Houston Convention Opens Today

Prohibition, Farm Aid Face Platform Builders

Smith Gains Power; Minority Desperate

New York May Join Maryland in Supporting Modification of Volstead Act; Others Desire General Enforcement

HOUSTON, Tex., June 25 (AP)—A profusion of planks dealing with the two big subjects before the democratic national convention, prohibition and farm relief, were put forward today, as leaders among the platform builders held preliminary conference in an effort to smooth over some of the differences on these subjects. With a spirit of conciliation generally manifest among the delegates, party chieftains were hopeful that the fight over these planks could be kept off the convention floor. Prominent dry leaders in the south, however, were prepared for a contest within the convention itself if the resolutions committee failed to report out a very vigorous prohibition enforcement plank.

May Modify Volstead Act

As the situation shaped tonight, it seemed that New York state would join with Maryland and perhaps one or two others in supporting a plank calling for modification of the Volstead act so as to permit the states to determine the alcoholic content of beverages.

Admittedly that proposal would get only a very few votes in the committee, with the fight then narrowed to the question of whether the law enforcement provision should name the eighteenth amendment. There was some opposition to referring to the prohibition clause of the constitution above all others, the opponents desiring mainly a general law enforcement declaration with a sharp criticism of the republican administration for an alleged failure to enforce the laws.

This will not satisfy such outstanding dry leaders of the south as Senators Carter Glass, of Virginia, and Caraway of Arknsas, Josephus Daniels, of North Carolina, Daniel Roper of South Carolina, internal commissioner in the Wilson administration and Governor Dan Moody of Texas.

Texas Against Repeal

Senator Glass will submit to the committee the dry plank adopted by Virginia democrats recently at Roanoke and naming the eighteenth amendment. Mr. Daniels also would have the convention pledge the party to "the sacred and honest enforcement of the eighteenth amendment to the constitution and to the enactmen and carrying out of the concurrent legislation announced in a formal statement that the Texas state convention had instructed in favor of a plank for the national platform "unequivocally endorsing the eighteenth amendment and declaring opposition to any attempt to repeal it or destroy the prohibition laws." He added that he was confident that such a plank would be offered "in this convention and that is will be supported by the democrats of Texas."

Farm Relief to Figure

The precise attitude of the Smith leaders regarding the dry plank has not yet been disclosed, but the general impression was that they would accept a plank even naming the eighteenth amendment and pledging its faithful enforcement. However, there was doubt that they would go to the length that Governor Moody suggested.

Few of the farm relief proposals advanced for consideration by the equalization fee principle of the McNary-Haugen bill, but the one offered by former Secretary Daniels would pledge the party to "the enactment of legislation no less effective and far reaching in its efforts to give "equality to agriculture" and to provide the most effective possible solution to the problem of agriculture."

Congress May Act on National Anthem

DES MOINES, June 25 (AP)—A petition asking that the "Star Spangled Banner" be made the official anthem by an act of congress has been received here by Walter M. Priebe of the veterans of foreign wars, for circulation among Des Moines residents.

Patriotic organizations are cooperating to bring the proposal before the next congress, Priebe said.

Heerman Quartet Will Give Concert

The Heerman String quartet will give an entertainment tomorrow at 8:15 p.m. in the natural science auditorium. This quartet has made seven transcontinental concert tours and has played in Europe.

Hugo Heerman was a leader of a string quartet in Europe for 40 years. When he died, his two sons came to America and settled in Cincinnati, Ohio, joining the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra seven years ago. Later they organized the Heerman String quartet.

Newman Delivers Illustrated Lecture

"Fine Clay Refractories" was the title of the illustrated lecture sponsored by the chemistry department and delivered by Edward W. Newman, graduate assistant, last night in the chemistry auditorium.

The film that was shown is one of a series put out by the secretary of the interior, department of mines. It showed the mining of the clay, and the process it goes through to make fire brick.

Fire brick is a very essential part of our present day industrial system, as it is the only substance that can be subjected to intense heat. When used as lining for blast furnaces it is often heated to 2800 degrees Fahrenheit. It is used in rotary furnaces, in glass furnaces, and in various other ways.

Kilzer to Lecture at Teachers' Institute

L. R. Kilzer, principal of university high school, has been invited to appear before the teachers institute at Buffalo and Newcastle, Wyoming, during the week of Aug. 27 to 31. He will deliver lectures and conduct round table discussions concerning the subject, "Secondary Education."

Mr. Kilzer received his Ph. D. degree from the University of Iowa on June 4 and has accepted a position as assistant professor in the University of Wyoming at Laromie for the coming year.

President Coolidge Takes Advantage of Warm Weather in Open Air Office

SUPERIOR, Wis., June 25 (AP)—Basking in the bright sun which at last came to warm his summer residence, President Coolidge established his office on the banks of the Brule today with the sky for a roof and the soft lawns of Cedar Island lodge for a carpet.

Deciding that, as he had no engagements on his books, he could attend to business as well in the country as in his Superior office, Mr. Coolidge ordered today's mail from Washington brought there to him. The mail was heavier than usual, but white house officials said that it contained nothing but an accumulation of routine affairs.

One of Mr. Coolidge's first acts today was to send a message of condolence to Mrs. Frank R. Gooding upon being notified of the death of her husband, the late Senator from Idaho. The chief executive eulogized Senator Gooding for his loyalty to his principles and for being a faithful and courageous public servant.

Absence of Everett Sanders, secretary of the president, who is in Chicago for a short visit, slowed up work at the executive offices today.

Warm weather was particularly welcome at the summer white house owing to Mrs. Colidge's convalsence from her recent indisposition. Her physician would allow her very limited activities during the rainy weather for the first ten days of her stay here. She was able to be out of doors most of today and make the most of her wilderness vacation.

No special arrangements have been made to enable President Coolidge to follow events at the Houston convention. Details of its course will reach him through the press or through the radio sets installed at the lodge.

Red Cross Board Selects Custer as General Chairman

Judge Paul E. Custer was elected chairman of the board of directors of the local Red Cross chapter last evening at a special meeting held in the city hall.

The board was selected June 19 at the annual meeting, and at that time Mrs. F. C. Young was chosen chairman but she declined the office. The special meeting of the new board was called for last evening to fill the vacancy and to have the committees appointed.

Due to Judge Custer's absence from the meeting, the executive committee was not named. The committees will, however, be chosen within a few days.

"Hee Haw," Say Burro Delegates

HOUSTON, Texas, June 25 (AP)—Mother nature has upset the plans of the convention committee that brought 48 Texas burros to represent each state delegation. When the keeper opened the stables this morning he was surprised to see that his herd had increased to 49.

Then the question arose what to du with the newcomer?

The committee decided to christen the intruder "Baby Houston" and give it to the presidential nominee.

