Registration

TODAY a new host of freshmen will matriculate in the University of Iowa.

It will be a hard day. To those who have had no experience with the university registration procedure, the waiting, the standing, and the confusion will be discouraging. It will seem that there is an unjustifiable amount of red tape. If the day is warm, as it may be, the instructors who help with registration may seem lacking in patience.

However, it is only one day. They're not all like it. The university has been established for a long time, and long experience has taught administration officials that all the red tape is necessary. Records must be kept. Later in the year, the very students who complain today may be seeking information about themselves or their friends. The registrar will have it.

In registering, freshmen are urged to take all recommendations for so-called "pipe" courses with a grain of salt. For some unaccountable reason, "pipe" courses seem just about the same as any other courses when examinations come around. The "pipe" course is more or less of an educational mirage.

The student who selects his schedule of courses with an eye to the good he will derive from them, or on the basis of some other reasonable considerations, builds a foundation that will make his senior year courses "pipes."

Faculty advisers are glad to give help in registration to anyone who needs it. That's what they're there for. No freshman who has problems should feel reticent about asking for help. It is easier to iron out difficulties today than it will be after a wrong course has been taken.

Freshmen are urged to read their instructions thoroughly, follow them religiously, and keep a stiff upper lip. There is a happy ending.

Last week, and, in fact, all the time up until the sorority parties started last Monday, most of the little girl rushees hadn't realized how wonderful they really are. Ah, those were the good old days!

Hear Ye! Hear Ye!

IT is only fair that The Daily Iowan should warn both old and new students who come to the university this fall. Iowa City has changed.

In the last summer, local traffic regulations have tightened up. Three traffic posts have been installed. The red light means "Stop"; the yellow light means "Get Ready"; the green light means "Go." They mean just that, and all efforts to alter the police department's interpretation of them will prove unavailing.

Numerous boulevard stop signs have been erected. They mean that a motorist must come to a complete stop before entering a boulevard or arterial highway. Observe them.

Automobiles may not be parked on the street at night without tail lights. Public streets and alleys may not be substituted for storage garages.

To operate a car with defective lights is against the law. Have them tested and report the test to the police department. Open cutouts are taboo.

The parking limits marked on downtown light posts are absolutely correct and sincere. Govern yourself accordingly.

The August files of The Daily Iowan are open to any student who may doubt that Iowa City police are not enforcing these traffic regulations.

Ten years ago, who ever thought of a regular trans-continental air race service in operation almost daily?

Use Discretion!

"It looks like a champion team, this year." How many amateur dopsters on the Iowa campus have made such an observation this year? Far more than know anything about the situation, it is safe to assume.

It is just such optimistic predictions, made by persons whose real information on the subject is limited to hearsay or amateur judgment, which caused such a rumpus among Iowa alumni last year. Rosy forecasts, based upon factors which failed to materialize, built up expectations in the minds of alumni which the 1927 football team was unable to carry through.

Every loyal student of the university should do everything in his power to prevent a recurrence of last year's alumni dissension. One of the best ways to do that is for every student to refrain from making predictions about the football team unless he knows what he is talking about. It is futile to create hopes for victories which the team cannot win. It is more agreeable to be surprised than to be disappointed.

It does look like a good team this year, right now. On the basis of past records, it looks as if Coach Ingwersen will have good material around which to build his grid machine. On the other hand, it is well to bear in mind that the football season does not begin until Oct. 6. And "there's many a slip twixt the cup and the lip."

Those unforeseen slips have caused all the trouble in past years. Men who were counted upon as good material for the team, failed to appear, at the last minute, because of injuries, ineligibility, or other disqualifications. Similar casualties are possible this year.

For that reason, it would be better if all amateur sports prophets confined their opinions to a smaller territory. People can judge for themselves, after the season is under way, whether Iowa has a good team. If it has, everyone will be happy; if it hasn't, the disappointment will be less.

The Shrinker

AIR mail has shrunk the map of the United States to the size of Texas, says a current news article. Measured in terms of transportation, New York is more than twice as near to San Francisco as Washington, D. C. was to Philadelphia when the constitution was signed.

A statistician has estimated that in a 12-hour period, the following distances will be traversed: team and wagon, 20 miles; pedestrian, 25 miles; horseback rider, 45 miles; motor stage, 300 miles; train 480 miles; and air mail plane, 1,200 miles.

