Iowa City Must Keep the Air Mail

The following is the first in a series of interviews to be presented by The Daily Iowan with residents of Iowa City, concerning the air mail, its use, and reasons for keeping the port at its present location.

"Use of the United States air mail service has increased more than 100 per cent in the last sixteen days," was the statement made by Postmaster C. C. Shrader last night, upon his checking air mail message receipts with returns from preceding periods of time.

"While the average monthly purchase of the ten cent air mail stamps has been confined within the limits of from 400 to 500 during the preceding months, it increased during March to a new total of 700 stamps. But the greatest increase has come in the first sixteen days of the month of April. Air mail stamps have already been purchased.

"While the above figures apply to the ten cent stamps, there has been a proportionate increase in the purchasing of the fifteen and twenty cent stamps," said Mr. Shrader. "We lead Cedar Rapids by fifty-one pieces of mail during the last week. And over the period of time has Iowa City run behind that city in the number of pieces of mail carried by the transcontinental air mail."

Mr. Shrader voiced his appreciation of the efforts which the local air committee and the business men of Iowa City have made toward increasing the community's interest in the air port. "I feel quite sure that this increased interest in the air mail will keep the patronage of the service in the neighborhood of the new high figures which have been established thus far this month."

Iowa City Plans for State Music Festival May 3-5

Elimination Contests Decide Entries in Annual Fete

While the final preliminary contests are being carried on throughout the state to select the high school musicians who will compete in the state music festival in Iowa City May 3-5, full plans are being made here for their entertainment during the contest.

Since the festival will last three days instead of two, a different schedule of events will probably be followed this year. Tentative plans provide for the presentation of the solo and small group numbers on Thursday, May 3, the glee clubs and orchestras Friday, May 4, and the bands, Saturday, May 5.

Under this arrangement, a series of three big concerts will be given on Friday night, one at Iowa Union, one in natural science auditorium, and one in the Methodist church. Those who will play in these contests will be chosen by elimination during the first two days of the festival.

Plan Picnic
If this plan is carried out, the announcement of the awards in every thing except the band contest will probably be made after the concert Friday night, instead of on Saturday. The band contests will be held Saturday morning, and the results announced at once.

The big parade will be held after lunch Saturday, as has been the custom. Another feature being planned is an outdoor picnic supper near Iowa Union Friday night.

Iowa Union will be the headquarters of the festival, registration taking place there. The parent-teachers associations of Iowa City are sponsoring the festival, and have taken charge of the ticket sales.

To Limit Contestants
The young contestants will be housed in private homes, sorority and fraternity houses, Currier hall, and the Quonset, which were used last year. Eastlawn, which is to become a dormitory, will also be available.

In addition to the district contests, a number of "friendly elimination" contests are being held, in order to decrease the number attending the final festival here. Last year about 500 contestants had to sleep in cots in the field house, because of the limited facilities for taking care of them.

The contestants at the first festival numbered 1,916, those at the second last year 2,833. This year, after the elimination contests, about 2,500 young musicians are expected here in May.

Festival Grows Yearly
The festival has been growing not only in the number of contestants in the finals, but also in the number of schools taking part in any of the contests. In the first year, 175 schools entered, last year about 300 were taken part.

The series of music contests are sponsored by the Iowa High School Musical Activities association, with the University of Iowa taking charge of the arrangements for the final contest. The committee in charge of the contests has three members from the musical association, and two from the university.

"Kempy" Opens at University Theatre

Floyd Pillars Takes Title Role in Comedy

A comedy of situation set in a typical American home will be produced tonight when "Kempy," by J. C. and Elliott Nugent, is given by the university theatre in the natural science auditorium. It will be repeated Wednesday and Thursday nights.

The theme of the play is complicated and much of its humor rises out of the involved situations that confront "Kempy" when he enters the Bence family as a plumber and stays to marry both of the sisters before the end of the play.

The scene of the play is laid in a small New Jersey town about sixty miles from New York and the action takes place in the space of one afternoon and night. The set which is the largest yet constructed by the university theatre, was designed by Walter Roach, instructor in the speech department. One set is used throughout the three acts of the comedy.

Charles V. Brown is directing the play. "Kempy" is played by Floyd Pillars, D4 of Iowa City, who also played the title role in the "Poor Nut," by the Nugent brothers. The supporting cast is:
"Duke" Merrill.....Don Howell
Ruth Bence.....Marthana Baker
"Dad" Bence.....Edward Wright
"Ma" Bence.....Marion Powers
Jane Wade.....Esther Lucille Mueller
Katherine Bence.....Mildred Becker
Ben Wade.....Charles Busby

C., at which representatives of Cedar Rapids commercial interests appeared before government officials in an attempt to get the transcontinental air route changed to pass through Cedar Rapids instead of Iowa City.

After giving the account, Mr. Walker ended with the statement: "If the air field is taken away from Iowa City, it can be regarded as nothing less than an act of piracy." In outlining the situation, he told how the controversy started some weeks ago but was apparently settled by a decision of the second assistant postmaster general, only to suddenly break out afresh.

Germans Remain With Plane; Irish Co-Pilot Goes On

Fog, Snow Bothered Aviators During Ocean Flight

MONTREAL, April 16 (Canadian Press)—The Junkers monoplane Bremen will continue its journey to New York Wednesday if reports can be completed in time, the Canadian Press was informed tonight in a message given out by the local office of the Marconi wireless company.

The message came from the Marconi company's superintendent, W. S. Barrett, at the Point Amour wireless station opposite Greenly Island.

