symposium upon this subject was led by Prof. Harlin Craig, head of the English department here, who also presided at yesterday's meeting.

Following Dean Royster's address yesterday afternoon, Bartholow V. Crawford, associate professor of English here, discussed the "Value of a historical study of the theatre and drama to teachers of Shakespeare."

"After all," Professor Crawford pointed out, "the stage is primarily imitative and time tried. The instigators of the Little Theatre and similar plans have realized this. The realization that the drama, like everything else, must have had a beginning, has built up interest in the so-called, 'dark ages' of the drama."

Professor Crawford went on to say that a few authors have gained notoriety by having done something novel, but their plays were usually famous not because people liked them but because they are shocked by them. "Fundamentally," he declared, "the drama of today is not so different from that of Shakespeare's day."

Taking his topic from the quotation "The only proper study of mankind is man," H. D. Roberts of the Chicago Normal School discussed new biographical sources and data for the teacher of English.

Mr. Roberts explained that biography must be used as a means, not the end. The prime interest should be in finding out about the man, in order to appreciate what he has done.

He concluded by reading passages from several recent biographies, and outlining a few biographical sources which might be used to advantage by teachers.

Continuing today, the English conference, will include an address of welcome by President Walter A. Jessup, and discussions by Blaine Jennings of Northeast Missouri State Teachers College; Mr. Robert M. F. Carpenter of the English department here; Dean Royster; and Prof. Frank L. Mott, head of the school of journalism.

Visitors at the conference will be entertained at a noon luncheon and a tea at 4:30 o'clock in Iowa Union.

In connection with the conference there will be a public lecture in Old Capitol at 8 o'clock tonight by Prof. John T. Frederick, who will discuss a few recent books which indicate change in direction in today's fiction, or experiments on the part of individual writers.

Longworth Accuses Oklahoma Judge of Misdemeanors

WASHINGTON, Mar. 1 (AP)—Federal Judge Franklin E. Kenamer of the northern Oklahoma district was accused today in a brief filed with the speaker of the house with having appropriated for his personal use liquors confiscated by federal officers, of intimidation of jurors or denial of lawful rights of defendants, and upwards of a score of other misdemeanors. Attached to the brief was an affidavit signed by Henry H. Stroud, of Tulsa, Okla., who said that he believed the charges to be true.

Kenamer was alleged in the brief to be guilty of conspiracy to defraud the federal government; of showing favoritism and bargaining with the agents of law violators for a monetary exchange for leniency of sentence; of tyrannous attacks on the liberty of the press; of conduct indicating prejudice and imprisonment of a citizen without justification under the circumstances, which the brief added, constituted a flagrant violation of his oath of office.

Marking Streets

DIOGENES in his search for a truthful man could not have been any more disheartened or discouraged than the average man trying to find his way around Iowa City.

If one does not give up all hope after an hour or two of careful scrutiny he may discover the faint traces of street names down low on the curbing.

Even in the daytime it requires many precious moments of valuable time and taxes heavily on even the best of dispositions to find these obscure, hidden signs. And, as for the night! It is practically impossible for even those familiar with the whereabouts of these signs to discover them not to speak of those persons who are not acquainted with their hiding place. A stranger would as well look for a needle in a haystack as a designated street in Iowa City after dark.

It would seem that the nominal expense required to place poles at street intersections with the street names on them would be more than worth the convenience afforded by them.

"Woman's Place"

AS yet politics is a realm in which women make mistakes which almost justify man's general attitude that women do not, and never will, know how to vote.

In checking a list of more than 8,400 signatures on petitions to recall the city commission of Dallas, Tex., the name of the mother-in-law of the finance commissioner was found. Her explanation was that she misunderstood; she thought she was signing a protest against higher taxes.

It might have been that the petition was misrepresented to her. But the safe rule that most men follow in politics is never to sign anything unless the purpose of the petition is clearly obvious.

Few men would allow themselves to be placed in the ridiculous light that has been shed on the Dallas woman. If a man had allowed his name to be attached to that petition he would have acted as though he meant to oppose his son-in-law, rather than admit he did not know what he was signing.

Some day the majority of women may learn that playing politics is radically different from running a home or a women's club. Until they do, incidents similar to the one quoted could be common material for newspaper reports.

The Price of Learning

DR. ARTHUR J. KLEIN of the federal bureau of education says that the growing expense of college training has not lessened a demand for it. This study proves that it is apparently not the costs of an education which now determines whether students shall or shall not attend college.

Perhaps if some of the students who attend various universities were forced to stop and work for the advantages which they receive, there would not be need for the usual "weeding out" of those who do not live up to the requirements in one way or another.

There is a great deal of talk about the students of today not appreciating what is done for them in the way of education. For this reason they have been branded by some as the thoughtless generation. However, the fact that the youth today takes for granted that he will have his education, may contribute to the fact that we possess a higher vein of culture and standard of living now than we had in the past.

If we expect more, we will no doubt struggle to obtain more. The price we pay to learn is becoming an unimportant factor, and the common problem now is to build additions to the large universities so that they may accommodate the constant flood of students.

Another Pilgrimage

TRIPS abroad from July 1 to Nov. 1 for gold star mothers and widows is the subject of a bill recently passed by the house of representatives. Only widows who have not re-married are eligible.

It is estimated that 3,000 mothers will take this opportunity to visit the graves of their sons in France. Although the figures are not available, it is believed that the number of widows to visit cemeteries will be much smaller, as the majority of the men killed in the war were unmarried.

Rail costs in the United States, first-class steamship transportation and expenses for a two weeks sojourn will be paid. These accommodations can not be had for less than $500, and should 5,000 relatives accept the government's offer, it will cost the United States $2,500,000. The measure passed the house without debate, and it is believed that it will pass the senate in the same manner.

Europe therefore seems likely to witness another piece of sentimentalism that at bottom marks the heart of the true American.

"Strange Interlude"

HEYWOOD BROWN, versatile columnist of the New York World, is known as an open-minded person who takes kindly to all sorts of innovations. But Mr. Brown has not approved of Eugene O'Neill's five hour play, "Strange Interlude," which is now running on Broadway.

He broadly condemns the play as being too long.

Without going into the merits of the play, we can say that Brown missed fire in his criticism. Joseph Krutch, dramatic editor of the Nation, seems to have hit the point that the usually astute Brown missed.

Krutch bases his discussion on the length of the play on these questions: is the length of "Strange Interlude" justified by the enjoyment and artistic effect derived from it? Does the play give us something in five hours that is impossible to present in two or two and a quarter hours?

Needless to say, Krutch's method of evaluating the play is far more fair than Brown's. Brown is willing to throw the presentation into the closet regardless of its value. Its length is its vital defect.

On the other hand Krutch takes the length of the play as incidental. He is willing to sit five hours if the content of the play justifies its length.

It is hard for youth to give up that most cherished possession, life itself. It is even more difficult for youth's family and friends to reconcile themselves to the loss of one of whom they are becoming more fond each day. The death of Clinton Brown will be felt keenly, not only among his relatives, but by his many friends among the students of Iowa City high school. In the midst of a promising career as an athlete and a fine student, he enjoyed the companionship of all who knew him. He was rightfully admired for his fine character and his pleasing personality. Difficult as it is to witness the loss of Clinton Brown, it is comforting that he has left the memory of a life well lived.

Kellogg Offers—Words

(From The Milwaukee Journal)
"Shoot the moon," says Secretary Kellogg. "All or nothing." The United States will not go so far as to outlaw aggressive war with one nation, but it will agree to outlaw all war with five nations. We dare not commit ourselves to not starting a war with France on April 15, 1937, but we shall gladly agree not to have a war, aggressive or defensive, with France, Britain, Germany, Japan, or Italy—ever.

No, it doesn't make sense. Americans don't believe it means anything, or there would be a great deal of joy over it. Mr. Kellogg is making phrases called diplomatic conversation. It is all too easy. We won't commit ourselves to wiping out a single one of our many causes of war, but we'll agree not to have wars. We won't put a cover on the garbage barrel in the alley, but we'll hang up a sign, "No flies must bring disease to this house."