Minority Attempts Last Minute Rally

HOUSTON, Texas, June 25 (AP)—In the race of mounting odds, the anti-Smith folds—"Jim Reed's Missourian's" and the rest of the south—fought steadily on today to gain that vital one-third—367 votes—necessary to halt Smith.

In his quarters high up in the Rice hotel above the seething mob of incoming delegates, Senator Reed stuck by his drive for the presidential nomination, preparing another statement, this one dealing with the farm situation, and voicing encouragement to the steady line of friends who came to him through the day.

Sen. Reed

Down main street, Daniel Roper of South Carolina, spokesman of the southern anti-Smith-Tammany faction, was busy in the Lamar hotel dispatching couriers to the delegates he hopes to hold in line, and later he called into session his "steering committee."

Word of probable defections in the ranks of the outsiders in favor of Smith, particularly in Ohio and possibly in Indiana, only served to spur on the drive and as the hot Texas sun was sinking today there was no sign of a halt in the drive against the New York governor.

Simpson Man Gets Prize

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)—Cecil Briggs, 24 years old, of Indianola, Iowa, a graduate of Simpson college and Columbia school of architecture, today was announced as the winner of the Prix De Rome by the American academy in Rome. Mr. Briggs has been an assistant in drawing at Columbia for the last two years.

City Contractors, Painters Agree After 10 Weeks

After nearly ten weeks in attempting to settle a dispute over wages and length of the working week for painters in Iowa City, point contractors and journeymen last night reached an agreement which will change the former 48-hour week to 44 hours. No change was made in scale.

Early in April the painters asked for a wage scale of 90 cents an hour instead of the 85 cent scale. They also asked the contractors to sign an agreement to change the 48-hour week to 44 hours.

The contractors, most of whom were already paying the proposed scale, refused to sign the proposal, both in regard to the wage change and the change in length of week.

Several painters refused to continue work under the old conditions, even though they were getting the proposed scale themselves, contending that it was not fair to the journeymen who were receiving less than that.

The principle objection raised by the contractors was that they would have to pay men not capable of earning the new scale as much as they are now paying good men.

Cooper Discusses Plan for Campaign

At the opening meeting of the local drive for the United Palestine appeal held Sunday evening at the synagogue here, Rabbi Martin Berman of Davenport, described a trip he had through the Holy land. Plans for the campaign were outlined by Charles Cooper, of St. Louis, and Joseph Braverman, chairman of the Iowa City appeal.

Two-thirds of the Iowa City quota was raised Sunday evening. The city's quota of approximately $1,000, will go toward the state appropriation of $60,000. Rebuilding of Palestine is the objective of this drive.

The other officers of the local campaign are A. Abrahamson, secretary, and Sam Worton, treasurer. The executive committee which is active in soliciting subscriptions is composed of Sam Markovitz, Aaron Braverman, David Braverman, Sam Whitebrook, and Oscar Saltzman.

PARIS, June 24—For the first time the French public must pay admission this year to the century-old yearly competition of the government's conservatory of music and drama.

Aviators Rescue Second Member of "Italia" Crew

Sixteen Others Still Helpless in Polar Wastelands

KING'S BAY, Spitzburgen, June 25 (AP) — A second member of the crew of the ill-fated "Italia" has been rescued tonight by airplanes but four others and the crew of a wrecked Swedish airplane were still marooned on an ice cake, awaiting succor.

Meanwhile somewhere on the broad Arctic spaces still are sixteen other men of whom there has been no trace. They are the seven last heard of as with the remains of the "Italia," the three who left Gen. Umberto Nobile afoot to find land, and the would-be rescuers Roald Amundsen, Rene Guilbaud, Lief Dietrichsen, and their plane's crew of three.

Nobile Rescued

Following upon the removal of General Nobile from the ice cake near Foyn island Saturday, the motor chief of the "Italia," Natale Ceccioni, has been rescued and, presumably, taken to the base ship "Citta di Milano" now at Virgo Bay, 60 miles north of here. The condition of Ceccioni, whose leg was broken in the crash which marooned the men on the ice, was not divulged in the meagre reports of the rescue attempt there Saturday when, after General Nobile had been taken off the floe and returned to the "Citta di Milano," the Swedish plane piloted by Lieut. E. Lundborg returned only to overturn in attempting a landing.

Lundborg reported by wireless today that he had escaped injury and was attempting to put a run-way on the ice block, which is about 900 feet long and 600 wide, in shape for landing of light two men planes.

Crippled Mechanic Saved

In messages given press agencies General Nobile himself, from his bed aboard the "Citta di Milano," explained the circumstances which caused his removal in preferment to his men. He insisted after the landing of the Swedish pilot, Lundborg, he said, that Ceccioni be taken off first, and others in their turn, he himself to remain until among the last. Lundborg told him, however, that instructions were to "rescue General Nobile first, so as to permit him to aid in directing the rescue work for the others." Rather than waste time in further discussion, Noble said, when the remaining five of the group had assured him they wished him to go he left.

Nobile had an incomplete fracture of his left shin, it is learned, and had a contusion of the back. His recovery is expected in forty days.

Meanwhile today there were reports here from the ice-breaker "Krassin," which left Bergen late last week for King's Bay, that that ship had been in communication with Roald Amundsen and those with him. These reports, however, were denied later in an official message from the ship to the Russian government at Moscow.

Home Economics Convention Opens With Conferences

DES MOINES, June 25 (AP) — Child training laboratories in high schools, the teaching of family relationships, and tests in secondary education were studied here today at the opening conferences of the annual convention of the American Home Economics association.

Party Leaders Show Spirit of Conciliation

Smith Advocates Strenuous Work

ALBANY, N. Y. June 25 (AP)—On the eve of the democratic convention Governor Alfred E. Smith, pictured himself in an address today as a political warrior in whose nostrils the scent of battle is always sweet.

"Never take it easy in life," he told the graduating class at the academy of the Immaculate Conception, the class of which his youngest son, Walter, was president.

The governor made no reference to current political matters nor to his own prospects.

In an interview he told reporters today that he wasn't going to say anthing of political import and all they could write about him was what he was doing.

"And what are you doing?" one reporter asked.

"Nothing," the governor replied with a grin.

North Star Lands at Camp Madeline

CURTISS FIELD, N. Y., June 25 (AP)—Mrs. A. E. Stillman, wife of the banker and backer of Thea Rasche in a proposed trans-Atlantic flight, said today that the German aviatrix is now at Camp Madeline, a new air field, near Three Rivers, Que.

The monoplane North Star in which Miss Rasche hopes to fly to Germany left Hadley airport at South Plainfield, N. J., today piloted by Albrecht Oenemann for Canada, associates of Mrs. Stillman said. The exact destination of the plane was not announced.

