head's method. Do this each day and carefully read Mr. Whitehead's explanation, and you will find that your knowledge of the game will progress rapidly. Compare your bidding and play with that of your friends—the comparison may be illuminating.

NOTE—In recording the Auction, or the play use "S" for Spades, "H" for Hearts, "D" for Diamonds, and "C" for Clubs. Use "N.T." for No Trump, "DBL" for double, "RED BL" for redouble.

Following South's No Trump bid, West passes, as his hand lacks the required strength for an overbid or a negative double of an original No Trump on right. North passes, as neither the strength nor the character of his hand warrants a take out. East's Heart suit is too weak for a lead-directing bid, although had he bid two Hearts, South, with his holding, would not hesitate in bidding two No Trumps.

Agents Take Five With Fake Money

CHICAGO March 3 (AP)—Federal department of justice agents yesterday arrested five men who were alleged to have been preparing distribution of $30,000 worth of bogus $20 bills counterfeited by accomplices in Minneapolis. About $500 worth of the spurious notes was seized, the agents said.

Those arrested gave their names as Carl Abbatemareo, a grocer; Andrew Benjamin Schaefer; Vincent J. Huff and Benjamin Hirsch; Hirsch being the leader of the gang, which agents said numbered about twelve and acted as distributors for the counterfeiter in Minneapolis. Only $200 worth of the fake notes had passed when the five men were arrested, according to the agents. Most of these have been traced down.

Dean Kay Says Develop Students in Religious Way

Iowa School Scores Success During First Year

The success which the Iowa school of religion has met in the field of religious education during its first year has encouraged those interested in cooperation among the religious groups at the university to believe that a coordinated program of religious character development among students should be the next step, according to a statement yesterday from President Walter A. Jessup and Dean George F. Kay, chairman of the senate board on religious education.

Petition Jessup
Religious workers and those interested in religion as a means of character development have petitioned President Jessup to appoint a committee to do a piece of work in the field of religious character development similar to that performed by the committee that worked out the plans for the school of religion.

The petition was signed by university religious leaders, among whom were Catholics, Jews and Protestants.

President Jessup has referred this matter to the senate board on religious education with the understanding that they shall work with all religious groups in formulating a comprehensive plan of cooperation among religious forces.

Members of Board
Other members of the board besides Dean Kay are Chester A. Phillips, dean of the college of commerce; Carl E. Seashore, dean of the graduate college; Forest C. Engstrom, professor of education and history; M. Willard Lampe, director of the school of religion; George W. Stewart, head of the physics department; and Edwin D. Starbuck, head of the philosophy department.

"It is time for us all to get around a common table and get down to the most important task of improving the student's opportunities for appreciation of the highest values," Dean Kay said yesterday in discussing the petition.

Bar Association Says Public First

That the protection of the public and not the individual is the most important thing to be considered in a criminal case was the verdict of the joint committee meeting of the American Bar association and the American Psychiatric association held in Chicago last Wednesday.

The meeting was attended by Prof. Rollin M. Perkins of the college of law, who is serving as chairman of the law committee. The Chicago meeting was only a preliminary session of the two committees and no definite steps were taken.

The work of the two groups is to formulate, if possible, some basis for the court decisions of criminal cases when the plea is insanity or mental deficiency. The recent Remus and Hickman cases have brought the question to the notice of the two American associations and it is hoped that the joint work of the two committees will result in a new plan for the problem.

Any question of this kind, Professor Perkins said, in regard to the problem, might involve a sweeping change in the constitutional history of criminal law and must be taken slowly.

The two committees were agreed that parole or suspended sentence of criminals should be based on a psychiatric examination rather than any sentimental reason involved. Then if the person concerned were declared mentally deficient he would be sent to a state hospital rather than be allowed to go free at some later time.

Dale Yoder Tells About Revolution

"Revolution as the word is used today includes all sorts of political changes, and Dale Yoder of the college of commerce tells of the 'Real revolution in Italy' in the January issue of the American Journal of Sociology.

The disorganization and chaos that has resulted in the revolution of the Italian people is but a manifestation of the gradual overthrowing of the old political and social order, according to Mr. Yoder.

Women to Discuss "Children, Career" at Open Meeting

"Children or a Career," will be the topic discussed at the third open forum sponsored by Sigma Delta Phi, honorary forensic sorority, to be held at the Iowa Union March 8 at 7:15 p.m.

The purpose of these discussion meetings is to encourage active thinking on problems of interest to young women. The last meeting was devoted to a discussion of the double standard. To allow the discussion to be perfectly free, press representatives are not admitted. Any young woman interested is admitted to the forum and permitted to express her views. There is no faculty supervision but different members of the club are in charge. Doris M. Lorden, A3 of Oelwein, will be chairman of this meeting.

Dean Houghton to Give Address

Chamber of Commerce to Hear Speech on Chinese

Dr. Henry S. Houghton, newly elected dean of the university college of medicine, will address the Iowa City chamber of commerce at the regular weekly luncheon tomorrow.

Dr. Houghton has just taken up his duties here after having been elected to the position last spring.

The political, military, and social status in the land of 400,000,000 Chinese is the topic chosen by Dr. Houghton for his talk.

Before coming here Dr. Houghton was head of the Union hospital at Peking, China, and has been intimate with the problems of the Chinese.

Relations of the Chinese to this country in regard to the troops sent there will be discussed briefly by Doctor Houghton. He will also tell of the political conditions of the over-populated Orient, and give sidelights on the family and social life of the Chinese.

Loweth to Speak for Mecca Week

The first event in the annual Mecca week, which begins March 12, will be a convocation of all the students in the college of engineering. At this time Charles F. Loweth, chief engineer of the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul railroad will speak.