The United States will not agree to join the world court, even with a provision that we need not submit a question to it, if we do not want. The United States will not join with a single other nation in an agreement about a single cause of war. Well then, if we're ready to agree not to have any wars with any nation large enough to consider war with us, it must be because we know such an agreement wouldn't mean anything. And we do know that, and the other nations know it. They know, as we know, that the United States never has made war. "By act of the republic of Mexico—" "By act of the kingdom of Spain—" "a state of war exists." So our declarations have read. So they would read again if the treaty agreeing not to have war shouldn't work.

The gravest danger to peace in the United States is not even our confident indifference. It is the deliberate offering of something that pretends to be peace—a narcotic to lull the consciences of those who know we have not done our duty. In bluffing France out of her position, Secretary Kellogg hopes he is bluffing Americans into thinking the administration really was ready to do something.

Chills and Fever

BZZZZZZZZ!

"University of New Jersey professor says that the way to get rid of mosquitoes is to starve them to death." —News Item.

From out of the scholastic halls of learning, from out of the cloistered laboratory is contributed this significant conclusion of an eminent scientist.

It proves indubitably that an education is the most worth while thing on earth. One can say to his children:

"Go, my boy, to college. There is nothing like the inner satisfaction of knowing that the way to get rid of mosquitoes is to starve them to death."

One of the first things that a college graduate will be asked when he steps out into the world looking for a position at $10,000 a year, will be:

"In case of mosquitoes, what would YOU do?"
The answer would come promptly:
"Starve them, sir."

Young man, are YOU ready to face that great question? Could YOU honestly tell yourself that universal fact? Could YOU, after having sat for four years on the best sort of front porches, look an employer straight in the eye and say:
"The best method known to science concerning the riddance of the insidious mosquito is to starve him to death."

As a college student, however, you must face the fact squarely. One of them is that the mosquito is a notorious panhandler. Just the other day a mosquito accosted me on the street and, sticking out a feeler, whined:

"Say, Mister, can'tcha give a poor skeeter that ain't ate for two days somethin' to buy grub?"
"What seems the trouble?" I asked with dignity.

"Out of work," came the reply. "Ain't worked a day since the shops closed down. Then the kids got malaria and Mamma got a divorce, and . . ."

"Enough!" I shouted. "Do you mean to tell me that a strong mosquito like you can't get a job?"
"That's it, Mister."

But, just as I was reaching for a coin, I happened to remember the admonition of my great and good professor in zoology.

"No," I said emphatically, "the way to get rid of mosquitoes is to starve them to death."

I was speechless. Here was a new situation. A mosquito who actually didn't wish to starve to death. It was infamous! Whoever heard of a respectable mosquito that didn't want to starve to death? It was against all scientific principles.

At the time, I did nothing about it. But when next I visited my old friend, Professor Gotojall of Zoology, I laid the facts before him.

"Here," I said, "is a mosquito who does not desire starvation. The professor pondered, then—
"Man, this is rebellion!"
"That, sir," said I, "is exactly what it is." (I had from long experience learned to agree with my professors.)

"Of course," ruminated Prof. Gotojall, "there are cases of mosquito rebellions before. For example, the Boston situation: Niccolo and Bartolomeo were their names. They refused to starve."

After considerable research upon the subject, I have concluded that all government depends upon the starvation of mosquitoes. They are the bums, ne'er-do-wells, criminals, and morons of the race. Their influence is a destructive element in society. They are not good sports. And we have all heard the Fable of the Mosquito and the Grapes.

No?
Well, once upon a time a mosquito came buzzing along. He was a hungry mosquito and was looking for food. Suddenly he came to a small wood where he saw a flea doing the flea hop. The flea would fly around a grapebrush, take off a nice juicy grape, eat it, and then do the flea hop some more.

"What's up?" asked the mosquito.
"Grapes," said the other, still flea-hopping.

"Hot stuff!" cried the mosquito, hungrily. And he jumped for a grape, but missed it because one of his wings was sadly battered. He jumped again; again failed.

"Is dissa system?" he cried, annoyed. Then he made a third attempt, still with no success. A fourth, a fifth. Then he asked the flea:

"Please, Mister Flea, be so kind as to fetch me a grape."
"Sorry," said the flea, "but I'm learning a new step."

"You just wait till winter time," warned the mosquito. "Them what dances in the summer, steals coal from the railroad in the winter."
And then he made one last desperate jump for a grape—and failed.

"Apple sauce," he said, indignantly. "Anyway, grapes don't contain enough of vitamin B."

So the mosquito laid down and starved to death. Which is the end of all good mosquitoes who want to go to heaven and be-devil the archangels.

THE DRY WET LEADER

Senator Edward I. Edwards
Here is the famous cartoonist Messaquer's conception of Senator Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey. Edwards bears the unique distinction of being a testotaker—and yet he's chief of the west arm of the Skeeter State. He was a banker in Jersey City before he got the "yen" for politics, and became governor in less than no time. He's noted for his opposition to the Eighteenth Amendment and wants to bring back light beer and wines.

Myths Cling to Snakes and Toads, Slandered by Man Since Adam's Day

NEW YORK, March 1 (AP)—Toads and snakes are slandered more frequently than any other creatures in the lower zoological scale, says Dr. G. Kingsley Noble, curator of reptiles and amphibia at the American Museum of Natural History.

Thousands of persons who visit the museum—most of them are from out of town—apparently still believe that toads give warts, that they can live for indefinite periods without air or food and that they are poisonous to the touch. Harmless snakes have even worse reputations.

Traditions handed down for generations are responsible for this misinformation. Dr. Noble points out. Long ago the garden toad and the equally docile non-poisonous serpent were credited with being incarnations of evil, and the superstitions woven around them are hard to dispel.

"Many of the yarns about snakes are reflected in the popular names given to various species," observes the zoologist. "The hoop snake, the milk snake and the whip snake are examples."

"No snake can put its tail in its mouth and roll in the form of a hoop, yet many people in the south, where the hoop snake lives, believe that it can do such a trick. As a matter of fact he is quite harmless and not at all aggressive."

"The whip snake is often said to jump at people and lash them to death with its long tail. No snakes and only a few lizards use their tails as a means of offense or defense."

"The milk snake gets its name as well as its unsavory reputation from the fact that it is often found in cow barns, a coincidence that is attributable to its fondness for mice rather than to any inclination or ability to milk the cows."

"Many northern water snakes are erroneously called moccasins and are popularly regarded as poisonous. The true moccasin, which is poisonous, is found only in the southeastern part of the country. It is a near relative of the copperhead."

"Other fallacies are that snakes will pursue human beings and that they can strike more than their own length. The facts are that no snake will intentionally chase a person and that none can strike more than three-quarters of its length."

Stories of toads and lizards found alive in apparently airtight rock pockets are fairly common, although few get the publicity attained by the new famous horned toad—a species of lizard—that is said to have lived for more than 30 years in a cornerstone in Eastland, Texas.

"It is biologically impossible for a vertebrate animal to live without oxygen," says Dr. Noble. "Some creatures, notably the lower worms, generate oxygen in their own bodies, but this supply is not large enough to allow them to exist in the ground for long periods with access to air."

To test the popular belief that these creatures could live indefinitely without oxygen, a British zoologist sealed twelve toads in separate holes bored into a block of porous limestone. Another dozen were imprisoned in dense sandstone. After fifty-four weeks the blocks were unsealed. The toads in the porous blocks were enlivened and alive, for enough oxygen and moisture had seeped through the porous stone to sustain life. The dozen in the fine sandstone were dead.

The Constant Flame

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER XXXVII
Out on a country road where Autumn burned fires of blinding gold and blood red in all the trees and where every hill wore a scarf of tinted vapor, Kitten was saying goodbye to Ted.

Not a lingering good-bye nor a graceful one. A tilt of the arrogant little chin, a side-wise glance of the yellow eyes, a shrug of one small shoulder.