Relatives Hunt for Druggist's Fortune

LOS ANGELES, Calif., June 25 (AP)—A search for the fortune of John I. Glab, former Cicero, Ill., druggist, who was shot to death at his suburban home last week, was being pressed today by a brother and a sister of the slain man.

Robinson Leads Vice Presidential Race; Farm Belt Delegates Reject Woolen

HOUSTON, TEXAS, June 25 (AP)—Shifting winds of pre-convention speculation today swept new names into the vice presidential race and gave added impetus to the boom of Senator Robinson of Arkansas.

Incoming delegations pumped wind into the sails of new candidates, whose names they attached to the already lengthy list of entries, but in the confusion there were accidents and some of the names were scratched.

Out of the quiet of Smith headquarters came intimations that Senator Robinson's name was favorably regarded by some of the leaders of that group, and that farm belt delegates looked cooly upon the boom that had moved the name of Evans Woollen of Indiana to the head of the list.

Hull of Tennessee also was looked upon favorably by many incoming delegates. Others felt that should Smith get first place on the ticket, Senator Robinson would add strength not to be spurned. They pointed to the Senate democratic leader as a man fully versed in the affairs of the party in Washington and as one who, because of his long familiarity with congressional procedure, would fit well in the vice presidential chair.

It was said, too, that Robinson is a veteran campaigner whose territory borders the stamping grounds of Curtis. He has met the vice presidential nominee of the republicans on an equal footing in the senate and would e able, they said, to carry the fight into the farm belt in addition to smoothing any rumpled feathers the south might raise.

Woollen, whose candidacy previously had seemed to be reaching promising proportions, drew the contention from the farm belt that his views on farm relief legislation might not aid in the fight for farm votes. Since Woollen is a banker, and not a seasoned political battler, belief was expressed that the campaign should find a practiced veteran of the Robinson type.

J. T. Robinson Named Permanent Head of Meeting

HOUSTON, Texas, June 25 (AP)—The democratic presidential nomination lay just around the corner tonight for Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York.

Meeting here to choose its standard bearer, the party's national convention will get together tomorrow at noon with a greater number of delegates committed to one man than at any time since 1916 when Woodrow Wilson was named by accalamation.

An insistent minority was doing battle against the New York governor tonight, but it was not a coordinated force. Its cry was for a dry candidate an da dry platform, but where the Smith ranks were the Smith ranks were solid for their man, the minority group apparently had been unable to set upon a unity of command or upon a leader to wage its warfare. The one purpose was to defeat Smith and to most of the delegates who came to Houston to prime the party for the 1928 campaign, that seemed to be forlorn hope.

The serenity with which the Smith forces faced the issue contrasted sharply with the bustling manner in which the opposition workers dashed about in the hot Texas sun today in their efforts to line up and hold one-third of the convention votes necessary to prevent the nomination of the man they had grouped against.

Three Groups Differ

There were three lines of thought over prohibition—one group wanted a plank naming the eighteenth amendment as a part of the constitution which should be rigidly enforced; a second believed the party should call for enforcement of all laws without specifying any one particular statute; a third asked that the Volstead act be modified.

To the political gossipers a choice subject was the attitude Governor Smith might take in the event the eighteenth amendment was singled out for especial attention. The Smith supporters, however, appeared to be unworried by this phase of the situation which had developed in Houston.

It was definitely determined today that Franklin D. Roosevelt would place Governor Smith in nomination and in addition would be the Smith field general during the convention. The dry and anti-Smith forces continued to look upon Gov. Dan Moody as the floor leader. Moody's arrival here gave impetus to the dry crusade and many of the delegates have already made him the unofficial gemeralmisso for their cause.

Bowers Temporary Chairman

The Houston convention gave unmistakable signs tonight of being a colorful one, regardless of whether the balloting is prolonged. The cool of the evening, beginning tomorrow night at 7 o'clock, was picked as the time for the temporary chairman, Claude Bowers, editorial writer for the New York Evening World, to sound the keynote for the democratic campaign. This will provide a night show, and will enable millions of radio listeners to sit comfortably in their homes to hear the keynoters toss the gauntlet in the face of the Republican party. Other night sessions probably will be held later in the week.

Tomorrow noon's session will be merely for the purpose of effecting a temporary organiation. It will be opened by Bishop S. R. Hay of the Methodist Episcopal church, South; Clem Shaver, chairman of the democratic national committee, will read the official call for the convention; the credentials, the resolutions and other committees will be appointed; the slate of officers will be made public and a recess will be taken until evening.

Robinson Possible Vice President

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas ,has been slated for permanent chairman of the convention and he will deliver his address on Wednesday. The Arkansas senator also has come strongly to the front as a possible choice for vice-presidential nomination.

On the eve of the opening of the convention Houston took on a real convention atmosphere today. Just a few blocks from the new Sam Houston Hall, built for the specific purpose of giving the democrats a meeting place, the thousands who will seek to gain entrance to the party gathering mixed with the other thousands and tens of thousands of Texans who held out hospitable hands to them.

But many of the delegates themselves were holding cauces in hot hotel rooms tonight to decide on a course of action in a convention which gave promise of furnishing a band wagon performance.

As The Curtain Rises

THE opening of the democratic convention in Houston finds the nomination of Alfred E. Smith for president practically conceded. The promised pyrotechnics have failed to materialize. Any battle which is staged will certainly concern the adoption of a platform, and not the presidential nominee.

The persistent dissenters within the ranks of the party have failed to disorganize the Smith supporters. The religious issue, so much heralded a year ago, has been little heard from aside from the bitter harangues of Senator Heflin, self appointed defender of protestantism in America. The astonishing dry speech of Jim Reed, who offered himself as a dry plank candidate, has won him ridicule but few votes.

The combined forces of the W.C.T.U., the Anti-Saloon league, and sundry similar militant organizations, have failed to convince the delegates that Smith is a menace. Whether the dry crusaders will be able to invoke sufficient brimstone to establish a dry plank in the platform constitutes the real issue of the convention.

Smith has declared that he will not be a candidate on a dry platform. He further announces that he favors enforcement of the constitution, but that he believes enforcement of the eighteenth amendment should be left to the states.

There is little doubt that the platform favored by Smith will be adopted. Smith is the only presidential possibility within the party, and the psychological effect of running him on the platform he himself advocates is worth consideration.

Furthermore, Smith's expressed attitude represents sound political judgment. The southern states are raising more disturbance about the liquor question than any other faction. The southern states are the original exponents of state's rights. The adoption of such a plan as Smith suggests will serve the double purpose of conciliating the southern states by offering them the principle for which they have labored so long, and the privilege of enforcing prohibition as strictly as they can, within their own state's borders.