Mr. Loweth has distinguished himself as an engineer by serving at different times as president of the American society of civil engineers; president of the American railroad engineering association; former chief engineer of the Davenport, Rock Island, and Northwestern railroad; and president of the western society of engineering.

The meeting will be held in the chemistry auditorium at 4 p.m. Following his talk in the afternoon, Mr. Loweth will also speak at the Mecca banquet which will be held in the Iowa Union at 6 p.m.

Scout Round-Up Begins Tomorrow

Winner to Receive Cup Presented by Jessup

A silver loving cup, twelve inches in height, presented by President Walter A. Jessup, will be awarded to the Boy Scout troop winning first place in the scout achievement round-up March 5 to May 26. Harold L. Hands will give a seven inch cup to the winning patrol. The trophies will be on display at Hand's jewelry store in about ten days.

Achievement points will be acquired by individual scouts for attendance at meetings, progress in ranking, and participation in hikes and other out-of-door activities. Each month the average number of points per scout for each troop will be taken.

The troop having the highest total average for the three months will win the Jessup trophy. The troop having the lowest average will be declared Champ-Nits and receive the booby prize.

Award Patrol Cups
The patrol cup, to be presented by Mr. Hands, will go to the patrol having the highest percentage in efficiency rating. The patrol standing will be announced at the end of each month.

The board of review will meet weekly to consider the applications for advancement, instead of bi-weekly as usual. Meetings will be held in the scout headquarters Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m.

Includes Four Counties
A possible 105 points could be earned by one scout in one month, by passing the first class test and five merit badges. A patrol could win 300 points in one item in a month by having a 100 per cent rating.

The round-up included all troops in the Iowa City area, composed of Johnson, Iowa, Washington, and Cedar counties. Near the close of the contest, the last of May, the outside troops will be the guests of the Iowa City troops. A scout-craft contest and a swim will probably be included in the entertainment.

Restrict Probation

ECHOES of growing disfavor concerning E fraternity probation are found in a dispatch from Lincoln, Neb., where the interfraternity council at the state university is considering restriction of probation activities to chapter houses. At the University of Iowa five pledges have been arrested and fined because they were sent on "night walks."

Iowa Men's Panhellenic council apparently has a regulation which forbids chapters to carry on probation outside of the fraternity residences. The word "apparently" is used advisedly, because officers of the conference are unable to bring to light the definite ruling. It is admitted, however, that such a requirement was passed a few years ago.

So far as enforcement is concerned, however, the rule might as well be erased from the regulations of the council. It has never been enforced, and from all indications, the conference will take no action against the two fraternities which violated the city ordinances.

The whole question of probation week arises from careful consideration, the failure to confine activities to the chapter houses being the most noticeable feature. Many other phases should also be weighed carefully; probation brings a slump in scholarship; it endangers the personal health of the pledges; it disrupts the morale of the entire group for a week or more.

The system grows out of a sophomore complex for bulldozing whose value is greatly outweighed by the harm it creates. Most fraternities have finished their probation for this year; now is the time for them to resolve to do away with the practice forever. The new activities—those who have just endured the dogged whack of paddles and the childish "stunts" from upperclassmen—should take the lead in removing such impositions from future neophytes.

An old brewery in Iowa City is to house a powdered milk plant. What changes prohibition brings!

The Cruise of the "Los Angeles"

THE giant "Los Angeles," gliding down to its mooring mast in Panama, 2,265 miles away from Lakehurst, N. J., proves the worthiness of dirigibles. It was the first long trip taken by a lighter-than-air machine since the wreck of the "Shenandoah" in 1925. At the time of that disaster, it was suggested all dirigibles be destroyed. Better counsel prevailed, however, and last week saw the "Los Angeles" fly into the tropics with all the sturdiness of an ocean steamer.

The cruise of the "Los Angeles" proves two things; one that trans-Atlantic travel by dirigibles can be made safe, and that in case of necessity, airships can be used to protect the Panama canal zone.

Experts have predicted that a flight to Europe by dirigible can be made in seventy-four hours, with all the comforts of a steamer. The ships are to be constructed in such a manner that a huge dancing floor will be available. Kitchens and dining salons which will compare with those in the best hotels on land will furnish the clients with food.

Commander Rosendahl, who directed the ship on its flight to Panama, has demonstrated that a straight air line can be found between North America and South America, both for protection and travel. And by the use of a new kind of mooring mast he has greatly simplified the problem of caring for the ships at their destination. With this new invention it is not necessary to have a huge tower to anchor the ship, but the machine rests on cradles on the ground.

The day is not far distant when the dirigible, with its great cruising radius and carrying power, will be a factor in long distance communications.

Mr. Rockne on "Boys"

KNUTE ROCKNE, in an address at Ames, preached a doctrine of making boys "hard as nails." He is not interested in character building as it is known in education, but would leave that function to the Sunday schools. He indicts both the home and the school for making life too soft for boys, and adds:

"What I want is a two-fisted man, who'll go in there and fight and take it and show he's got red blood in him." He further characterized all schools but agriculture institutions as nigh unto worthless.

Mr. Rockne's panacea is football. That is readily understood, for, as one of our foremost coaches, he is interested in gridiron material. Also, it must be granted that he is right when he says that the tendency is toward softening of life for young men, and for that matter, for older people, too.

But how would Mr. Rockne apply his ideas to the great body of boys? Not more than 15 per cent are physically able to fit into Mr. Rockne's scheme of things.

The Rockne idea may be all right to produce a great scoring machine, but it does not encompass all there is to taking care of boys.

Mr. Rockne fails to take into consideration the fact that the world is tending toward leisure. The problem today is to build character within that circle of luxury and leisure. To do that job requires more than the philosophy of Stagg, Yost, or Rockne. The football season lasts but three months.

A Forward Step

THE citizens of Cedar Rapids are taking a forward step in cooperation. The Commercial club of that city recently sponsored a meeting at which it decided to organize a chamber of commerce covering Linn county. Each town is to have two representatives on the board of directors, and its membership will include men from the entire county.