And heels tapping away in the dust of the long, long road. She didn't look back.

He put the big car into gear and rolled beside her, concern etching lines on the boyish face.

"But Kitten you can't walk. It's five miles at least. Be sensible, won't you?"

She didn't seem to hear and after a time he said no more. But he kept the car rolling at her side till a bus came up and she climbed aboard.

It had started early in the afternoon when he telephoned.

"You never give me a whirl any more, Kitten. Why not come out for a ride?"

"Don't care to ride today, thanks."

"You said that the last time. What's the matter, Red-head?"

"Nothing's the matter and I wish you wouldn't call me names."

"But you used to like driving. Have I done anything?"

"It's what you don't do gives me a pain. You're too poky, Ted. Land!"

A silence on the wire; then, "All right. I'll do whatever you say. If it's excitement you're looking for where shall I meet you?"

He was eager to please when they did meet but Kitten seemed determined not to be pleased. The ride developed into bids for friendliness on Ted's part and silences on hers. In desperation he drove into Deep Valley Inn and she brightened at once.

He spilled this, however, by refusing her a second cocktail and they set out to drive again.

They barely had turned into the country road and parked a moment when he brought the situation to a head.

"Why not cut out all the wild stuff, honey? Don't get you any where. Ain't so good for me, remembering I bought you your first drink."

"Is that so? You're to damn light-hearted for any use."

"Please don't swear, Kitten. Such a pretty little thing as you."

"That's about all you ever say to me. Don't do this, don't do that. Who gave you the right to boss me?"

"I'm not bossing you. Only a fellow knows things a nice girl doesn't. I thought—you see I thought maybe we might get married some day, Kitten. If you liked me enough."

"She glanced at him and looked down quickly, thinking fast. Wealth, position—got away from The Hill—one of the Norrises asking her to marry him. After all, she'd like Ted if he weren't so poky. His wife could change that."

"But the Norrises—how would they feel about it? Cut him off, maybe? Look on her as designing."

"How about your family, Ted?"

"She asked this almost timidly. 'How would they feel about me?'"

"Family? I haven't any. Nobody but me to be suited and believe me I'd be that all right. We'd get a little house somewhere; one of those cute bungalows and live like a king and queen. I made good money and I've been saving my bankroll, honey."

"He was so exuberant that he didn't see the pinched look over her face, nor the sudden green of her eyes."

"She said, in a tight voice, 'You-you work, then?'"

"Certainly. How'd you suppose I'd drive a car like this? Got the best shooting job in the country. Practically my own boss—honey, 'hat's the matter? Where you going?'"

She was getting out of the car. "Chaufeur!" she spat at him. You! And you ask me to marry you!"

A long time before she saw him again. And when that time came she saw him through tears.

Marilee Grainger was visiting her Aunt in the East Eighties and now Kent was driving into town to see her.

He had come back from his wandering to and fro; he was ready to settle down. A piece of luck he considered the offer of the district attorney post; not a great thing, of course, in a county where major crimes happened only once every three or four years. But a good start.

It would help put him on the map; besides he had definite ideas about what the county needed in the way of a political cleanup. It was for chaps like himself, fortunately in a position where money wasn't the thing of great importance, to put that over.

Not that he had any idea of getting on his father's wealth. His every instinct pointed to individuality; life was a gift held in trust and the one who wouldn't make the most of it didn't amount to much. Help along the other fellow since he needn't grub for himself; give the folks clean government if that task fell to his lot.

In the meantime his marriage was still unsettled. He was not even engaged; on the few occasions he had seen Marilee after that night in the garden he felt no impulse to speak of an engagement.

But now he thought it was up to him. Since this was the thing to do, might as well get through with it. He didn't know, really, why he hadn't done it before.

Settle it tonight and let them make the wedding preparations. Right after election would be a good time. They'd think that too soon, though; have to wait till the first of the year, very likely.

He crossed the ferry at Forty-second street and began to drive uptown. But he made little headway for this was the hour of the theatre rush; when finally he did turn from the Avenue into the side street it was nine o'clock.

At the apartment he was told that Marilee and her aunt were dining out. He didn't care especially; the library looked inviting and he sauntered in there to wait.

The hour stretched into two as he ran through the newspapers, thinking of his plans. When at last he grew restless he sat down before the radio and turned the dials.

Stations shifted under his fingers; finally he caught the last notes of a song and came to keen attention. Only one in the world could sing like that, he mused; only John McCormack.

The voice came again, goldenly, throbbing with passion:

"Oh moon of my delight that knows no wane,
The moon of heaven is rising once again—"

Kent sat back, suddenly white. He hadn't heard that song in years; now it was like a clear, bright light turned in upon himself. It went piercing through the worldliness he had acquired, through the image of himself he had built up in his own mind; it showed the restlessness that had seized him the night he tried to propose to Marilee Grainger—the restlessness that overwhelmed him whenever he was near her—for what it was. Distaste. He didn't love Marilee; he never would and he couldn't marry her.

But there was a love deep in his heart. The light picked that out, revealed it.

He saw himself a school-boy, moving across a makeshift stage to a girl like a rose touched by moonlight. All in white, pale hair shimmering. He saw himself bend down swiftly, heard his own voice say, "Lord, you're sweet, Emmy! So white and sweet—little white flower—"

He saw, as in a picture, the girl grown older, luminous fairy creature in a garden; felt the warm fragrance of her lips as his own touched them.

Always he had held the thought of her, loving it, never suspecting till now when the very song that he, himself, had sung to her shocked him into realization.

He sprang up and began to pace back and forth.

"And when thyself with shining foot shall pass
Among the guests, star-scattered on the grass
And in thy joyous errand reach the spot
Where I made one, turn down an empty glass!"

The glorious voice softened and silenced on a high note. Kent threw out his arms muttering: "Lord! Supposing it had been too late—good Lord—"

He snatched his hat and tore out of the house. Marilee and her aunt were coming as he dashed by; they called but he didn't see them. He turned his car toward Lyall.

What he intended to do he didn't know. Excepting that he wished to see Emmy Day. He would drive up the hill, ask to speak to her. Perhaps she had forgotten him? Such a long time since they had met! Or perhaps she loved someone else?

That thought turned in his mind, leaving it blank. He brought his car to a crawling stop under the trees across the street from the Day house.

He heard voices on the porch. While he waited a big young fellow came to the top of the steps and descended, turning backward toward a girl who called to him gaily.

The girl was Emily, slender and all in white, pale hair a-fluff in the glow of a lighted window. Kent recognized the man as Marty Nolan.

Long after Marty's footsteps had silenced down the street and Emily had gone in and closed the door he sat there.

"So it was too late, he kept telling himself.
Nolan of all people! He felt very weary."

Shane May Join Kimball, Buser in Nomination Race

DES MOINES, Mar. 1 (AP)—State Senator Frank Shane of Ottumwa, who has been studying the situation of the race for the republican nomination as lieutenant governor, probably will announce his decision whether he will try for the place at the special session of the legislature convening here next week, he said yesterday.

Clem F. Kimball, the incumbent, Council Bluffs, and former State Senator Jonas D. Buser of Conesville, republicans, are the only candidates thus far in the field. Former State Senator Roy Scott of Davenport also may enter the race.

On the democratic side, Robert L. Finch of Des Moines, was selected by the party state central committee to make the race.

Senator Shane is a hold over in the state senate, and need not resign his place in the senate in the event that he makes the race for lieutenant governor.

Corn Prices Fluctuate

Bulges in Grain Markets Fail to Become Steadier

CHICAGO, March 1 (AP)—Price bulges failed to hold in the grain markets today, bullish reports on farm reserves having been largely discounted beforehand. Buying of corn was on a big scale at times, but so too was selling to realize profits for holders. New top price records for the season were established for No. 2 and No. 4 red winter wheat, as well as for oats and rye. Closing quotations on corn were nervous, 3c to 1 1/2c net lower, with wheat irregular 3/4c off to 1c up, oats varying from 1/2c decline to 1c advance, and provisions unchanged to 1/2c up.

