Officers Gather Evidence From Unfortunate S-4

Compartment Reveals Dismal Story of Trapped Men

BOSTON, March 19 (AP)—The torpedo room of the submarine S-4 in which six men lived for 72 hours after the vessel was sent to the bottom in collision off Provincetown December 17 gave up its story today.

Naval officers entered the compartment after the submersible, raised from the ocean bed on Saturday, had been dry-docked at the Boston navy yard, and, from the dismal evidence found therein, pieced together a tragedy on which the interest of a nation was centered for three days last winter.

The six bodies were found, and one of them, that of Lieut. Graham Newell Fitch of Washington, D.C. was identified. In other parts of the ship two other bodies were recovered, completing the roster of death.

The entire company of 40 men perished when the coast-guard destroyer Paulding rammed and sank the S-4. During the salvage operations, 32 bodies were taken from the hull.

Men Fought Bravely Evidence of a desperate fight for life was seen in devices by which the imprisoned men had striven to shut out the water leaking into their chamber from the battery room adjoining. The water-tight door between the compartments had been closed and dogged tight. A lead maul had been used to batter down the door, and a large pinbar was wedged against the door.

A glass headlight in the door apparently had let water in. To shut this leakage out the men had placed a piece of rubber above the glass and secured it with a wooden block.

No Diaries Kept The preliminary search of the torpedo room today revealed no written records or diaries. Further search will be made by a naval board of investigation when the interior of the vessel is in better condition.

The bodies of Lieutenant Fitch and his five men were all found on deck, which was covered with gray mud and four inches of water. Investigating officers said it was apparent that all of the men but one had awaited death quietly in their berths, conserving their energy that they might consume, as little as possible of the precious air.

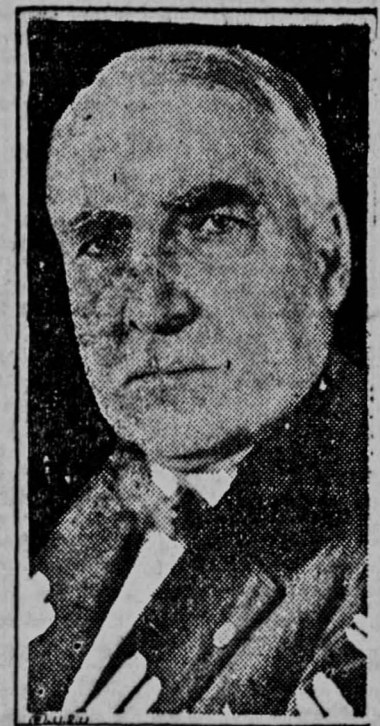

The exception was one man found at the foot of the torpedo hatch ladder, gripping the ladder with his right hand. The body of another man lay against this one, with the head resting on its chest.

George Coleman Gets Fellowship George H. Coleman, assistant professor of chemistry has been granted a fellowship of the John Guggenheim memorial foundation for the coming year, according to an announcement received here yesterday.

Professor Coleman will conduct experiments regarding a new method for the preparation of amines by the reaction of organomagnesium halides with chloramines and related compounds. He will carry on his work principally with Prof. Victor Grignard of the University of Lyons, France.

The foundation was established in 1925 by former Senator and Mrs. Simon Guggenheim, in memory of a son who died April 25, 1922. Professor Coleman was graduated from Greenville college, Illinois, in 1915, and received his M.S. degree from the University of Illinois in 1919, and his Ph.D. from the same institution in 1921. He has been connected with the chemistry department since 1921.

Oil Probe Involves Former President

The Late Warren G. Harding

Senate to Probe Harding's Estate

Nye Doubts Presence of Bonds Among Securities

WASHINGTON, March 19 (AP)—Before closing its inquiry into the disposition of the Liberty bond profits of the Continental Trading company, the senate Teapot Dome committee is investigating the records of the estate of the late President Harding.

In making this announcement today, Senator Nye, republican, North Dakota, chairman of the committee, said he did not believe that any of the Continental bonds would be found in the estate but added:

"There would be a lack of satisfaction if this committee submits a report to the senate without determining whether there were any Continental bonds involved in the estate of President Harding.

"If they are there we are going to tell the world. If they are not there we are going to tell the world. I don't think they are there."

Senator Nye said the present plan was to send an investigator to Marion to check up on the securities which may now be or may have been in the Harding estate. He added that this probably would not be done until early next month, indicating the investigation is to be continued at least for several weeks more.

President Harding signed the executive order under which Albert B. Fall, as interior secretary, took charge of the naval oil reserves which he leased to Edward L. Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair early in 1922. After the government recovered the reserves through court action this order was rescinded by President Coolidge.

"Lindy" Receives Friendship Award $25,000 Wilson Prize Goes for "Good Will" Flight

NEW YORK, March 19 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh tonight received the Woodrow Wilson award, consisting of a medal and $25,000 for "his services for the cause of international friendship" during his good will flight to Central and South America.

The presentation was made at a dinner of the Woodrow Wilson Memorial foundation. Colonel Lindbergh was the third recipient of the award which was given in 1924 to Viscount Cecil Chelwood for his services to the league of nations and in 1925 to Ethel Root for his part in the inception of the permanent "world court."

John W. Davis, former ambassador to Great Britain, in an address explained that Lindbergh was selected not as a soldier, nor as a diplomat or statesman, nor as an orator, but as "a mere individual" who had "the great fortune to serve peace in most effective ways."

Iowa Band Plays Annual Concert on Union Week Bill

Chicago Woman Will Talk on Choice of Vocation

As the last note of the horns and the last beat of the drums died away on the closing strain of "Old Gold" 1,600 persons who had risen to their feet at the opening of the song, burst into applause and began pouring out of the doors of the great lounge at Iowa Union.

The annual spring concert of the university band, the first headline on the program for Union Week held at 8 p.m. yesterday was over. To judge from the thunderous applause which followed each number, and the number of encores that were played, the concert was a success. In addition to the regular program, the band, on a huge platform overhung by black and gold streamers and facing the crowded lounge, played an encore after each number listed.

The encore just before intermission, "Men of Iowa" written by O. E. Van Doren, director of the band, received such an ovation from the audience that it was played twice. The slide trombones and cornets, with their players lined up across the front of the platform carried the melody in the selection.

Other selections which proved popular were the program for "Rose Marie" and the cornet solo by Clarence J. Andrews, A4 of New London.

Today's events continuing the program for Union Week which will last until Saturday, March 24, will include a talk to university women by Mrs. Florence Robnett, acting director of the collegiate bureau of occupations at Chicago. Mrs. Robnett comes under the auspices of the A.A.U.W. and the Y.W.C.A. and will discuss the subject of choosing a vocation.

Questionnaires distributed to university women for the purpose of gathering information as to the vocation toward which they lean, will form the basis of part of Mrs. Robnett's talk at 4 o'clock today in the theater.

This evening a play will be given by the University Players in the Union. Union Week, under official direction of the Union board, Mortar Board, and A.F.I., officially opened Sunday with the vesper service by Sherwood Eddy.

Board Chooses Weeber President Appoint Committee to Consider Lathrop School Site

The board of education elected William Weeber president for the coming year last night at the first meeting after the election certificates of membership were issued to Herman Smith and William Weeber the new members.

Appointment and approval of committees for the coming year and the swearing in of new members took place. Following routine business, the following committees were appointed: building and grounds, Charles Paine and Herman Smith; finance and printing, James Stronks and C. C. Ries; teachers' committee, Samuel Whiting and Frank Whinery; supplies and insurance, Herman Smith and Charles Paine; textbooks and apparatus, C. C. Several motions were passed by the body, including those concerning prospective sites for schools to be built in the future.

In regard to this matter, a committee of three, Samuel Whiting, chairman; Frank Whinery and James Stronks, were appointed to confer with Attorney Herbert Riese about the matter of the Rider's school site, there being some technicality involved in regard to the possession of the land.