If the democrats nominate Smith and adopt his platform, they will give the republicans a run for their money. If they do anything else, they do not deserve to win the election, and they won't.

Listen, Boys!

CHIEF of Police Charles F. Benda is trying to enforce city ordinance No. 386, which says that no person shall discharge any firearms, fireworks, firecrackers, torpedoes, Roman candles, skyrockets or any other pyrotechnic displays until notice is given by the mayor to do so.

Officials are not trying to stop boys' fun; they are trying to regulate it. Years of experience have taught these men that firecrackers and other such explosives are dangerous to both life and property. At this time of the year death, blindness, and severe burns result from the careless use of firecrackers.

So Iowa City boys should be careful.

It is, also, a good time for boys to test their self-control. They should remember that when the revolutionary fathers signed the Declaration of Independence, they did not want the freedom that went with it to be abused. They should try, also, to limit their celebration to the fourth of July, when, if they choose, they can pull dad out of bed at 5 o'clock, take him to the vacant lot, and together blow tin cans out of sight and wake all the neighbors.

City ordinance No. 386 is a safety first measure. It is in harmony with a general tendency throughout the country. Strict observance of it will undoubtedly save the Iowa City community from many serious accidents.

So let Iowa City boys be careful; let them obey the law; let safety always come first; and they will discover that July 4 this year was the biggest and best celebration they ever enjoyed.

It always works that way.

A Better Campaign

IT is a relief of some magnitude to find men in the present presidential campaign who are big enough and have nerve enough to say what they think about the important issues of the day.

Much of Roosevelt's popularity was due to just this quality of speaking out, so that the voter was left in no doubt as to where he stood on the issues. Woodrow Wilson was another leader of this type who took the voter into his confidence. Since his time, however, we have had too little of that kind of leadership.

When Leonard Wood was campaigning for the presidential nomination in 1920, for example, he praised the American woman, American Legion, and American churches; but that was about as definite as his ideas became. In his campaign literature and posters, the most his supporters would claim was that he stood for "honesty," a quality that it would seem should be taken for granted in a presidential candidate. In the Harding campaign of 1920 and the Coolidge campaign of 1924, the same tactics were employed. Glittering generalities were stressed while concrete statements of the candidates' or the party's position were carefully avoided.

Nothing is more disheartening and demoralizing to the voter than to have to vote in the dark. Nothing acts so powerfully as this to discourage interest in politics and public affairs and to keep people away from the polls. Clearly it is a fundamental principle in a democracy that the voters should know the views and positions of the candidates. The party which cannot or will not state its position so clearly that it cannot be misinterpreted is a degenerate party. It no longer has anything to offer the people. It has become an office seeking party, and should be abandoned.

The situation this year looks promising. Hoover has already made his position clear on farm relief and prohibition, which is gratifying whether one believes as he does or not. And Al Smith, who seems the assured standard bearer of the democrats, is a man noted for clear speaking, and has just reaffirmed his stand on prohibition.

If they will each keep up this fine attitude throughout the campaign, with what zest may the voter go to the polls in November to choose between them, knowing exactly what he is voting for!

The All-Revealing Ad

(From The Kewanee (Ill.) Star-Courier)

A century from now a file of the advertising pages of the newspaper and magazine of today would provide a complete history of the customs and characteristics of the period. These advertisements record what the people are wearing, the problems of the day, current thought, and the traits of the generation.

Pick up any issue of the family newspaper and there in word and picture is the story of the day. The advertisements have made the past an open book.

Picture a man in the year 2028 chancing upon a file of this newspaper for the year 1928. Turning to the advertising pages he would see arrayed before his eyes the styles in wearing apparel for men, women and children of 100 years ago. He would see the types of automobiles in use and from the number of automobile advertisements he would deduce that the automobile was in great favor and universal use. By the same reasoning he would learn that the radio was in great demand, even exceeding in popularity the phonograph and player piano.

Training in the art of sleuthing would not be necessary for this reader of the advertisements of the past to inform himself, from the cancer-cure ads, that cancer was a menace to the generation and, from other ads, that obesity and exceeding thinness concerned the public as greatly as the malignant cancer.

The advertisements are also a record of economic conditions, revealing market prices and estimating the supply and demand.

For the discerning contemporary reader the newspaper advertisements afford more interesting and valuable information than he can preserve for posterity.

GHOSTLY IMAGES

On a particularly dark, dark night
On the Iowa river road,
That leads (?) Well—
To the country club—
An exclusive party
Just two

A patch of white moonlight
On inky water,
Horrors!
A phantom canoe!

Two stars, high up—
Twinkling through the thick foliage
of a tree—
Ah, but two stars
Strangely close together,
Two eyes looking down!!

Then on the way back—
To round
This ghostly evening
Out nicely—
A Ghost!
Truly, unmistakably,
A ghost, departing
Through the door
Of the haunted house
Like a trail of thin white smoke.

Too much liquor, seeing things?
No, merely the Meanderings
Of a weary Phi Delt's mind,
Spookily out of control.

CRIME IN SCRIPT

Chapter II

Bang! Bang! O. Henry Peid turned the two leaves which constituted pages 41, 42, 43, and 44 of that ponderous tome "Rollo's Life Among the Northern Indians." He was not looking at the book at the time. He was looking out the window at the smoky city below. The smoky city below seemed to make a face at him and say: "What a blind detective you are, O. Henry Peid."

As these words of derision rang once, twice, and three times in his ears the great detective looked at the book. There, between pages 42 and 43, he found a crudely penciled note: "Your sister Willis Gravy will be found dead in the morning."

The detective pondered. Maybe his sister Willis would be found dead in the morning. But no, that could not be. He had no sister by the name of Willis Gravy. He had no sister at all. He was an orphan. What could be the sinister meaning behind that scrawl.

O. Henry Peid paused in his pondering and looked at the ceiling. The solution had come to him. Somebody's sister by the name of Willis Gravy would be found dead in the morning. He called for his pipe and a jigger of beer. He reeled in his tracks. A thought had struck him in the solar plexus. A cruel blow. O. Henry Peid suffered from pains in the small of the back and could not do his own washing. That thought had come too close.

"Watson," he shouted, "Call my garage and have Herman put my ball bearing skooter in condition. I am going to Arabia and drink White Horse Whisky."

The smoky city below looked at him again. This time it seemed to smile.

Five Nations Attempt to Rescue Nobile

(By The Associated Press)

Italy, Russia, Norway, Sweden and France were engaged in the effort to rescue Gen. Umberto Nobile from the Arctic ice fields and to locate the two groups of his crew which were separated from him when the dirigible Italia, returning from a flight over the North Pole, came down northeast of Spitzbergen on May 25.