Farmers will have a chance to give their opinions on commercial and political questions. The rural districts will cooperate with the towns, and the whole county will be organized as a unit. A feeling of unity and understanding will exist. Besides bringing the city and country together to discuss such mutual questions as paved roads, it will afford an opportunity to get group opinions of farmers on farm relief bills before the legislature.

If the state waterworks operators who meet here next month can make improvement in Iowa City's water supply, the convention will have done considerable benefit to humanity.

A Readable Library

DOWN at the foot of Old Capitol hill, there is waging a battle of magazines. "Maal Og Minne," "The Theosophical Quarterly," and the "Slavonic Review" are gradually replacing the forces of such magazines as the "American" and "Hearst's Cosmopolitan." The power behind the change is a regiment of university professors and graduate students.

The lamentable thing about the war is that, unless the tide changes, the magazine room of the reserve library will soon become a dust covered den of thesis seekers rather than a meeting place for university readers and current periodicals. Already the tide is rapidly turning.

Most new magazines are added at the request of some professor or graduate student who has nothing save personal motives to prompt his choice. Magazines that have the largest sales volume in America and are given the highest awards for literature in the short story field do not find a place on the shelves because the powers that be have decided that they are not "learned."

Iowa is the state of tall corn and farmers, yet only two farm periodicals find their way into the reading room. Maybe it is because the graduate students are not selecting rural subjects for their thesis, and professors have no agriculture courses here.

Magazines of art and music are not to be found on the shelves because students like such things so well that they develop the habit of taking them home. At least, it shows some indication of what the students want. Since the mind of man can create such wonderful magazines maybe someone could invent something to nail the magazines down with.

Professors and graduate students are putting the magazine room of the reserve library back into corsets. If the room would have more admirers it must adopt a more popular and pleasing dress.

Radio religious services will never be popular, because the women can not see each other's hats.—Clinton Herald.

A Puritanical Hangover

A LEAGUE of ministers in Chicago recently set aside a day in March as a day of prayer for clean elections. On that day the members of the respective churches are to meet at their places of worship and sing hymns and pray that the citizens of Chicago will get out and nominate good men for office in the coming primaries.

There is an old axiom which says, "When in Rome do as the Romans do," and, perhaps, if the able ministers would put all their energies in a rousing campaign for cleaner politics, make some good political speeches, and, at least, awaken the members of their lethargic congregations to their responsibilities and duties as voters, they would be accomplishing more than by setting aside a day of prayer.

The resolution savors somewhat of those adopted by the old Puritans in days of "The Scarlet Letter." But, unlike their ancestors, these Puritans fail to accompany their prayers with action.

Chills and Fever

Vitamin F

On the other hand, there should be no alarm felt at the display of alcohol in the house of representatives last Friday. The alcohol was merely for medicinal purposes. Most of the congressmen were sick.

The reason the congressmen were sick was because of Representative Funnell's speech on farm relief the day before. The congressmen were sick of hearing about farm relief.

Then yesterday they had to sit through a dry lecture on prohibition. If there's anything worse than a dry lecture, it's a dryer one.

Statesmen who give dry lectures have missed their calling. Their place is in the modern university.

What the world needs today is a lectureless lecture. Give Lester Hendershot, inventor of the motorless motor, a little time—and see what happens.

Mr. Hendershot might insist that to invent a really lectureless lecture he would have to eat Vitamin F. Vitamin F is what Dr. Herbert Evans of California university discovered the other day. Dr. Evans is a discoverer. He discovers vitamins.

Dr. Evans has a technique of his own when it comes to discovering vitamins. He fits out a ship with vitamin hunters. Then he sets sail for the Vitamin Islands. The Vitamin Islands are just south of Tahiti. When he gets there, he looks through his telescope. If he sees a vitamin he harpoons it.

Vitamins don't like to be harpooned. They put up a squawk. "Putting up a squawk" is a barbaric ceremony that vitamins perform. After the beating of tom-toms, they start out on a great "squawk hunt." When they have killed enough squawks they return to their native villages for the ceremony.

To put up the squawk requires a squawk hanger. These are elected every four years, and it is their official duty to see that the squawks are put up.

So, when Dr. Evans and his explorers came to the Vitamin Islands, the vitamins declared a "national emergency." They emerged, and directly Dr. Evans harpooned the vitamin, and sailed back to America with it.

He named it Vitamin F. He now has six of them—A, B, C, D, E, and F. He says when he gets up to twenty-six he will start the study of Chinese.

So far, according to Dr. Evans, his vitamins have given him little trouble. They are gentle, mild-mannered, and very easy to train. "A well-bred vitamin," he says, "will make a splendid pet for any child. I think every home should have a vitamin that it could cherish and love. However, every vitamin should be first house-broken by an expert house-breaker."

There is only one difficulty with the vitamin. He is said to be addicted to the saxophone. If America is to invite every and any vitamin to its shores, then sharper teeth must be put in the "Anti-Saxophone Act." Otherwise, the saxophone traffic would become a menace.

The saxophone is a dope. If it is taken in large quantities it causes hysteria, neuralgia, general weakening of the synthesis, insomnia, and amnesia. A person who is given the saxophone in large doses is liable to forget he is civilized and commit some dreadful crime.

We have the example of a federal saxophone agent who killed two motorists. His defense was that he had noticed the rear springs of the automobile were sagging. And he promptly shot the motorists. Later investigation proved that, instead of trafficking in saxophones, the motorists were carrying ukeleles. So far, there have been no restrictions placed on ukeleles. But the federal saxophone agent was freed and later commended for his vigilance.