The Henry Lathrop school site proposition also received considerable attention. The following motions were passed by the board in regard to this matter: first, that the city engineer be consulted to ascertain the cost of improving the proposed site for school occupation, and second, that a survey should be made to ascertain how many children would be likely to enroll in the school if it were built.

Local Union Men Want Public to Know Facts in Building Dispute

Settlement of the labor dispute centering around the construction of the new unit to the university hospitals remained as far distant yesterday as it had been before. The main development was the announcement by the governor that he would let the board of education attempt to arrive at a settlement before submitting the question to a board of arbitration.

If the board of education effects a settlement that is favorable to the union, the union will abide by the decision, it was announced last night by Harry A. Morse, business manager of the local associated building crafts.

Present Second Petition However, it was predicted that if the matter got into the hands of a board of arbitration, it would be shown that the present system of managing university building programs is excessively costly to the state of Iowa.

At the conference with the governor, a petition supplementary to the first petition was presented. It reads in part: "Mr. Fisk... so we are informed... cancelled the contract of the subcontractors on certain rooms, and started doing the same work by the day with state employees, who, in some cases, were non-union. The plumbers are not only non-union, but are not even licensed plumbers as the law provides.

Soviet Leaders Ask Disarmament Russia Wants United States to Help Peace Policy

GENEVA, Switzerland, March 19 (AP)—Russia today appealed to the United States to join it in forcing immediate action on the Soviet proposal for total disarmament within four years. The appeal made before the preparatory committee for a disarmament conference by Maxim Litvinoff, after attacking the methods being followed by the league and demanding immediate public debate on the Russian plan alluded to the proposal of Secretary of State Kellogg for the outlawry of war and then added:

"The Soviet delegation feels authorized to count upon the support of the delegation of the government which is intervening at the present moment with a proposal to prohibit all wars.

The American delegates remained silent during today's discussion and Hugh S. Gibson, head of the American delegation and his colleagues have no intention of replying to Litvinoff's invitation. Count Von Bernstorff of Germany and Rumbold Bey of Turkey spoke in support of the Russian demand that the Soviet proposals be discussed at the present session of the preparatory committee.

The general attitude of the other members is that more preparation is needed before practical disarmament measures can be framed with any chance of being accepted.

Senate Committee Asks Quizzing of Governor Fisher

Rockefeller, Mellon, Schwab to Appear in Coal Inquiry

WASHINGTON, March 19 (AP)—Industrial leaders connected with the bituminous mining industry in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, such as John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Charles M. Schwab and R. B. Mellon, are to be called as witnesses in the senate committee investigation of the situation in the soft coal fields.

Governor Fisher of Pennsylvania, also has been listed for an early appearance. Formal request for the issuance of subpoenas to Rockefeller, Schwab, and Mellon, the latter a brother of Secretary Mellon, was made at the conclusion of testimony taken today by Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, who declared that "those ultimately responsible for the present conditions" should be required to take the stand.

Explains Rockefeller's Part The Montanan explained that Rockefeller was named because of his connection with the Consolidation Coal company of West Virginia. The appearance of Charles M. Schwab, he added, will be in his capacity as chairman of the board of directors of the Bethlehem Steel corporation which operates mines in Pennsylvania.

Mellon is a director of the Pittsburgh Coal company, which concern has repeatedly been under fire by attorneys for the United Mine Workers in the present investigation. Other directors of that company to be called at Wheeler's request are J. D. Lyons, A. K. Oliver and W. D. Reiss.

Crowley Also Named Wheeler also named F. E. Crowley, president of the New York Central railroad, saying that he probably would formally request that he be called later, but that no such request would be made at present. Governor Fisher is to take the stand as a result of his recent speech at Easton, Pa., in which he attacked the senate sub-committee that denounced conditions in the Pennsylvania fields.

Fisher's Stand "Insult" Gooding characterized the stand attributed to Fisher as "an insult to the senate sub-committee, to this committee and to the United States senate." He vigorously defended the sub-committee, of which he is the chairman, saying that it had gone into Pennsylvania with an open mind and without prejudice. He upheld the report which was made to the interstate commerce committee as we found them." In demanding the appearance of Fisher, the Idahoan said "maybe he'll learn something here about conditions in his own state."

Let Board Settle Dispute—Hammill

DES MOINES, March 19 (AP)—Governor Hammill believes that the state board of education should undertake the task of settling labor disputes arising out of the construction of a unit of the university hospital at Iowa City without the intervention of a commission for conciliation and arbitration.

The view of the governor was given to W. H. Gemmill, secretary of the board today. Union carpenters, plumbers, electricians and painters of Iowa City have requested that the governor appoint an arbitrator in commission to settle a dispute in which it is charged that J. M. Fisk, building superintendent at the university, has discriminated against union labor in work done at the university.

A delegation of union men who called on Governor Hammill today to determine why work was being done about their request, were told to return next Monday, at which time the governor would have a decision to make.

Comedienne Ends Career on Stage Death Follows Twenty Years of Playing on Broadway

NEW YORK, March 19 (AP)—Nora Bayes, comedienne, who delighted audiences in Broadway and London theatres for more than a score of years and cheered many persons privately by her generous acts, died today at a Brooklyn hospital.

She had gone almost directly from singing at two benefits a week yesterday to the hospital for an abdominal operation. She was apparently well on the way to recovery when a relapse came. Miss Bayes once wrote that she was born in Joliet, Ill., and other sources fixed the date as 1880.

Her real name was Leonora Goldberg. She is survived by her husband, Benjamin L. Fredland, whom she married three years ago on the steamship Leviathan, and by three young children she had adopted.

Married Four Times Four earlier marriages had dissolved by divorce. Miss Bayes married first Otto Gressing, a Chicago business man. Later she married and divorced three men of the stage, Jack Norworth, Harry Clarke and Arthur Gordon. With Norworth she reached the peak of her success in musical comedy in London and was known for years as the "happiest couple on the stage."

Miss Bayes was in her teens when her first vaudeville opportunity came. Her clear voice, her beauty and her happy faculty of appearing to get huge enjoyment from her work led her rapidly on to a London debut at the Palace theatre in 1905.

Planned Tour Broadway then claimed her as its own, but her talents were displayed from time to time in London and she had planned another European tour for the late spring of this year.

It was a proud day for her in 1919 when she moved her company into the Nora Bayes theatre here. Little more than a year before she had performed a patriotic service with her voice. The country needed a song to express the war time spirit. Nora Bayes sang "Over There" and the country had its song.

Private funeral services, at a time not announced, will be conducted for Miss Bayes by Christian Scientists.

Prominent Names Figure in Stormy Oil Case Session Reed Wants Removal of Mellon; Flays President

ALBANY, N. Y., March 19 (AP)—Records at the capitol here show that Governor Smith appointed Harry F. Sinclair a member of the racing commission early in 1920.

WASHINGTON, March 19 (AP)—Recent disclosures in the Teapot Dome scandal touched off a furious political exchange in the senate today with demands for the resignation of high administration officials and the calling of Governor Smith of New York as a witness before the oil investigating committee.

Robinson, an Indiana republican, brought Smith's name into the debate. He sought to develop that Harry F. Sinclair was a heavy contributor to Smith's gubernatorial campaign in 1920, and subsequently was appointed to the New York state racing commission, but it was said later that the New York governor would not be called.

Scoring Sinclair's $160,000 contribution to meet the republican 1920 campaign deficit, Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, declared the only way for republicans to rectify the situation would be to call for the resignation of a responsible party leader. He demanded specifically the retrial of the cabinet of Secretary Mellon and condemned severely the silence of President Coolidge.

Lease Unknown to Party Much of the debate hinged on Sinclair's attempt to "blame" Sinclair's campaign contribution and resulted in the charge from the veteran Ohio senator, defending his course, that the oil lease conspiracy really was hatched at the republican national convention in 1920 by a group of men "unknown to the party" and later was consummated in part at the famous "little green house on K street," a rendezvous for some of those identified with the Harding administration.