Barrett's information came direct from the flyers at Greenly Island. His message read: "Bremen shaft damaged but repairable. Expected leave Greenly Island Wednesday. Bremen had fog and snow during part of its flight. Took Greenly Island lighthouse for sealing steamer but ascertained that it was lighthouse shortly afterwards and made landing on small pond. Crew were rather exhausted but quite recovered after short time."

(By The Associated Press)

The three members of the crew of the Junkers monoplane Bremen, who braved together the dangers of a westward flight across the north Atlantic, were divided today, the two Germans standing by their disabled ship on Greenly Island and the Irishman continuing his journey in another plane.

Sunday, two pilots and a mechanic forced a hazardous way to the island from the mainland. Yesterday one of those pilots, C. A. (Duke) Schiller, flew away with Capt. James Fitzmaurice, co-pilot of the Bremen, asking him for the right to Natashquan, on the north shore of the gulf of St. Lawrence.

A sister ship of the Bremen, the Junkers F-13, left New York yesterday for Montreal and was to establish a relief base either there or at Quebec today. The plane was flown by Fred Melchior, Junkers expert who was accompanied by Herta and Erhardt Junkers, daughter and son of the manufacturer.

It was planned to strip the F-13 of any parts needed by the Bremen and ship them to Greenly Island with fuel, by plane. If it should prove impossible to repair the Bremen on Greenly Island, Miss Junkers said she would take the crew back to New York in the F-13.

Ice Breaker on Way

In the meantime, the Canadian government ice breaker, Montcalm, was pushing forward to the rescue and was expected to arrive at the island today unless piling ice should completely block its course. The Montcalm was prepared to take the Bremen and remaining members of its crew aboard and transport them to some point where they could get all the materials they might need for quick repairs to the plane.

Wives of both the married members of the Bremen crew, Captain Fitzmaurice and Captain Koehl, announced from Europe that they would come to America to join their husbands. They will sail on the same ship, leaving Cork, Ireland, April 21.

Business houses closed today as funerals were held for four of the dead.

A memorial service was held at the high school for the pupils of the school who were killed in the explosion.

An Attempt at Piracy

"I" Cedar Rapids persists in trying to take the air mail station away from Iowa City, we shall have to consider it only as an attempt at piracy." With these emphatic words Attorney Henry G. Walker closed a vigorous discussion at the chamber of commerce meeting yesterday, telling of a hearing at Washington, D. C. regarding the proposed shift of air mail service. He pointed out that the arguments used in an effort to remove the field from their locality were based on shallow reasons.

Attorney Walker's address was loudly cheered by a group of 200 Iowa City business men, attesting to the loyalty which they always held for the local air mail station. Iowa City was the first community in the state to give definite support to establishing a flying field in order to improve transportation of mail by air. Its residents have always stood behind the plan. The university and city together furnish a large amount of poundage to the service. In other words, Iowa City uses the air mail. This use is rapidly increasing, and is definite testimony that there is no need to change the location. Certainly Cedar Rapids' promises that it will attempt to provide large business for the air mail cannot be compared to the actual utilization of it here.

Iowa City lies on the shortest air route between Chicago and Omaha; if the planes went by way of Cedar Rapids, they would have to travel a somewhat longer distance, making their flights less quick and less economical. In attempted answer to this, the Cedar Rapids supporters can argue only that the report of one government representative declares that where both routes cross the Mississippi river, the Cedar Rapids line has better flying conditions and passes over better terrain. Yet the two routes are only nine miles apart! As if atmospheric conditions in a space of nine miles would be widely different!

To change the location of the field at this time, when the present system is in excellent operation, would be foolish expenditure. If Cedar Rapids succeeds in taking the field from Iowa City, how short a time will elapse before Davenport or Des Moines grab the field from Cedar Rapids? Should the government pursue such a vacillating policy, the air mail service would be disrupted.

The Boeing Air Transport company is apparently satisfied with the Iowa City route; the department of commerce and the post office department can find no cause for complaint over the service here. Apparently the only reason for shifting the field is the indefinite lure of a few more pounds of mail. The whole scheme concerning the change is shrouded in uncertainty, for there can be no concrete arguments advanced!

Iowa City residents are using the air mail. They must continue to use it, adding daily to the evidence that Iowa City deserves to keep the air mail station.

After You, Rome

LUIGI "BULL" MONTANA, 205-pound original "hard boiled guy," circus strong man, and the cinema's Tarzan of the Apes, is a broken and defeated man. He begs the police to rescue him from the fury of a 118-pound flapper, and then places her in the Glendale (Cal.) caboose on charges of assault and battery with intent to commit great bodily injury.

Jaqueline says she is "Bull's" wife. Luigi says she is no relation of his, but just plain "Jackie" Laverne, actress.

The argument started in a friendly way in a hotel room at Glendale, Calif. It ended with Jaqueline in the city bastille and Luigi in the hospital getting fixed up after being hacked with the slim heel of a little slipper.

The match between the professional wrestler and his diminutive partner was staged at catch-weights before the empty over-stuffed seats of the hotel furniture. Jacqueline, according to her own version, did not get angry until the "bull" blackened her eye. Then off came her high heeled slipper and Luigi took the count.

As it is in private life, so it is with nations—down through the ages the big nations have paraded, taking all comers and basking in the sun of their own physical strength. Then one day they got out of training and tread on the toes of some supposedly weaker country. Off came the slipper and another giant tottered, grew frightened and tossed in the sponge. China, Egypt, Greece, Rome, France, Germany—and traveling westward, who knows but what it is now America who must keep pace with the wife?

The Romance of Iowa History

RESIDENTS of the Hawkeye state are pausing to observe this as Iowa History week, in annual commemoration of those who founded and developed the state. In sponsoring the observance, the State Historical Society of Iowa and the Iowa Federation of Woman's Clubs are carrying out a program for which they should receive the esteem of their compatriots.