With the influx of vitamins, California is seriously considering barring them from industrial enterprise in that state. It has been shown that a vitamin will work for less pay than a white laborer. This situation threatens to throw hundreds of thousands of workers out of jobs. The American Federation of Labor has already resolved that "America should be for Americans; the Vitamin Islands for vitamins."

California legislators also refer to what is now known as "the vitamin peril." They point out that the vitamins have been quietly building a large navy, and are even contemplating training their young men to be "good will ambassadors." If this doesn't start another war, nothing will.

There could be nothing worse than a war against the vitamins. They are barbarous, foolhardy, and are governed by an unscrupulous king known as Kaiser Vitamin II. He hates his mother, kills women and children, and otherwise conducts himself as no self-respectable vitamin should.

We feel that Dr. Evans should be severely criticized for his work with the vitamins. What the Vitamin Islands need is a good missionary from this religious country of ours. We propose sending a box load of missionaries to convert the vitamins. Two boatloads of missionaries. The missionaries we have . . .

The Book World

By Edith M. Cobeen

THE BONNEY FAMILY, by Ruth Suckow. New York: Adolph A. Knopf. 296 pages. $2.50. 1928. Into one book Ruth Suckow has condensed twenty formative years from the history of one family, that of an Iowa minister in a small town. Building from a mass of everyday trivialities—so many that they are often tiresome—of small sacrifices and deceptions, diseases and good fortune, the writer has painted with deep insight the lives of six ordinary persons, now together, now separated, but always with a common interest in the things they once shared, and always working out their destinies from that source. The father and mother are drawn in full length; the man possessed of a kindly understanding and sympathetic interest for all humanity, but little gifted as a preacher; the woman, Mrs. Bonney, slow, capable, considerate where she does not understand, characterized by a fine unselfish independence and total lack of sentimentality.

Adolescent Problems

One follows the minister's family through the maze of twenty years' varied experiences told in less than 300 pages. Fred Bonney resigns his pastorate in the village of Morning Sun and accepts a position in a small college where the children are to be given opportunities for education and culture.

Here the real interest of the book centers in the two older children, Warren and Sarah. We trace their lives through an exasperating flow of detail, sifting them from accounts of various other members of the family, and the story is finally resolved into the story of Sarah.

We follow Warren, gangling, awkward, painfully adolescent boy, pathetic in his rebellious loneliness in a group of academy and college young people who hurt him by their indifference and jibes. He spends a summer in a Yellowstone summer camp, learns to handle his big bow, kisses a girl from the kitchen, comes back, and makes a success of college. He becomes engaged to a charming girl, and gives up the ambition to be a great musician that loneliness thrust upon him, to become a Latin professor.

CHAPTER XXXIX

The sunroom was finished now and it was even prettier, Emily told herself, than she had expected. All light and blitheness, it seemed always the soft edge of morning within those glowing walls.

There was a winding thread of green in the cushions and hangings; and joyous green of early summer. And the green rugs she had placed about were like woodland moss on the polished floor. A happy room. Even Agnes was pleased with it.

Kingdon Coles was invited. He would come a little early so they could have an hour in the sunroom before they went downstairs for dinner. An hour watching the light slide to the far edge of the river and linger on the Farrytown hills as the sun dropped down the west.

And perhaps if he asked her while they set there she would set a wedding day. This thought frightened her a little; still there was no use putting it off. Feel differently, probably, with everything settled and Agnes won over.

Agnes hadn't said much about Harry lately but then he hadn't been dropping in so frequently since he'd been in Judge Morrow's office. She came home at noon and began to make preparations. There was to be Maryland chicken for dinner; after a recipe Frances Haiden had given her and she had to bring this to readiness as well as the dressing for the salad. Agnes did not approve the dressing.

"But you'll eat a little of it, Muz darling? It would look so funny if you didn't."

"You care much what this man thinks, Emmy? I'm a plain old woman; too plain for their grand ways."

"Oh, you're not! Nothing too grand for you, dear. I want you to have everything."

"Everything's not for some—I mind the time your poor father—"

"Dearest, please don't think about that. Just talk of other things to-night, won't you? Just this and that the way people do."

"Ah, well." With a sigh.

Supposing Agnes should start telling King of Steve and her early days with him. Emily could imagine his polite interest, the ennuil behind it.

"But I shouldn't feel so about him," she thought. "The man I'm going to marry—why, I should be glad he is coming. I should wish him to meet my people and see my home. Yet I'm all on edge. I don't know—can't understand—"

She swept and dusted the living room; there was a moment when she considered taking away the crocheted tidies. But a bit of independence stopped this.

"If he doesn't like me in spite of those he doesn't care enough to marry me. Going to all this bother, feeling so—but I suppose most girls do the same. Natural to want to appear your best."

She had told him the way to the house. "I live on The Hill—" blushing a little. But he didn't know regional distinctions in Lyall; that meant nothing.

Shortly after five she expected him and put on her prettiest blue frock and brushed her hair till it shone like a nimbus. Then she sat in the sunroom to wait.

It was half past six when she heard his car turning into the street. By this time she was in a fever of nerves; the sunset was all over and their bright hour vanished. Besides the dinner would be spoiled; Agnes had been keeping it warm to the very limit of endurance. They would have to eat first and sit in the sunroom afterward; she tried to comfort herself with the thought that her lights there gave a lovely glow.

All of this rushed from her mind at sight of the blank incredulity in his face.

"So this is the place! Came up here once but thought I was mistaken." He put out his hand, still uncertainly. "How are you?"

"Come in, King, do. I wondered what had happened."

She led him into the living room and he sat down before the crayon portrait. She saw him turn his eyes, a look of pain sweeping his face. When Agnes came and he executed his low, foreign bow over her hand, Emily was acutely conscious of her mother's embarrassment.

He was elaborately courteous. He went far out of the way to make conversation and Emily was grateful for this. She had even been willing to have listened to one of Agnes' reminiscences so tense did the evening become before the dinner was over.