Booth declared there was nothing in the history of this or any other country to compare in rottenness to the oil leasing scandal.

Robinson of Indiana brought Governor Smith's name into the picture by attempting to establish whether Sinclair contributed to the Smith campaign fund in 1920, subsequently becoming a member of the state racing commission and retaining the post after the initial Teapot Dome disclosures.

Nye said he had information to that effect, but he declared on the floor and later reiterated that he saw no reason for calling the New York governor as a witness.

Reed Defends Smith When Robinson said he believed Smith might be able "to throw considerable light on what's been going on in the last four years," Reed of Missouri came to the defense of the man who is lined up against him as a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination.

"The senator doesn't mean to insinuate that the governor of New York turned any public property of the state of New York over to Sinclair," Reed inquired.

"I don't know," Robinson replied. "Well," the Missourian replied, "any man who says he doesn't know and makes such an insinuation is going beyond the rights of the senate."

Salient Points of the Bidding
Although South holds a six-card Heart suit headed by King-Queen-Jack, he does not hold a sound original Heart bid, as he lacks the essential minimum requisite of two quick tricks. East's unbalanced distribution makes an original Club bid preferable to an immediate No Trump.

Following the Club bid, South properly showed his Heart suit. West's assist of Clubs gave strong assurance of game in that suit, so East continued with Clubs instead of shifting to No Trump.

Trick 2.—East leads a low Club to Dummy's King to provide for the possibility of North's holding all three of the outstanding trumps. Should South hold all three, the Declarer must lose a Club trick.

Trick 6.—East trumps with the 6 of Clubs instead of the 4, to insure an additional entry in Dummy. Tricks 11 and 12. The Declarer enters Dummy with the 5 of Clubs to make the Spade now established in Dummy and score a Small Slam. (Copyright 1927 Republic Syndicate, Inc.)

THE great difference between an easy, free-swinging stride and a slow, plodding step is very largely a matter of heels. Hard heels let you down hard—thump, bump. But rubber heels absorb the jolts and jars. Rubber gives, and lifts, and helps. Especially Goodyear Wingfoot Heels. They are all new, live cushioning rubber. They have style and they are Goodyear-guaranteed to outwear any other heels. More people walk on Goodyear Wingfoot Heels than on any other kind. Supreme Court to Confine Packers to Meat Packing

WASHINGTON, March 19 (AP)—The Supreme Court today decided to confine packers to meat packing. The court's decision was a victory for the meat packers, who had been fighting to keep their activities unrestricted.

Five Concerns Must Adhere to Former Agreement

The decision restores an injunction restraining them from monopolizing the meat packing industry and from engaging in other lines of business which was suspended in May, 1925, pending the outcome of proceedings started by Swift and Armour and company to vacate the former decree.

Modification Permitted

In 1925 the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association and the National Wholesale Grocers' Association were permitted to intervene to oppose any modification of the decree, and in 1927 the California Co-operating canneries were permitted to intervene for the purpose of having the decree vacated.

Challenged Court's Power

The Swift and Armour groups on Nov. 5, 1924, had challenged the jurisdiction of the courts here to enter the decree contending that they could not lawfully be restrained from entering into certain lines of business, and could not be enjoined from owning stock yard market companies, stock yard terminal railroads and newspapers.

Poverty, War, Bias Flayed by Gotham Social Worker

Not a Pacifist

In speaking on international relations, Mr. Eddy first made it clear that he was not a pacifist and that he loved a fight, but during his sojourn in Europe when the World War was at its height, he became embittered to the wholesale destruction of human life.

Would Stop War

He brought to a close by declaring that "by the living God we will stop war and other evils of destruction and crime as we have stopped slavery," punctuating his remark with a loud clap of the hands which drew his point home.

Only Flat Feet

LINDBERGH has withstood the strain that public life has thrust upon him since he became famous. In a recent army physical examination it was found that his only defect is flat feet. Otherwise he is physically fit in every respect.

Recent reports about his physical condition were that the strain thrust on him by an almost continuous life in public were beginning to tell on him. It has even gone so far that contrast pictures, showing Lindbergh as he appeared immediately following his trans-Atlantic flight and how he looks today have been published. No doubt the picture showing his somewhat careworn face were taken immediately after he had completed a long, tiring flight, or, perhaps some over-ambitious newspaper man, seeking to create new reader interest, had some photographer retouch the pictures in such way as to make his features show strains of wear.

It would not be surprising to find the strain telling on most individuals who have been in the public eye as Lindbergh has, but Lindbergh is different. He has been able to hold his head and retain his modesty in the face of great odds. He is an easy going, reticent youth and this no doubt accounts for his present physical condition despite the trying life he has led since he became famous.

And Now—2,000 A.D.

WHILE the pendulum of time swings in its hourly course and the world wonders what we shall be doing in the next century, the London Daily Mail has gathered its best imaginative reporters and has issued a full sized, twenty-four page newspaper dated Jan. 1, 2000.

The entire issue constitutes a collection of guesses of what will be news at the start of the twenty-first century. The best news story of the day and the one getting the biggest space, recounts Capt. Ralph Girdlestone's flight around the world in twenty-four hours.

And for fire news: "The air fire squad, No. 2 section, flew from its quarters at Hyde park, and poured down anti-fiero from its chemical extinguishers. Little damage was done.

In the college section: "One of the reporters visited the high speed college of Sutherlandshire and saw the students playing games during their school hours and learning their lessons while they slept. While the pupils sleep, a silent battery of memory impressions is storing the brain cells with knowledge."

Registered readers will have television service: "Registered readers of the Daily Mail will shortly be offered a special service in connection with their televisions which will be modified to transmit seaside scenes, sounds, and ozone."

"It costs thirty-five cents for a two-minute telephone call from London to New York." The radio program column has given way to "today's television program."

"The war in China is still news." Far-fetched as some of these may seem, yet it is not so many years ago that the public scoffed at the thought of passenger air flights and the transmission of messages without wires through space.

Why the Dogs Won

FOR sixteen days the little town of Detour, Mich., was isolated by a snow blockade. Efforts to bring help to the inhabitants proved futile and they were obliged to eat canned foods and live as best they could until a dog team got through. In this day of speed and mechanical wonders of all sorts, the primitive method of dog-sledding was the one which first brought relief to Detour. It took the team two days to make the trip against the biting cold wind.

Shortly after the dog team arrived an army airplane which had been on the way only thirty-seven minutes, dropped it. The airplane got there, carrying supplies which the dog-sleds could not possibly have taken, with practically no discomfort to the aviators. The plane was able to rush a sick man from Detour to a hospital at a nearby town, a feat which would have been impossible with the dog sleds.

Aviation is not nearly so universally popular as its values have shown that it should be. If it were, there would have been airplanes within a short distance from Detour which would have made it unnecessary for the dog sleds to make the trip.

A Practical Professor

IN these days of materialism we hear so many practical persons berating the educators for giving only theories to the world and nothing useable in the narrow sense.

Here is one example of the professor who is able to do something materialistic with his ideas and believe that there are many more.

To Prof. T. T. Quirke we owe the invention of a picture device that will be a wonderful aid in class rooms. This teacher of geology has invented a machine which will show pictures in an undarkened room. The lecturer himself may operate the machine without difficulty and at the same time remain in the front of the room. It is a small instrument and may be moved easily without the trouble of detaching.

We have long recognized the value of pictorial education, but in the past it has been difficult to illustrate lectures. It is not only practical in itself but will make education more complete.

Editorial Notes

John B. Watson, famed psychologist, at the first national conference on character education in schools last week, argued for "complete rotation of mothers" so that a mother would never be allowed to "handle her child longer than three weeks." The object would be "to make youngsters as independent of people and things as they ought to be." The insinuation that Mr. Watson is subsidized by the Reno chamber of commerce is believed to be an unfounded calumination.