The theme of Iowa History week this year is appropriately a study of the Indians, the first residents of this region. Radio talks, public school programs, and other events are serving to bring to the attention of the people of the commonwealth a knowledge of the red men who hunted and fought on this territory, only to be pushed westward by the white settlers at the demand of the government.

The tales of these Indian battles and treaties are thrilling episodes. They breathe virility and adventure, and constitute an exciting background to the history of the state. They are the beginning of the romance of Iowa, a romance that continued through the arrival of the first white man, through the founding of trading posts, forts, and later actual settlements, the change to statehood, through the Civil war, into the twentieth century, and a romance that is still being carried on by the present generation.

This romance is one that becomes more gripping as it is studied and as new facts and incidents are brought to light. Such events as Iowa History week particularly help to make the romance more real and more vital.

Taming the Wildman

SMITH Wildman Brookhart may abandon his substitute farm relief bill and swing into line behind the McNary-Haugen measure. In offering this substitute bill to the senate, his remarks led some to believe that he would work against this long-suffering piece of legislation attributed to McNary and Haugen.

There is nothing very surprising in this right-about-face on the part of the Iowa senator. He has always been visionary and idealistic. He is honest, knows no fear, and has a sort of rough-and-tumble attractiveness.

If he deserts his substitute bill, people will cry that he is being "regularized" by the Washington atmosphere. They will say that he is losing one of his most precious virtues, that of steadfastness. In truth he is only passing through one of those periods of vacillation that come to men who delve into politics.

That there is much truth in the claims of soccer devotees that this style of football is the most popular seems to be substantiated by the fact that no less than 93,000 reserved seats have been sold for the final of the English Association football cup, to be played at Wembley stadium April 31.—Christian Science Monitor.

A Great Feat Ended

(The Des Moines Register)

COSTES and LeBrix, the French round-the-world flyers, are back in Paris, they have been welcomed with vast enthusiasm, and a feat as outstanding as any in recent history has actually been performed by them.

They flew across everything but the Pacific, just as the Americans, Brook and Schlee, did. They made remarkable time, many long and dangerous hops, and displayed a proficiency in navigation as well as piloting that hasn't been excelled. Their craft, powered with a French motor, gave a great demonstration, too. From Paris to Senegal in one nonstop flight, from Senegal across to South America in another immediately after, up through South America and Central America to Washington, and most recently the series of swift movements from Tokio across Asia and Europe to Paris in six days—it is all a fine record.

Incidentally, a very minor part of the grand tour, made in the United States, won admiration from the experts. Taking off from Washington for New York the Frenchmen met such abominable weather, with storms and then blanketing fogs, that their escort of American military planes was scattered completely. Flying part of the time high above the fog and part of the time with their wheels almost touching the ground, the Frenchman made record time and hit their New York field as if aimed at it from a long range gun.

We have had so much of this new glory ourselves, in America, that we can afford to take our hats off with a sweep to these wonderful Frenchmen.

F.L.G. for President!

GOOD MORNING!
Did you hear Dr. Travis broadcasting Fred Hunter's twelve-cylinder, 80 h.p. brain Sunday night? And when he shifted into low for the knee jerk, and then to second for the tongue wagging, the WSUI fans went wild! Really, a most remarkable demonstration of the latest oil burning, left hand drive, high powered brain equipment. And astonishment ran big. Few of us realized that a brain could make so much noise when hitting under high pressure!

F.L.G. for President!

It's a good thing every brain hasn't a radio hook-up. There'd be no living with a person—especially, if he happened to start thinking once in a while. It'd be worse than the neighbor's saxophone.

On the other hand, rightly interpreted, this wouldn't be half so bad when friend husband came home late at night. The usual dialogue, under prevailing conditions, follows:

Friend Wife—Well, where've you been until THIS hour?

Friend Husband—My dear, there was an important conference of the board of directors.

Friend Wife—But it couldn't have lasted this late? It's nearly THREE o'clock!

Friend Husband—Yes, dear; you see, we are considering floating a billion dollar bond issue and there were several details to be arranged.

Friend Wife—If it goes through, can I have a new fur coat?

Friend Husband—Yes, dear . . . if it goes through.

But with Dr. Travis' broadcasting apparatus for neglected brains, the conversation would take a new turn:

Friend Wife—Well, this is a fine time to be getting in. I must say! I suppose you're going to pull that old wheeze about a director's conference?

Friend Husband—the fact is, my dear, that we're floating a big bond issue.

(Friend Husband's Brain: Gosh, that was a swell party!)

Friend Wife—You're a dirty liar! You've been playing poker all night!

Friend Husband—No, my dear; you misinterpreted my brain's frequency wave.

(Friend Husband's Brain: I'll say she did! Wonder when I'll see that little blonde baby again?)

Friend Wife—Blonde baby? Is alsa system? Say, don't think you can pull that stuff on me. I know my nerve impulses!

(Friend Husband's Brain: And that cry, oh boy! Wonder if I can get a case of that week?)

Friend Wife—And don't think you're going to clutter up the cellar with another case of hootch. I'm sick of you getting tight every night!

And then, in the divorce court—

Judge—What evidence have you that your wife has been untrue to you?

Hubby—Why, yer honor, I could hear her brain impulses all over the house. It was "My, I wish Fred would take another business trip so I could have some fun!" and "Actually, that little book salesman had the cutest mustache!"

Wife's Attorney—I object, yer honor, it's the husband at fault! His brain was all the time broadcasting that he wished he knew a quick way to get rid of her so he could save some money!