She could think of nothing to say. Something, she knew, was wrong but what it was she couldn't guess.

Now and then she caught the Viking eyes fixed on her in a piercing scrutiny; always it sent the red up her throat. Once she felt herself growing hysterical as Kitten gave her a little grimace.

Agnes refused the salad but that didn't matter. She could eat none of it herself. She looked at the terrible golden-oak buffet—Steve had bought it years back and it had strange little shelves and dust-catching curlicues of wood—and wished she was dead.

Eventually Agnes said the thing Emily somehow knew was coming. "I've a good daughter in Emmy, Mr. Coles. She's taken care of us since her father died."

"Yes indeed. She's a brave little kid."

It was sincere enough but Emily's strained imagination found a note of condescension. Certainly King's usual loveliness was absent as he followed her into the living room while Agnes and Kitten gathered up the dishes.

It didn't seem worth-while to take him up to the sunroom after that. And when he remembered, all at once, that he must leave early she rose quickly and walked with him to the door.

He gave her a hasty kiss and she stood there in the dark listening to the sound of his motor growing faint down the street. Then she crept upstairs and sat with her head on the rounded wicker table and all the undraped windows of the sunroom stared at her like curious eyes.

Such a happy thing she had planned—and now the place held only bewilderment.

It wasn't that she felt a great love for King. But he'd seemed to care—to want her so. And he came like a stranger and scrutinized her across the table.

What was he thinking when he did that? What was there about this she failed to comprehend? "Why?" she kept asking herself quite as she had done when she was a very little girl. "Why?"

The next day she tried to persuade herself that she had been over sensitive. The flowers came as usual; they came for a week, in fact, before she arrived at the shop one morning and found no box at the door.

She telephoned his office in the afternoon but they said he was out. She received a note then. He was busy now with new shows opening; he was sorry but he wouldn't be able to visit Lyall for a time. Had they, perhaps, made a mistake? She was such a fine little friend he was sure she'd understand. And he remained hers sincerely.

It was like a slap in the face, that note. She read it twice before she tore it into tiny pieces and sent them drifting into the wastebasket.

Marie C. Burger Granted Divorce by Judge Popham

Judge R. G. Popham granted Marie C. Burger a divorce from Edward R. Burger, 916 N. Dodge street, yesterday on the grounds of habitual drunkenness and cruel and inhuman treatment. The case was contested by the defendant.

The custody of the three minor children was given to Mrs. Burger, and she is allowed $320 a year alimony until the children are of age. Provision is made in the decree by which the father may see the children at stated intervals. The household goods were also given to Mrs. Burger.

The Burgers were married in October, 1921, and lived together until last January.

Rulings upon motions in various other cases have been made by Judge Popham. In the case of Anton Hinek against A. B. and Fred Thomas for a decree establishing an easement of drainage, the defendants' motion for a more specific statement was overruled.

A motion for a more specific statement was sustained in the case of Adam Scheetz against Leo Griffin for a judgment of $288 and a lien on certain premises.

A motion to cancel the action in the case of John Pavelka against George J. Prizler and Regina Prizler was overruled. The suit is for a payment of $11,252.50 for certain property.

Cases 23,275 and 23,142, both involving John Shrader as plaintiff and Peter Rogers et al as defendants, and naming the same issues were consolidated on a motion by one of the defendants.

In the $1,343.80 damage suit for injuries received in an auto accident, filed against Mrs. Arthur J. Cox and Thomas Cox by Arthur Baldwin, a motion to strike was overruled and a motion for more specific statement was sustained.

Minnesota Swimmers Sink Hawkeye Aggregation, 40 to 23

Carter and King Shatter Records in Gopher Meet

Thorpemen Disqualify in Medley Relay; Win Sprints

A team from the state of 10,000 lakes drowned the Hawkeye swimmers in their own pool last night 40 to 23. But for all the difference in the scores, the meet was close and hardfought from beginning to end, the Gophers winning most of their victories by scant margins.

"Nick" Carter, Iowa captain, broke his own university record in the 200-yard breast stroke by a full second, clipping off the distance in 2:42.6. Fred King also smashed his own university mark in the 150-yard backstroke, being clocked in 1:49.5 for the race.

Moody, a Double Winner

Moody, veteran Gopher splasher, captured firsts in both the 40-yard free style races and his teammate, Lucke, bettered the university mark in the 430-yard free style by 5.2 seconds. The Minnesotans also shattered marks in both the relays but were disqualified in the 300-yard medley because Captain Sam Hill turned on his side while swimming the backstroke.

Carter Breaks Own Mark

Carter set his new breast stroke mark after one of the closest races ever contested in the local pool. Purdy and Bayers of the invaders and Goldman, the other Iowa entrant, stayed with the Hawkeye captain throughout the entire distance and he finished with scarcely a yard lead. Purdy bested Goldman for second by the scantest of margins.

Hawk Basketeers Move to Purdue for Final Game

Harrison and Lawson Play Last Games for Old Gold

Defeated last night by Wisconsin, the Hawkeyes make a long jump to Lafayette, Ind., where they will finish the season against Purdue, who would be asking too much to have the Hawks to finish in a tie for the conference championship.

There is little chance for an Iowa victory. Purdue will be playing to share title honors, while for the Hawks it will merely be another game of a disappointing season. It would be asking too much to have the Hawks spoil a perfectly good record for the Boiler-makers.

Marquette Star Takes Mile in Record Time of 4:25

SOUTH BEND, Ind., March 3 (AP)—Notre Dame repeated its feat of last year by taking the second annual Central intercollegiate indoor track and field meet today in a thrilling finish. The Irish, Michigan State and Marquette were separated only by one point until the last event. The Irish score was 27 1/3; Michigan State was second with 22 1/3 and Marquette third with 19 1/3.