Beauty of musical interpretation comes from depth of soul. In Minneapolis, Ignace Jan Paderewski rose three hours before his accustomed time to give a special concert in his private car for ten Catholic nuns whose vows forbade them to attend a public concert.

A statesman's value to his country is determined by deducting from the sum total of his constructive contributions the cost of printing his picture on an issue of three-cent stamps.

In Honolulu a man has made a ukelele that can be heard a half mile away. Well, if nothing else, that should give the player a feeling of added security.

An Eastern National Park

(From The Christian Science Monitor)

That the people of the eastern states should have in territory adjacent to their homes a national pleasure ground such as those which plentifully invite the people of the middle and far west, has long been urged. Now at last, by the aid of the Laura Spelman Rockefeller foundation, bond issues by Tennessee and North Carolina, and the patriotic contributions of citizens of Knoxville, a great park is to be developed in that part of the Alleghenies known as the Great Smokies. The land which is to be maintained for public benefit is in the states of Tennessee and North Carolina. It includes forests and marshes, mountains and valleys, streams and springs. It is in as temperate a section as can be found in the eastern states.

Lacking much of the spectacular scenery of the Yosemite or the Yellowstone, it is still full of beauty spots and has mountain peaks towering as high as 6,000 feet. Without any such monumental arboreal specimens as the big trees of the Yosemite, it still has a very considerable area of primeval forests of hardwood, and the flora in spring-time is brilliant with laurel, rhododendron and azalea. Botanists say that in flowering shrubs it is richer than any other part of the United States.

This park will also furnish a happy retreat for the disappearing wild animals of our eastern country. In it today are to be found the wild turkey and other game birds, deer, bear and smaller wild animals. It is full of trout streams, which presumably will be protected, with fishing in them permitted under suitable restrictions.

The National park of the Great Smoky mountains will serve a purpose which for many decades yet cannot be fully met by the greater parks of the west. It is reasonably adjacent to the great centers of population. Within 500 miles of it are most of the great cities and the more densely populated states. Probably 50,000,000 persons reside within any easy automobile trip of the gateways to this reservation. While individual liberality, and the aid of the states of Tennessee and North Carolina, have been essential to secure ownership of the land, the United States government has assumed responsibility for its care and maintenance. That will unquestionably mean the rapid construction of roads by which its most picturesque recesses may be visited. It is a fortunate thing for the people to the east of the Mississippi river that the long and devoted efforts of the Smoky Mountains Conservation association have thus finally been crowned with complete success.

Chills and Fever

Joke No. 76

Jack Dempsey received $875,000 for the groggy debauch by which he lost his gaudy crown at Philadelphia. Gene Tunney received $919,000 for impressing on the persistent Jack, in the course of their rough-house at Chicago last summer, that there is wisdom in the old dictum: "They can't come back."

In the face of such cater-walloping statistics, the task of bulldozing young Americans into the belief that education pays looms no tinier than Himala. To answer the old stickler, "Why go to college?" so oft thrown forth by Yankee offspring too young to shave, and by certain of their tobacco chewing dads, is becoming day by day a harder and harder feat of academic sophistry for the chair-spined prophets of our university hills.

It is granted that value has many meanings, and countless measure. It is granted that an acquaintance with culture, sufficient to strike a man mute in the presence of a rising moon, or to render him eloquent in the midst of dinner guests, is a thing worth many a pretty penny and hard day's work in a nice, dusty, quiet library. But it is not admitted that an intimacy with gold dollars, of such a degree as to convert a man into a race horse connoisseur and a chorus girl charmer, is something that all good hearted and hard headed citizens thumb their respective red noses at.

No man of sound mind and adult years can belittle the existence of a general reverence for the sort of eagle that would spread its glittering wings across the face of a silver coin. Money sings a loud tenor to the cocked ear of a hundred million United Statesians.

To argue the matter further is merely to wag one's chin for exercise.

It would not be so gloomy, however, for the Ph.D.'s screaming the cry of Panassus, were it true only that human love attaches so readily to currency. But that is no more than half the situation. Most people don't feel disposed to give two rousing whoops down the old rain pipe for so-called higher learning. The fellow who has the eye for the obvious sees at a hundred glances a day that an academic degree or a few of them; Kappa watchfob is absolutely unessential in all sorts of bona fide schemes for making odies of money. And he sees on the other hand, that the possession of the university sheepskin is no guarantee of financial prowess. He sees altogether too many graduates of institutions of exalted pedagogy starving along within the cramped confines of a professor's salary, to go into fits of enthusiasm about education.

Within the last twenty-five years, roughly guessing, there has developed a loaded category of professions offering ten ton salaries to people who have scarcely enough cultivated brain cells to come in out of the Jamestown cloudburst. To list a few of them: professional baseball, football and other sports; vaudeville; jazz orchestras; faith healing; movie acting and scenario writing; true confessions; gold digging; high way robbery, and bootlegging. To name them all would ruin a typewriter ribbon and put every patriot to shame.

So you see that to hold forth on the old debate as to whether it pays to go to college is to pit a hypothetical, vague and inconspicuous sixth sense against the unmistakabilities of the senses of sight and hearing.

Pictures and gold are the universal languages. And if any book inspired son of learning is bold enough to fight that honest-to-goodness windmill, he is mighty close to the point of being knocked into a frazzle by that sharp, quick and deadly thesis: that a billion and a half human beings can't be wrong. Whether they are college graduates or illiterates, or both, is beside the point. They surely have some idea of what they like.

Money is, whether you like it or not, a standard measure of success. And to contend that an academic degree is a greater financial asset than the ability to balance a cane on your chin, is to flaunt that typical pedantic lack of the capacity for seeing a joke.

—El Producto, Stratford-on-the-bum

END WORDS

El Producto, notorious campus radical, went hungry the other day and his ideals received a quick jab to the solar plexus.

Seriously, his oragistic essay almost convinces one that the college is still a cultural shrine, that commerce students are getting religion; and that 99 44-100 per cent of students come here to study Plato instead of to wear plus fours.

He would have us believe that you can't learn to balance a cane on the end of your nose with better technique. But it can be learned, and is being learned with more finesse in the business and law courses than anywhere else.

College, El Producto, is succumbing to the glided environment. I agree that the newer morality is the dollar morality. I do not agree that the college is holding to the older, idealistic morality. We come here, learn a few slight-of-hand tricks that take no more basic intelligence than your gentleman of the Jamestown floor, and are shoved out to palm off our gold bricks on whoever was born yesterday.

Ergo, George P. Baker, the Harvard senatorial candidate, who grinds out more "Get-Rich-Quick" Wallingfords than the Texas Bankers association. F.L.G.

Presidential Aspirants

Sen. James A. Reed of Missouri got a good political start by being born on a farm. The farm was deedly located politically—in Ohio near Mansfield.

Three years after Reed's birth, which was Nov. 9, 1861, the family moved to Iowa and settled near Cedar Rapids. The large flock of sheep they had taken with them soon divided to nothing and when young James was eight years old his father died leaving a mortgaged farm, a widow, and six children, the oldest but fourteen years old.

The senator remembers the family council that followed. The mother reasoned that she could sell the farm and with the money left give the children a common school education, or stay on the farm and all work. They decided to keep the farm—and work. They did.

James started working in the fields daily when seven years old. At fourteen he was doing a man's work nine months in the year and going to school in Cedar Rapids part of the other three. He won a state oratorical contest when sixteen years old.

Fortune smiled on the struggling family two years later when Mrs. Reed learned that cattle could be purchased cheaply in Minnesota. She sent young James there with what money she could raise and he managed so well that within a few years enough money was cleared to pay off the family debts.

After an irregular attendance at the Cedar Rapids high school Reed entered Cos college there and took a course in preparation for the law profession. He left college, read law in an office there for three years and was admitted to the bar at the age of eighteen.

After a few years of practicing law for himself, he was elected county counselor in 1896, and won every suit brought against the county while holding the position. Later he was elected prosecuting attorney and made the amazing record of 285 prosecutions out of 287 cases during his fifteen months in office.