(Judge's Brain: Lord, I'm hungry! What a dull case!)

(Attorney's Brain: Watta bum judge! Biased old pig, am I? You've fined $30 for allowing your nerve impulse to broadcast in contempt of court!)

F.L.G. for President!

And, after picking the Hawkeye Beauty—

Gushing Chi O—My dear, I think it's JUST wonderful that you were PICKED as one of the SEVEN Iowa beauties!

(Gushing Chi O's Brain: How that big cow ever rated—and HER looks!) (Beauty Queen's Brain—Well, I never! And she seemed so SINCERE about it, too!)

Or when pinched for speeding—

Traffic Cop—Hey, Barney Oldfeld, move over to the curb! Who'd ya think you are, a Kappa?

Motorist—Really, officer, this old car won't hit over twenty-five an hour.

(Motorist's Brain: Ha, ha! I wasn't hitting less'n sixty!)

Traffic Cop—Let yer impulses tell hat to the judge, mister! You weren't hitting less'n sixty—and now!

(Motorist's Brain: Why, the big sap! D**!*?!!...!*)

Traffic Cop—Call me a sap, will ya? Yer pinched for lettin' yer nerve impulses sass an officer!

But maybe it wouldn't be so bad after all. I understand that there's a considerable portion of the population that really never has any brain action at all. We are now signing off at ten-thirty-seven, Central Standard Time, after having broadcast the brain activity of numerous patients. GOOD NIGHT!

Across Iowa in 1857

Furnished to the Associated Press by the State Historical Society at Iowa City.

In 1857, when the outposts of American civilization were still being pushed westward toward the Pacific, and when frontier Iowa meant "out west" to the easterner, a Rhode Island botanist, Edward L. Peckham of Providence, made a journey across the state. Peckham's diary, kept during his trip, made by stage from Iowa City to Council Bluffs and return, has given the State Historical Society some interesting glimpses into the pioneer life of Iowa three score and ten years ago.

Iowa City was then the western terminus of the railroad, and for $30.50 Peckham purchased a through ticket from Providence. At the stage office he caught a stage leaving for the west over the route now traversed by U. S. highway No. 32. Peckham found the stage accommodations neither comfortable nor congenial. The coach was crowded, each of the three seats holding three passengers, who were packed together in such a manner that one could not change his position without the consent of the others. To his right was a "stout, broad shouldered, sour looking German," who was going to Des Moines to open a lager beer brewing business. On his left was a farmer en route to Fort Dodge. Three passengers from Atlantic coast states occupied the middle seat, while the rear seat accommodated a boy and a German emigrant couple with two children.

Walk Up Hills
Despite personal discomforts, the adult passengers were required to walk up steep hills in order to save the horses.

At about 10 o'clock the first night the travelers had supper at Marengo, immediately afterward the trip was resumed and the stage jolted along throughout the night. None but the children slept, since the others had to get out frequently to walk up the hills.

Brooklyn was reached in time for breakfast. The meal was abundant, and Peckham's only objection seems to have been that the dishes were too numerous. There was not room on the table for all the dishes, and he was forced to put his cup of coffee on top of a pie. If a particular dish was wanted, the landlord would hunt until he found it on the table.

A few miles out of town the travelers sighted a caravan of Mormons, one of the handcart expeditions en route to Salt Lake City. Far away on the horizon they resembled "a huge black snake trailing over an interminable sea of grass." As the stage passed the Mormons, the latter struck up a hymn.

Grinnell, resembling a town rising from the ocean, appeared in the distance. Lots were selling from $50 to $300.

At Newton the stage stopped for dinner, which consisted mainly of roast beef and boiled mutton, although the table was adorned with tumbler of radishes and dishes of lettuce, and sliced boiled eggs, filberts and almonds.

Des Moines Hotels Full
After leaving Newton the route passed over a long stretch of swamp land with three and four preemption claims on it. Another party of Mormons was sighted. A prairie fire seen that evening was described by Peckham as a gorgeous spectacle.

Arriving at Fort Des Moines about midnight, the travelers found that the hotels were full, and were obliged to put up at the stage house. Peckham reflected that he had not had an hour of steady sleep since leaving Chicago six days before, and during the time had not taken his clothes off. He bathed himself in the common wash room, and changed his shirt, but could not shave.

During the night it rained hard, and the road was in a bad condition when the stage started for Council Bluffs the next morning at 7 o'clock.

"I had heard a good deal about Iowa mud," wrote Mr. Peckham, "and now saw it to my heart's content. It was as thick as dough and greasy at the same time. The horses would slip up and the wheels slide fearfully at every inclination of the road, and whenever we got out to walk it seemed as though we lifted a common sized farm at every step."

After passing through Adel, the route again entered upon a rolling prairie where the sun and wind were rapidly drying the track. To the easterner the land in that section of the state seemed remarkably rich. Toward evening the stage rolled through a section of great beauty, seemingly uninhabited except for one house. There the travelers obtained an excellent supper of "cornlew, woodcock, stewed prairie chicken, dipped eggs, coffee, tea, and warm biscuit."

Reach Council Bluffs
At midnight the stage crossed the divide and entered the valley of the Missouri river. Six hours later breakfast was had at Lewis. This meal Peckham found the poorest he had ever tried to eat. He began to hate the sight of pies, cakes, and preserves, for he had observed that they invariably accompanied the poorest fare. Fifty cents was the standard price for a meal.

During the morning the stage encountered the third Mormon handcart brigade of fearless emigrants who were risking desert travel with handcarriers in order to reach Utah. After another day of adventure, Council Bluffs was reached. Peckham found the town unimpressive with one principal street, half a mile long. Council Bluffs was in the throes of a boom and the hotel lobby was crowded. While out for a stroll the easterner came upon a party of Indians engaged in a tribal dance. The store buildings were low and of one-story, with the front carried up to the peak of the roof. Several brick structures were noted opposite the Pacific house.

