Hurricane Veers Inland; Sweeping Southern Georgia

Florida Isolated for 150 Miles Along Northwest

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 14 (AP)—After isolating a 150 mile strech of the northwest Florida coast on its journey up the Gulf of Mexico last night, Florida's latest tropical storm veered inland with hurricane force today and tonight was blowing across Southern Georgia toward the Atlantic ocean.

Thomasville, Cairo, Quitman, and other extreme Southern Georgia towns felt the approach of the disturbance which the weather bureau believe was attended by winds of 60 to 70 mile velocity. It was believed the center would pass in the vicinity of Thomasville late tonight.

Intensity Increases

Sudden emergence of the storm from the Gulf of Cedar Keys in Northwest Florida together with its seemingly increased intensity bolstered the theory that the center passed so far out in the gulf last night at Tampa and St. Petersburg that those cities felt merely a lashing from the eastern edge.

Wire communications into the new storm area rapidly were going down before the advance of the gale but first reports said the damage apparently would be greater than that done by last week's storm which followed virtually the same course. Cairo on the Georgia Florida border sent word that business virtually had been demoralized by the gale and driving rains. Quitman was darkened at noon and a high wind already had done more damage to crops than did the storm last week. Barometers fell rapidly throughout the area, warning the residents to prepare for the gale.

Communication in a section of the Florida coast reaching from above Cedar Keys to a point west of Apalachicol was paralized. Little fear for that section was felt, however, since indirect reports from some of the coast towns said that small damage was done. At Panama City, Port Town 25 miles west of Apalchicol, storm warnings had been taken down.

Rains Accompany Storc

Torrential rains accompanied the advance of the storm, bringing flood threat to lowlands in Northern Ulorida and Southern Georgia, where highways were badly washed last week and where repairs to lines of communications have barely been made.

Meanwhile, the Lake Okeechobee flood conditions held the spotlight in Florida, where other sections were recuperating from the two blows within one week. The water level in the lake itself was said to be slowly rising, with prospect of receiving a fresh deluge when the new flood crest will bear down into the great reservoir. Unofficial reading of the water guage in the lake was 17 feet, within one foot of danger from overflow which would inundate a strech of country from Okeechobee City around the western shores of the lake to the vicinity of Labelle.

Mystery Death of Lowenstein Grows Following Analysis

PARIS, Aug. (AP)—The international mystery of the death of Capt. Alfred Lowenstein, Belgia financier, while crossing the English channel in his private airplane on July 4, today entered another phase when it was unofficially reported that toxic matter had been found in the viscera of his body.

After Lowenstein's body was found on July 19 Doctor Paul, chief chemical analyst for the surete generale, the French Scotland Yard, undertook an exhaustive autopsy at the request of members of Lowenstin's family. It was said at the courthouse in Boulogne, according to Le Matin, today that expert's report, which wil not be made public, reveals "the existance of traces of a very characteristic toxic matter" in the viscera.

The toxicologist's report will be forwarded to the court in Brussels which will conduct an inquiry into the disappearance and death of the financier. Should the report lead to a reopening of the investigation it is likely to have diplomatic as well as judicial remifications since the body was recovered outside of the territorial waters of either England or France.

McGregor School Conducts Program

MCGREGOR, Aug. 14 (AP)—Members of the Iowa state board of conservation joined with the American wild life school in conducting a program here today.

E. W. G. Saunders, chairman of the board, addressed the school tonight. Citizens of McGregor and Marquette conferred with the board on a proposal to create a state park near Marquette on a tract having a large number of Indian mounds.

White Denies Retracting Any Smith Charges

NEW YORK, Aug. (AP)—William Allen White, Kansas editor who recently made numerous charges against Governor Smith, denied in a cablegram to Former Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas, that he had ever retracted any of his charges. The cablegram follows:

"In my case against Governor Smith, I have made no detraction. On the prostitution issue I proved my case, got a conviction and suspended the sentence. I only did this because that I felt that a debate on the subject of harlotry was not worthy of a presidential campaign. But if Governor Smith tries to wisecrack his way out of his record I shall come back at him with the proven evidence.

"The complete photostatic transcript of the Smith record is in New York, and I will order it produced if the democratic candidate acts up."

In a statement issued on July 31 White said he had learned that Governor Smith was "deeply agrieved that I should charge him with protecting gambling and prostitution in his assembly record."

"I can understand," said Mr. White's statement, "after considering what Mr. Lippman said, that the governor in casting those votes against those reform bills might honestly have felt that the bills were unconstitutional, or were not enforcable or infringed upon personal liberty or encouraged police blackmail.

"But Governor Smith is certainly entitled to fair treatment. I decide to withdraw the charges formally so far as they affect his votes or gambing and prostitution but not his position as to the saloon."

Pettison Charges Broker of Fraud

Stelle Finds Shortage of $2,00,000 in Firm's Funds

CHICAGO, Aug. 14 (AP)—A new shortage of $2,000,000 was charged against Roy C. Toombs, investment broker and insurance company head, today by Clarence A. Stelle, vice-president of the investment concern of Toombs and Daily.

Toombs is free under a $10,000 bond after being arrested Saturday on an embezzlement charge resulting from the alleged disappearance of $3,500,000 in assets from the International Life Insurance company at St. Louis, of which Toombs is president.

Asa result of Stelle's charge, Judge William N. Gemmill of the superior court appointed the Foreman Trust and Savings bank as receiver for the firm of Toombs and Daily. Stelle asked the appointment in a petition charging Toombs with frauds which he said resulted in the exhaustion of the assets of the firm.

He declared he was informed that Toombs entered into a scheme in March, 1927, to gain control of the International Life Insurance company and that, with knowledge of the board of directors of Toombs and Daily, he used his office with the investment firm to further his plans in the insurance company.

Refused Further Business in Iowa

DES MOINES, Aug. 14 (AP)—By order of Judge S. O. Franklin title to securities of the International Life Insurance company amounting to $1,910,050, was transferred today to Ray Yenter, state insurance commissioner, as a protection for Iowa policy holders.

The company was also enjoined from doing any further business in the state of Iowa and a temporary receivership was asked. A hearing on the receivership is scheduled for Friday morning before Judge Lester Thompson.

Hoover to Give Major Attention to Farm Chiefs

Parades, Rallies, to Mark Program for Nominee

CEDAR RAPIDS, Aug. 14 (AP)—Farm delegations will receive major attention from Herbert Hoover when the republican presidential nominee visits Cedar Rapids, E. Spangler, chairman of the local reception committee, revealed today in announcing plans approved in Chicago by James W. Good, western campaign manager.

Labor representatives and newspaper editors throughout the middle west also have conferences scheduled with Mr. Hoover and prominent republican leaders are to speak in a series of mass meetings here.

Mr. Hoove is scheduled to arrive here at 9:45 a. m. Aug. 22, the day after his address at West Branch, the candidate's birthplace and boyhood home.

Children to Parade

First on the program is a parade, to be participated in by some 10,000 Iowa children, which Mr. and Mrs. Hoover are to review at Brucemore, estate of Mrs. G. H. Douglas, where their headquarters will be located.

Another parade, of an industrial and agricultural nature following on the next afternoon is to include the nominee in the line of march, as well as Governor John Hammill of Iowa and a number of congressmen and senators.

Iowa Delegates to Confer

Iowa farm delegates are to be met from 4 to 5:30 p. m., Aug. 23, with a labor delegation following. Earlier in the afternoon he is to receive editors of agricultural journals of Iowa and daily and weekly papers.

Most of Hoover's program for Aug. 23 is to be devoted to farm delegations, with representatives of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, and Tennessee to be received in the morning and farmers from Missouri, Oklahoma, the Dakotas, Kansas, Michigan, Nebraska, and Wisconsin to occupy to the afternoon.

Republican rallies with prominent republicans as speakers are planned for both evenings, but Mr. Hoover is not expected to attend either.

Thousands of flags are to be flown in downtown Cedar Rapids as part of the decorations.

Reports that relatives of Mr. Hoover were seeking to buy the little cabin at West Branch in which he was born today brought an announcement from Mrs. Jennie Scellers, the owner, that the property is not for sale. A dispatch to the Gazette Republican said that it was certain that the deal will not go through.

Virginia Institute Considers Relief

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Aug. 14 (AP)—The farm relief problem was discussed tonight before the University of Virginia distitute of public affairs by Representative L. W. Dickinson of Iowa, one of the farm bloc leaders in the house, and Evans Wollen of Indianapolis, Indiana's favorite son for the democratic presidential nomination at the Houston convention.

Representative Dickinson endorsed Herbert Hoover for president but at the same time advocated the equalization fee which he said was opposed by the republican sandard bearer.

The Iowan characterized the farm relief problem as the outstanding issue in the presidential campaign. He added that middlewestern agricultural sections were unwilling to support Smith who is a "representative of the east."