He was made mayor, and for two terms stirred up street car, telephone, and other public utilities; leaving the city with a reformed police department and reorganized city government throughout the term.

In 1910 he was elected United States senator. He at once broke the unwritten rule that a new senator should be seen and not heard, as he soon gave evidence of his great oratorical powers, working mostly toward bringing a downward revision of the tariff laws.

The strong-willed President Wilson found an equally strong opponent in Reed, who demanded hearings on the former's federal reserve bill. Wilson and his forces objected, but Reed won and as a result the bill was amended 563 times before its final passage.

Ex-Iowan Succeeds President of Institute

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 19 (AP)—Dr. Bradford Knapp, president of Oklahoma Agriculture and Mechanical college at Stillwater, Okla., today was elected president of Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn at $12,000 a year to succeed Dr. Spright Dowell. The latter's resignation became effective June 1.

Dr. Knapp is the son of Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, who originated the work of the county agricultural agent and the 4-H club work. He was born at Vinton, and lived on a stock farm until nine years of age.

The Constant Flame

By WINIFRED VAN DUZER

CHAPTER 52
When Emily put the volume aside, her face was flushed with excited color and little shivers kept creeping along her spine.

She went at once to the telephone and called the District Attorney's office.

"Kent," she said, "I think I've found something? If I could see you now?"

But he was going over to Novel City and couldn't wait. He went on, quickly: "I've an errand at the Yacht Club later. Why not dine with me there?"

She accepted eagerly enough though later shyness overwhelmed her at the thought of dining at the Yacht Club with Kent. She'd have called him and broken the engagement then, had it been possible.

At least, she told herself, she could go home and put on another dress; not shame him by the little old blue one all splashed with dye and now worn.

She was choosing another work dress when pale gold flounces caught her eyes from the back of the closet. She took down the frock she had dainty and sweet it was, such a sheen it put in her hair that she couldn't resist it. She looked very much like a pale, yellow rose when she met Kent at the club.

He was waiting for her in the lounge, a certain restlessness in his face which changed to admiration as he came forward.

"How beautiful you are, Emily. Exquisite as a song."
She flushed and kept her head down, fearful of the joy flooding in to her heart.

When they were seated he got out the minute yellow dagger and the shawl of lace and placed them side by side on the table. "Now let's hear what you have," he said.

She felt again the little shivers along her spine, the sudden, breathless excitement which had gripped her earlier in the day.

"I think Mrs. Wickert shot him," she declared, trying to keep her voice even. "Anyway, I'm sure she was there."

He did not seem surprised. But she saw the blue eyes narrow. From her hand bag she took Bianca's comb and placed it on the table. The comb was heavy, yellow tortoise shell, so hard and polished as to look like gold. And the curious design of the carving centered about three medallions, each shot through with a small dagger.

"You see, Kent? The dagger is part of it. The comb may have dropped out of her hair as she stood there watching Nicky through the window, and that bit broke off."

When she stooped over for it the lace mantilla she wears caught on the shutter and those threads were torn away.

"You see I know something about fabrics and I believe that is genuine Spanish lace. You seldom find it in America, not as fine as that. Unless it's brought over by someone like her."

She saw his amazement. "You don't think it possible?"

"Of course it's possible. Clever reasoning. But there's no break in the comb."

"That's the only thing I can't account for. You see it's an antique, really, and there ought to be a row of little daggers at the top. Like this." She brought the color print from her bag and spread it before him, pointing to the picture of the comb.

He studied the picture, held the comb under the table light and studied that. In the end he ran his knife along the shining edge of tortoise shell. Emily suppressed a cry as yellow flakes scaled off.

"Laquer," he said, ironically. "There are little rough places on the edge. Breaks. You were right; there should be a row of daggers. Not only that; there was a row."

"It would have been simpler for her to have destroyed the comb. But there may have been a number of reasons, why she didn't wish to. Sentiment, maybe, or its value. So she filed off the daggers and covered the breaks with laquer."

"Then—Vivid with earnestness she leaned toward him. "Then we can have her arrested? Tonight? Prove she was there? It's all settled, isn't it?"

The shake of his head chilled her. "More to be done, you know. Don't look like that; it's a matter of a week or so. Keep your heart high, Emily."

They were interrupted here by a big fellow in the uniform of a club employee. He slithered in and stood at Kent's elbow.

"The steward said you wanted to see me, Mr. Rossiter?"

"Yes, Joe. Do you remember the night Mrs. Wickert came here and tried to shoot her husband?"

"I'll say I do. It was me dragged her out the back way sreechin' like mad. Why wouldn't I remember when she bit my finger half off? She's a hell-cat, that dame."

"Just what was she sold?"

to do that. Keep it to yourself, now."

"I'll say. Just you give me the office when you want me. I'll tell 'em."

Kent smiled with a flash of the old merriment after the man had gone. "Did I say a week? Perhaps a day or two. There's no crime that doesn't leave open a weak spot somewhere; a link to connect with the criminal. We'll turn up the link, Emily."

He took her home soon afterward and she found Marty there. She had a moment of anxiety when she realized that he might precipitate a scene by telling of her meeting with Kent. But if he knew about it he said nothing.

He had been urging something upon Kitten and they both fell silent when she came in. It was depressing enough with Marty aloof, rather scornful, and Agnes making futile little attempts at friendliness.

But Emily did not feel the gloom. She had an odd sense of lightness and freedom; a happiness she hadn't known for years wrapping her like a luminous haze. It was too poignant, too beautiful to be affected by anything these others might feel.

She walked out to the porch with Marty when he left and stood smiling up at him in the dim moonlight. Too late she understood that he took her attitude for invitation; that he thought he wished him to kiss her.

"You've waited too long for that, Em," he said.

"For what, Marty? I don't understand."

"Yes you do. That time's past." She asked, somewhat vaguely, "You don't like me? You've stopped liking me, Marty?"

A flicker crossed his eyes but he laughed. "What's that got to do with it? We may as well be frank. And sensible. Suppose they do hang it on her? I'd be in a fine position married to her sister. Wouldn't I, now?"

She looked away quickly, shaken by the stark brutality of his words. One thing she wished to be sure about, however. "You didn't come here to help Kitten because of friendship? Not because you wanted to do a kind thing for us?"

"I'm in the law business, Em." She laughed then, rather shakily, and told him good-night.

But in the room a bit later the luminous haze flowed back, wrapped her in sweetness. "I hope Agnes won't mind," she thought. "After all, life often settles its own problems."

She stood in the window, looking at the stars. It occurred to her that another problem might be forming

Corn Reaches New Top Price

Higher Export Offers Make for All-Season High

CHICAGO, March 19 (AP)—With export offers for corn higher and upon an all-rail shipping basis from Chicago, corn today established new top-price records for the season. Oats and rye also went above the season's best figures.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled at 3 to 11c net advance. Wheat finished at 1c decline to 1c gain; oats 1c off to 1c up, and provisions unchanged to 1c down.

In addition to corn export business in progress both at the eastern seaboard and at the Gulf of Mexico, a decided falling-off in receipts at primary terminals led early to enlarged buying of corn future deliveries. Besides, corn supplies afloat for Europe showed 2,924,000 bushel decrease for the week, and were down to 10,738,000 bushel against 24,565,000 bushel a year ago.

Primary arrivals today were only 1,401,000 bushel compared with 2,109,000 for the corresponding day last week.

Wheat reacted from an early advance, a decrease of 552,000 bushel in the United States which visible supply being less than was generally expected. The temporary upturn was associated with an unlooked for rise in wheat quotations at Liverpool and 2,200,000 bushel decrease of the stock of wheat on ocean passage. About 1,000,000 bushel of North American wheat was taken today for Europe.

Oats fluctuated in line with wheat rather than corn.

Buying of Railway Liens Gives Firm Tone to Market

NEW YORK, March 19 (AP)—Buying of railway liens again gave the bond market a firm tone today, although numerous minor recessions occurred. There was no material change in the money situation, and new offerings failed to recover from last week's sharp decrease.