Since his westward journey would have to be continued by foot or on horseback, Peckham resolved to return by the one available public carrier—the stage.

Presidential Sidelights

WASHINGTON, April 16 (AP)—Smith and Hoover remain the margin names around which delegate strength of the major parties, so far as revealed in definite pledges is rallying.

Secretary Hoover faces a solid anti-Hoover field of competitors, including Governor Lowden, and at least one dark horse, Vice President Dawes. Governor Smith has opposed to him no single candidate whose delegate strength to date comes within a stone's throw of Smith's own.

There is this further difference: Hoover needs but a majority of the republican convention to nominate him, while Smith needs two-thirds of the democratic delegates.

Hoover has instructed or definitely claimed for him around 200 of the 545 delegate votes needed to nominate at Kansas City. Lowden has about 150. Smith's delegate number 264, compared to 73 1/3 necessary for a nomination at Houston.

The fight on Smith in the south is based on his attitude toward prohibition and his alliance with Tammany. The Smith contingent claims Louisiana's twenty votes at Houston, at least half of the eighteen from Arkansas and, after perhaps a ballot or two for Reed, Oklahoma's twenty.

There will be close to a dozen "favorite son" candidates at Houston, one of the latest to enter the field being former Senator Hitchcock, who will go into the convention assured of the support of Nebraska's delegation.

Two Stolen Idols

By Frank L. Packard

CHAPTER 22

"That's damned good news," said Bob Kingsley, with a savage chuckle. "Waterlight bulkhead—door closed! That's what Carter had been doing, of course! Got through the coal bunkers then—did you? Nice place! That accounts for the priceless mess you're in!"

"The distraction of the mind has been eminently accomplished," smiled Chen-shu—and deliberately poured a stream of hot tallow on Bob Kingsley's lips. "Your wisdom is unequalled. We arrived with great effort at the place where the ship's fires are made, and the place was deserted. From there we came to the deck at the moment you were climbing the ladder to the topmost deck with the white-girl passenger. I followed you, and saw you place the girl in the boat. The others had run at once to the cabin in which the dead man lay. But the dead man no longer had the Heaven-made image. Therefore we brought your High-Born Presence here so that the candle-flame might not be extinguished in the wind. Could we search so important a personage in the darkness?"

"You might as well, for all the good it's done you!" Bob Kingsley jerked out shortly. "Even Won Fu will tell you I'm a wash-out!"

The second Chinaman had desisted from his search. He held in his hand two revolvers—Bob Kingsley's and the one belonging to Verna Lyle that Bob Kingsley had thrust into his pocket. There was a short exchange of words between the two Orientals, and then Chen-shu spoke again.

"There are only three persons who could have the Heaven-made image," he said softly. "The man who is dead here, the man who struck him at the door of the cabin. He has not got it now. And to our unalterable regret you have not got it. Therefore, it must be the girl. I do not ask your High Eminence if this is so, because the tender passion that alone would prompt the heart to the supreme devotion witnessed by my unworthy eyes would prompt the lips to lie for the maiden's sake with the utmost facility. And I do not ask for still one more reason—because I know it must be so. She alone was with the man when your benign and Heaven-born feet gave chase to the infamous and fleeing Won Fu. Also the man was not then dead. Does one blind the wounds, or refresh the face of a dead man with cooling water? Also to whom else but to the maiden, since it was not to you, could he have given the Heaven-made image? Even to the ill-tutored mind of him who speaks, the matter becomes clear, so great is its simplicity. It is therefore to be hoped that she will reach the shore in safety—so that her life may be prolonged until such time as we, too, may make the passage from the ship. It is to be expected that she now possesses certain knowledge greater even than you, so let not your Unequaled Excellence's heart weigh heavily upon you, for, though you will not see the maiden of your desire again with your painfully afflicted eyes, we will send her to rejoin you swiftly in the courts of the High Gods—or, mayhap, you will find her al-again in his agony and his impotence. Verna's boat! There it was safe through the reefs! And now she was landing on the shore. And now the Chinamen's boat had escaped too, and they in turn were making a landing. There was no one to warn Verna, no one to protect her. Carter didn't know anything about it, and anyway Carter was a badly wounded man. There was no one—only a crazed and panic-stricken boatload of natives. It would be very easy for the Chinamen to accomplish their purpose with her on shore there in the darkness and the confusion. Who was to know even who had done it?"

A sing-song refrain, a hideous refrain, began to thud at his ear-drums: There wasn't any time . . . There wasn't any time . . . No—no time! And he was lying there wasn't any time . . . there hopeless while a life was at stake—her life. That wasn't exaggerating. They had said so. Verna knew, or at least they believed she knew, too much. Certainly they would find that second white idol in her possession. A mere life, whether of man, woman or child, meant nothing to them. They had given all too much proof of that already. The thought brought terror and horror upon him. There must be some way out—there must be!

He was listening. Queer that he should be listening—more intently, it seemed, than he had ever listened before! Was that the sound of creaking ropes? The davit tackles—as the boat was being lowered? White-faced, he gnawed at his lips. Was he going mad? How could he hear any such sound as that in here over the roar of the seas bounding on the reefs, the wrenching and groaning of the ship itself, and the weird howling of the wind! The boat being lowered. It was much more likely that it had been already lowered—that it was already gone. Gone!