These figures cause one to speculate upon what the airplane will be able to accomplish in ten years more. At present, the commercial speed of planes is far below the actually tested capabilities of the planes. We may yet see the day when the United States is reduced to the size of Iowa.

When that day comes, residents of Iowa City will be able to gather their children around them and tell them that Iowa City was one of the first cities to have a trans-continental air mail port. And if, local residents make use of the opportunity to use the air mail, they may still be able to point out the airport to their awe-stricken progeny.

Several Kinds of Women

(From The New York Times)
Generalizing about women is an ancient custom. Lately it has become a smart thing to do. Since women are taking an active part in business and public affairs they have become the subject of essays in the magazines which aim at up-to-the-minute manners. Solider periodicals have long devoted themselves to solemn analyses of women's new position. Universities, social service agencies and the government have made serious studies of women's future in the light of the past ten or fifteen years. Now suddenly the consciously sophisticated essayists are breaking into the magazines of chic and cleverness with lively, epigrammatic, satirical generalizations on the suspicious sex.

In the current New Yorker one author begins by dividing American women into two classes — the decorative, expensive-to-maintain kind, and the serious minded type, with a career or a job. September Vanity Fair had two or three articles discussing the women of this country under the assumption that they fall into one of these two groups. Other recent issues of these and other magazines, without which no town or country house is complete, have divided women similarly for the purpose of playing them off against each other and poking fun at both.

Young Mr. Beverly Nichols, formerly of London, is in New York to edit a new magazine in which women will be satirized. He has already announced that they will have rough treatment in The American Sketch. The spoiled, lazy beauties are going to get what they deserve. He has made many visits here, and has lectured, so he knows from personal observation what they are like. The college women, the business women and the politicians, lawyers, scientists and artists in various fields he will leave to other satirists. His cynical mind is directed toward the class, which obviously represents all American women to him, whose "debuts into society are given international importance." They present "a very difficult problem," but he is willing to tackle it because it "lends itself to satire."

The wit and wisdom of such writers are quite uncolored by the existence of the great majority of American women. Perhaps they ignore them because they feel that their admission would tone down the brilliance of their conclusions, or perhaps they are honestly unaware of them. These women are neither society buds nor business women. They are the kind who helped their husbands to answer the questionnaires recently sent out by the Railroad Cooperative Building and Loan association, which now has replies from 70,000 members. Most of them got married and started their savings account simultaneously with the beginning of their family. Such women, and they far outnumber the two classes now in favor with the sneering or condescending essayists, would not feel hurt at being neglected by those writers.

Interior Decorator Gives Demonstrations

Mrs. Angele Huysman, a decorator of the DuPont home decoration service, is now at the McNamara furniture company giving a series of talks and demonstrations to Iowa City housewives on the use of color in home decorations.

The company is inviting patrons to bring various articles which can be painted so that the decorative schemes and color designs can be shown objectively.

A HUSBAND AT HER HEELS

By Mildred Barbour

CELIA DREW, secretary of BENJAMIN HARRINGTON, is engaged to his son, TOM. Harringtons disapprove of the engagement, and with the aid of

HORACE VAIL, whom Celia has refused to marry, manage to have Celia found locked in an office at midnight with LARRY CROSS, a dissipated chap who loves her. Tom rushes off, and Celia breaks the engagement when he fails to return.

MRS. DREW breaks down under the shock. FINDING herself ostracized, Celia goes to New York, on the advice of GWEN BURNS, her best friend, rich and socially prominent.

CELIA FINDS a position as secretary to an invalid, and later decides to ask him to pose as her husband for a few days. She goes to New York and finds that Annesley has gone to Alaska.

ON HER RETURN, she finds RICHARD FALCONER, posing as her husband. He says that his revolutionary escapades make it necessary for him to pose as her husband in the quiet town. She is forced to agree when he threatens to expose her to her mother.

FALCONER becomes a social lion. He proposes to Celia, declaring that he loves her. When she refuses to marry him, he gives her a week to think it over.

CELIA wonders if he is MANUEL, with whom Falconer became involved because of his activities in Central America, and whom he is anxious to avoid.