Nobile and five of his crew were located on drifting ice near Foyn Island on June 8, when they got into radio communication with the Italia's supply ship, Cita di Milano, by radio from the gondola in which they were riding when [illegible] away from the dirigible [illegible]ning.

Dr. Finn Malmgren and [illegible] panions landed with them [illegible] 25, but left to try to walk [illegible] ice to North Cape, and ha[illegible] been heard from since. He[illegible] entertained for their safety.

The other seven members of crew drifted away with the ba[illegible]is the dirigible, which is believed [illegible]e have stranded on the ice pac[illegible] somewhere between Spitzbergen and Franz Josef Land.

France supplied a seaplane, with a crew of three, which set out June 20 from Tromsoe, Norway, with Capt. Roald Amundsen and a companion in quest of Nobile. This plane has not been heard from, and is being sought by the Svalbard, boat of the governor of Spitzbergen. France also has two warships in the region.

Russia has two icebreakers, with planes aboard, trying to break through to Nobile's rescue, and Italy has a third, the Braganza. Italy has two planes in the region, Sweden has four at King's Bay, Norway has two seaplanes on the Braganza.

The Nobile party was first sighted on the ice on June 20 by Major Maddalena of Italy, who dropped supplies from his plane. Maddalena and Major Penzo, another Italian aviator, flew over the party again on June 22.

Political Issues of 1928

This is the fifteenth of a series of articles on major issues of the coming campaign, prepared by the staff of the department of political science. They present an expert, unbiased analysis and clear explanation of current political problems, together with brief comments by men of national prominence. The subjects covered by these articles will be the main topics of discussion at the sixth annual Commonwealth Conference, to be held here July 9, 10, and 11.—Editor's Note.

OUR LATIN AMERICAN POLICIES

Ever since the Monroe Doctrine was announced more than 100 years ago it has been subjected to varying interpretations, and its status in international law has been the subject of much dispute. It should not be understood, however, that the Monroe Doctrine has ever been a political issue in the United States in the sense that some people have been in favor of it and others have been against it. Indeed, practically everyone in public life has been "in favor" of this doctrine—a fact that leads to some confusion in the public mind, particularly when it is observed that both political parties and leaders of different factions solemnly proclaim their adherence to the Monroe Doctrine.

But the Monroe Doctrine means different things to different people. To most persons it probably means at least that the United States will vigorously object to any European power attempting to interfere with, or to use armed force against, any of the Central or South American states. While this is no doubt a sound interpretation of the doctrine, it is not altogether adequate and satisfying.

Several Constructions

The Monroe Doctrine may be interpreted to mean that the United States will attempt to prevent European powers from getting any sort of foothold in the western hemisphere by purchasing territory or by gaining special concessions by means of treaties. It should not be construed to mean that we will not permit European states to exert pressure in order to gain satisfaction for injury or indignities visited upon their nationals in these countries. And it may or may not mean that we will object to European powers trying to collect public or private debts by force, be they just or unjust.

These and many other delicate questions arise under the Monroe Doctrine, and it is quite possible for men to agree in hearty approval of the doctrine and yet to differ widely as regards the proper interpretations to be put upon it. In this sense the Monroe Doctrine may constitute an issue in our domestic politics.

Extreme Attitude

There are some who go so far as to hold that the small states of Central America are to be looked upon virtually as protectorates of the United States. Such an extreme attitude, coupled with an insistence that European powers must keep out, involves an obligation on our part to interfere in order to redress wrongs, real or fancied, suffered by aliens living there. In order to avoid the more serious consequences, this policy suggests the wisdom of more or less constant intervention with a view to sidetracking these difficulties. Thus, at times we find the United States showing great concern when our citizens, or other aliens, get into trouble. We are particularly scrupulous about the performance of contracts and the protection of property. We are very solicitous that there should be stability and that a regime of law and order should prevail. Sometimes in our eagerness to bring about these desirable conditions we will recognize a new government which presently appears to lack the support of the people. This puts the United States in a most embarrassing position. Occasionally we give aid, direct or indirect, to one faction or another, believing it to be the one supported by the mass of the people, only to find that we are fomenting further revolution. This is all the more embarrassing because we have done much to prevail upon the Latin American states to agree among themselves that they will not recognize governments that come into power as the result of armed force and violence. And they have agreed among themselves not to recognize governments which have not been directly approved by the people at a general election.

Democrats Oppose Intervention

In the United States there are two extreme attitudes on all these matters. The traditional democrat is opposed to intervention. He wants the United States to keep hands off, to see to it that the European powers keep hands off, and to let these little states work out their own salvation. As to aliens within their jurisdiction, the traditional democrat would afford him only the barest guarantees of life, liberty, and property—the latter term being very strictly construed according to the la wof the particular state.

The people are inclined to believe that many of the contracts entered into by aliens with citizens of the Latin American states and with the governments themselves are contracts that will not bear investigation. They believe that these agreements are for the most part unfair, often arrived at through misrepresentation and fraud, and tainted with bad faith. Sometimes the contracts involve special concessions granted by officials who had doubtful authority. Hence the charge is frequently made that capitalists from the United States hoodwink the natives, bribe the government officials, secure grossly unfair contracts, and then call upon the United States to protect them in their ill-gotten gains and enforce performance of their contracts at the point of the bayonet.

Others Protest View

Others declare this to be a shameful misrepresentation of the facts. They say respectable business men go to the Latin American states to make legitimate investment of money, taking with them better standards of living, modern business methods, and general prosperity—work and wages for wretched people who have known nothing but squalor and misery. Greedy and unscrupulous public officials, and their political rivals, seeing the growing wealth of successful business men and corporations, sometimes seek to break their contracts, resort to various schemes of confiscation, and precipitate all sorts of trouble and confusion. The United States government, it is thought, ought to teach these Latin American people some lessons in business integrity, not only for their own good, but for the wellbeing of everyone who may have any dealings with them. To refrain from intervention under such circumstances is to abandon our own citizens in a way that no self-respecting government ought ever to countenance.

Ostensibly to avoid some of the troubles arising out of the situation the United States department of state has recently assumed the function of reviewing the terms of proposed private loans in certain foreign countries. Some of these proposed loans the state department will approve, others it will not approve, depending largely upon conditions prevailing in the country where the loan is to be made. This practice on the part of the state department has aroused a storm of protest from opponents of the Coolidge administration.

The Crime In The Crypt

CHAPTER 26

Guests

The guests, so far as I could observe, saw nothing of it. They paid little heed to me, though always polite and gracious.

As to Vera herself, I couldn't make out.

She showed, of course, no especial interest in me or in my doings. And yet she was disturbed over something. She was restless,—she who was made for calm; she was nervous,—she whose gracious composure was the delight of all who knew her.

She was,—I couldn't believe it at first, but I had to admit it finally, she was frightened.