The recent legislation making additional public utility mortgages legal for savings bond investment in New York again lent firmness to issues in that group. Commercial cable 4's sold up 3 points to a new high for the year at 83, and others exceeded or duplicated their best 1928 prices, including American Water Works 5's and Northern Ohio Traction 5's.

Denver & Rio Grande Western 5's touched 93 for the first time this year, and there was brisk demand for Missouri Pacific 5's, New Haven 4's and Texas & Pacific 5's.

A few of the convertibles displayed outstanding strength, Kayser 5's and Andes Copper 7's invading new high territory, the former with a gain of more than 2 points.

French issues advanced in the early trading, but met considerable profit-taking and closed generally heavy. Other foreign obligations followed a mixed trend.

Federal government securities attracted only nominal attention.

Mile Relay Team Leaves Tonight on Invasion of Lone Star State

Bresnahan Takes Quint of Quarter Milers to Texas

Victors at Illini Relay Meet Leave for Austin Races

Five quarter milers and Coach George T. Bresnahan will leave this evening for the southwest where they will race in both the Texas and the Rice relays.

The tracksters will take their first outdoor workout of the season when they stop over at Kansas City for a limbering up drill on the Southwest high school oval of that city tomorrow.

Definite information as to the personnel of the squad was not available yesterday. It is almost a certainty, however, that the team that raced to a new Illinois relay record will make the trip, with either C. E. Wilmoth or W. S. McDowell as alternate. This combination would put V. W. Stevenson, R. I. Stamats, G. H. Baird, and Capt. F. J. Cuhel on the track with either Wilmoth or McDowell replacing Stamats as second man.

Hunn Improves

A return to form of one of the distance stars of the team was evidenced last Saturday in the 1500 yard run of the Illinois relay when Leonard Hunn got up after a fall on the first turn of the race and finished in fifth position, a short distance behind the fourth man.

Teapering off relays preparatory to the end of the indoor season will be held this afternoon between members of both the varsity and freshmen squads. Five races will be staged with two teams entered in each.

Wittenmeyer Competes

A distance medley composed of Wittenmeyer, Maling, Sailer, and Turner, will run against Hakes, Stoddard, Everingham, and Kelly. Stanley, Ferguson, Isaacs and Amenell will match strides with Thomas, R. W. Smith, Weir, and White in the mile relay.

The two sprint relay teams will be chosen from Maley, Herndon, Hoffman, Boyer, Gordon, Craig, Alex, Saling, Canby, T. Smith, Ferguson, and Milligan. Each man will run half a lap.

Two other sprint teams, each man running a lap will be composed of Morling, Rappert, Zimmer, Stoddard, Wittenmeyer, Thomas, Edson, Cochran, Everingham, Gardner, Hakes, and Stanley.

Mann and Canby Win Competition

A total of eleven feet nine and eight inches was enough to give Ray Mann first place in the high jump competition held last week in the field house. Ray's first jump was his best; he leaped over the cross bar at six feet and five-eighths inches on the first of the two day contest.

Three men were tied for second at the end of the competition. Jorrell, Boyer, and Cochran each having a total of 11 feet six and one-fourth inches. The contest was originally planned to take three days and the best jump of each man would be recorded each day.

Highest Average Wins

These three heights were to be added together and the one having the highest average would be declared the winner of the contest.

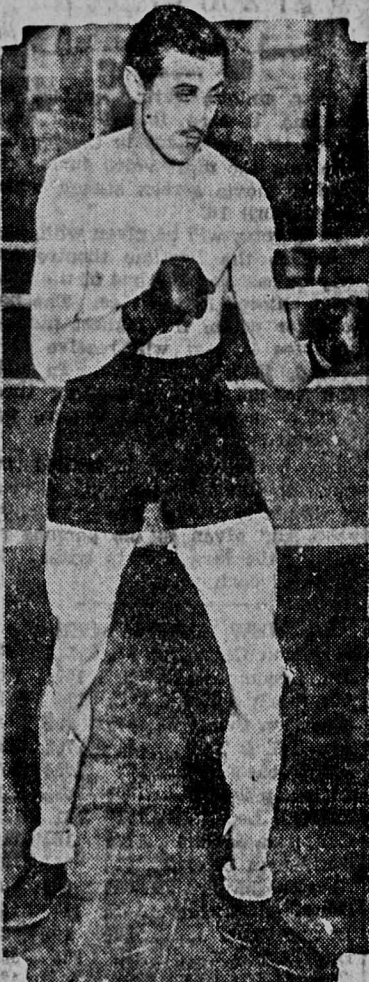

The final decision was based on two jumps, all of the men not having completed the three jumps. The winner was presented with a gold medal.

In a similar contest for vaulters freshmen outshone the varsity men when Canby and Boyer, both stars of the yearlings took first and second respectively.

Canby Wins Vault

Canby soared over the high bar at 12 feet 8 inches for his best vault of the trials and followed it up next day with a leap of 12 feet 6 inches. Boyer followed closely with tries of 11 feet 10 inches and 11 feet 8 inches. Canby totaled 25 feet, 2 inches, while Boyer gathered 23 feet 6 inches.

Natators Prepare for Title Contest

Sprint Relay Team to Compete in Big Ten Conference

Encouraged by their victory over the Wisconsin natators last Saturday the Hawkeye swimmers have set about to prepare for the conference meet to be held in the Minnesota pool this weekend.

Although the Iowans have no hopes of walking away with the meet they hope to win enough points to put them up with the leaders and place themselves high among the contenders. Chances have risen considerably since the first of the season due to the improvement of the various members and Coach Dave Arbinger is expecting his men to go a long ways in the meet.

One of the representatives for the Iowa team will be the 160-yard relay team which recently bettered the Big Ten record by 2:41.0 seconds and feels capable of doing better. Other Iowa men that should place high and score points are Captain Carter in the breast stroke, Fred King in the back stroke, and Stewart, Peterson, and Turbett in the dashes.

The one advantage which the Old Gold swimmers will have will be the 60 foot tank which is the same as the Iowa tank. The men will have a course to compete on that compares identically with their own and they should feel at home under these conditions.

Rickard, Tunney Agree on 1 Bout in 1928 for Gene

Dempsey Withdrawal Causes Failure of Second Match

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 19 (AP)—Gene Tunney will defend his heavy weight championship next July in a bout against an opponent not yet selected. It will be the only title fight in that class for 1928.

That much came out of a conference today between the champion and Tex Rickard, New York promoter, together with a sharp warning from Rickard that other promoters' dickerings for Tunney's services haven't a chance and an expression from the latter of his willingness to "fight any man in the world."

To Rickard has been left the task of picking a suitable antagonist for the champion, Tunney announced in a formal statement with the comment that "every contender so far has had his chance and it seems to me that any further talk of elimination is idle." Rickard contributed the statement that he would name the opponent at an early date. A place for the bout also is yet to be selected.

The definite retirement of Jack Dempsey from the ring caused a hitch in their previous tentative plans for a fight in June and another later in the year in which the former champion and the survivor of Rickard's elimination tournament were to have figured as opponents for Tunney, they declared.

Pointing out that Tunney had agreed to box the man he selected Rickard declared "that other promoters who want Tunney's services might just as well think up something else to wait."

LOS ANGELES, March 19 (AP)—Jack Dempsey had no comment to make today when informed of Tex Rickard's announcement that there will be only one heavyweight boxing championship match this year and what champion Gene Tunney's opponent it was yet to be selected.

There have been recorded in a pool similar to this one and the men hope to continue this way at Minneapolis. The work outs this week will be light and will consist of practice on starts and turns, some perfection of form and review on relay send-offs. Coach Arbinger will show his men the errors which were noticeable in the last dual with Wisconsin and will take time trials on several of the men to see who will get to go to the Big Ten affair.