In volume of transactions, corn led the market today, and prices fluctuated at a bewildering rate. Special notice was taken meanwhile by many corn traders of a statement in one of today's summaries that with a single exception the present farm reserve stock of corn is the smallest since 1913, and considering feeding quality is perhaps the smallest potential corn stocks at this date in the last 25 years, barring one.

Wheat and oats, alike with corn, met with a renewal of selling near the finish, wiping out most of the day's gains. The condition of domestic winter wheat was unofficially figured today at 75.1, compared with 86 in December and 85 on March 1, last year.

Bond Market Firm; Trading Grows Less

NEW YORK, March 1 (AP)—The bond market today continued its firm trend, but trading was considerably less than yesterday. Principal interest centered in the announcement that the $100,000,000 issue of St. Louis & San Francisco 4 1/2's would be offered tomorrow at 97, together with an offering of $48,000,000 preferred stock to common stockholders.

Weakness again broke out in the Seaboard group, several of them falling back 1 to 3 points to new lows for the year.

Changes in the foreign group were narrow and irregular. Most of the South American obligations improved slightly, but Polish issues inclined to heaviness and mixed tendencies appeared in the French list.

State Commission Awards Contracts for Highway Work

AMES, Mar. 1 (AP)—Contracts for grading Iowa primary highways, excavating for railroad crossings and construction of bridges and culverts, totalling $345,733.64, were awarded here today by the state highway commission.

The projects include grading work in Audubon, Madison and Wright counties; railway crossing excavation in Clark, Polk, Tama and Wayne counties, and bridge and culvert construction in Bremer, Jackson, Jones, Marshall, Monona, Plymouth and Washington counties.

The total cost of grading is $168,715.71; railway crossing excavation, $41,043.43; and bridge and culverts, $136,024.50. The grading comprises 22.5 miles.

Woods Says Corn Borer Permanent Pest of Farmers

WASHINGTON, Mar. 1 (AP)—The corn borer, in the opinion of Dr. A. F. Woods, director of scientific research, bureau of chemistry and soils, will be a permanent pest of the American farmer.

Testifying before the house committee which farmed the agriculture department supply bill, he expressed the belief that the best that could be done was to slow down the spread of the borer and aid farmers in keeping the damage to a minimum. This, he said, might be accomplished by cultural methods, the use of corn that is more resistant to the borer and by the use of a different cropping system.

"It is not expected that the corn borer will ever be completely eradicated and, in all probability, it will eventually spread to the entire corn belt of the United States," he declared.

Under cross examination, Dr. Woods said that the borer did virtually no damage in the United States last year, when a $10,000,000 appropriation was provided to fighting every possible method of reducing loss from the pest.

London Underground Finds Tuesday "Blue"

LONDON (AP)—Berlin has its "blue" Monday, Paris its "blue" Wednesday, and now London has selected Tuesday as the "bluest" day of the week.

Experts of the London Underground system, by comparing the number of passengers, have concluded that Tuesday is the worst day of all the business days of the week because of the decrease in travel.

The Underground figures show that on the average week day the tubes account for 1,029,631 fares, but on Tuesday the average drops to 980,235.

"We are mystified," say the Underground officials, "and cannot explain the falling off in business, excepting to conclude that Tuesday, for some reason, is the 'blue' day of a great many of our patrons."

The big stores and shop keepers say their business on Tuesday is a little bit less than on other week days, and that very likely women shoppers, for some reason, stay at home on Tuesday, to attend to the washing, the baking or something.

Cedar Rapids to Erect Buildings

CEDAR RAPIDS, Mar. 1 (AP)—Close to a million dollars worth of building construction already contracted for, promises to keep labor in the building trades line busy here for the greater part of the year.

While the cost of contemplated new construction will not be as large as in some previous years, the aggregate is satisfactory and indicates that the city is forging ahead.

The Quaker Oats company will undertake the largest building program, the projects totaling about a half million dollars. Contracts have been let for this work and construction will start as soon as the weather permits. This will be the last of a $5,000,000 program begun by the company several years ago. One of the structures will be a dry house and feed house combined. It will be thirteen stories high. The other will be a mill eleven stories high.

An increase in business since it opened last summer is responsible for the Hotel Roosevelt company for letting a contract for a ten-story wing to contain 130 rooms. Provisions were made for this when the plans for the hotel were drawn, but it was not thought it would be needed for several years. It will cost $200,000.

If T. P. Rodgers can reach an agreement with the zoning commission he expects to be "building an apartment on First avenue to cost about $90,000. The Hatch and Brookman Lumber company whose plant was destroyed by fire last winter, are preparing to rebuild at $10,000. The T. M. Sinclair Packing company will build a loading platform at $12,000 and the International Harvester company will construct a repair shop at $32,000.

Numerous small business structures are expected to be built this spring.

Unclaimed Currency Among Lost Articles

PARIS, March 1 (AP)—Bundles of thousand franc banknotes are among the many unclaimed "lost" articles the police department holds. About three-fourths of the hundred articles found in streets and cars every day are claimed by owners but the other quarter are given to the finders at the end of a year. One "article" now awaiting a claimant is a package of seven 1,000 franc bills found by a policeman near the opera.

Finds Tobacco for "Breaking In" a Pipe

Columbus, Ohio March 10, 1927
Larus & Bro. Co. Richmond, Va.
Gentlemen:
Two years ago my wife gave me an expensive pipe. I smoked it a great deal for two or three weeks, put it aside, then began smoking it again. This time it was very strong. Veterans told me that it had been smoked too hard for a new pipe and should be put away. The pipe was laid away again. A short time ago I got it out and smoked one of the common brands of tobacco in it. The results were disappointing. I told the druggist of my experience with it. He asked if I had tried Edgeworth. I told him I never had. I followed his suggestion, and I am honest when I say that it has restored the sweetness to the pipe, and has made me wonder. Was it the pipe or the brand of tobacco that caused me to lay it away for the long period of time? As a novice, I prefer Edgeworth. I am going to stick to it, as I feel satisfied that there is none better on the market.
Sincerely yours,
Philip C. Shera

Wildcats Carry Ten Point Lead From First Half

Walters Cages Seven Goals, Four Free Throws in Tilt

EVANSTON, Ill., March 1 (AP)—Northwestern took revenge tonight on Illinois, the team which knocked Northwestern out of the Big Ten basketball race, defeating the down-staters, 39 to 31. The Purple grabbed a ten-point lead right at the start and held it throughout.

Rut Walter, Northwestern's sophomore center, sank almost every one of his shots at the hoop, and created most of his chances for himself by dribbling close in. At half-time the score was, Northwestern 23, Illinois 14, and the Illini never got closer than that.

Delaney Falters Before Heaney

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, March 1 (AP)—The heavyweight ambitions of Jack Delaney crumbled once again tonight, this time before the bull-like attack of the iron-jawed battler from New Zealand, Tom Heaney.

Before a crowd of more than 18,000 that paid $175,000 to see the first of the heavyweight elimination semi-finals, Heaney carried off the decision over the erstwhile French-Canadian sharpshooter in fifteen mauling, bruising rounds.

It was not a one-sided victory for the blocky, square jawed boxer from the antipodes, but it was decisive, nevertheless, and gained as the result of a determined rally in the last four rounds.

Delaney, conceding nearly twenty pounds to his far more rugged rival, stood up gallantly under Tom's steady pummeling. The sharpshooter's main weapon was a left hook to the jaw. He used this repeatedly with jarring effect but it seldom made more than a fleeting impression.

Right-Handed Hitters Predominate on Coach Vogel's Baseball Squad

A check-up of this year's baseball squad shows that those hitting right-handed will outnumber those hitting from the left side by over two to one. Taking the squad as it now stands, there are twenty-five right-handed hitters and only ten of those who stand the other way.