Elder Ties Record

The individual honors went to Jack Elder of Notre Dame, Dwight Kane of Ohio Wesleyan and Pfeiffer of Marquette. The Irish flash tied the world indoor record for the sixty yard dash, 6 1/5 seconds, twice in the afternoon.

Pfeiffer Wins Mile

Pfeiffer outstepped all his competitors in both the one mile and two mile runs, and hung up a new meet time of 4:25.4 for the mile distance.

Pittsburg Pirates Rest

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 3 (AP)—Batteries men of the Pittsburgh Pirates got a brief limbering up workout this afternoon after their morning session had been called off by rain. Coburn Jones, 20 year old rookie, from Denver, without previous professional experience, has created a sensation by his sparkling play in the infield.

Minnesota Wins

MINNEAPOLIS, March 3 (AP)—Gustavus Adolphus of St. Peter tonight won the state college conference basketball championship, defeating Augsburg of Minneapolis, 37 to 33, for its ninth consecutive victory of the season.

Washington Wins, 35-21

ST. LOUIS, March 3 (AP)—Washington university basketball quintet outclassed the Kansas Aggies 35 to 21 here tonight after holding the scoring honors throughout the entire contest. The winners had a 19 to 8 advantage at the half.

Morningside Wins

SIoux CITY, March 3 (AP)—Holding Des Moines university cagers to but two field goals throughout the game, Morningside college basketball team won an easy victory here tonight, 44 to 13. Means scored 18 points for Morningside.

Class "A" Schools

All of last year's "big eight" were class A schools—those having more than 100 pupils enrolled, and it remains to be seen whether they can continue their supremacy when both classes scramble next week in the district meets.

Burlington Wins

Burlington, which lost the final game to Muscatine by 24 to 21 last year, won the Mt. Pleasant sectional Class A tourney by defeating Mt. Pleasant 20 to 16. The Ottumwa-Oskaloosa score was 24-20.

Jones Scores Nine Points

Another tall sharpshooter, who added greatly in putting the skids under the city high boys was Dean Jones. He crashed through with four baskets and a free throw.

Dennis watched the second half from the bench after a hectic first half, in which he hacked quite freely.

Moffitt was the main cog in the Red and White defense, taking the ball off the bank board time after time and dribbling the whole length of the floor only to have the ball his all four corners of the hoop rather than the center.

Defeating Grant high of Cedar Rapids, 33-31, U High placed in the finals. Iowa City played as a result of an 18-17 victory over Brooklyn in the afternoon.

While "Freddy" studied, Plunkitt stepped in to usurp his honors, and continued to do so even after he was again declared eligible.

Aside from the fact that a victory is imperative to Purdue, the only thing interesting is the number of points Wilcox will score. "Rags" has a chance to finish high among the leading scorers, and he will be out to garner all the points possible.

Solms Wants to Try Second Trip

BERLIN (AP)—Count Georg von Solms-Laubach, financial backer of the ill-fated "Germania" airplane expedition to America, has lost none of his enthusiasm for trans-oceanic flying, even though he almost sacrificed his life and though his pilot, Lieut. Otto Koennecke, is still marooned in India.

"Just as soon as I can afford it, I'd like to make another attempt to fly to America," Solms said on his return from Karachi. "My first experience has shown me principally what not to do the next time."

"It was a mistake, for instance for us to take little cans of gasoline instead of large tanks. These cans nearly cost me my life, for they came tumbling down upon me as we were crossing the desert and not only made gashes on my head, shoulders and chest, but broke several of my ribs."

"Next, there is no question but that German airplane motors are not yet adequate to trans-oceanic journeys."

"I think, too, that all the German expeditions of last summer were prepared too hastily, in a mad desire to get across first. Next time I shall go at the project differently."

Vogelmen Stage Outdoor Contest

Regulars Win Seven Inning Tilt From Yannigans

Braving a chilly northeasterner, the Vogelmen proceeded to go outside for the afternoon's workout yesterday. The pitchers worked under wraps to give the hitters an hour to sharpen their eyes.

Instead of the customary infield drill after the hitting practice a real seven inning game was instigated between the regulars and the Yannigans. Mulrone and Brown doing the battery duty for the regulars and Corbin and Thompson for the Yannigans.

The first squad to take the field was: Sals at first, Blackford on second, Glasgow doing duty at short with Allen at third. The outfield consisted of Capt. Herb Terry in left, Smith in center and Rath in right.

The second squad was Nelson at first, Porter on the keystone paired with J. Blackford at short, and Gamble on third. Their outfield was Quirin in left, Heintel in center and Chance taking care of the right garden.

Mulrone and Corbin worked only three innings each. Mulrone giving away to Allee. Corbin gave way to John Carlson, only after he had clouted a two base hit. These last two pitchers soon were replaced with Smedes and Clark respectively.

The regulars emerged ahead of the Yannigans at the close of the sixth with the big end of the six to three score. Porter, second baseman, for the Yannigans on his first two trips to the plate grabbed off two hits.

SPORT SLANTS

by ALAN J. GOULD

(Associated Press Sports Editor)
NEW YORK, March 3 (AP)—There are four outstanding planks in the 1928 tennis platform on which Samuel H. Colton of Philadelphia has taken office as the new president of the United States Lawn Tennis association.

As he outlined them for The Associated Press they are:
1.—Continuation of a foreign policy of expansion, coupled this year with a determined drive to regain the Davis cup from France.

2.—Strict enforcement of the amateur rule.
3.—Distribution of the surplus funds in the U.S.L.T.A. treasury, amounting to some $45,000 at the close of 1927, for the aid and development of work by the district associations.

4.—Stimulation of more activity in junior and municipal tennis ranks for the purpose of developing more and better playing talent.