Mr. Wollen declared that farm problem cannot be "solved overnight by a single piece of legislation" and argued that instead of farm relief the farmers be given "equality of opportunity."

The protective tariff has "borne unduly upon the farmer," Wollen said, and the 1922 tariff rates the last to be enacted, further increased "the lack of equilibrium between agriculture and industry." The farmer also had a heavier tax burden, he added, paying ten per cent on his income in taxes in comparison to six per cent by the remainder of the population.

Norman Thomas to Speak

DES MOINES, Aug. 14 (AP)—In anticipation of an audience too large to be accomodated in a hall engaged for the address of Norman Thomas, socialist presidential candidate, Thursday night here, I. S. McCrillis, state secretary of the party, announced that McAlester Coleman, socialist candidate for U. S. senator, in New York, Augustus Claassens, assemblyman was barred from the New York legislature several years ago, and Mr. Thomas would address "over-flow" meetings on the Des Moines river front.

Slayer of Woman Held; Waits Trial

State Will Ask Death Penalty; Jury Acts Fast

CHICAGO, Aug. 14 (AP)—David Shanks, negro bootblack, whom police say confessed slaying Jennie Constance, Peoria educator, today was arraigned, bound over to the grand jury and indicated within the space of a few hours.

Prosecutors said evey effort would be made to set an early date for the trial and that the death penalty would be asked.

Shanks was arrested last night by Evanston police after they had traced a wrist watch which belonged to the victim. The bootblack readily confessed the slaying, police said.

Asks Manslaughter

Although illiterate, the negro objected to the charge of murder. "It ought to be manslaughter, your honor, because when I left her she was not dead," he said.

A short time later a true bill charging Shanks with murder was reported voted by a grand jury in a hearing that required only 30 minutes.

"A swift trip to the electric chair will be Shank's portion," said assistant States Attorney Thomas Dillon

Members of the Evanston's negro section, incensed over the crime by one of there race, voiced demands for a speedy trial and the maximum penality for Shanks, through Dr. Herbert A. Turner, president of the Chicago branch of the national association for the advancement of the colored people.

Shank's arrest was brought about through the sale of his victim's wrist watch to his employer's son, Lebert Bastian, who took it to a jeweler to have the initials "J.M.C." changed to his own. The slayer said he sold the watch for $1.19, which was all he obtained from his crime.

Five Responsible for Arrest

Chief of Police William Free of Evanston was given most of the credit for the arrest. Returning from a vacation two days after the crime was committed, the chief said: "Sooner or later that watch will reach a jewelry or pawn shop and when it does—then we'll get our man."

Miss Constance, the victim, was head of the English department of Bradley Polytechnic institute in Peoria. She was attending Northwestern university as a summer student to obtain a degree of doctor of phiosophy. Last Tuesday night she had gone to the university library leaving at 10 p.m.. When she started for home and was struck down about a block from her destination.

Detective O. E. Carroll is in Cedar Rapids attending a three day annual convention of the Iowa Police Chiefs' association.

Plant Wrecked by Explosion in Hammond, Ind

HAMMOND, Ind., Aug. 14 (AP)—An explosion, believed to be of incendiary origin, today wrecked the plant of the Indiana Sanitary Pottery company causing damages estimated at $250,000. Police were unable to enter the building because of fire that broke out immediately after the blast, but it is believed that no one was in the building.

The plant was closed on Saturday because of a labor dispute between its operators and employers, and police are now investigating the theory that the plant was blown up by plotters.

U. G. Newar, brother of the president and an official in the company, left the plant shortly before the explosion. He stated that there was no one in the building when he left.

It was first reported that from 8 to 15 had perished in the explosion, but a checkup revealed the fact that no one was working in the factory at the time of the blast.

A complete investigation will be made as soon as the fire has subsided, police and authorities of the company stated tonight. Police after conference with officials of the company, said they did not believe that there was anything in the factory that could have caused the explosion.

Factions Contest Sunday Movies

AMES, Aug. 14 (AP)—Two factons in Ames Sunday theater fight were today preparatory to renewing Thursday the contest which both anticipate will reach the Iowa supreme court and may later be laid before the state legislature.

Fined $75 last week for two violations on the Sunday closing ordinance, Joe Gerbracht, manager of the Ames Theater Co., will appear Thursday before Mayor F. H. Schleiter to ask appeal to the district court. Gerbracht, who claims good faith when he reopened July 29 after passage of a new ordinance by the Ames city council.

He is prepared to fight the case through the supreme court. The anti-Theater group will base its fight upon an old city ordinance.

The legally of the new theater ordinance passed by the city council it July is disputed by Mayor F. H. Schleiter, over whose veto it was passed, partially on the ground that one of the councilmen who voted for the measure was illegally elected to fill a vacancy.

Both sides are confident of victory, but the theater group has indicated that an adverse decision in the supreme court, upholding the Iowa blue law, would affect every community in the state and open the way for united effort by theaters and other business interests to secure appeal of the law by legislature.

"Cal" to Address Legion Meeting

President Approves Hoover Speech, Flood Plan

SUPERIOR, Wis., Aug. 14 (AP)—Scheduled to address the Wisconsin state convention of the American Legion at Wausau tomorrow morning, an overnight rail trip from the summer white house confronted President Coolidge today.

Accompanied by Mrs. Coolidge and his son, John, the chief executive had arranged to stay in Wausau only two hours, leaving again immediately after his speech to be back at Cedar Island lodge in time for dinner tomorrow.

Before the hour set for leaving Superior Mr. Coolidge found time today to congratulate Secretary Hoover upon his speech of acceptance last Saturday, and also to approve the report of the Mississippi flood control board recommending that the flood control project prepared last December by Maj. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, chief of army engineers, be carried out without alterations.

Coolidge Wires Hoover

To Mr. Hoover President Coolidge telegraphed:

"Your speech of acceptance ranks very high in political discussion. I congratulate you upon it and upon the reception which has been given to it by the country."

The Mississippi board report discarded entirely the flood control plans submitted last November by the Mississippi river commission on the grounds that this project was drawn up to withstand a flood only as great as that of 1927. General Jadwin's plan, which last May was incorporated in the Mississippi flood relief legislation adopted by congress, was endorsed in its entirety by the board because it had been designed with a view to protection from the largest imaginable flood.

Board Considered Plan

The duty of the board was to consider whether the "Jadwin plan" which congress approved could not be bettered by combining with it features of the Mississippi river commission's project. Upon its report the chief executive was to base recommendations for the future execution of the work.

The cost of carrying out the "Jadwin plan" was estimated in the board's report at $318,500,000. Of this amount $60 800,000 would be spent on construction and acquisition of flowage rights and rights of vay between Cape Girardeau and the Arkansas river. Between the Arkansas river and the Red river $75,700,000 would be spent, while $71,000,000 would take care of expenses below Red river.

In addition the following amounts were estimated: Revetments, $80,000,000; Construction work, $20,000,000; dredging, $10,000,000; mapping, $1,000,000.

Forest Fires Rage in Montana, Idaho

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 14 (AP)—Forest fires continued to spread in Montana tonight after burning over more than 3,000 acres, but conflagrations in California and Idaho were under control.

High winds and the inaccessibility of the clearwater forest in the Montana district of the United States forest service had combined toward the spread of the two fires.

More than 280 fire fighters were combating the flames.

The fire in the Sierra national forest of California was turned back by back-firing and the Miami mountain blaze was checked after having burned over 5,800 acres.

Fires in Idaho burned over 10,000 acres before rain fell and helped the fighters control the flames.

Smith Attempts to Evade Issue of Dr. Straton

Minister Prepared to Repeat Sermon Against "Al"

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 14 (AP)—Governor Smith today all but put his proposed debate with Dr. John Roach Straton of New York in the class of expected events that never materialize.

In a terse letter to the clergyman, the democratic presidential nominee renewed his demand that they meet face to face in Calvary Baptist church where Dr. Straton recently declared that the Governor was the "dealiest foe" of the forces of the moral progress in America. Smith insisted on a "yes or no" answer and clearly indicated that he would not consider the minister's counter suggestion that they come to grips elsewhere than in his church.

"I have your letter of August the ninth, covering three pages in answer to my simple request that I be permitted to come to your church and there have you repeat in my presence the statements you made about me with such proof as you care to adduce and give me an opportunity to answer you before your own parishioners and in the place where you made the statements," said the Governor in his latest letter.

Wrote as Governor

"Your reply shows that you misunderstand the situation. I have no intention of conducting a political debate with you. I wrote you not in the capacity of a candidate or personally, but as the Governor of the state of New York, whom you have traduced.

"The answer to my request to appear in your church before your parishioners under the conditions I mentioned is yes or no. Unless and until I hear from you in the affirmative, the matter is closed."

After declining for several days to be drawn out of his reaction to Dr. Straton's proposal that they clash verbally in Madison Square Garden or elsewhere, but not in his church, the Governor made public without comment what may be his final rejoinder to Mr. Straton.