Leaving out Twoood and Corbin, who are pitchers, the only veterans who swing from the left side is "Doc" Sals. Sals is a reserve first baseman from last year's championship team. He is getting stiff competition from a right hander by the name of Nelson. These two are the leading candidates for first base, one hitting right and the other left.

Glassgow and Blackford, short stop and second baseman, are both hitters from the far side. There are two veterans back for the outfield who hit from the right side. Capt. Herb Terry and Alton Smith, right gardner and center fielder, respectively, both swing that way.

The only two remaining veterans are Francis Mulrooney, pitcher, and Clayton Thompson, catcher. These men follow the majority rule and hit from the right side of the plate.

New Men Score Most for Natators

King Gathers in Eight Markers in Two Dual Contests

Sophomores on the University of Iowa swimming team lead in the total scores piled up in the two dual meets which the Hawk tankers have taken part in during this season.

With thirty-one points scored by the new men on the squad the veterans are led by nine points.

The Iowans have one conference victory and also one conference loss. Defeating Chicago by a 52 to 17 score and losing to the conference leading Michigan team by a 54 to 19 tally.

Fred King, veteran backstroke, leads the list in individual scoring by virtue of a first and a second place. Closely following him is Arthur Petersen, a sophomore, who has garnered seven points just one point in rear of King. Ted for third honors on the individual list are Captain Merlin Carter and George Turbett, each having scored a first and a third place.

The remainder of the places are held by both veterans of last year and the new men on the team. Many of the candidates swim on the relay teams and make points through them but they are counted on the team averages and not on the individual scores.

These are the points gathered by each man: King, 8 points; Petersen, 7; Carter, 6; Turbett, 5; Crookham, 5; Bender, 5; Goldman, 3; Stewart, 3; Van Horn, 3; Gilje, 2; Pattie, 2; Slaymaker, 2; Wright 1.

Skienmen Conquer Belle Plaine, 33-17

The University High quintet started its upward climb in the state when it easily defeated Belle Plaine at Marengo by a 33 to 17 score.

Blackmere, center, proved to be the star of the game when he collected five field goals and four free throws for a high total of fourteen points.

The Blue and White, led by their rangy captain, were never in danger. The Skienmen used a delayed offense to good effect although they were weak on set-up shots. Toward the end, Coach Skien substituted freely and the entire second team saw service before the game was over.

Due to the small court and the fact that the officials called closely, many personal fouls were chalked up on each side.

The three remaining men on the squad are catchers. Two of these, Mac Brown and Orville Hathway hit from the right side, while "Jap" Hillier cuts from the left side.

Iowa Grapplers Leave for Illini

Beers Returns to 158-Pound Class Bout After Defeat

Facing the same old problem that six preceding teams have done in the same number of years, Coach Mike Howard and his seven University of Iowa wrestlers will attempt to shake off the Illinois flinx tomorrow.

The locals will entrain for Urbana, Illinois late this afternoon. About twenty-four hours later, the meet between the Hawkeyes and Coach Paul Prenz's University of Illinois grapplers will be getting underway.

Yesterday afternoon saw the Iowa mat artists go through their final paces in preparation for the setto with the result that the following will be taken on the trip: 115-pound, Deegan; 125-pound, Royal Weir; 135-pound, Harold Maley; 145-pound, Jarrard; 158-pound, Beers; 175-pound, Frank Voltmer; and heavyweight, Gilchrist.

Coach Howard is rather non-committal regarding the meet. He expressed some signs of optimism for some of the matches, that of Leslie Beers, ex-captain of the Hawkeye squad in the 158-pound class, and John "Tiny" Gilchrist, right-footed tackle, in the heavyweight division.

At present, the Illinois matmen are leading the way in the conference by holding victories over Chicago, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Blackmere Stars as U High Climbs to Second Round

The remaining six outfielders are divided into four who hit from the far side and two from the left. The four right-handed hitters are Harold Anderson, Ray Quirin, Milton Fbor, and Matt Kelsch. Marion Chance and Harold Rath are both southpaw hitters.

Of the new pitchers, Oakley Carlson, Claude Allee, Dwight Mills, Pete Westra and Wayne Smodes cut from the right side, while Virgil David and Paul Clark use the other side of the plate.

The Blue and White, led by their rangy captain, were never in danger. The Skienmen used a delayed offense to good effect although they were weak on set-up shots. Toward the end, Coach Skien substituted freely and the entire second team saw service before the game was over.

Due to the small court and the fact that the officials called closely, many personal fouls were chalked up on each side.

Bresnahan Again on Mid-Western Athletic Council

OMAHA, Neb., March 1 (AP)—Appointment of commissioners of the Mid-Western Association of the American Athletic union was announced here today by Dr. C. B. Fog, president of the association.

Reappointed commissioners are George T. Bresnahan of Iowa City, and L. E. Pratt of Sioux City.

New officers are Sec. Taylor of Des Moines, John E. Bryan of Lincoln, Neb., and E. C. Kelson of North Platte, Neb.

Cobb Signs for Mack

AUGUST, Ga., March 1 (AP)—Ty Cobb tonight confirmed the report that he had signed to play with the Philadelphia Athletics again this year with the remark that "terms were highly satisfactory to me."

Frosh Swimmers Meet Thorpemen

Iowa's first year natators, with one victory already chalked up for them, are priming and getting ready this week for their meet with the Minnesota swimmers. With a possibility of going through the season undefeated the men are working hard in order that they can share a portion of the conference title.

The Minnesota competition is of an undetermined strength but news from their camp is to the effect that they have some very good men in the dashes and distance events. They boast of a man in the 440-yard event who can do close to conference time and they also have several men who can shove the varsity in the short sprints.

Liddle, Hawk Star

Iowa's hopes will hinge partly on the work of Liddle, elongate distance and sprint star, who was high point man in the last dual with Michigan and holder of five mid-west A. A. U. titles. He has been doing some good work for the Hawkeyes and together with Lowell and Lloyd in the back stroke and Evans and Chennell in the breast stroke they should garner enough points to clinch the meet.

Murroe, who swam second in the 50-yard and 100-yard dashes in the last dual, is ill and probably will be unable to compete in the coming event. In the event that he cannot Mitvolsky will most likely fill his place and also swim in the 440-yard swim.

Relay Seems Fast

The relay teams which will compete will most likely put up some high marks for the Minnesotans to shoot at and if the feats of the week previous can be repeated the local frosh will have the medley clinched.

Coach Thorpe will bring the times of his freshmen when he brings the varsity down here to meet the Old Gold team on Saturday. The final outcome will be announced at the meet on Saturday evening.

Lone Tree Bests Thornburg, 32-22

KEOTA, March 1 (Special to The Daily Iowan)—Lone Tree defeated Thornburg, 32 to 22 in the opening of the sectional basketball tourney here tonight. The victory marks the eleventh straight win for the Lone Tree team.

At the half the score was 17 to 8 in favor of Lone Tree. Hirt and Harty were high scorers for Lone Tree, making ten and eleven points respectively.

Barry Conducts Scrimmage Tilts for Basketeers

The Hawkeyes eased on a bit as they prepare to shatter Wisconsin's dream of a conference title. The boys took their customary shooting practice, after which a short workout was taken on both defense and offense.

The freshmen impersonated the Badgers, and using the pet plays of Meanwell, they experienced trouble in working the ball through the tight varsity defense.

Coach Justin M. Barry jockeyed his line-up, with Lawson substituting for Plunkitt and later taking a few plays in place of Captain Twoood. Brickly Johnstone and Laufer also came in for their share of attention, and it is quite probable they will see service against Wisconsin.

Rags Wilcox, who has made 79 points in ten games, is ready to continue his personal duel with Bud Foster, the Wisconsin star center. Rags has the distinction of making thirty-one free throws in forty-two attempts which is the best record in the Big Ten.

According to reports from Madison, the Badgers are greatly concerned over the Iowa game, for the enmity between the teams provokes a bitter rivalry, and there is no telling what will happen Saturday night.