A frenzy came upon him again—and as he rolled about the floor, writhing, twisting limbs and arms, battling with maniacal strength to loosen his bonds. And then suddenly in his struggles, as he turned over and over his hand touched something on the floor. Mechanically the tips of his fingers closed upon it. It was hard, curiously jagged, almost sharp. His mind for an instant was in confusion, and as he felt with a low, exultant cry, he fought his way up again to a sitting posture with the object in his hands. He knew what it was now. It was one of the broken pieces of the plate that had fallen from Captain Karler's desk—one of the larger pieces—nearly half the plate.

He forced it in between his knees, clamped it there with the jagged edges outward, and, bending his body forward, began to saw at the ropes around his wrists. The edge of the plate wasn't sharp enough—it didn't cut—it frayed the strands. It would sever them in time of course—but it was taking too long. He fought back an almost panicky impatience. The thought that but a moment ago his release had seemed hopeless, whereas now it was eventually sure, did little to calm him. He was in desperate haste. It was taking too long! Only one strand severed so far! Had the boat gone (if it had, what was the use of this. He couldn't reach Verna then—they would reach her—unless the Baalu first took toll of them. That would be the one chance—while, as a reward for freedom, he merely strapped on a futile life-belt and waited for the Monotah to go down. Fool! Did it do him any good to torture himself—could it make the maximum of effort any the greater! It was only a very short while since the Chinamen had left the cabin—much shorter than it seemed. Only a bare two or three minutes at the outside! The boat wasn't gone—it couldn't be gone. It wouldn't be fair. It would be a God not of justice and mercy, and infinite love, but a God of stark and abominable cruelty who would have done this—flung her, a white woman, as a prey to the maws of these yellow brutes!

One strand was severed—another. Teeth clenched, the sweat pouring from him, he sawed with bitter persistence at the rope. Now and then, unable to see in the darkness, it was his wrists not the rope, that made contact with the broken edge of the plate. The blood poured from them. The plate was sharp enough for that!

Another strand parted—and now the rope itself.

His hands were free now. It was but the work of an instant to loosen the knots around his ankles and shake off the rope from his legs. And now he was on his feet. There was no numbness in his legs. He had not been long enough bound, and, besides, his own struggles had kept his blood even violently in circulation. He was conscious of a sense of relief that this was so, as he swung the door open, and sprang out on deck.

He was working with mad haste now. He opened the box and thrust the cartridges loose into his pocket, as he started on a run for the other side of the deck. And, as he ran, he "broke" the revolver, ejecting the shells, whether good or bad, from its chambers, and reloaded the weapon. It perhaps retarded him for a few seconds, but he dared not risk an already exploded shell. His life, and therefore hers, might de-

Iowa Lays Plans for Forest Week

State Consumes Over Half of Lumber in Country

DES MOINES, April 16 (AP)—Preparations for Iowa's observance of American Forest week, April 22 to 28, have been started with the appointment of committees by M. G. Thornburg, secretary of agriculture and state chairman.

Emphasis during the week will be placed on three things: the planting of more trees, the intelligent preservation of our woods, and Iowa's relationship to the forest situation. Mr. Thornburg told the committee members.

"Iowa is a large user of forest products," he said. "It is estimated that agriculture uses more than one-half of the total amount of lumber used in United States. Iowa users have a vital interest in the production of lumber as the farther that lumber must be shipped the more it costs the farmer."

MITCHELL, S. D., April 16 (AP)—From a tree grown in her own home, generally placed upon a radiator, Mrs. C. N. Boyd picked the lemon with which she made her family an Easter pie. The lemon measured somewhat larger than the average fruit.

They indicated that they will be candidates for state senator from the Monona, Harrison, Crawford county district in the June primary to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator A. J. Shinn of Harrison county.

Nomination papers were filed today by: W. A. Mooty, Grundy county; George C. Figgins, Union county; Marion R. McCaulley, incumbent; Calhoun county; A. L. Dodd, Jr., Van Buren county, republicans, and K. D. Rose, democrat, Butler county, all candidates for state representative.

Vincent to Enter Name for Office

COUNCIL BLUFFS, April 16 (AP)—Earl W. Vincent, Guthrie Center, nominee of the republican party in the ninth Iowa district, as congressman for the unexpired term of Representative William R. Green, resigned, will also be a candidate for the full term, in the June primary, he has announced.

William J. Burke of Missouri Valley, the democratic nominee, also will enter the June primary for the full term.

Vincent will have opposition for the nomination in the full term race by virtually all of the candidates who contended with him for the short term nomination, and probably by one or two others whose names did not come before the district republican convention. The exception in the list of the convention candidates is Harry E. Swan of Cass county, who stated he was a candidate for nomination for the unexpired term only.

Former State Senator Milton B. Pitt, Harrison county, who did not figure in the convention balloting, will be a primary candidate for the full term nomination.

SKILL

THE twist of the wrist, the "throw" of the arm, the shifting of the weight—these are among the many little points which make the skill that you admire in the javelin thrower as he hurls the shaft two hundred feet or more.

As on the track or the football field, in the gymnasium or on the water, so in industry progress is the result of fine improvements—a thousandth of an inch here—a minute variation in a curve there—slight changes foreseen by engineers and carried out by skilled workmen.

It is this attention to detail that is constantly improving General Electric apparatus and contributing to the electrical industry, which, though still young, is already a dominant force, increasing profit and promoting success in every walk of life.

Whether you find this monogram on an electric refrigerator for the home or on a 200,000-horsepower turbine-generator for a power station, you can be sure that it stands for skilled engineering and high manufacturing quality.

Hawkeyes Attempt to Regain Honors in Mile Event

Trials in all events to determine the Hawkeye representatives at the Kansas relays Saturday will be held this afternoon by Coach George T. Bresnahan. Providing individual performances are satisfactory, the Iowa coach expects to enter his athletes in all of the relays and special events.