When I discovered that I set myself to work to learn what was causing her fear.

But I could find nothing, absolutely nothing.

A rich girl, engaged to a rich man. A deeply emotional nature, plighted to a man she loved and a man who loved her. An outlook of a sunshiny life without so much as a crumpled roseleaf to mar its serenity.

Her prospective mother-in-law loved her, and she would as a bride soon be a wonderful chatelaine for the beautiful home of the Clevedons.

No, I could find no indication or a flaw in the future happiness of Vera Liddell, and surely nothing that could frighten or trouble her.

Yet, she was anxious or worried about something.

Most of the gay party would not notice it. John gave no evidence of noticing it. Ner did his mother, nor Mimi, nor any one under the roof of Clevedon House, save only myself. I tried to reason that I was over solicitous, that I imagined trouble where there was none, but I couldn't get away from my forebodings.

Saturday and Sunday passed. The days were filled with pleasant gayety, and the guests hastened from one amusement to another.

Mrs. Clevedon's new maid was still with her, though Nurse Plum confided to me that she wouldn't last long. She was, it seemed, too curious and had prying ways.

It was Mimi who announced her departure.

"Well, Berenice has hopped off," the flapper said, as, on Monday morning, some of us were grouped on the verandah.

"Who is Berenice?" Elaine Shaw asked.

"Mrs. Clevedon's maid," Mimi returned. "She was too snoopy, so Mrs. Clevedon had to fire her."

"Mimi, dear, don't gossip," Vera said, with a languid reproach.

"But it's true. It seems Berenice was poking about in the box under the bed, you know, those big boxy things that roll in and out on casters. And in that box Mrs. Clevedon keeps some of her choicest things, fans and scarves and parasols or whatever. And I suppose Berenice wanted to see the pretty things—anyway Mrs. Clevedon caught her at it, so now theer's no more Berenice. Anybody know of a good ladies maid who wants a place?"

Nobody did, and I sighed as I foresaw another round of advertising and receiving applicants.

"I'm going to maid her, till she gets somebody," Mimi announced. "That is, as long as I'm here. Nurse Plum hates me, and that makes it all the more exciting. But I love to fix people's hair and make up their complexions for them, and then maybe I can snoop out a scarf or a parasol."

As Mrs. Clevedon was present and listening to this tirade, she smiled and shook her head at Mimi.

Then she said, "You'll get a pretty parasol and scarf, too, if you'll look after me just a little, for a few days. Nurse Plum has somebody in view for me, but she can't come until Thursday. And I'll be glad to have a maid of Plum's selection, then she can't find fault with her."

"All right, ducky lady," Mimi sang out. "I'll be your henchman for the present and I'll lead Miss Marthy a dance! She'll be sorry she didn't let me die of my measles!"

"Oh, Mimi, do behave," said Vera, laughing, not so much at the words as at the antics of the girl.

"And, now," Mimi went on, "I'm going down to the village to get a permanent. I didn't have time before I left home. Who wants to go with me?"

"I do," said Dicky Dunn, promptly.

"You don't count. Anyone else?"

"I do," I said. "That is, I'd like to go to the village, and I've some errands to do while you get curled up."

"All right, and then we'll meet again, and you can give me some ice cream sodas and then we'll come home."

We started off, just Mimi and Dunn and myself, leaving the others to a game of golf.

I left Mimi at the hairdresser's and Dunn said, he'd hang around the shop, so I went off about my business.

Two hours later, which was the time I was ordered to report, I collected Mimi and her swain, and we went for the prescribed sodas.

Mimi drank an astonishing number of them, for she said it was hot, dry work getting a permanent.

Her brown hair stood out wildly on all sides, and I wondered afresh why girls thought such curls pretty or attractive.

I remembered this was the sort of curls the unfortunate Hilda had, these wisps, like tiny corkscrews.

Mimi saw me studying it and laughed.

"It always looks horrid the first day," she said. "And I didn't have it set, I can do it better myself. Just you wait till you see it after I've put it into shape!"

"I'm sure it's beautiful," I told her hastily and mendaciously.

She had no hat on, and looking into the mirror that faced her as she sat at the soda counter, she began picking at her newly made curls, and frowning at her own reflection.

Two or three bits of string fell from her head or neck into her lap, and she gathered them up, laughing.

The most primitive place, that barber's," she exclaimed. "You should have seen them struggling with the cords!"

"What are the cords for?" I asked, idly, taking the scraps she thrust at me because she wanted to get rid of them.

"Oh, they're part of the performance," she said. "You should have gone in with me. Every man ought to see a permanent wave put in once in his life! He'd never wish he was a woman after that!"

"Do they tie the curls?" I asked, stuffing her rubbish in my pocket, for the tearoom where we were was immaculate.

"Yes, of course. Then they roast you in an electric heater,—oh, it's indescribable! The first time I had it done, I yelled like a house afire. But now I'm used to it."

"But why have it at all?" I persisted. "Why not soft natural curls like your sisters?"

Mimi withered me with a glance of deepest scorn.

"Natural your grandmother!" she said. "That's a permanent of Vera's, only it's been properly set."

I gave up, then. If Vera's curls were artificial, why then I preferred artificial curls to any other kind, and that was that.

We went on home, and it was not till I reached my own room that I remembered the scraps Mimi had given me, and I emptied my pocket into the waste basket.

At luncheon that day, the conversation turned on old times.

Mrs. Clevedon was interested and told funny anecdotes of John's capers as a small child.

The other laughed politely, though the stories were not so very amusing, but Clevedon himself seemed to me annoyed.

One or two of his mother's questions, he pretended not to hear, though I was certain he did hear them.

I thought he was silly and self-conscious to mind the little yarns his mother spun about his nursery days, which were harmless if vapid.

At last she repeated a question, more loudly.

"John, dear," she said, "what was the name of the dog that rescued you when you fell into the lake?"

"Carlo," he said, smiling at her.

"Nonsense, we never had a dog named Carlo."

"Oh, yes we did, mother dear. Don't you remember? A big Newfoundland—"

"But I mean the one who pulled you out of the lake by your little kilted skirt. You wore dresses then."

"Oh, that dog. Yes, what was his name now?"

"You can't have forgotten! His picture hangs in your room—"

"Oh, yes, old Nero, wasn't it?"

"No, it wasn't Nero. I don't see how you can forget it."

"But you've forgotten it—"

"Yes, but I'm growing forgetful."

"So am I. Anyway I can't recall that dog's name. Let it go, it will come to me later, and then I'll tell you."

Mrs. Clevedon said no more about it, but all through the rest of the meal, she was distrait and seemed to be trying to remember the dog's name.

John looked at her regretfully now and then, and I was sorry for him. He always hated to have his mother annoyed, and I knew if he could remember the dog's name he would tell her at once.