The Governor announced that Lieutenant Governor Edwin Corning, who is ill in Maine, had forwarded his resignation as chairman of the New York state democratic committee, to which will fall the task of directing the campaign this fall on behalf of the party's state ticket. It was explained that Corning's retirement was due entirely to his health.

Straton Makes Reply

NEW YORK, Aug. 14 (AP)—The New York Evening Post today quotes Dr. John Roach Straton as saying that he is ready to repeat, in the largest hall he can find, his recent sermon criticizing Governor Smith, in the event that the Governor refuses to debate with him in any place but Calvary Baptist church of which Dr. Straton is pastor.

In reply the Post correspondent quotes Dr. Straton as saying: "I cannot reply until I receive the letter, but I can say this: It is a most remarkable letter that Governor Smith has written me—amazing to me. He talks about traducing him as Governor. That has nothing whatever to do with it. He wrote to me as a candidate for president of the United States and that is why he wanted to get into Calvary Baptist church.

"The heart of my reply to him will be to this effect. He challenged me to a joint discussion. I accepted. He stipulated that it be held in my own church. For obvious reasons that have been advanced it cannot be.

"But if the governor does not refuse on this ground, then I will hire the largest hall I can secure and notify the governor that I am going to repeat, in that hall, the exact sermon to which he objected."

The Post says that in response to a question Dr. Straton said he probably would deliver the address on September 7 or 8.

Arkansas Women Crowd Polls for Primary Election

Votes Cast in Ohio, Arkansas Reach New Height

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 14 (AP) — Influenced by the prohibition issue in a number of important contests and ideal weather, Ohio voters were expected to set a new voting record in today's state-wide primary election.

Estimates of a total vote of 900,000 made by Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown, which would exceed any previous Ohio primary, appear to have been substantiated by reports from over the state. The largest previous vote was in 1924, when 785,000 votes were cast.

Spirited contests in many counties in the selection of local candidates also added zest to the voters.

Watch Governor Contest

The gubernatorial contest appeared to hold the interest of republican voters throughout the day, while the democratic adherents found the fight between Senator Cyrus Locher, whose candidacy was backed by the Anti-Saloon league, and Graham P. Hunt, Cincinnati liberal, attracting their attention chiefly. The democratic gubernatorial race also roused considerable attention, particularly in the fight between Congressman Martin L. Davey, and former Lieut. Gov. Earl D. Bloom, both of whom had endorsement of the dry organization.

Because of the large number of candidates for state, senatorial, congressional, and county offices and the anticipated heavy vote, election officials expect a slow count.

Six in Race

Though six candidates were entered in the republican gubernatorial race, Congresman James T. Begg of Sandusky, Myers Y. Cooper of Cincinnati, and Attorney General Edward C. Turner have been generally considered favorites. Cooper received the Anti-Saloon league endorsement, though many members of the dry organization cast their lot with Begg. Turner, an avowed enemy of the league, consistently attacked it through the campaign.

Arkansas Primary Establishes Record

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Aug. 14 (AP)—Activity of women voters in the Arkansas state democratic primary today swelled the total vote to a figure believed to have exceeded the 219,000 cast in the primary two years ago and to have approached a record established a few years ago when the Ku Klux Klan was a dominant issue in the state.

Nominees were selected for state, district and county offices with the nomination equivalent to election to all state and district offices.

Some candidates for state offices claimed the heavy feminine vote would determine the outcome in some race, notably that for governor in which there were seven candidates.

Pledges Not Required

Reports from over the state generally indicated comparatively few voters were challenged by election officials for the refusal to pledge support to the party's presidential nominees, Alfred E. Smith and Joe T. Robinson.

Party officials in some counties had announced voters would be required to pledge support of the national ticket but indications were the rule followed in most places was to challenge those democrats who had been especially outspoken in their opposition to the national ticket.

Parnell Active Candidate

The most active candidates for governor were Governor Harvey Parnell who as lieutenant governor became chief executive when Governor John E. Martineau was named a federal judge a few months ago, and who made his campaign largely on the contention that a change in that office would endanger the state's program; J. Carroll Cone, state auditor; Brooks Hay, 30 years old and an attorney, and Tom J. Terral, former "no pardon" governor, who in this campaign declared his policy against pardons had been too severe.

Prisoner Escapes From Omaha Jail

OMAHA, Aug. 14 (AP)—Harold Hough, 22 years old, escaped from the county jail here today. He was serving a sentence of two to five years in connection with the pilfering of mail at the United States national bank, here where he was a mail clerk.

Hough pleaded guilty last October. His home is in Chicago.

A high school graduate at 12, organist, accomplished pianist, and former Northwestern university student, Hough was arrested here last August after he had been trapped by a decoy letter. He confessed and implicated another bank messenger. Each said they had pilfered letters of from one to two hundred dollars each.

The Long Arm of the Law

THE apprehension and arrest of a murderer in Chicago less than a week after his crime had been committed under circumstances which seemed baffingly devoid of clues must be a satisfaction to all right minded persons. This particular murder, now that it has been revealed, appears to have been crudely protected. None the less it offered the police a problem in which viligance and acumen were essential.

Apparently "the perfect crime" is yet to come. So far the criminals who have planned and perpetarted crimes have had little success in covering them up. Here and there are instances of unsolved mysteries, but the percentage is so small as to make escape from detection a remote possibility.

The criminal may think he has a super mind. He may analyze with clarity and keen foresight the situations which he will meet. Even then "the breaks" are against him. If he is acting under the influence of passion, he cannot be altogether sane in his judgments. If he is working with cool calculation—without anger or jealousy or even greed—he has a better chance. Yet the very fact that his mind is disordered enough for him to conceive and build an anti-social act puts him at the mercy of an equally clear mind which thinks normally.

The crime is the socially sick person. Whether he realizes it or not, he cannot have the mental strength of the well person. He is helpless before superior vitality.

Today men and women trained in dealing with criminals are employed by government, state, and city. They safeguard communities locally, but they do more. They go to the ends of the earth to find and bring to justice those who have committed outrages against society.

It is true that the mills often grind slowly, but they grind exceeding small. The arm of the law is long indeed. Justice is far reaching. The criminal has little chance of escape.

A Cash and Haul Market

NOW an automarket! The last word in shopping convenience—that is, up to the time this paper goes to press—is this serve yourself automarket recently established in Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. Housewife no longer has to park her car when she goes for the family food supplies; she drives right into the grocery. On a cement runway just wide enough for an automobile, she proceeds in low gear and shops from the revolving shelves at either side of the track. She does not cross the path of the shoppers on foot. She pays as she leaves the building.

To one who has not seen the automarket in operation, its possibilities offer delightful speculation. Yet why not? All the objections one can think of are less than what might have been urged with good reason against the cafeteria, the "automat" lunch room, the help yourself grocer store. The advantages are obvious. No bother with parking space, no worry about leaving the children in the car, no hose bespattered in the few jumps from the wet curb to the doorway.

In the light of other conveniences already established, we need not be skeptical of the automarket. If Louisville tries it and finds it good—who knows, Iowa City may have one by this time next year!

Do We Consider the Future?

"THE Sense of the Future" is the title of an article in the August Harpers written by Katharine Fullerton Gerould. Briefly, she says this: "Americans have, within the last two decades, lost much of the optimism for which they have been noted. To look toward the future has long been the custom of Americans, but, since the war, they have not liked what they saw there and so have ceased to regard it."

Mrs. Gerould says that where the future is disregarded, personal happiness is on the decline, and she professes to find that it it is on the decline in America. This fact, she says, has been attributed to many causes, and adds, "I imagine that dropping the future out of our daily lives is as responsible as any of these." The future is bound to happen, but those who plan and work to make certain desirable things occur have a greater satisfaction than those who do not. "A reason . . . for the decline in happiness . . . is that we tend to stand pat on what we have and refuse to dream For too many, the sense of the future is atrophied."

It is simply on the score of personal happiness that Mrs. Gerould asks Americans to treat the future as if it belonged to them, to dream constructively, to take a hand in fitting conditions to desires. One who can enjoy that for which he only hopes is far happier than is one who enjoys only that which is within his grasp. "One of the greatest American gifts was its intimate and vivid sense of the future. We seem at the moment nationally disinclined to cultivate that sense, but let us not lose it, until we must, out of our personal lives."

We cannot wholly agree with Mrs. Gerould. Do world courts, disarmament conferences, and peace pacts indicate America's indifference to the future? What a queer way to exhibit indifference!

Children habitually live in the present, disregarding both past and future, and they seem to be happy. How many grownups sigh for childhoods' happy days when tears dry as soon as shed and today is all of life. Are we mistaken about the happiness of childhood?

One may know his own state of personal happiness, but who can speak for that of the millions of America? The number of friends whom one person would know intimately enough to be informed as to the state of their personal happiness would be too few upon which to form an opinion of the nation, we think. And Mrs. Gerould only "imagines" that dropping the future is as responsible as several other reasons she names for the slump in personal happiness which she is sure exists.