The Old Gold mile relay team will be of special interest to the followers of the track and field sport, as only once since the revival of the Kansas relays, in 1923, have Hawkeye runners failed to capture the event. The second defeat which this season's quartet has met was last week at the Southern relays, when Indiana nosed out a victory over the Iowans by two-fifths of a second.

Indiana won the first heat of the race, which was in two sections, while Iowa galloped home ahead in the second heat with a margin of victory of seventy-five yards. Comparison of times showed that the Hoosier crew had finished the mile in faster time than the Iowans.

Another event of interest to local fans will be the shot put, in which Emmerson (Spike) Nelson, winner of the event in the Southern relays, will match his wares with the best of the middleweight. Nelson broke the Southern record last week by more than a foot when he put the sixteen pound shot 44 feet 3 3/8 inches.

The Hawkeye half-mile relay quartet, which did not run at the Southern meet, will be on hand to defend honors against the best teams in this section, including the famous Nebraska team.

Harold R. Phelps, former Hawkeye ace, still holds the mark in the 3,000 meter run which will be likely to attract either Leonard (Jack) Hunn, or Maurice Speers, who have succeeded Phelps as the distance kings of the Iowans.

It is also probable that Coach Bresnahan will use his same relay quartet, which was never headed in the competition last week, for the race this week-end.

Victory of the sprint medley relay team at the Southern relays was the first ever registered by a Hawkeye quartet in the event at a major relay carnival.

Kennett Reduces Golf Candidates

Eleven Hawkeye golfers remained to form the 1928 squad of the Iowans after Coach Charles Kennett made his final cut of the year yesterday.

The players will get their first taste of battle Saturday afternoon, if spring continues, when the annual country club varsity match will be held. Little will be done in intercollegiate circles until after the first of May.

Recent drills have shown the Hawkeyes have the prospects of a strong team, but Coach Kennett is trying to iron out several wrinkles before the meet Saturday.

The golfers whom Coach Kennett has selected for his squad include: Capt. E. Kurtz of Des Moines; Edward L. Schott of Cincinnati; O. J. Richard of Blackledge, Keosauqua; Hobart L. Beman of Okaloosa; Robert M. Maey, Adel; Edmund A. McCordell, Newton; Robert Miller, Iowa City; Donald Jackson, Council Bluffs; Robert Riechoff, Orange City; J. Cratt and J. Peck.

Sigma Pi Conquers Delta Tau Delta, 4-2

Sigma Pi downed Delta Tau Delta last night in the second rounds of the interfraternity indoor baseball tournament by a count of 4 to 2. The game was close and both teams played well. The pitchers were good, with perhaps a little advantage on the side of the Sig PIs with Pinkerton, over Day for the losers. Support was good for both teams in spite of a few minor errors by players on both sides. Sigma Pi had a team which handled the bat to better advantage than its adversaries. Kading at short, played a good game for Sigma Pi, while Kidd, Delt catcher, was the outstanding man on his team.

The Phi Kappa Psi-Alpha Sigma Pi game scheduled for 4:30 p.m. yesterday, was postponed.

Today's Games

Germans Slaughter Cattle Electrically

BERLIN, April 16 (AP)—Electrocution of cattle has been tried out at the central slaughter house of Berlin.

By means of two electrodes attached to the neck and spine, a galvanic current of 110 volts is passed into the body of the animal to be slaughtered. The shock proved sufficient in the case of steers and calves to cause instantaneous and painless death.

IT ISN'T PAT AND MIKE THIS TIME

THE PARENTS OF BOTH CAME FROM IRELAND

When Heeneey appeared on the New York pugilistic scene 14 months ago he and Tunney were the only Irishmen among the Rickard's hand-picked heavyweights, outside of Jimmy Maloney, the glass-chinned South Bostonian. When the dust cleared away Heeneey was still standing up like a rock above the Lithuanian Sharky, the Austro-Hungarian Risko, the French-Canadian Jack Delaney, and the Spanish Basque Paulino, so it happens that the Irishman from "down under" and the Irishman from Greenwich Village are to meet in the big shot.

All the Irish fight, but they don't all fight alike. Witness John L. Sullivan, the burly bruiser, and James J. Corbett, the master of science.

Now history repeats itself and here we have Thomas Heeneey, the burly bruiser, and James T. Tunney, the master of science. In that other all-Irish fight years ago at New Orleans the boxer won, but the fighter had seen his best days and was out of condition, weakened by inactivity and over-confidence. Now it's the boxer who's up against the handicap of ring rustiness.

Differ in Tactics
Heeneey and Tunney don't talk alike any more than they fight alike. Tom has picked up the "blime's" and the "hatches" of the "H'Eng-lish" with whom he has been thrown most of his life, while Tunney, ruling heavyweights in a part of the world where boxing is patronized by the "best people" along with the more delicate arts of literature and the drama, has come to run more to words of many syllables.

But toss the pair o' them in a ring and you'll see quick enough they're a couple of Irish, and it doesn't take very close scrutiny of their physiognomies either, to see that they carry around part of the map of the old isle.

THESE seem to be the dog-days of the college year. Faculty hounding people for note books. And all-outdoors so sunny and lazy. A walk to the library is exhausting.

Especially if you're doing your walking on those jolting, tiring, old hard heels.

Here's a tonic: rubber heels! Rubber gives, and lifts, and helps.

Best of all, because best of rubber, Goodyear Wingfoot Heels. Lively cushioning, longer wear. "the-right-thing" style.