The Badgers have to win to stay in the race. At present they are tied with Purdue and Indiana for the leadership, and to keep pace with the Indiana teams, the Badgers must beat the Hawkeyes. After the Iowa game, Wisconsin has yet to meet Michigan and Illinois.

Coach W. E. Meanwell is using the same combination that recently bested Iowa by ten points, and he has high hopes that his men will repeat. Iowa however, is scoring better and its general play has shown considerable improvement, all of which means that Wisconsin may be shoved back into second place.

Beatty Prepares for Olympics at Madison

Iowa's former star quarter-miler and hurdler, Earnest J. Beatty, is now at Madison, Wis., training for the Olympic trials.

Beatty placed a close second to Cuhel in the Big Ten meet in running the 220-yard low hurdles, also starring as the lead-off man on the Iowa mile relay team for two seasons. He has plans of racing in the 400-meter hurdles in the Olympic trials.

Hoosier Quarter-Miler

William Stephenson, captain of the Indiana university track team, will be one of the leading contenders for the Western conference indoor quarter mile championship in the Iowa field house March 9 and 10.

The Hoosier is a powerful runner who has been timed in 49 seconds on the outdoor track. He ran second to George Baird, Iowa's star, in the conference outdoor meet.

It was Stephenson's fine work which enabled the Indiana one mile relay team to win the event at the conference outdoor meet of 1927.

Luther Loses, 24-19

DECORAH, March 1 (AP)—Upper Iowa defeated Luther's revamped basketball team here tonight, 24 to 19, in an Iowa conference game. Three of Luther's varsity men were in the hospital with the influenza.

Bresnahan Lists Vault, High Jump Contest for Men

Another sport competition between members of the freshman and varsity track squads was announced yesterday by Coach George T. Bresnahan, when a handicap pole vault and high jump tournament was scheduled for March 6, 8, 13, and 15. The event follows the same rules as adopted by the coaching staff for the broad jump contest which was inaugurated several days ago.

In the competition, all of the vaulters and jumpers will be rated according to their best previous marks and will be handicapped accordingly. The best distance on each of the four days will be tallied, and the contestant having the greatest total distance will receive a gold medal for first prize. Silver medals will be given for second and third place, while two bronze medals will be given for fourth and fifth places in each event.

Contestants who have entered the high jump are: Workhoven, Craig, Milligan, Swisher, Faulkner, Gordon, T. Smith, Boyer, Jerrel, Mann and Cochran.

The pole vault entrants are: Cason, Oransky, Cramer, Agnew, Boyer, and Canby.

209 Men Entered by Seven Schools in Conference Title Meet

Bresnahan Lists 34 Men to Top Entry Program

Ohio State Follows by Mentioning 35 for Indoor Meet

Twenty-four Hawk tracksters will leave for Madison tonight at midnight, and will return Sunday morning. The Iowa-Wisconsin dual will be staged Saturday night and will be the last dual of the indoor season, followed a week later by the conference meet in the field house.

The Iowans are in good shape and it appears at this time that the winners will be a toss-up. Although the Badgers do not have the exceptionally strong team which won the conference indoor championship last year, they have a team which is well balanced and will be a hard team to beat on its own track.

Iowa is after its first dual win of the year and will present a number of stars which are sure to carry off a good share of the points.

The Cardinal team will be represented by several men who will make strong bids in the competition. Captain Petaja in the mile, Ramsey in the 440, Pahlmeyer, high hurdler, Arne in the half mile, and Bullmore in the two-mile are some of the outstanding men of the team.

The men who will represent Iowa are: Captain P. J. Cuhel, P. B. Agnew, J. R. Allison, G. H. Baird, J. M. Cadwallader, H. R. Cramer, B. E. Derry, C. A. Forwald, L. E. Hunn, J. R. Gunn, B. E. Lockhart Cheats Death in Accident

This remarkable photo was taken as Frank Lockhart, American racing driver, was pulled out of the surf at Daytona Beach, Fla., after his machine had catapulted into the waters while doing 225 miles an hour. Note Lockhart's left arm in splints as his rescuers work to free him from the machine.

Among the Training Camps

ATLANTA, March 1 (AP)—Major league baseball's training machine was given added steam in southern camps today as virtually completed squads were put through accelerated paces in preparation for exhibition games just a week away.

March 1, the deadline date for players to report, found a number of players listed as holdouts, including Dazzy Vance, of Brooklyn; Carl Mays, and Pete Donohue of Cincinnati; Tony Latta and Walter Hoyt, of the New York Yankees; and Flint Rhem of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Some managers, however, reported their rosters "all present."

Hellman in Action

Harry Hellman, American league champion hitter, with Bob Fothergill, Jack Taverer and other veterans got into action with the Detroit Tigers at San Antonio, Texas, for their first light workout.

At New Orleans, Cleveland's Indians showed so much life under a hot sun, that they drew expressions of delight from Manager Roger Peckinpaugh.

Manager Ray Schalk told his Chicago White Sox at Shreveport today that they would have only one practice session daily instead of two. They got in a brisk workout despite the absence of about eight regulars who are expected soon.

The Phillies, at Winter Haven, the St. Louis Cardinals, at Avon Park, and the Athletics all were put through double practice sessions.

Phillies vs. Athletics

The Phillies meet their townsmen in their first exhibition game at Fort Myers next Wednesday and the Cardinals play the Boston Red Sox at Bradenton. Haines and Alexander were allowed to beat down a bit in their workouts today.

Ganzel, Goslin, Simons, Barnes, Juncos, Bludge, Cooper, Hayes, and Gillie followed Manager Harris into the Senator camp today, leaving "Muddy" Ruel as the chief absentee.

Word came from the Reds stronghold at Orlando that Sukeforth still is indisposed and was not in uniform today.

John J. McGraw and his New York Giants pitched camp at Augusta, Ga., during the day and continued their training begun a fortnight ago at Hot Springs.

Schulte Referee at Drake

DES MOINES, March 1 (AP)—Henry F. (Indian) Schulte, famous University of Nebraska track coach, will referee the 1928 Drake relays, April 27 and 28. Oreste Solem, Drake university athletic director, announced today. Schulte has accepted the appointment, Solem said.

Once a Woman Lived in a Shoe

"Once there was a lady, who lived in a shoe, she had so many children she didn't know what to do." Had this mother lived in the equipment office of the field house she could have chosen any size home she desired, from a bungalow to a regal palace.

Last fall, a university record was broken when Ralph Hilton, University of Iowa frosh griddler, took a 14 1/2 size football shoe. In wearing the "little row-boats," Hilton broke the record for the largest shoe ever worn by an Iowa griddler, as Duke Slater's record size shoe of 12 1/2 was too small.

Slater, who was an all-western tackle in 1921, always received special built shoes by the university and so in order to solve Hilton's difficulties, Charles Brookins, keeper of the athletic department's supplies, ordered special shoes for Hilton.

Yesterday afternoon Brookins wore a puzzled expression on his face. Questioned regarding the matter, it resulted in his telling that another university shoe record was shattered when Ernest Noboo Iwal, freshman track aspirant, was finding it hard to wear the university shoes. Iwal, who is of Japanese descent and hails from Honolulu, Hawaii, wants a 13 1/2 size shoe.

While the shoes are being made, Iwal is going to seek another field of sport, namely boxing.

Northwestern—Bagge, Sinkler, Acher.

Iowa—Nelson, Forwald, Lapp, Roberts, Myers.

Michigan—Carlson, Poorman, Ar-endt.

Minnesota—Captain Laemmle, Johnson.

Ohio State—North, Tritton, Ras-mus, Essex.

Clearmen Takes Mumma's Post

Beck Keeps Brown's Place at Guard During Joust

Hampered by the loss of two of their regulars, the Little Hawkeyes held their final drill before the sectional tournament yesterday afternoon. The workout was a light one consisting largely of practice on offensive plays, basket-shooting, and work on free throws, but it proved to Coach Walter S. Knox that his Hawkeyets would do well in spite of their handicaps.