"Without vision the people perish" was written in the Good Book long ago, and if the people of America have lost their vision it is time they awoke to their danger. But as far as we can see both the nation and its individual citizens are taking deep interest in the future, building, working, studying, planning, for the good of the world at large as well as for their own personal interests.

What Will Aviation Do?

(From The Detroit News)

ALL human progress seems to be timed to the speed of transportation. The inventor of the wheel started civilization on its journey around the world. Wheels rolled by steam, gasoline and electricity have made the difference between our modern age and ox cart days. And now come the wings.

The miracle wrought by the automobile makes credible almost any prediction of what may happen in a flying era, and sufficient progress has been made to give basis for prophecy. The United States department of commerce has given out some figures.

Already aviation is a $100,000,000 industry in this country. Applications for licenses to operate airplanes average about 2,500 every month. There are 130 concerns manufacturing planes this year; last year there were but 80.

One of the most important developments of the coming of this new form of transportation arises from the need of landing places. Every live town must have its airport, and the rush to qualify as a place where those traveling by air may land, is proving an unprecedented stimulus to business.

The establishment of an airport has many needs beyond the mere acquisition of a piece of vacant land. Buildings must be constructed; extensions tying the new transportation system to the land facilities will be needed; hotels, shops, restaurants, supply depots may be called into existence because of this enlarging of means available for getting about.

In addition, every phase of commercial and industrial affairs is certain to speed up. Business that was timed to consummations in days will count upon returns in hours. Spheres of commercial influence will be enlarged as is the view from high altitudes. Circles of trading areas will push out toward farther horizons. The big man can be bigger and the aggregations of men and capital will find enlarged scope for activity in proportion as distances are covered by flying.

These are conclusions anyone may draw from the world's experience with the various advances in transportation methods. Aviation gives wings to progress.

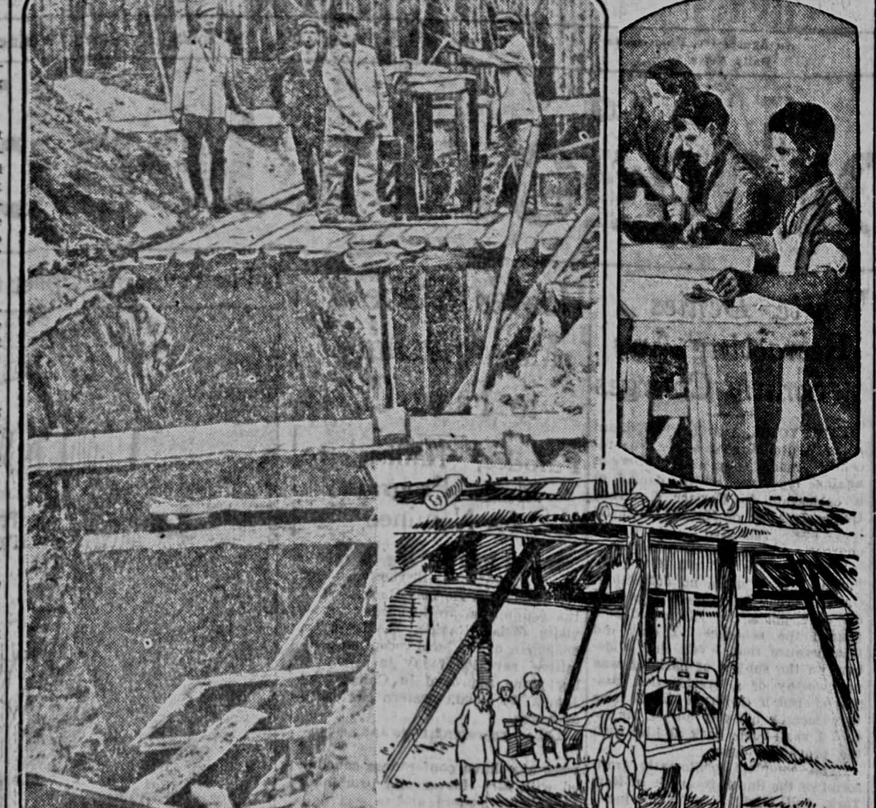
Americans Modernize Mines



Primitive mining of gems in the Ural mountains of Russia, in which the trench and scoop winch at the left are used to extract emeralds from the earth, is to be replaced by modern American methods. Millions of dollars worth of stones pass over the cutting and sorting tables like those at the right. The sketch is that of a machine used for centuries, the one horsepower grinding mill.

SVERDLOVSK, Russia (AP)—Emerald mining in the Ural mountains, where primative methods have been employed for centuries, is to be speeded up by American experts. And as a consequence New York will become an important market for the gems.

Precious stones and metals have been mined in the Ural mountains from remote antiquity. This region has yielded some of the largest and finest emeralds in the world, but its pontential wealth has never been fully exploited.

When the experts in mining and stone cutting from America came they found the equipment and methods much the same as they had been for centuries. Much of the mining is carried on at considerable depths; in cases as much as 100 feet below the surface. A great part of the mine at times is threatened with inundation.

The Americans are bringing the newest machinery to this remote region, which can only be reached by a journey of nearly two days by rail from Moscow over the Transsiberian railway. Primitive log structures about the openings of the mine shafts will be replaced by new and improved structures of American design.

The emeralds after being recovered from the earth are cut and polished nearby, about 700 men and women being employed for the work. The men for the most part do the digging while the women are engaged only in polishing the gems, and the native workers have acquired great skill.

Now, with more efficient methods of breaking up and washing the earth and sorting the precious stones, the yield of these famous mines is expected to be greatly increased.

North Carolina Lays Claim to Two 74 Year Old Senators

By KIRK L. SIMPSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 14 (AP)—Retirement from the democratic national committee Sen. Furniford McLendel Simmons of North Carolina, for reasons not explained draws attention to the fact that the Old North state, steeped in traditions that reach back far beyond the revolutionary beginnings of things American, is represented in the senate by 144 years of accumulated age and more than a half century of unbroken senate experience.

Kirke L. Simpson

"The senator," as North Carolina knows its senior senator, is 74 years of age, and is Sen. Lee Slater Overman, always "Senator Overman" back home to distinguish him from his colleague. Both were born in January, 1854, and in fact Overman is just seventeen days the senior in age. Simmons has been 27 consecutive years in the senate; Overman twenty-five.

Seniority Counts

But that little distinction as to seniority in the senate means a lot when translated into North Carolina politics. Simmons, serious minded always, meticulously polite in debate, but a hard hitter for all that; husky of voice and with face deep etched and bristly, close cut hair and mustache bleached by time, has been a commanding figure in political affairs of his state all these years. And always also, the short statured, fine drawn "little giant" has bulked large in the Washington life of his party, come political weather fair or foul. He is at his best, perhaps, and seasoned by long experience, as director of the minority battles day in and day out when government fiscal policy is in the making.

Overman, a wide, portly man of large good nature and genial, fun loving mold, is a more colorful figure to the eye. He was doomed when he entered the senate to see the decades come and go while still he wore that title of "junior senator," which seems hardly in keeping with his snowy hair, worn long to his collar, and framing a smooth cheeked, ruddy face that looks out benignantly on men and affairs save on rare political occasions. But when a senate colleague does break through that calm serenity of manner, there is a stinging, whiplash crack to Overman's tongue, even yet.

Study in Contrasts

He affects that flat, black, square topped mode of soft hat that "Uncle Joe" Daniels introduced to cabinet circles as naval secretary. It's more or less an Old North state fad in headgear. But Overman, when he goes abroad sometimes of a coolish day, adds an ample, black, velvet collared cape, a veritable naval boat cloak, with a touch of relieving color to the lining. That, and his time frosted hair, his portly, dignified bearing and the kindly, tranquill look in the south, harking back to the days of the plantations and the cotton squirarchy.

They have always been, these elder statesmen colleagues from North Carolina, stalwarts of the stalwarts in democratic ranks, regular in thought and deed, deepest in party traditions. Both are sticklers for the order and decorum of the senate; insistent upon respect for the title of senator. And if Simmons now, at long last, finds himself outside the party fold in any real sense because of the Smith nomination, the old order is changing in North Carolina.

Three Casts to Present O'Neil's Plays at Studio

Only Production by Theater During Session

Three casts of characters will appear in "The Long Voyage Home," "In the Zone," and "Ile," three early plays by Eugene O'Neil, which will be presented in the studio theatre at Iowa Union starting tonight at 8 o'clock, as the university theatre's only public offering of this term.

The cast of "The Long Voyage" includes Fat Jo, played by William A. Behl, of Scotland, S. Dak.; Nick, Albert Henry Tanswell, Manchester, England; Mag Hortense Bement, Indianola; Kate, Harriet S. Bolon; Freda, Susan Eaker, Iowa City; Olson, George Williamson, Davenport; Driscoll Cecil H. Nickle, Des Moines; Ivan, Paul A. Luckenbill, Mediapolis; Cocky, Luther W. Stephen, Vincent; two roughs, Ted McDougal, John Black.