Mastrogany Captures Best Kicking Award

Farroh and McLain Chalk Up Points for Winners

White Sox Trim Browns in 7 to 0 Tilt as First Win

Schalk Shifts Lineup and Hose Blank St. Louis

Line-ups and summary:
 WHITES (0) ...
 BLACKS (13) ...
 Mastrogany ...
 Farroh ...
 McLain ...

CHICAGO, April 16 (AP)—Manager Schalk shook up his lineup, put Alphonse Thomas on the mound, and the White Sox defeated the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 0, for their first victory of the season today. Thomas hit a home run with one man on base in the fourth inning.

Spring football training for Coach Burton A. Ingwersen's University of Iowa gridder came to a close yesterday afternoon when two machines of about balanced strength opposed each other in a battle on the gridiron west of the field house.

The score doesn't make very much of an impression, nor is it very important, but anyhow the Blacks won the tilt, 13 to 0.

On the victorious eleven, Coach Ingwersen had a backfield composed entirely of frosh material which gave an exhibition that would rival the crack work of the famous "four horsemen" aggregation. Oran "Nanny" Pape, stellar all around athlete of Dubuque, was one of the biggest shiners in the afternoon's hostilities.

Materially aiding Pape for the victors, was Mayes McLain, husky fullback of Pryor, Okla. "Mac" looked like a winner throughout the entire time, his line smashing and blocking furnishing the fans with many thrills during the afternoon. When Pape was fudging the oval, "Mac" was in front leading the way and his blocking resulted in Pape snagging a few extra yards of gainage. McLain gave a beautiful showing in line smashing from all angles and in doing so established himself as almost a certain backfield regular next fall.

Farroh Scores First
 Mike Farroh, who hails from Michigan City, Ind., scored the initial points of the game, when he nosed his way off-tackle for nine yards to score a touchdown in the first few minutes of play.

McLain scored the other six-pointers when he recovered a fumble on the Whites' thirty-one yard line after which he wiggled and dashed his way over the goal line. Leo Jensvold made the extra point good this time.

Following the game, a kicking competition to determine the best punter on the squad was held with the result that Gustav Mastrogany, a frosh end from Davenport, topped the medal. Irvin Nelson of Omaha, Neb., Paul Armil of Davenport, McLain, and Farroh took part. Armil was next in order at the finish.

Value First

University men know that "College Lane" suits are five months ahead in fashion but five dollars late in fee

The designing rooms of Michaels-Stern do not punch a time clock—they set it ahead.

Nor do our counting rooms ask all they could for a suit. These, marked $35 will pace along with anything in the city marked $45.

Gets right down to this question: College Lane 2-Pant Suits $35.00 that city desired to have the route remain as now is because of the good train connections between Iowa City and Davenport, which allowed Davenport citizens to use the air mail with practically no loss of time.

He pointed out that no good railroad connections are available between Davenport and Cedar Rapids and that if the route was changed the government would lose nearly all of the present business coming from Davenport.

Joel Tuttle, secretary of the Des Moines chamber of commerce pointed out that if the government was going to place ports wherever a city offered some business, that Des Moines should also like to have a mail station located there.

Professor Wylie Tells of Reaction in Wounded Leaf

"Wound Responses of Leaves" was the topic discussed by Prof. R. B. Wylie, head of the botany department, in his lecture before the weekly meeting of the botany club, yesterday. The lectures were held in the chemistry auditorium.

A series of slides, showing damaged and deliberately wounded leaves, featured the lecture. The slides illustrated experiments which had been made in determining the resisting and recuperating powers of leaves.

Professor Wylie classified the defensive processes of a leaf, upon being wounded, into three classes. The first reaction is the development of a pseudo-cicatrix, which acts as a protection against fungi and other enemies of the leaf.

Following this there is a modification of the position of the epidermal layers. The final reaction is the formation of the cicatrice proper. This cicatrice forms the lasting barrier against damage to the leaf.

Its formation does not start within forty-eight hours of the wound, and its development is slow.

Updegraff Urges Federal Regulation of Public Utilities

"Federal Regulation of Public Utilities" was the subject of the paper given by Prof. Clarence M. Updegraff of the college of law, before the members of the political science club, meeting at the home of President Walter A. Jessup last night.

Professor Updegraff suggested that a new federal administrative body be created. This body would have as its function, the regulation of those public utilities which are engaged in interstate commerce.

Those which are not subject to the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission would also be included.

The speaker pointed out that such a tribunal could take over much of the work now done by the lower federal courts. This would include reviewing decisions of state public utilities commissions where federal constitutional questions have been raised.

Iowa Man Edits Court Experiment

The municipal court of conciliation at Des Moines has been made the subject of an article published in the April number of the National Municipal Review and written by F. R. Aumann of the political science department, University of Iowa.

A similar article by Aumann will be published in the next issue of the Journal of the American Juridical society.

The article is concerned with the experiment in municipal courts known as the court of conciliation. Modeled after similar institutions in Cleveland and Minneapolis, the court was established in Des Moines on Sept. 1, 1927, with the avowed purpose of making justice in small matters more easily and quickly obtainable.

In connection with the municipal government survey which the political science department of the University is undertaking at present, Aumann has made a close study of municipal courts. It was while engaged in this work that the material was gathered.

Toledo Policemen Dragnet City for Express Bandits

TOLEDO, O., April 16 (AP)—Special details of police combed this city tonight for machine gun bandits who shot and killed Patrolman George Zientara after they had stolen an American Railway Express truck and abducted the four men who were guarding it.

The spectacular hold up and gun play availed the bandits nothing for they left behind, in a garage where Zientara and another policeman surprised them, two unopened strong boxes which they obtained from the truck. There