"Our foreign policy represents the greatest accomplishment of the association," Mr. Colton believes, pointing to the remarkable worldwide growth and interest in Davis cup play through the initiative of Julian S. Myrick of New York, who has relinquished his job this year after eight years as chairman of the Davis cup committee.

"The change in our organization this year does not indicate a change in foreign policy," Mr. Colton emphasized.

Enforcement of the tennis player-writer rule has proved of distinct benefit to the game, the new president feels, he points out that it has meant the sacrifice of "important money" by many of the playing stars.

"I recall a few years ago, before we had this rule that Billy Johnston had an offer of $5,000 for writing in connection with a trip abroad," said Mr. Colton. "After consultation he turned it down."

Just how much the player-writer rule—which prohibits players from writing "spot stuff" while competing—had affected Big Bill Tilden is open to conjecture. It was understood his newspaper work formerly netted him somewhere between $10,000 and $15,000 annually. Big Bill writes most of his own stuff, too.

Get Players Young, Says Coach of Four-Points-A-Minute Team

NEWARK, N.J., Mch. 3 (AP)—Ernest A. Blood, "miracle man" coach of Passaic (N. J.) high school's basketball team which won 189 consecutive victories five years ago, has hopped up again in spectacular fashion as coach of St. Benedict's prep school here which scored 136 points in one game the other night.

This knack of producing teams that can drop in points at the rate of four and a quarter a minute is a case of getting your players young and instilling the winning spirit, says the gray-haired tutor who has coached at West Point but had his greatest success as a prep school teacher.

"I make my players realize that the ability to get their hands on the ball by being able to jump faster than the man they are playing against is the stuff that makes a basketball player."

"I have no disciplinary system. A man or a boy who has to be disciplined I do not want on the team."

"You have to start when they are young. I coached a class of boys in Potsdam, N. Y., some time ago from the time they were eight years old until they were out of high school. Nine of those boys went to college and all made the varsity basketball team, seven of them being elected captains. They all went to war and became non-commissioned officers."

As Coach Blood supervises the entire school physical program as well as coaching basketball he is in constant touch with his boys.

St. Benedict's Prep, which holds the state title and beat Newton Academy of Connecticut by the phenomenal score of 136 to 9 recently, has lost two games in Blood's two seasons there.

"I didn't get them when they were young enough," he said in explanation of the two lone losses, "although that sounds like an alibi."

Blood, like Rockne of Notre Dame football, uses a great number of players. His teams are drilled in rapid fire attack on the sound theory that both teams can't be attacking at once and the one that doesn't can't score.

Hoosiers Retain Conference Lead

Michigan Falls Before Indiana Onslaught at Bloomington

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., March 3 (AP)—Indiana's basketball team took its turn in the lead of the Western conference teams tonight by defeating Michigan 35 to 34 on the Hoosier's home floor.

Indiana's victory tonight give the Hoosiers a 9 and 2 margin in games, one win better than the Wisconsin and Purdue teams tied for second place, though the runners-up are still in line for a three-way tie for the title.

The Hoosiers have to beat Illinois at Urbana next week to clinch at least a one-third share of the Big Ten championship.

Professor Starbuck Leaves for Boston

Prof. Edwin D. Starbuck, head of the philosophy department will leave Iowa City today to attend the conference of the Religious Education association at Boston, April 6 to 9.

On the same trip he will go to New York on business. He is a member of the research council of the National Education association.

Bond Market Leans to Heavy Trading

NEW YORK, March 3 (P)—Confronted with $253,000,000 in new offerings which poured to the market during the week, the bond market today had a general leaning to heaviness. The week's aggregate was only $10,000,000 less than the weekly record for all time, established last October. Profit-taking was rather general in issues which have been moving up in recent sessions, particularly in the railway group.

General Motors Makes High Record

NEW YORK, March 3 (P)—A tremendous outburst of buying in General Motors common, which carried it up more than five points to a new high record for the present issue at 144 1/2, on unopposed speculation interest in today's brief session of the stock market. The general list disclosed further irregularity, but with major activity on the side of rising prices. The day's sales ran over 1,300,000 shares.

With Ford competition apparently slow in making itself felt, General Motors is expected to break all sales and earnings records in the first quarter of the year, and possibly in the first half, which explains the heavy demand for the stock. Wall Street also expects a substantial extra cash dividend on the issue at the May meeting.

Other automotive shares were mixed although gains of a point or more were recorded by Chrysler, Pierce Arrow Preferred, Nash, Mul-lins body, and Collins & Aikman. Timken roller bearing sagged below 113 to a new 1928 low.

Wheat Highest of Season

Reaches New Peak With Rye Despite Adverse Reports

CHICAGO, March 3 (P)—With buying the most general witnessed in weeks, the wheat market today rose with rye to new high prices for the season. Adverse domestic wheat crop reports from the central west continued, and wheat export business today from North America was estimated at 1,000,000 bushels chiefly Canadian.

Closing quotations on wheat were strong, 1c to 1 1/2c net higher, with corn 1c to 1 1/2c off, oats varying from 1/4c decline to 1c gain, and provisions at 2 1/2c setback to a rise of 5c.

The finish in wheat was at the day's top level. Despite some pressure on account of reports of rain in the southwest, offerings disappeared fast, commission houses and foreigners showing eagerness to acquire ownership.

Corn and oats were draggy most of the time today. Heavy receipts counted as a bearish factor. Besides, weather conditions were favorable for the movement of corn. On the other hand, Rotterdam bought some corn at the Gulf of Mexico. Great Britain was also reported a buyer of corn.

Alumni See Iowa Literary Societies Fading From Glory of Early Years

What has become of the literary society which was, in early years of the university, the very backbone of all social life on the campus? By Alice Dewell

Such is the query of graduates who return and find these societies, so vital in their day, relegated to the dark attic of disinterest.