Ingwersen Drills Grid Candidates on Armory Field

Coach Burt Ingwersen dished out another stiff workout for his thirty odd football players who paraded their wares yesterday on the practice gridiron west of the field house. The warm sun of the last few days had done much to remedy the muddy condition of the grounds but some bad spots remained.

The mentor put his squad through a stiff signal drill to start the afternoon and then finished the day with an offensive scrimmage.

Several of the veterans were absent from the ranks and so Coach Ingwersen took the opportunity to give some of his new players individual attention to improve their play.

Special emphasis was given to the new style of offensive drive which the Hawkeye tutor is developing for the Iowans' campaign next fall. He spent considerable effort in timing the shift, both of his linemen and also his backs who are slated to do the ball totting against future Big Ten rivals.

Tilden Starts on Drive for Trophy

AUGUSTA, March 19 (AP)—Led by "Big Bill" Tilden, number 1 racket wielder, America's candidates for the Davis Cup team today began a week of training that is expected to produce a powerful thrust this summer in attempting to bring back to this country tennis' premier international prize.

Ten players, the full squad, were on hand for practice during the day, some arriving in time only for afternoon workouts while other managed to slip in an hour or two during the morning.

Beers, Gilchrist, Weir May Go to Conference Meet

At least three Iowa grapplers will journey to Bloomington this week to compete in the Big Ten wrestling meet there Friday and Saturday.

Coach "Mike" Howard is planning on sending representatives in the 125-pound, 158-pound, and heavy-weight classes and possibly one or two other weights.

Leslie Beers, in the 158-pound division, is an outstanding man in his weight in the conference and is expected to take the honors at Bloomington. He has won all his matches in dual meets for the last two seasons but lost in the conference last year to Donohoe of Michigan.

In the 125-pound class Royal Weir will make the trip in the quest of the title in his weight. John Gilchrist, the heaviest heavyweight in the conference, is the third man who is quite certain of making the trip. Gilchrist has broken even in conference matches this year, winning and losing two, and getting a draw in another.

Sarazen Leads in Florida Golf Meet

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 19 (AP)—Counting four birdies and an eagle on the last nine for a day's 36-hole total of 139, Gene Sarazen, New York, winner of most of Florida's golf tournaments this year, gained a lead on a fast field in the $15,000 Lagorce open tournament today. Spectacular shooting was not unusual all along the course, especially in late play.

Harry Cooper of Buffalo, who was in a tie for qualifying medal on Sunday, knocked down five birdies himself on the last nine.

Behind Sarazen came Bobby Cruikshank of New York, tied with Johnny Farrell, last year's most consistent winner in the Metropolitan area, at 140.

Robins Win Second

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 19 (AP)—The Brooklyn Robins made a few hits go a long way today and achieved their second win of the spring training season by downing Burt Shotton's Phils, 3 to 1, in a pitcher's battle.

English Runner Forced to Leave Pyle's Marathon

Newton Sprains Ankle in Seventeenth Lap of Long Jaunt

WINSLOW, Ariz., March 19 (AP)—Arthur Newton, leader of the parade in the 3,400 mile foot race from Los Angeles to New York, was forced to drop out today when he suffered a sprained ankle.

The pace setting British runner, who had a lead of more than nine hours over his closest competitor on the basis of elapsed time was six miles along on today's 24 1/2 mile jaunt when his luck failed him. Newton has won seven of the sixteen laps since the large field of runners left Los Angeles. He will remain with the runners to act in an advisory capacity.

His withdrawal enables Andrew Payne, Claremore, Okla., to move up into first place in the competition. Nestor Erickson, Port Chester, N. Y., won today's heat from Twogun Camp to Winslow in three hours flat. He averaged a shade better than eight miles an hour. The distance from Los Angeles, the starting point, to Winslow is 575.72 miles. Erickson's elapsed time is 107:39:37, placing him fourth.

Regulars Defeat Yannigans, 3 to 1 in Six Inning Encounter

Diamond Artists Change Domain to Hawk's Field

Mulroney, Thompson Function on First Baseball Nine

Braving a chilly semi-winter breeze, Iowa's diamond hopefuls, under the direction of Coach Vogel, went through their first drill of the season Monday afternoon on Hawk's Field. Although the weather was anything but the balmy breezes expected on the southern trip, the men were glad to get away from the confines of the field house.

After limbering up a bit, the players had a short hitting practice which was followed by six innings of real baseball between the regulars and the Yannigans. The regulars were hit too good for their opponents, and they were on the long end of a 3 to 1 score at the end of the short game.

Mulroney in Shape

Mulroney and Thompson were the battery for the first team, and "Irish" showed that he would be ready for the opening game of the season. He looks even better than last year when he was chosen as an all conference twirler.

The infield combination remained the same as Vogel has used since the start of practice. Sabs was on first, Glassgow and Blackford worked nicely around the middle sack, and Allen continued to lead the third basemen. Vogel seems to have the makings of a smart inner defense, and Iowa fans need not worry about that phase of the game.

Terry Back

In the outfield Captain Terry is back at his old job in right field, reliable as ever, while next to him is Smith the pitching outfielder who can also hit. In left field Rath, a newcomer, is getting the call. He is a graceful fielder, but his hitting is yet to be tested.

The pitching department is about as well off as any coach could ask. Besides Mulroney there are Corbin, Thompson, David and Carlson and that, right now, seems to be about as classy an assemblage of pitchers as ever rounded together on an Iowa squad.

Weather permitting the athletes will be out on Hawk's Field every day.

Free Throw Tilt to Close Friday

Friday at 6 p.m. marks the closing of the efficiency and free throw contests. Contestants in either tournament may take their tests any afternoon this week between 4 and 5:30 p.m. For those who are not able to participate at these hours, arrangements have been made so that they may take their tests any time Friday morning.

Because of the high school basketball tournament and A.A.U. wrestling meet, both of these contests were postponed from last week when they were scheduled. A small trophy is given to the winner of the free throw contest as well as medals for those who place from second to fifth.

To the winner of the efficiency contest will go a silver loving cup. Smaller cups will be awarded to those who place either second or third in this tournament. To win one of these cups requires skill in the following tests: a 40-yard swim, a 40-yard dash, rope climb, throwing a baseball at a target, basketball free throw, fence vault, springboard high jump, and dips on the parallel bars.

Many Greek letter organizations have already entered the indoor basketball championship race. All entries must be in by tonight at 6 o'clock. It has been announced by E. G. March, director of intramural athletics, that as soon as all the entries have been received, a schedule will be arranged and printed in the Daily Iowan.

Red and White to Report for Track

Due the dearth of veteran material in the school, the Hawklet team is still pretty much of an uncertain quantity. Fans who follow the Hawklets closely are not worrying particularly about the success of their team as they remember the manner in which Coach Knox whipped the green football squad into shape last fall.

To care for the flock of ambitious youngsters, Coach Knox has pressed into service George Wells, an instructor in the high school who had charge of the indoor track work while the head mentor was busy with the basketballers.

For the first week or two the plan is to have the men take only light workouts, chiefly to accustom them to the outdoor work and limber up the stiff muscles. After that the coaches intend to get more of a bead on the individual possibilities of each candidate and to begin to specialize the athletes in the various events.

TILLIE THE TOILER

New and Old Managers Will Battle For National League Baseball Title

How will they finish for 1928? Take your pick, it is good as ours. In order of standing by teams in 1927, they are Donie Bush, Pittsburgh; Bill McKechnie, St. Louis; John McGraw, New York; Joe McCarthy, Chicago; Jack Hendricks, Cincinnati; Wilbert Robinson, Brooklyn; Bill McKechnie, St. Louis; Bert Shotton, Philadelphia. All but McGraw, Robinson and Hendricks are serving first year in new berths.

The Cincinnati "Reds" under Jack Hendrick's tutelage aim for a higher ranking than fifth place, where they ended last year. Jack Slattery, new to the managerial post of the Boston "Braves," promises to boost the New England aggregation out of the slough of tail-enders, and Philadelphia fans pin their hopes to Bert Shotton in the rejuvenation of the cellow "Phillies," who finished in the cellar position last year.