"In the Zone" Cast

The characters of "In the Zone," all of whom are seamen aboard the S. S. Glencairn, include Smitty, Lee A. Weber, Omaha; Davis, Ted McDougal; Swanson, George Pflaum, Emporia, Kan.; Scotty, Darrel J. Mase, Delphos, Kan.; Ivan, John W. Black, Veederburg, Ind.; aul, Marvin J. Prohaska, Cedar Rapids; Jack, George B. Williamson, Davenport; Driscoll, Cecil H. Nickle, Des Moines; Cocky, Paul Moreland, Detroit.

The part of Captain Keeney in "Ile" will be played by Marvvin J. Prohaska, Cedar Rapids; the role of steward will be taken by Albert Henry Tanswell. Others include Ben, the cabin boy, Paul A. Luckenbill, Mediapolis; Slocum, second mate, Luther V. Stephen, Vincent; Mrs. Keeney, Marjorie Suter; Jo, a harpooner, Cecil H. Nickle, Des Moines; members of the crew, Albert Henry Tanswell, Paul Luckenbill, Ted McDougal, William Behl, George Williamson.

"The Long Voyage Home" and "In the Zone" were first presented by the Provincetown players under the direction of the author himself. They were given as part of a program of one-act sea plays, under the general title "S. S. Glencairn," on which vessel the seamen in the plays were employed. Though the plays were written at different times, the same characters appear throughout, and the action of most of them takes place aboard the S. S. Glencairn.

"In the Zone" represents the ship as an ammunition vessel in the war zone in 1915. The scene of "Ile" is laid on a whaling vessel in the Arctic circle, and the title "Ile" refers to the whale oil.

Prof. Vance H. Morton will direct the productions, and Harry G. Barnes of the department of speech has arranged the settings. The plays will be repeated tomorrow night.

Former Iowa Man Back From Europe

Elvin J. Tilton, '27 former editor of The Daily Iowan, attended the Olympics as a special correspondent, will return to his home in Iowa City tomorrow, according to word received by his mother, Mrs. Grant Tilton, 314 N. Dubuque street.

Not All English Women Interested in Cakes, Cosmetics Says Hewitt

"English women appear to be interested in nothing but cake making, cosmetics, and co-respondents in divorce suits, if you judge from the picture pages, declared Prof. Richard Mainwairing Hewitt, visiting professor from the University of Nottingham, Engand. "But the truth is, the picture page do not represent all the newspaper readers in England, any more than in this country. The English women who are interested in politics simply do not read the picture pages."

Almost every English paper of any importance has an avowed political policy, according to Professor Hewitt. Conservative papers are predominant, with a sprinkling of liberal publications, and a few socialist ones ,which are almost invariably usuccessful.

But the press does not play so large a part in elections as it does in this country, in spite of the prevalence of political papers, Professor Hewitt believes. A man's vote is little influenced by the publication to which he subscribes. Almost every English householder subscribes to a London paper, and a local one.

English Journalism National

"Here in America you have regional papers, but no national ones. Journalism is national in Engand, the London papers can reach every house in the country by 10 o'clock in the morninng. Privincial papers are comparatively unimportant.

Professor Hewitt observed that the better papers in both countries print about the same type of news. The London papers print local, national, imperial, and foreign news." A great deal of space is devoted to American news—much more than your papers give English events" he remarked. "We get very accurate American dispatches, too, but your stories of English affairs are astonishingly mistaken. The accounts in your American papers of the recent controversy about the book of common prayer were wrong—all wrong."

The English press gives considerable attention to an election in the United States, because the people are much interested, Professor Hewitt remarked.

He finds a marked difference between the English and American methods of carrying on a political campaign, in the papers and in the streets. Personalities enter in far less in this country, because it is the party that is important. "Any slur on the private life of a candidate, or an attack on his religion, for instance, would only increase the candidate's sympathy, in England."

Personalities Do Not Enter

Neither do personalities enter into the press in other matters. "There are no items of goings and comings of citizens, even in provincial papers, because of European reticence, I suppose."

Professor Hewitt commented on the popularity of the comic strips in America, declaring them practically unknown in England. Only the cheaper papers use them in England, and then they are placed in an obscure place, and called, perhaps the "children's corner." Political cartoons, also, are seldom used, and then only in cheaper papers.

Professor Hewitt named the "London Observer," the "London Times," and the "Manchester Guardian," as perhaps the most important English papers. "They are available in your reading room here," he said. "You people should all know them."

DINNER MENU

Broiled Veal Chops
Hashed Brown Potatoes
Buttered Spinach
Bread Strawberry Jam
Head Lettuce Russian Dressing
Sour Milk Chocolate Cake and Cocoa
French Pastry Frosting
Coffee

RUSSIAN DRESSING
(Serving Six)

1 cup stiff mayonnaise.
¼ cup drained chili sauce.
1 cup chopped ripe olives.
¼ cup chopped dill pickles.
¼ teaspoon salt.

Mix the ingredients. Chill. When ready to serve, mix well and pour over head lettuce or vegetables.

MAYONNAISE

1 teaspoon salt.
1 teaspoon sugar.
¼ teaspoon dry mustard.
¼ teaspoon paprika.
1 egg.
1 cup salad oil.
3 tablespoons vinegar or lemon juice.
2 tablespoons boiling water.

Chill all ingredients and utensils. Place the salt, sugar, mustard and paprika in the bottle of a deep bowl, add the egg and beat for 1 minute with a Dover egg beater. Very slowly and still beating add 2 tablespoons of the chilled salad oil. Continue very slowly, adding the oil until one-half cup has been used. Beat for one minute. Alternate the rest of the oil and the vinegar and beat until the dressing thickens. Add the boiling water and beat for two minutes. Store in the ice box. The water "cuts" the excessive oily flavor which is undesirable to some.

SOUR MILK CHOCOLATE CAKE

(Very moist and mahogany colored)

1/3 cup fat.
1 cup sugar.
1 egg.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
⅛ teaspoon salt.
1 cup sour milk or buttermilk.
1/3 cup cocoa.
2 cups flour.
1 teaspoon soda.

Cream the fat and sugar. Add the rest of the ingredients and beat for three minutes. Pour into a shallow pan which has been fitted with waxed paper. Bake in a moderately slow oven for 30 minutes. Cool, tear off the paper and cover with cocoa French pastry frosting.

COCOA PASTRY FROSTING
(This frosting is always creamy)

2 tablespoons butter.
3 tablespoons cocoa.
⅛ teaspoon salt.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
2 tablespoons hot leftover coffee or cream.
1½ cups sifted powdered sugar.

Mix all of the ingredients and beat for two minutes. Let stand for two minutes and beat again for two minutes. This intermittent beating thoroughly dissolves the sugar and prevents the "raw" or grainy taste prevalent in uncooked frostings. Use a knife dipped in water and carefully frost the top and sides of the cake.

To make sweet milk sour, when a recipe calls for sour milk and none is on hand, add two tablespoons of vinegar to one cup of milk. Let stand for three minutes.

Making Children Mind is Line of Least Resistance

By MRS. AGNES LYNE

Little children have so many new things to learn that it is wise to free their mental and emotional energies for new experience by making performance of the usual routine so much a matter of habit that it is never questioned and takes no more time and attention out of the day than is necessary.

The mother must see to it that this unquestioning obedience to matters of routine is firmly established—it is her job to see it through.

Mrs. Agnes Lyne

When she says, "Come, Helen, time for your nap. Lie down and go to sleep| I'll tell you when you can get up," then under no circumstances must Helen be allowed to sit up and look at picture books, or hop out of bed to get her blocks before napping time is over.

If she says, "All right, Roger, you may have just one chocolate after lunch," then one chocolate it must be no matter how much he may tease for more. If Jane knows that her toys ought always to be picked up before she runs out to play, then never must she be allowed to go before that task is done.

It may seem of slight consequence to let Helen get up before time just today, to give Roger his extra chocolate, or for once to excuse Jane from her task. But if the line of least resistance is followed today, tomorrow it will be necessary to discuss all the reasons for the regulation, to insist on obedience in the face of probable resistance, perhaps even to punish. When the child knows that teasing is of no avail, that mother always sees things through, tears, scenes and punishments are avoided, and the child, having accepted certain conditions of his life, directs his energies towards more constructive activities.

A HUSBAND AT HER HEELS

By Mildred Barbour

Celia drew a long breath. It made her happy to hear that Tom cared, in spite of the way he had treated her.

CONCERNING THE ACTION AND CHARACTERS

CELIA DREW, nas been obliged, after the death of her father, to go to work. She is the secretary of

BENJAMIN HARRINGTON, and is engaged to his son,

TOM. The Harringtons disapprove of the match, but Celia does not know this. She has recently rejected a proposal of marriage from

HORACE VAIL, one of Harrington's business associates, and incurred his ill will, as a result.