But after lunch, other matters cropped up and I think she forgot the incident. Yet when I went up to the study, I found John looking at the back of the framed picture of a dog.

"I hate to have mother bothered," he said, as I entered, "but for the life of me, I can't think of that dog's name. I thought it might be written on the back, but it isn't. And I've no way to find out. Not a servant here now was here when I was in the nursery! How does she expect a kid of three or four years to remember the name of his dog?"

"Forget it, John," I said. "I mean forget the incident, as you've forgotten the dog. She'll never think of it again—"

"Oh, won't she? She'll never let up on it till she gets the dog's name in full. She's funny that way."

"People grow like that as they get older," I said. "Take my advice and don't let the thing bother you. If she asks you again, tell her you don't know it, and let it go at that."

"I'll try it on. And maybe the fool dog's name will come to me. I think now it was Prince or Duke,—some such name as that."

"I say, Clevedon, do you know Vera's curls are not natural curls?"

He stared at me as if I had taken leave of my sense.

"What do you mean?"

"What I say. They are made with hot irons, and I'm so surprised."

"Oakley, you'll be the death of me yet!" Sitting down, Clevedon went off into peals of laughter. "What if they are made with hot irons? Of course, they are. I doubt if any girl has natural curls these days. They use hot irons from babyhood up, and the natural curl is burned out of the hair. But what's it to you?"

"Not a thing,—only it surprised me. You see, Vera's curls look natural. Mimi's don't."

"Oh, Mimi. She's a youngster, and she doesn't know how to fix herself up prettily, as Vera does."

"No, she sure doesn't," I agreed.

A Silent Sufferer

Wheat Continues Fall

Harvest Increase, Halt in Exporting Lower Grain Prices

CHICAGO, June 25 (AP)—With the movement of newly-harvested wheat increasing southwest and with a noticeable halt in export demand, wheat values today underwent a material setback. Weather northwest was favorable, and selling came chiefly from that section and from houses with connections in Europe.

Wheat closed weak, 1⅞ to 1¾c net lower. Corn finished ⅛c to 1¼c off, oats varying from ⅛@¼c decline to 1c advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12c.

Particular attention was given in various quarters today to the fact that despite stormy weather new wheat is reaching Kansas terminals now with rather surprising freedom. For example, Wichita, Kan., reported that today's receipts there totaled 140 cars. This circumstance was coupled with knowledge that export business in wheat from North America today amounted to only 300,000 bu. Meawhile talk too was current that a turn to unfavorable weather northwest would be requisite if advances were to be sustained.

Disappointment that the corn visible supply decrease of 1,948,000 bu. today was not larger had a bearish effect on the corn market. Earlier the market showed an upward trend, influenced by talk of better demand from feeders and of too much rain, whereas higher temperatures and dry weather now are desired. Oats followed corn, except that oats for July delivery were strongly in request.

New York Bonds Sink to Lowest Level During Year

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)—The bond market was dull and listless today. Prices sagging to levels around the minimum of the year. Only about $9,000,000 worth of bonds changed hands, less than the $12,000,000 public offering of Republic of Panama 35-year 5 per cent, sinking fund bonds which bankers reported over-subscribed early in the day at 96¾ plus interest.

Industrials especially were under pressure. Pierce Arrow 8's, slumped nearly 4 points. General Motors acceptance 6's declined to the year's low and losses were shown by Bowman Biltmore 7's, Dodge Brothers 6's, Loew's 6's ex-warrants, Anaconda Copper 6's, International match 5's and others. In the face of this general heaviness, Pathe exchange 7's with warrants and Republic Iron & Steel 5½'s advanced a point each.

Rails were irregular. St. Paul 5's of 1975 gained fractionally and the 5's of 2,000 sagged an equal amount. Canadian Pacific debenture 4's and Central of Georgia 6's reached new lows for the year. Wabash 4½'s, St. Louis & San Francisco 4's and most of the New York traction issues also closed lower. Katy's 5's, Katy 5½'s, Northern Pacific 5's, and Atlantic Coast Line 4½'s, advanced against the trend.

The foreign list was steady, with a number of Italian issues prominent active at higher levels. Stabilization of the franc had no noticeable effect upon French issues.

U. S. government obligations were inclined to heaviness, although third Liberty 4¼'s and treasury 4¼'s made small gains.

Automobile Man Optimistic Over Sales Conditions

"A 20 percent increase in sales over 1927 for the General Motor's company in the state of Iowa indicates that the buying power of the Iowa farmer doesn't express hard times," said R. L. DeGree, who as supervisor of the Davenport district, was here yesterday.

"With a car production of over one half million since the first of the year members of the sales personell of General Motors have every reason to be optomistic," asserted Mr. Degree last night in his room at a local hotel.

"Of course dealers throughtout this state are buying cautiously at this particular season," admitted DeGree, "but that is due mostly to the anticipation concerning a change in the models of the cars."

"No, I do not care to express my views on the subject of new models. As a matter of fact I can't for I know nothing more about it than any outsider," declared the automotive man.

Mr. DeGree was accompanied on the trip by M. C. Swan, Dayton, Ohio, salesman, and W. R. Doud, of Victor.

Epinosa Eclipses Fine Golf Field

KANSAS CITY, June 25 (AP)—Al Epinosa, Chicago pro, who got a fine workout but no glory in the recent celebrated national open at Olympia Fields, Chicago, completely eclipsed the fine field in the second round of the /Mid-American Open Golf tournament at Lakewood today, and ended with 142, six strokes in the lead.

Aided by a hole-in-one on the 145-yard fifth, Epinosa burned up the wooded course to shear four from par with his 68, which set a new course record. He was two under par with a 33 going out, and doubled that lead coming home in 35.

Leo Diegel, White Plains, N.Y., was second with 148, his 74 today matching that of yesterday, both being 2 above par 72.

The errant international threat in the national open still threatening here with Archie Compston of England third with 149, and Aubrey Boomer, France, fourth with 150. Compston carded 37-40-77. Today, while Boomer had 37-38-75 to match yesterday's score. Compston shot par golf in the opening round.

Trailing far behind were the muffled big guns of the tournament, Johnny Farrell, the new national open champion, Walter Hagen, the British Open champion, and Gene Sarazen, British open runnerup.

Hagen took 42-39-81 to run his total to 155.

Farrell, who with Sarazen arrived late today and played 36 holes to catch up with the field, wound up his third day of 36 hole tournament playing with his fifth of torrid competition with 153 in a 7-way tie for ninth place.

Sarazen took 39-42-81—163.

The sixty qualifiers will play the final 36 holes tomorrow.

Record Falls as Iowa Grants 276 Athletic Awards

Eight Men Win "I" in 2 Sports; Frosh Look Good

A record for number of awards granted to athletes in the ten branches of sport was set at the University of Iowa in 1927-28, according to figures which reveal the total number as 276.