Of these eight team leaders, one will be found wearing the laurel wreath when the last man is out ending the season of 1928. Your guess is as good as the next as to who it will be.

A "Tale" of Adventure for Mac

Frosh Diamond Stars Move to Outdoor Arena

Coach Rollis Williams will send the freshmen baseball players through their first outdoor practice tomorrow afternoon at 4 p.m. The outfielders and battery men will also join the squad in this open air drill. As yet the infielders and battery men have been the only ones who have been reporting, but starting with tomorrow the entire squad will drill together.

John Beardsley, last year's star left fielder, will assist Williams in the freshmen practices. Beardsley, by the way is the property of the St. Louis Cards, and will report as soon as he is through school in the spring.

Last night's drill was interrupted by the National guard who had use of the armory. The infielders only loosened up and practiced fielding ground balls in pepper games.

Tonight the battery men will report as usual and have their bi-weekly workout. Wednesday, however, they will go outside with the rest of the freshmen and from then on work every day at 4 o'clock.

Outfielders are requested to report at this time to begin their first practice. Most of the first few afternoons will be spent in finding out who can crack the horseshoe.

Airmail Field to Remain at Iowa City, Says C. of C. Report

Congressmen Aid Committee's Fight to Retain Station

Nagle Outlines State Road Development at Meeting

The Iowa City trans-continental airmail field will not be moved to Cedar Rapids, according to an announcement made yesterday at the chamber of commerce luncheon. The report was made by Carl Cone, head of the chamber of commerce aviation committee which has been active in fighting the attempt made by Cedar Rapids interests to move the field to the city.

The committee held daily meetings as soon as it was learned that Cedar Rapids was making a quiet attempt to obtain the port. The aid of Congressman Letts of Davenport and Dowell of Des Moines, with the assistance of Senators Brookhart and Steack, was enlisted by the chamber to keep the field located here.

Chambers of commerce in Des Moines and Davenport also aided in the effort to keep the route as it now is.

Nagle Talks on Roads
Lee Nagle, Johnson county representative to the state legislature, outlined the complete development of Iowa's good roads issue as the main feature of the program.

Beginning with the status of the road law back in 1900, when all roads were built and controlled by township trustees, Representative Nagle followed the development to the present $100,000,000 bond issue recently passed by the state legislature. The proposed issue will provide a complete surfacing throughout the state.

The issue comes up for approval by the voters of the state next fall at the election. There is still a chance that it will be defeated, said the speaker, as many of the taxpayers in the northern and western parts of the state are opposed to it.

Explains Financing
Representative Nagle explained to the chamber of commerce members how funds available would take care of the bonds and taxes would not be raised. He has been one of the hardest workers for the bill in the house and is exceedingly anxious to see it put across.

The Rev. George Bennett gave a short talk preceding Representative Nagle's explanation of the road issue, in which he called attention to the Norbeck refuge bill now before the United States senate. He urged all members to use their influence in defeating the bill, which, he said, is unfair to both sportsmen and lovers of wild life.

Board Members Elect Presidents of School Districts

The seventy-two school boards for the various school districts throughout Johnson county met yesterday for organization. The new members were sworn into office and a president was elected for each board. The complete lists of members on each board will probably not be sent to W. N. Leeper, county superintendent of schools for some time. Some of the boards will submit the list of members at once, but Mr. Leeper does not expect many of the lists until as late as July.

New members were elected on the boards last Monday. It was expected that the membership on most of the boards would remain the same as comparatively few of the positions were to be contested. The boards are organized and the new members sworn in this early in order that they may take action at once for the obtaining of teachers for next year.

Car Ownership Causes Dispute

Should Slezak Hudson Go to State or Garage Man?

Whether a Hudson brougham is to be confiscated by the state as a liquor carrier or turned over to the garage dealers who claim to be the rightful owners will be decided by Judge R. G. Popham in district court within the next few days.

The Hudson was the property of Milo Slezak, erstwhile contractor and run-runner from Baraboo, Wis., who was killed near Oxford last November in a gun argument with unknown assailants, supposedly hijackers. At the time of the fight, Slezak and Joe Kinney of Oxford had been transferring approximately 100 gallons of liquor from Slezak's car to Kinney's.

Garageman Files Claim
County Attorney C. B. Russell started action in district court to have both cars confiscated as liquor carriers. Prothero and McGinnis, garage dealers from Slezak's home town, Baraboo, from whom Slezak was buying the car, have filed a petition of intervention, claiming the ownership of Slezak's car.

They contend that Slezak had made a payment of $150 on the car, but was not supposed to remove it from the garage until he had paid the entire amount. However, they say that the car was removed and they heard no more of it until after Slezak had been killed and the car with its load of liquor had been seized by local authorities.

They claim that the car is their rightful property, since Slezak had not paid for it and since he was using it as a liquor carrier without their knowledge or permission.

G. M. C. Gets Kinney Car
In regard to the confiscation of Kinney's car for the same reason, Judge Popham ruled in court Saturday that the car should be turned over to the General Motors acceptance corporation, which showed in court that it held a mortgage on the car, and that it had been used as a liquor carrier without the knowledge or consent of the corporation.

Further testimony in regard to the confiscation of Slezak's car will be taken this morning. Another of the problems which the authorities are facing in connection with the affair is the disposal of the 105 gallons of liquor, approximate value $850, which made up the load of the two cars.

Local Clubs Want Views on Signals

City Council Budget Lacks Provisions for Traffic

An attempt to sound out public opinion on the traffic signal question is being made this week by the Iowa City Automobile club and the traffic committee of the local chamber of commerce. Prof. C. W. Wassam, secretary of the auto club and chairman of the chamber of commerce committee, heads the committee.

The city council has thus far made no provision in the 1928 budget for the desired signals, saying that they have a limited amount of money to spend and that they believe the people do not desire the signals.

Must Act Soon

Final approval of the budget will be made Friday night and if the people desire to have the signals within the next year they must necessarily act before then.

Petitions have been circulated during the last two days, in public places where those in favor of the signals may signify their opinions.

No petitions have been circulated in those places where those who oppose the plan although there are many who believe the signals are unnecessary in a city as small as Iowa City. There is no place in the petitions for those opposed.

Will Circulate Petitions

The petitions will be circulated this week at the luncheons of service clubs and at other public gatherings. An effort is also being made to have those persons in favor of the stop and go signals at the council meeting Friday night to voice their opinions.

More than 215 persons had signed the petitions yesterday. Those opposed to making an appropriation for the signals feel that the petitions mean little as this fact is

Signal Poor Example

Many interested persons, both those opposed to the signals and those favoring them, feel that the trial signal installed at Washington and Clinton streets last fall was a poor example of what is needed here. It was left operating all night when there was no need for it.

Boosters of the plan believe the signals should be turned off by police in the evenings as soon as the traffic thins out enough.

Wassam Talks

Prof. C. W. Wassam, chairman of the chamber of commerce traffic committee, and secretary of the Iowa City Automobile club, spoke briefly on the budget provisions for stop and go signals. He called attention to the petitions being circulated and explained that it was not an effort to "put something over" but rather an attempt to sound out public opinion on the matter.

Professor Wassam suggested that those in favor of the traffic signals attend the council meeting Friday night and make known their opinions of the proposed plan.

About seventy-five per cent of those at the meeting signified their intention of attending the meeting. Supervisors Jones of Oxford, Zensiek of Solon, Carrey of Lone Tree, Ranshaw of North Liberty, and Peters of Iowa City, were guests at the luncheon and were introduced by Prof. Rollin M. Perkins, who presided at the luncheon in absence of Dean Chester A. Phillips.

The building was opened at 7 o'clock to visitors and within an hour, 500 persons had passed through the plant.

Veterans' Daughters Observe Guest Day