THE HARRINGTONS, to be rid of Celia, concoct a plot, with Vail's help, whereby Tom finds her locked in her office at midnight with

LARRYCROSS, a dissipated young chap, who is hopelessly in love with her. Without waiting for explanations, Tom rushes off. The next day Celia finds herself jobless and the object of gossip. Her sole defender is GWEN BURNS, who is rich and socially prominent. Larry, aghast at what he has done, urges Celia to marry him. She refuses and returns Tom's ring when the day passes without word from him.

MRS. DREW goes to pieces at the shock of hearing that Celia's engagement is broken and that Tom has left town.

VAIL again proposed to her.

SHE IS UNABLE to obtain another position, and Gwen urges her to go to New York.

SHE finally goes.

AFTER many difficulties, she finds a post as secretary to a rich, eccentric invalid, RICHARD, FALCONER, who is writing his memoirs.

IN HIS HOME she meets his attorney, JAMES ANNESLEY.

A PLEASANT friendship springs up between Celia and Annesley, whom Falconer looks upon as a son. His nearest kin, RICHARD FALCONER, the second, is a scapegrace, and the old man has disinherited him.

FALCONER sends for Celia one evening when his death is only a matter of hours.

HE MARRIED HER on his death bed and leaves her his fortune.

CELIA plans a trip abroad, but is called home by he rmother's illness.

MISS PAGE, Mrs. Drew's companion, tells everyone of the brilliant marriage Celia has made, and the girl's stock booms socially.

TO make her mother, who has been brought almost to death's door by worry, happy and content, Celia conceals the fact of Falconer's death. Mrs. Drew pictures her daughter as married to a rich young man, and Celia says nothing to dispell the idea.

DANGEROUS BUSINESS

Instead of remaining with her mother as she had planned to do, Celia felt herself blushing deeply as the letter was taken from the envelope—Annesley's letter. She was reddening from shame she told herself—shame in the deception she was using with her mother. It was not embarrassment. She was sure of that.

Without a word she turned from the bedside of her mother and hurried down stairs.

Gwen came while Celia was still in the living room, wrestling with this new problem.

They embraced rapturously; then Gwen held Celia off and looked at her admiringly.

"How wonderfully well you're looking. Marriage certainly agrees with you. And where is the new husband? Not with you?"

Celia stared at her for a moment; then she drew her friend down on the divan beside herself.

"Listen, and don't interrupt. I've something to confess to you."

She told everything. Gwen listened gravely.

"What am I going to do?" wailed Celia, when she had finished her recital. "What can I do?"

Gwen said slowly: "I think you have acted wisely, for the time being. You had no other course. When your mother is well and strong again, you can tell her the truth."

"Tell her that I married a rich old man on his deathbed? How can I do that? She won't understand."

"Perhaps she will. . . . Celia, I misjudged your mother. I was angry with her when all that trouble happened. I thought she cared more for what people were saying than for the effect upon you. Now, I know that she was going to pieces, not only because people were unkind to her, but because she was worried frantic about your future. . . . I don't mind telling you, my dear, that you're a nine-day wonder in the town now. People can't say nice enough things about you—how sweet you are, and how beautiful, and how successful. Even that odious Harrington woman speaks well of you. I think she even thinks that her precious Tom missed his chance in not marrying you. They seem, somehow, to have heard of Falconer, but they don't know that he was old and an invalid. If I were you, I'd keep them in ignorance. After all, when your mother is well again, you can go back to New York, to Europe, to Zanzibar, if the notion seizes you, and they need never know the truth. Falconer can die conveniently, a little later, and that will be that."

Celia said thoughtfully: "I wonder if it could be young Richard that somebody's heard about? I understand he's always done rather spectacular things."

"Maybe," shrugged Gwen. "By the way, he isn't likely to show up and make trouble, or give away the whole bally business?"

"Not a chance. Not even Mr. Falconer's lawyer knows exactly where he is. He may be dead, too."

"Don't count on it! These bad pennies—and, from what you've told me, he sounds like one—have an incurable habit of always turning up, when you least want them."

"Then you advise me to stick to the story for mother's sake?"

"By all means."

"But I can't carry the description too far, where others are concerned. It's dangerous."

Gwen considered.

"Yes, I guess it is. . . . But I'll tell you this: If you remain too secretive about your affairs, our gossips are likely to become suspicious and do a little investigating on their own. Which would be fatal. Or else they'd say that you weren't married at all — that you simply schemed yourself into the good graces of an old man and, after he was dead and couldn't protest, you calmly took his name."

Celia sighed.

"I suppose you're right. But, Gwen, I can't go around lying to everyone, like I did to mother this morning. I've a good excuse for staying in the house and not seeing a soul. They can think what they want to think."

"And that will be plenty," murmured Gwen grimly. "Anyway, I shan't talk. You can be sure of that."

"You darling, don't I know it!"

Celia's smart luggage arrived around noon. While it was being carried into the house, she saw faces peeping from behind curtains of neighboring houses, and she was reminded sharply, poignantly, of that desperate afternoon when Larry Cross had come to ask her to marry him, while all the town flamed with gossip concerning them.

She saw Miss Page inspecting the expensive trunks and bags and studying the monogram embossed on the leather.

"It is Mrs. Richard Falconer, isn't it?" sh cooed to Celia. "Such a nice name. I once knew some people named Falconer. Charming people. So generous. A relation of your husband's, perhaps?"

Celia said coldly: "My husband has no relatives, except a nephew, who is not in this country."

Gwen remained for luncheon. The food and the service were excellent. Mrs. Drew had made immediate use of the money Celia had sent her.

Gwen said diffidently, over the coffee: "Celia ,dear, I've something to tell you that may hurt you. But you and I are such good friends that I must be entirely frank with you. . . . Tom Harrington is back—last week he proposed to me."

Celia turned away.

"I—my best wishes, Gwen. I—I hope you'll be happy."

Gwen laughed.

"You dear idiot! You don't think I accepted him, do you?"

Celia stared at her.

"Why not?"

Gwen shrugged amusedly.

"Well, in the first place, it was a very half-hearted proposal. Quite evidently, he was acting under family orders. In the second place, it occurred after the announcement of your marriage. . . . Celia, he still loves you. He looks wretched."

Celia drew a long breath. It made her happy to hear that Tom cared, in spite of the way he had treated her.

"And you—you—"

"I sent him rather sharply about his business. The young puppy! And besides," she sighed, "for me, there'll never be anybody but Larry. Of course, he doesn't suspect. He never will. Oh, isn't life a rotten business?"

At 5 o'clock the doctor arrived to visit the mother. He was a noted heart specialist. Celia again rejoiced that she was able to give her mother every care.

His report was encouraging.

"Your presence is a great benefit to our patient, Mrs. Falconer. But remember, keep her always happy. No slightest shock or disappointment."

Shortly afterward, the nurse came to say that she was going for her daily constitutional. Would Celia sit with the invalid? Yes? She would face her mother whom she had left reading Annesley's letter.

Frost Reports in Canada Send Price Up; Corn Increases

CHICAGO, Aug. 14 (AP)—Wheat prices ran up rapidly today, influenced by news of frost in Canada and by likelihood of more frost there tonight. Reports that so far no loss in bushels and but little in quality would result failed to act as an offset.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled 2⅞@2¾c net higher, with corn ½—¾c, oats varying from ¼c decline to ¼c advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 15c.

Uneasiness over indications that the wheat crop outlook in Canada is less favorable that has been generally assumed became manifest today soon after the opening. Low temperatures in parts of the Canadian wheat belt were given special notice.

Corn rose with wheat. Receipts of corn in Chicago today amounted to only 33 cars, and not much was being booked to arrive.

Charters were made for 220,00 bushels of corn to Buffalo. Need of rain in north central portions of the corn belt was also a subject of comment. Oats were sluggish, doing little at any time, but with September and December touching the lowest quotations yet for the crop.

Provisions reflected new high price records for the season which were established today in the hog market.

Corn showed a strong tone early with all months higher, but there was free selling of September later. There was further changing over from September to deferred months. A good cash demand was reported, but there was little outside buying of September, apparently. Country offerings were light and receipts west and southwest were not so heavy as yesterday. Weather conditions were favorable except that some sections, especially Neraska, are badly in need of rain.

Chicago Ladies Predominate in Golf Tournament

INDIAN HILL CLUB, Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP)—The women's western golf championship used to be somewhat of a Chicago affair but for the last three years the title has been taken by outsiders. This year only four Chicagoans were among the 16 survivors of the first match round today.

At the head of the first half stood the champion, Mrs. Harry Pressler of Los Angeles, as one of three Californians to enter the second match round, while at the top of the second bracket was Dorothy Page of Madison, Wis., 1926 champion.