Chances for victory seem to depend upon whether or not Clearman, untried center, can fit into the veteran machine so that it will continue to function smoothly. Clearman's work since he became a member of the team has shown promise but he is still weak on getting the tip-off.

The first opposition which the Knoxmen will encounter will be the North English High, the game being scheduled for 9 o'clock tonight. If victorious, as the dope sheet indicates they should be, the Hawkeyes will meet the winner of the West Liberty-Brooklyn tilt tomorrow afternoon, and the finals will be played in the evening.

A squad of ten men will depart with Coach Knox about 6:30 tonight for Marquette. The players making the trip will be B. Brown, Beck, Erbe, Moffitt, Clearman, Souchek, Glick, Fairchild, Huntzinger, and Fry.

The probable Iowa City lineup for tonight's game:

B. Brown, facing captain, and Erbe, forwards; Clearman, center; Moffitt and Beck, guards.

Field Ground Balls

The early work of only fielding ground balls is gradually being replaced with entire infield workouts. The infield which was first placed in action Wednesday night was Herschel Crisswell, of Rock Island at first base; E. F. Newlin of Atlantic, on second; Charles Stebbins of Bonaparte, as short stop; and Harmon Mitchell of Rockford, at third base.

After a fifteen minute drill the above men were replaced by Robert Quinn of Bancroft, at first base; D. A. Ramslow of Sheldon, on second; Loren Degroote of Rutland, working at short, with Gail Campbell of Atlantic guarding the hot corner. These men, though not quite as large as the first squad show very well in ability.

There was a third and fourth infield, made up of late comers, who were given a brief drill. These men will either replace some of the others or make up one of the four freshman teams when outdoor practice is started.

Welden a First Baseman

The first basemen showing promise are: Glen Welden of Randolph J. S. Peterson of McGregor, Bill Lease of Muscatine; Second basemen: Edd Whelan of Dubuque, Paul Richardson of Auburn; and Albert Easter of Bonaparte. Third basemen, Delmar Rudis of Des Moines, David Crum of Eberon, and Dale Welt of Kalona. The short stops showing promise are: Ralph Clausen of Pomeroy; David Bauerbach of Muscatine, and Jack Izum of Fort Dodge.

The outfielders will be called out as soon as it is possible for outdoor practice. Coach Vogel intends to have about four teams and wants to see all outfielders come out.

first prize, runner-up $100, and third place, $50. Officials for the classic were also selected yesterday. Macy of Grinnell will referee all of the games, while Clarence Keel of the University of Iowa will act as umpire. Leyland "Ike" Skelley, quarterback on the 1926 Hawkeye grid machine, will be time-keeper.

Unusual interest is being manifested in the affair, and E. F. "Red" Strickler, promoter of the game reports the advance ticket sale as being good. Tickets for the journey are on sale at all of the Racine cigar stores.

A Change of Scenery

Kearns Approves Old Gold Coach's Cage Suggestions

Nick Kearns, one of the best known basketball officials in the west, who worked the Indiana-Iowa game here last Monday is in favor of the plan suggested by Coach Justin M. Barry in eliminating the jump ball at center. Kearns agrees with it to the extent of having written to the rules committee advocating the change.

Coach Barry's plan is to abolish the jump ball at center at the start of each half and after a basket or free throw and substitute instead an out-of-bounds play from underneath the defensive team's basket.

Lessons Purdue's Advantage

Kearns sees a lot of merit in this. It is obvious, as he points out, that it would eliminate the physical advantages which a team such as Purdue has, in having a sixfoot six center to get practically every tip-off. Murphy, the Edgewater's pivot, immediately puts his opponents on the defense, as he snarls all the jump balls.

It is further obvious that it would speed up the play. Instead of going back to the center circle after every score, thereby losing from fifteen to twenty seconds, the officials would merely hand the ball to someone on the team scored upon and the action would begin immediately on an out-of-bounds play.

The change would eliminate the continual "roughing" at center according to the official. The referee invariably follows the course of the ball with his eyes when it is tossed up at the pivot position and seldom sees the fouls committed by the centers in their effort to gain possession of the oval.

Clary Agrees

Bruff Clary, the umpire in the recent Hoosier-Hawkeye encounter believes that the change will prove especially beneficial toward the close of the game. The center of the winning aggregation usually loafs on his return to the circle, counting down the few remaining seconds and removing all possible hope of a scoring spree, which might change the standing of the two teams. In the suggested method it would take but a second to put the sphere back into play, giving the under dog an opportunity to score, according to the former Notre Dame athlete.

Coach Barry has forwarded his plan to St. John of Ohio with the request that it be considered at the next meeting of the rules committee.

Cuhel in Hurdles

Among noted athletes included in the Hawkeye, Wolverine, Gopher, and Buckeye entries are Captain Cuhel, Iowa's hurdler; Baird, the conference outdoor quarter mile champion; Hunn, who will defend his two mile title; Captain Hester, Michigan's great sprinter who is the joint holder of the conference 50 yard record; Cooper, the Michigan hurdler; and Captain Tooley, Ohio State, who ran second in the conference outdoor mile last spring.

Chicago, Illinois and Northwestern were the first universities to submit entries for the conference championships.

Harry Gill of Illinois sent in the names of 34 athletes. Ned Merriam, Chicago, listed 25 men, and Frank Hill, Northwestern's coach, entered 24 of his performers.

Ames Splashers Lose

AMES, March 1 (AP)—Lincoln Y. M. C. A. swimming team defeated Iowa State college splashers here tonight, 42 to 27.

Hawkeye Speedsters Asked to Texas Race

An invitation for the Iowa athletes to participate in the Texas relays at Austin, Tex., March 23 has been received by Coach George T. Bresnahan, track mentor of University of Iowa.

It is unlikely, however, that the Old Gold tracksters will make the southern invasion, partly because of the extreme length of the trip and partly because of the short interval between indoor and outdoor meets. The Texas meet falls just a week after the Illinois indoor carnival, a date upon which the Iowa cinder men are usually resting.

In the 1928 Texas affair, the victorious Iowa mile relay team set a record for the Texas games, with Cuhel, then a sophomore, running a splendid anchor lap to defeat Georgetown, Iowa's time being 5:23 5/10.

Ames, March 1 (AP)—Lincoln Y. M. C. A. swimming team defeated Iowa State college splashers here tonight, 42 to 27.

March Business Sets New Mark

Because of the large number of real estate transactions taking place around March 1, an unusual number of mortgages and deeds have been filed at the office of the county recorder during the last three days. Almost four times as many deeds as usual have been recorded.

A sheriff's deed was filed yesterday in which F. L. Smith conveyed part of section 7, township 79, range 8, to the Oxford State Bank. As a result of a suit in district court between the Security Savings bank of Cedar Rapids and Catherine Kinney, et al, in which a judgment of $4,031.16 was granted, the property was sold at sheriff's sale to Vernon Hummer for $4,200.75. Hummer transferred the certificate of purchase to the Oxford bank, so the deed is made in that way.

A second sheriff's deed was filed in which F. L. Smith conveyed part of section 18, township 79, range 8, to Oxford State bank. This also resulted from a suit between the Security Savings bank of Cedar Rapids and Catherine Kinney, et al, in which a judgment of $9,562.16 was allowed. The property was sold to the Security Savings bank for $9,851.63, and the certificate of purchase was transferred by them to the Oxford bank.

A quit claim deed was filed yesterday in which Johnson county conveyed land in section 27, township 78, range 7, to Hulda Sleichter. A probate deed was also filed in which Edward F. Jones, executor of the estate of Amos Sleichter, conveyed parts of sections 27 and 33, township 78, range 7, to Hulda Sleichter for $24,185.00.

The six following warranty deeds were recorded yesterday: Joseph Frolk conveyed land in section 36, township 79, range 8, and in section 1, township 78, range 8, to the Johnson County Savings bank; the Johnson County Savings bank conveyed part of section 36, township 79, range 8, to Cyril Rohret and Sarah Rohret; Elmer E. Coulter and Etta M. Coulter conveyed part of section 35, township 79, range 5, to George E. Petsel.