That the literary society on the Hawkeye campus is on its way to oblivion is illustrated by the meagre groups which gather in their respective halls for weekly meetings.

Is the need for this type of organization dying? Adelaide Burge, dean of women, questioned as to the possibility, replied, "There are, at the present time, so many organizations and departments which have taken over the functions of the literary societies that this need is lessened."

At the time of their height of glory, these societies were of a forensic character and emphasized oratory, speech, debate, and declamation. Today these functions are taken care of in the departments of speech and dramatics, and in debate clubs.

Charging that his wife has twice deserted him, James Kabela filed suit for divorce against Mary Kabela yesterday. The case will be tried in the May term of district court.

A Bouquet from Mexico

Sounds a bit odd, doesn't it? But that's what we give you in our Vanilla Ice Cream, a Vanilla Bouquet. The best Vanilla is that made from the Mexican bean—best because it gives a milder, more delicate bouquet. It is called a "Bouquet" because of its fragrant, mellow, mild flavor. Take home a quart of our Ice Cream tonight and note this delicious flavor.

Chamber of Commerce Annual Report Shows Wide Activity

Fire Prevention, Aviation, Lighting Part of Program

Tourist Bureau Gives Service to Over 3,500 Persons

A long list of achievements has been marked up to the credit of the Iowa City chamber of commerce during the last year making the year the most successful ever experienced by the local organization.

Little hope was held a year ago for a renewal of the lease on the aviation field. The owner of the field refused to lease the field but instead desired to sell at what was considered an unreasonable price.

To make matters worse at this particular time, the government started retiring from carrying mail by planes. The equipment of the field was to be sold to the highest bidder.

Weeks of persistent work by the chamber representatives resulted in renting the present field for $1,500 a year, as compared to $3,450, which was asked in the first case.

An airport for Iowa City is assured for at least ten more years, after which newer developments in aviation will probably call for new and different equipment.

Lighting System

The new whiteway lighting system was installed and put into operation early this winter as the result of work by the chamber of commerce, lasting nearly ten years.

A special chamber of commerce committee has caused a survey of Iowa City to be taken and an extentensive advertising campaign carried out.

More than 7,500 Iowa City booklets, telling of the facilities offered here for education, business and home life, have been prepared and distributed to families throughout the country.

An advertising campaign carried on in twenty-eight daily papers in Iowa together with special letters and booklets addressed to prospective students and parents of university students was designed for boosting the university.

A fire prevention and fire protection committee has been active throughout the year, assisting in education in fire prevention and watching fire traps about the city.

The safety and traffic committee has obtained a reasonable assurance of having a system of signals installed this year and hopes to also get an improved safety crossing at Clinton street and Iowa avenue.

Tourist Bureau

A tourist road information bureau furnished service to more than 3,500 persons during the year and aided in the organization of an Iowa City Automobile club as a unit of the American Automobile association.

Assistance in getting the paving appropriations from the highway commission for the primary road No. 1, and in getting the No. 32 highway to West Liberty paved is also work of the Iowa City chamber of commerce.

The chamber cooperated with the university for the homecoming celebration and also for Dad's day, and the state musical festival.

Services of no little worth were granted the local promoters of the Iowa state and national poultry fairs shown held in the university field house.

Improves Express Service

Aid to parties seeking location for new buildings, factories and industries, including a hotel, powdered

Methodist Students to Present Play Tonight at Church

A religious play, "The Color Line" will be presented by members of the student volunteers of the university at the regular evening service of the Methodist Episcopal church tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

The cast of the play is as follows: Henry Lawson, president of a mid-western college, Watson Davis; Miss King, his secretary, Charlotte Beiswanger; Fu Chun, a Chinese student, Donald Harter; Stanley Preston, a college senior, Ivan Schultz; Barbara McKean, missionary's daughter, Ruth Boden; Wanda Williams, a college flapper, Juanita Garrett.

milk factory, airplane factory, and several other factory propositions.

The completion of the College street viaduct together with installation of a system of lights, has been witnessed during the last year.

The welfare bureau caused the apprehension of twenty-seven out-of-town solicitors who attempted to swindle local citizens during the year.

A smoke and soot committee has been making an exhaustive study of the problem locally and has made a report which will furnish a basis for constructive work.

An extension and improvement of the local freight and express service was secured. Organization of a local chapter of the National Aeronautical association is now being formed.

It will be composed of merchants especially interested in aviation and will promote interests of more extensive flying as well as striving for greater safety.

An examination of street cleaning systems used in other cities has been made and a plan to provide cleaner streets for Iowa City is now being formulated.

A large part was played in obtaining post office appropriations for a new building here.

Weekly luncheons were held at which prominent men from all parts of the country spoke, the average attendance for the year being 118.

Boy Scout Work

Special work with Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts was provided for in the community fund which was raised largely through the chamber's work and promotion.

Scout meetings were held in the chamber of commerce rooms to which the parents of the scouts were invited to inspect work of the boys and girls.

Cooperation with the merchants' bureau in many matters played no small part in the year's work. Special street decorations for homecoming, Christmas, and the opening date of the whiteway lighting system, were put up through the joint efforts of the chamber and the merchants' bureau.

Three merchant-salespeople banquets, with an average attendance of 300 persons have been held. Fred P. Mann, merchandising expert; Arthur Brayton, editor and sales expert; and Frank Stockdale of the University of Virginia were the three speakers.

Graphic Outlines of History

SCOTT'S EXPEDITION TO SOUTH POLE

This picture shows Captain Scott and his ill-fated crew reaching the South Pole only to find that Roald Amundsen had preceded them. Scott went thru many hardships, but stormy weather and sickness defeated him, and he and his crew perished. Amundsen, it will be remembered flew over the northern Polar regions only a short time ago in his dirigible "Norge."

Complete foresight for every detail—an accomplishment gained only thru long experience.