Mrs. Pressler was the only one over par for the 15 holes she needed to defeat Virginia Ingram of Chicago 5 and 3. Miss Page also did not play steadily in her 4 and 3 victory over Jane Cannon of Milwakee, Wisconsin champion.

There were two surprises during the day in the defeat of Mrs. Dalton Reymond of Baton Rouge, formerly southern champion, and the elimination of Mrs. Melvin Jones of Chicago, formerly western title holder.

Mrs. Reymond conceded lost 6 and 4 to Mrs. L. C. Nelson of Dayton, Ohio, was scored 2 under par. Mrs. Jones succumbed to Mrs. Gregg Lifur of Los Angeles, California champion, 5 and 3.

The third Californian who won today was Kathleen Wright, who triumphed 2 and 1 from Louise Fergus of Chicago. Anne Webster of Fort Leavenworth, defeated Mrs. C. C. Kendrick of Chicago 1 up.

Last year's runner-up, Bernice Wall of Oshkosh, won 3 and 1, over Mrs. L. E. Rein of Chicago. Mrs. Lee Mida of Chicago defeated Eva May Johnson of Chicago 4 and 2.

One of the prime favorites, Mrs. G. S. Hill of Kansas City, north and south and trans-Mississippi champion, scored exactly par on both nines, for her 41-40—81 to defeat Mrs. H. D. Raymond of Chicago 6 and 4.

The only southern player left is Mrs. Elaine Rosenthal Reinhardt of Dallas, twice winner of the event, who had a handy victory 4 and 2 over Mrs. T. C. Ernest of Chicago.

Mrs. Dorothy Klotz Pardue of Hibbing, Minn., defeated Mrs. Harold Foreman of Phelps, Wis., 5 and 4, and Gertrude Boothby of Rochester, Minn., entered from St. Paul. Miss Boothby although scoring 87 to her opponent's 86, defeated Mrs. O. W. Blackwell of Chicago one up. By holing a long put for a birdie 5 on the 522 yard eighteenth hole, Virginia Wilson, of Chicago conquered Helen McMorran, baby of the meet, 3 and 1.

Miss Boothby, the Minnesota champion, will meet the Chicago title holder tomorrow.

Cleveland Turns Back Boston 2-1

BOSTON, Aug. 14 (AP)—Singles by Langford, Hodapp and Summa together with Joe Sewell's double gave Cleveland two runs in the first inning and enabled it to beat the Red Sox 2 to 1 here today in the second game of their series.

"Big Bill" Tilden Performs Again

Wins Four Matches in Eastern Turf Matches

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 14 (AP)—William T. Tilden, the king of the American tennis courts and the center of American tennis controversy, made his first appearance since his return from Europe in the eastern turf court championships today, scoring two easy victories in the singles and another pair in the doubles. Due to the appearance of Big Bill the largest crowd came to the Westchester Biltmore club that has ever turned out for the early rounds of the eastern championships.

The Davis Cup captain conquered J. Gilbert Hall of East Orange, N. J., 6-1, 6-1, and C. H. Watkins of White Plains, N. Y., 6-2, 6-1 to enter the quarter final round. Later, paired with Francis T. Hunter, his partner in the Davis Cup matches, Tilden swamped Henry Moore and Valentine Gress of New Rochelle, N. Y., 61, 6-1. They then ended the day with a victory over Eugene McCauliff and Ernest Kuhn of Yonkers, N. Y., 6-2, 6-1.

Tilden, whose status as an amateur is to be decided Aug. 24, gave a display of his best game today, appearing merely to toy with his opponents.

During the afternoon Tilden spent some time in conference with Samuel Hardy, acting manager of East-West matches, to be played at Forest Hills Friday and Saturday. It was reported today that Hunter had refused to play on the eastern team unless Tilden also was invited to participate. Regarding a report that he was considering a contract to appear in vaudeville, Tilden merely commented that it was "very interesting."

All of the other players seeded with Tilden in the championships reached the quarter round today except Harris Coggeshall, Grinnell college star, whose third round opponent did not appear in time to play.

Weekly Magazine Sport Department for Athletic Change

As one of the institutions which has aided in the democratization of intercollegiate athletics by abolishing the distinction between "major" and "minor" sports, the University of Iowa is mentioned in a recent Saturday Evening Post editorial.

Seven other universities have revised or are contemplating a revision of their whole system of awarding insigna in athletics, according to the Post. Cornell University, New Hampshire, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Wesleyan, Dartmouth and Williams are the institutions listed.

"By removing the 'major' and 'minor' distinctions, which have been in vogue for the past fifty years, it is hoped to remove the stigma of interferiority from sports," the Post declares.

Other colleges probably will fall in line with the movement, the editorial declares, citing the action of the seven universities as an example of the forward trend.

"Such democratization of intercollegiate athletics is a healthy symptom and is a long-deferred recognition of the many who sweat and strain for their alma maters in lowly capacities far from the blare of the band and the spotlight of fame," according to the editorial's conclusion.

Revision of the regulation for the award of letters in all sports was accomplished at the University of Iowa in 1925, by action of the athletic council, under the leadership of Dr. P. E. Belting, director of physical education, and the Hawk-I club, organization of etter men.

Statistics Show Average Iowa Grid Player 20 Years Old; Weighs 180

Weight, 180 pounds; height, 5 feet, 10 1-2 inches; age, 20 years, 5 months—such are the statistics on the average player of the University of Iowa's 1928 football squad.

These figures were reached by averaging the personal information furnished to the department of athletics by each of the 71 athletes who will report on Iowa field for the initial drill just one month from today.

The sophomore class will furnish the oldest, youngest, heaviest and tallest player this fall, the statistics reveal. Pete V. Affre, Sicilian halfback from Quincy, Ill., is 25 years old, the eldest on the squad. Second to him is Marvin M. Schmidt, senior hafback and one of Iowa's letter men. Schmidt, who is from Moline, Ill., is 24.

With his huge bulk and great height, Ralph D. Hilton of Joliet, Ill., sweeps away all honors in the heaviest and tallest divisions. This sophomore tackle carries 250 pounds on his 6 foot 5 inch frame. He is 25 pounds heavier than the second place man, E. C. Elting of Keokuk, and is an inch taller than O. L. Carlsen, Clinton veteran who was the tallest Hawkeye of 1927.

C. H. Wendel, Smithland, a sophomore end, is the youngest player. He is 18, and some seven months younger than H. E. Ely, Des Moines tackle. The scrappy end, R. H. Moore, Eagle Grove, weighs 142 pounds, is 5 feet, 4 3-4 inches tall, and is the midget of the squad. Moore won his "I" last fall despite his size. J. B. Hay, Waterloo, another end, weighs 150 pounds and is second to Moore. The Jensvold twins, Leo B. and Lloyd V., of Emmetsburg, are each 5 feet, 8 inches tall.

Iowa City Helps West Liberty to Open New Road

Supper, Dance, Other Features Included on Program

Iowa City and West Liberty will unite Thursday night in a joint celebration to mark the opening of the pavement on highway No. 32 between the two towns. Tickets have been placed on sale for a chicken supper to be served by the women of St. Joseph's parish at the West Liberty fair grounds.

The local chamber of commerce is sponsoring the celebration and indications are that a large crowd will attend.

Following the serving of the supper from 6 to 7:30 p.m. the West Liberty junior band will give a concert and other entertainment will be provided.

An orchestra from Iowa City will furnish music for dancing in the pavilion on the fair grounds at West Liberty during the latter part of the evening.

It is necessary to know how many persons will wish to attend the supper because tickets are sold in advance. They may be obtained at the chamber of commerce or from the committee in charge, consisting of James J. Aldous, P. A. Rocco, and J. H. Steinmetz. They will provide motorists with Iowa City banners for their cars if they will call at the chamber of commerce office for them.

Kiwanians Hear Swiss Yodelers

The Iowa City Kiwanis club members were entertained by the Fiechtl Yodlers at the regular luncheon yesterday at Red Ball inn. The yodlers are from Innsbruch, Tyrol, and are connected with the Redpath chautauqua circuit which has been in Iowa City this week.

Members of the yoders are Anna Fiechtl, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Kuester, Jack Yost and Constantine Wunderle. They played several and sang several numbers of the typical Swiss type.

Guests at the luncheon were Dr. Kirk Seydel of Iowa City and Dr. L. G. Lawver; George Anselm and John H. Nicholson and Prof. F. C. Ensign; Nyle W. Jones jr., and his father, Nyle W. Jones; Otto Kuester and Kiwanians L. H. Ladd of Pomery, and John R. Culver of Deer Lodge, Mont.

Herrick Quartet to Give Concert

Headed by Robert Herrick, widely known comedy singer and entertainer, the Herrick male quartet will appear in a concert at the chautauqua now at College hill park at 2:30 p.m. today.