The former record was 265, made by the grants of the athletic council in 1926-27. In 1925-26, the figure was 226, and the year previous, 194.

Seventy-six major and thirty-two minor letters were awarded. Freshmen won 168 numeral sweaters.

8 Two Major Sport

The two sport athletes were E. W. Nelson, Cherokee; F. J. Cuhel, Cedar Rapids; F. E. Roberts, Knoxville; and L. J. Hagerty, Blanchard, football and track; W. A. Glassgow, Shenandoah, football and baseball; L. E. Hunn, Davenport, cross country and track; and F. F. Twogood, Westfield; and Virgil David, Oskaloosa, basketball and baseball.

One major and one minor letter were won by J. M. Gilchrist, Keosauqua, wrestler and football man; and J. A. Moulton, Council Bluffs, track and cross country. G. E. Johnstone, Boone, and C. F. Lauer, Wilmette, Ill., earned minor letters in both footboll and basketball.

Winning of numerals in three sports was the unusual feat of three freshmen. Oran H. Pape, Dubuque, earned his awards in football, basketball, and track; while L. A. Reedquist, Ottumwa, and I. L. Nelson, Omaha, Neb., were proficient in football, basketball, and baseball.

14 Two Sport Frosh

Fourteen freshmen were good enough in two sports to earn the numeral. These men were R. M. Mecum, Quincy, Ill.; T. G. Smith, Los Angeles, Calif.; and M. Farroh, Michigan City, Ind., football and track; P. S. Cummins, Cedar Rapids; F. B. Mitchell, Highmore, S. D.; S. C. Leeka, Independence, Mo.; and G. E. Rogge, Ida Grove, football and basketball; W. H. Everingham, Fort Madison; T. J. Kelly, Parnell; B. M. Turner, Anita; and M. A. Hakes, Laurens, track and cross country; F. H. Geneva, Albia, basketball and track; H. B. Musgrove, St. Louis, Mo., basketball and baseball; and I. A. Lowell, Webster City, wrestling and swimming.

Iowa City Golfers Tie With Grinnell

Driving rain and cold winds failed to dampen the sporting ardor of Grinnell golfers who motored 75 miles Sunday morning in order to meet the Iowa City golf club in their annual tournament.

The 22 visitors were entertained by thesame number of local golf enthusiasts at the country club at dinner and supper.

The course was too soggy to result in brilliant scores, and the final tally was 18 all. Prizes for high and low score were won by the Grinnell women players. None were offered for the men.

Next Sunday a return match will be played on the Grinnell course.

Hunter Loses in First Round Play; Teammates Place

WIMBLEDOM, England, June 25 (AP)—America's invading tennis stars bidding for the English championship lost one of their doughtiest warriors in the opening round of play today when Francis T. Hunter was eliminated by young Ed Andrews of New Zealond, a student at Cambridge 6-4, 5-7, 6-4, 12-6, 7-5.

All the other seeded players including William T. Tilden, Johns Hennessey and the French "three musketteers" came through the first round with comparative ease as did America's younger stars.

The defeat of Hunter stood out as the dramatic high spot of the day.

The five set fight provided as many thrills as any Wimbledon match in recent years. For nearly three hours the lanky British colonial and the stocky, powerful American fought under a broiling sun as if their lives depended on each point.

Although only 22 and comparatively inexperienced in international play, "Buster" Andrews who holds the championship of New Zealand, played brilliontly, proving particularly devasting at the net.

The gallery become wildly excited cheering and applauding every point as Andrews raced into a 3-0 lead in the final set.

The grim faced Hunter, rallied and took the count to 5-4 only to have Andrews pull level.

Tilden, scored a smashing victory over M. V. Summerson, youthful English player, 6-0, 6-1, 6-0. Hennessey downed E. Mather, English enfrant 6-1, 60, 6-2. And George Lott was not extended in winning from the middle aged London doctor, F. Crossbie, 6-2, 6-0, 6-0.

Wilbur Cohen, 16 year old member of the American team, defeated the Danish cup player, Alex Petersen, 7-5, 6-3, 6-3.

Cuhel, Baird Leave Friday for Trials

Gordon, Hunn, Lapp, Gunn Go East Monday

Six University of Iowa athletes will seek membership on the American Olympic team if the tentative plans of Coach George T. Bresnahan carry through.

Frank J. Cuhel, 400-meter hurdles; George H. Baird, 400-meter dash; and Edward L. Gordon, broad jump, and hop, step, and jump are certain entries in the final trials at Boston and Philadelphia. Leonard E. Hunn, 3000-meter steeplechase; Joe F. Gunn, 800-meter run; and Vernon W. Lapp, hammer throw are other possible entries for the Boston tryouts.

Cuhel, Baird Leave Friday

Since the trials in the 400-meter dash and the 400-meter hurdles are to be held in Philadelphia, Cuhel and Baird will leave Friday for the eastern city.

Cuhel's race last Saturday in which he broke the recognized world's mark in the hurdles stamps him as a possible winner of this event. The :53.4 seconds that it took the Iowa hurdler to cover the sticks equals the best time made this year at other meets. Baird, who ran the 400-meters 2-10 of a second faster than the American record, looks good for a place on the American squad.

Gordon Should Place

Gordon, the other positive entry, has done better in the broad jump this year than any other athlete in the country and seems likely to land a berth on the team in that event. If he fails to make it in the broad jump he will still have a chance in the hop, step and jump.

Hunn's time in the steeplechase was within ten seconds of the mark which won the final trials for the Yankee team in 1924. Gunn made a great showing against Conger, leading him until the last 25 yards in the 800-meter run. Lapp hurls the hammer 148 feet, 8 2-5 inches.

Gordon, Hunn, Lapp and Gunn will leave next Monday for the Boston trials July 6 and 7.

Medart Leads in Trans-Mississippi Golf Tournament

DES MOINES, June 25 (AP)—W. S. Medart of St. Louis shot 76 to lead a field of 240 amateur mid-west golfers in the qualifying round of the trans-Mississippi tournament at Wakonda club today. Par on this course is 74.

Seven others kept their scores below 80. Included in these is Arthur Bartlett of Ottumwo who shot 78. With him on this count are Bob McCrary, Des Moines; Jimmie Manion, St. Louis; Morton Benedict and E. H. Cuettel, Kansas City.

Johnny Goodman of Omaha the defending champion, trailed with a score of 82. Goodman was shooting about 10 strokes regular performance. Experts laid this to the heavy wind that was blowing throughout this round.

The predicted score for qualification is 162 for 36 holes and if Goodman is to earn a chance to defend his title in the finals his golf will have to improve appreciably.