Elmer E. and Etta M. Coulter conveyed part of section 35, township 79, range 5, to Norwood Bothell; John McKeon and Edith McKeon transferred lot 27, Raphael Place addition to L. J. Bender; Robert P. and Beatrice V. Meardon transferred lots 24, 25, 26, 50, 14, 15, and 16 in Bailey and Beck's addition to Edward L. Wild.

Picked Up Cars Come From Other Counties, States

Thirty-six of the forty-six cars picked up by city and county officials during the month of February because the owners had neglected to obtain 1928 license plates were from outside of Johnson county, and sixteen of them were from outside of Iowa.

Owners who had still neglected to get licenses, after repeated warnings that they were violating a state law, found their cars hauled in by officials. The cars could be regained only after the owner had paid towing and storage fees and had purchased his license plates or given satisfactory evidence that application had been made for the plates.

Among the cars which were "attached" one each from California, Missouri, Wisconsin, and Florida. Three were from Washington county, two from Woodbury, two from Jefferson, and one each from Linn, Muscatine, Hardin, Audubon, Benton, Cedar, Iowa, and Ida counties.

License plates must be attached to cars so that will be seen plainly, instead of being hidden behind some part of the car. They must, by state law, be bolted to the car, and not loosely attached by wire. The motorist must place his registration card on the dash of the car, in order to comply with the regulations.

Bell Representatives to Interview Seniors

The Bell telephone system includes the Western Electric, Bell Laboratories, Illinois Bell and Northwestern Bell Telephone companies. W. G. McAvoy, college employment representative of Des Moines, will be the representative of the Northwestern company.

The interviews will be held at Iowa Union. These will be scheduled through the assistance of O. C. Williams, dean of the college of engineering, and C. A. Phillips, dean of the college of commerce.

WHERE 120 ARKANSAS MINERS FACED DEATH

This is a snapshot taken at the Mana coal mine No. 3, near Jenny Lind, Ark., where 120 men were reported entombed following a terrific explosion in the shaft.

Man Often Arrested on Double's Charge

GRIMSBY, England (AP)—Ernest Arthur Watson of this town, has a "double" who is causing him a deal of trouble and annoyance. In fact Watson has been arrested no less than five times for offenses said to have been committed by the "double" but in each case Watson had been able to prove an alibi.

Watson said after his fifth arrest: "Since January 5, I have been going from place to place in custody and have been undergoing examination and re-examination by detectives. On the whole the police were fairly sportsy about it, apart from the fact that I was carried about in handcuffs at some places and had unpleasant rides in Black Marias at others. As for my double, he has caused me and the police a vast amount of trouble."

Stock Producers Fight Capper Bill

WASHINGTON, March 1 (AP)—Objections of some livestock producers' cooperative associations to the Capper bill aimed at federal control of the private concentration stock yards of the big packers were met today during hearings before the senate agriculture committee with statements by various senators that the cooperative operations would be exempted in any legislation that may be recommended to the senate. Several witnesses expressed fear that the farmers' shipping associations might be embarrassed by the bill as it stands.

England Grows More American — Author

LONDON, England (AP)—American influence is altering the existence of England, in the opinion of G. K. Chesterton.

Speaking at a dinner, he said the English habit of life, the look of an English town, the whole tone of existence in this country is being altered entirely by economic and commercial pressure of America.

"If ever there was a glorious thing on earth," he said, "it was the English inn. The transformation of the English inn into an American hotel is going on all over the country and nobody stops it. If a foreign army had done it, I hope you would have turned out to fight them in the streets, but it is done simply by the power of money."

Taking a tilt at New York, Mr. Chesterton said: "If you go to New York as a visitor it is rather amusing to walk down Broadway and see the idiotic electric signs wriggling about like dancing devils. You say to yourself 'after all I haven't got to live here and it is always interesting to watch strange tribes.'"

Keokuk Plans for New Construction

KEOKUK, Mar. 1 (AP)—Spring will witness the completion of the remodeling of two Keokuk buildings and the opening of construction of three other projects which will entail an aggregate cost estimated at $325,000.

The remodeling of the Eagles home which was commenced last fall is now nearing completion and the fraternity contemplates its formal opening within the next week or two. The new addition to this building consists of a two-story front portion of terra cotta and pressed brick which contains entirely new club rooms and adds length to the dance hall. The cost of this new addition is rated at $25,000.

The old Gibbons opera house, occupied in recent years by the Central State bank and the Knights of Columbus, and which is now leased to Montgomery, Ward and company for a retail branch is being remodeled throughout, and a new three-story front of terra cotta and pressed brick has already been constructed. The third story is to be retained by the nights of Columbus while basement and second floor is leased to the Chicago company. This building is to be ready for occupancy at the end of March or the first part of April. The remodeling cost is estimated at $25,000.

Another building, the Estes house, which has stood as a landmark since the early days of Keokuk, has been sold, and it is believed that construction will soon set under way toward remodeling it. This building was originally built for a hotel, and was used during the Civil war as a hospital. Improvements on this building are estimated to cost $75,000.

Other building projects to be started in the spring are $100,000 additions to and remodeling of both local hospitals.

Tomasek Sues for $570 Unpaid Rent

Asking a judgment of $570 for unpaid rent with interest and costs, Frank W. Tomasek began action in district court Wednesday against William Vondrasek and Martha Vondrasek.

According to the petition, the defendants leased a farm in section 24, township 80, range 7, for $870, and have paid only $300, although the rent is past due. The plaintiff asks a writ of attachment against the property of the defendant's to protect his claim.

High Cost of Living Hits Marshall Joffre

PARIS, Mar. 1 (AP)—Marshal Joffre, victor of the battle of the Marne, has been vanquished by the high cost of living.

France's great soldier, with a salary of $200 a month, must leave his handsome old Paris apartment because the proprietor has doubled the rent. Joffre can't pay the doubled rent and he is going to move.

He is 76 years old and not as strong as in the dark days of the war when he was the commander of millions, in and out of uniform. Joffre, nevertheless, will find a place to live. He still has his modest little home in the country but he will have no difficulty in getting another apartment in Paris. It was a Spaniard, whose son and grandson both fought under Joffre, who was the first to offer "Papa" Joffre a home. This gentleman, hearing of the marshal's plight, offered him an apartment either in Paris or in Nice, in buildings he owns.

Joffre still is on "active service" for Marshals, of whom there are six, are never retired. They have become, in these times of peace, sort of consulting engineers to the army and various problems are referred to Joffre and the others by the Superior War Council, and their advice is asked although it may not be followed.

St. Patrick's Boys Band Together to Study Indiancraft

The fifth Ranger lodge in the Iowa City Boy Scout area was organized of sixteen boys from St. Patrick's church yesterday at 4 p.m. Scout Executive Paul R. McGuire acted as leader in the absence of a scoutmaster. The members formed two tribes, the Sioux and the Iroquois. An Indian name was chosen by each Ranger.

The Ranger lodges are composed of boys eight to twelve years old who intend to become Boy Scouts. Work is devoted to Indiancraft. On joining a boy becomes a Papoose, and with proficiency becomes a Hunter, Warrior, and finally a Brave.

To aid local Rangers in studying the minimum requirements for advancement in rank, Mr. McGuire is preparing a booklet containing the necessary information and appropriate illustrations. The booklet is to be mimeographed, and will appear soon.

Iowa Death Rate Shows Decrease During Last Year

The death rate of Iowa has decreased a slight, but encouraging, amount according to Dr. Henry Albert, state health commissioner, in the weekly health message issued by the Iowa state department of health.

"The total number of deaths for 1927 was 24,237 as compared with 25,466 in 1926 and 24,619 as the average for the five year period from 1923 to 1927 inclusive," he says.

Heart disease caused 4,846 deaths as compared with 3,970 in 1926 and an average of 3,299 for the five year period. The second highest was cancer causing 2,646 deaths which is also slightly higher than last year.