Charles H. Plattenburg, editor and student of community building, will lecture at 3 o'clock on "The Old Town in a New World." Mr. Plattenburg is known in the United States through his appearances on the lecture platform and in civic organization work.

The evening program, given by the Herrick quartet, will be popular in nature, and they will feature fun-making from the stage along with their singing.

Chautauqua enthusiasts were entertained and enlightened yesterday by the lecture of Hilton Jones on self management, in which he told of the developments in the scientific field as related to everyday life.

The Fiechti yodlers, a company of three men and two women, gave a concert in the afternoon and "An Alpine Romance" in the evening as the feature of the program.

Fascinating native melodies, beautiful costumes, and vivid stage productions were united in making this one of the outstanding features of the chautauqua program so far this year.

W. J. Harter Sells Local Buick Agency

The Buick motor car agency and garage business owned by W. J. Harter, has been sold to C. E. Bloom of Chicago, according to an announcement made yesterday. The amount of the transaction was not made public.

West Branch to Start Decorating

Local Company Erects Banners, Flags for Hoover

E. J. Giblin, proprietor of the New Idea Decorating service company, has been exerting all efforts the last week preparing decorations for the West Branch Hoover celebration. All materials are now ready for erection as the committee in charge desire.

Because of requests from newspapermen who wish to obtain pictures of the town decorated for Hoover, Mr. Giblin may have his men erect he decorations early in order that he pictures may be sent out before the celebration takes place.

An overhead decoration, consisting of patriotic colored banners and streamers, will be used on the main street from the east to west city limits.

On the street running by Hoover's birthplace, the same will be used as far as the school house, where the Hoover party will make headquarters during the stay in West Branch. In addition to the overhead work, there will be flags on the electroliers.

All West Branch merchants have ordered banners similar to the ones recently purchased by the Iowa City merchants. Instead of being gold with black borders and lettering as those ordered here, the West Branch banners will have a white background with red lettering and a blue border. These will be hung in front of the business houses.

Other welcome signs will be placed about the town and there will be decorations erected on the field where the main part of the celebration is held.

Each business house is planning a special front for the occasion, as well as interior decorations.

Cavalrymen Start Working at Camp

The members of Troop A, 113 cavalry of the Iowa National Guard under the command of Capt. Will J. Hayek, who left Iowa City last Sunday at 4:10 a.m., arrived at Camp Dodge at noon of the same day.

About twenty men including the cooks drove ahead in cars and had a great deal of the preliminary work done when the main body of the troop reached there.

Better transportation facilities was reported this year as compared with those of previous years. The state administration of the camp has provided many improvements during the last two years. The most important of these are board floors and electric lights for the tents and the painting of the mess halls.

These changes are particularly appreciated by those members who made their first camp with the outfit last year at Fort Riley, Kan., where they grew accustomed to real "roughing it."

Attorneys for Goss Ask for Continuance

Attorneys for George Goss, who was arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated, asked yesterday for a continuance from Tuesday until Aug. 27 in order that they might investigate the case. Justice of Peace Elias J. Hughes granted the request.

Goss was arrested Saturday night by police when it was alleged that he had run into a car parked on Muscatine avenue. He pleaded not guilty and was released when he posted an appearance bond of $500.

Canadian Planes to Use Air Port

Aeronautical Club to Serve as Host in Contest

Plans are being made by the Iowa City aeronautical club to receive and accommodate the Canadian planes competing in the international air races, that will stop here early in September on their way from Winnipeg, Canada, to the west coast.

One of the officials of the air race was in Iowa City recently to inspect the local field. He was well pleased, and commented very favorably on the equipment.

The local chamber of commerce has prepared maps of the Iowa City airport and its relation to the surrounding countryside. Fifty of the maps have been sent to the officials of the air derby.

The aeronautical club met last night, but a number of the members were unable to attend, so the meeting was adjourned. They will meet this morning at 8 o'clock in the chamber of commerce rooms to work on the above plans.

Hoover Finishes Campaign Speech for West Branch

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Aug. 14 (AP) — Herbert Hoover turned today from the appraisal of the effect of his aceptance speech to the active preparation of his next enunciation of principles.

With his West Branch speech tentatively formulated, he went at its final draft with an enthusiasm which was bringing a re-shaping of the document in which he is expected to give the people who greet him next week at his birthplace a more detailed expression of his views on farm relief and other subjects touched but slightly in his acceptance address.

The republican presidential nominee hoped to complete his work on the speech before he leaves Thursday for a day in Los Angeles and southern California as the first stage of his return journey to the east. At Los Angeles he also will speak, but his talk there will be brief, devoted in part to a discussion of the Boulder Canyon power, irrigation, and flood control project.

Even while the candidate prepared to touch off the second gun in his campaign for the presidency, echoes of the first shot continued to reach him in the peaceful quiet of his home on the Stanford university campus.

A new batch of telegrams, bearing congratulations and hopeful predictions, greeted him today.

Chief among them was one from President Coolidge at his summer vacation retreat in Wisconsin. It bore a declaration that "your speech of acceptance ranks very high in political discussion, and congratulations upon the reception which has been given to it by the country."

Others construed his prohibition statements as a bone dry pronouncement and praised the document as one of great political significance. Among these was Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of BeVerly, Mass., an active woman's temperance leader.

"Your fine, consistent, comprehensive statement strengthened us," she said. "If enforcement is put in the hands of its friends, men of character, force and ability, it wil succeed. We can trust you to do this. Our women are with you."

Among others commending him upon his message were Senator A. H. Vandenburg, of Michigan, and Representatives J. Will Taylor of Tennessee, and Burton L. French, of Idaho, and William R. Willcox of New York, a former chairman of the republican national committee.

Callers at the Hoover home today included Hugh Wiley, San Francisco author, Haig Patrigan, California sculptor, Al McCabe, long allied with the various campaigns of Senator Hiram Johnson in California, and various other California friends and well wishers.

Railroad Man Likes Old Capitol, Hospital Towers; Visits Shambaugh

Until Mr. and Mrs. Carence N. Cook, of Kansas City, Kan., driving toward Iowa City Monday night caught their first glimpse of the hospital towers they were only casually interested in the town they were approaching. After driving all day their chief interest was getting to a hotel.

As they swung around the bend in the highway, this side of Wolfe avenue, they saw for the first time the medical towers, and yesterday morning, they were still talking about the impression it made upon them. They were equally enthusiastic about the east campus especially about Old Capitol.

Likes Old Capitol

"It looked like a great black cathedral silhouetted against the dark sky," said Mr. Cook, referring to the new university hospital. "Now in all of our travels, and in the thousands of cities that we have visited, has anything impressed us as that historical Old Capitol building, a monument to pioneers, set between two modern halls of learning," he added when questioned about his opinion of Iowa's campus.

Mr. Cook, public relations counsel representing the R.I.S.P. railroads, accompanied by his wife is making an extended business tour along the Rock Island route. Along the road he pays special attention to new developments and points of interest. He writes articles for magazines covering many points of interest he encounters on his various trips. Among the magazines he writes for are the Country Gentleman, The Farm Journal, and Farm and Fireside. During Mr. Cook's short stay in Iowa City, he interviewed Prof. Carl E. Shambaugh, in connnection with the Amana colonies.

To Visit West Branch

When Mr. Cook was in Frannce, during the World War, he published the only navy newspaper over there. He acquired most of his education at the University of Kansas.

Yesterday afternoon he went to West Branch to get some pictures of the place and to search out historical events of Herbert Hoover's life. From there he will go to Kansas City, his home and headquarters, to await the arrival of Hoover's special train. Mr. Cook expects to accompany Hoover from Kansas City to West Branch, where the republican nominee will speak Aug. 21.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14. (AP)— Firing five shots into the body of Servino Bantelo, 59 years old, on a crowded downtown corner today, an unidentified woman whirled and escaped among panic-stricken passersby. Bantelo was hurried to a hospital, and is thought to be fatally injured.

DES MOINES, Aug. 14 (AP) — Stepping into a hole in the Racoon river here this afternoon, Virginia Beckwith, 16, was drowned.

Do women read advertisements?

DO YOU? Do you clip recipes from the fascinating messages that advertise a new salad oil, a new frying fat, a new cake flour? Do you think twice about your skin, those wrinkles at the corners of your eyes, your tell-tale past-thirty neck because of beauty ads that bring romance about happiness, love and youth?

In planning advertisements, the question is often asked, "Do women read advertisements?" The experienced advertiser answers, "Yes—if they are interesting and instructive to read."

This is the spirit of the best modern advertising. More and more, the ideal is to show you definitely how a new product can work to your well-being, your pleasure in life, your greater happiness. By reading advertisements, you can be a better housewife, a more efficient home manager, a shrewd and thrifty buyer. The advertising pages of this newspaper contain information that is valuable and important. If you do not read advertisements, join the large army of women who do, in order to know the best things to buy for yourself, your children and your home.

Reading advertisements regularly is keeping up with the times in the most eeonomical way