ANNESLEY, on his way east, stops off to visit Celia. CELIA tells Annesley, upon his arrival, that she is Falconer's wife. She fears that the truth will cause Annesley to drive Falconer away and that the situation will affect her mother adversely.

CHAPTER 52. THE PARTING

Celia saw the purpose, the determination, in Annesley's eyes. He would find Falconer, unless she did something drastic. His eyes were dark and hard and brilliant with anger. She cried, in panic:

"Oh, no, no, you mustn't! I married him because—because I wanted to."

He gripped her slim shoulders and looked into her face. She forced herself to return his gaze.

"You mean—you love him?" he asked slowly, incredulously. She nodded miserably.

He held her in that grip for a long moment. Then his hands fell to his sides. He turned away.

But, in that moment, Celia heard a woman's voice behind her:

"Oh, look, girls! Such beautiful dogwood! I must take some home for the living room."

Celia turned her head and saw three women, all neighbors of hers. They bowed to her, a trifle stiffly, their avid eyes on Annesley. She realized that they had witnessed that little scene. She knew the construction they were putting upon it.

But what had brought them here, to you and much happiness. You deserve it, heaven knows."

When she entered the house, not knowing what she would find—some fresh calamity, probably—she discovered Falconer, pacing the living room nervously, smoking a cigaret. He was alone. The stranger was not with him. But something in his expression filled her with apprehension.

"To the station," he told the driver. "But your train won't leave for hours," Celia protested.

"It is better that you leave me as soon as possible," he answered. "I'm glad that you met me at the train, and that I didn't telephone your house, as I had planned. That might have made difficulty for you. And . . . His smile was a trifle strained.

"I want you to know nothing but happiness, my little friend."

She made a despairing gesture. If only he guessed the truth!

She said: "Jim, I feel that I have lost your friendship—irrevocably."

"Never that, Celia! It is always yours, if you want it."

"Oh, I do want it!" she cried desperately. "I want it more than anything in the world."

He glanced at her sharply. "Isn't Falconer making you happy? . . . I have never believed it possible that young Dick could make a woman happy, but, if you love him, perhaps you can put up with a great deal . . . Forgive me, if I seem to speak disparagingly of your husband. But I am rather bitter, because of his attitude toward his uncle, who was my best friend."

She didn't answer his question. Why tell another lie, if it were possible to avoid doing so? Happy? She could have shrieked! Making her happy! The man whose very presence made her life a torment of anxiety and apprehension.

Before they reached the station, he said: "A word of advice, Celia, that you may resent. . . . But I happen to be familiar with Dick Falconer's extravagant ways and his crazy schemes. Your money is all in your own right, at your disposal, to spend how and when you choose. As your attorney, I have nothing to do with your bank account or your investments. However, I offer you this advice—have a care how you let Falconer handle your affairs, or you may find yourself in financial difficulties."

She answered meekly: "I quite understand. But he makes no demands for money."

His mouth tightened grimly. "Not yet? . . . Well, you can cross that bridge when you come to it. But remember what I have told you."

"I shall remember," she promised. The taxi drew up at the station. Annesley stepped out and offered Celia his hand. She had never been so wretched in all her life. To see him going away like this, disapproving, hurt! She had a wild desire to throw caution to the winds and tell him the truth, even at this eleventh hour. A mad impulse to beg him to take her away from this horrible situation seized her. She felt that he would and could do it.

Only the thought of her mother gave her the courage to play out her role to the end.

"Goodbye, Jim." She gave him her hand. "It's been wonderful to see you. I hope you have a pleasant journey to New York. And—and I'm sorry, if I've disappointed you."

He took her hand. His eyes were dark, inscrutable. He bowed and touched his lips to her fingers. "Goodbye, little Celia. Good luck

THE NEW FRIGIDAIRE

Greater beauty . . . Greater convenience
Greater ice freezing power
With incredibly quiet operation

THE cabinets of The New Frigidaires are finished in white Duco or porcelain enamel of white and Glacier gray.

These seamless porcelain enamel linings have rounded corners. These linings are as smooth as a china plate.

The shelves are spaced to provide for tall containers and are removable for cleaning.

Even the lowest one is two feet or more from the floor. You can put the mechanism in the basement if you care to and use the lower part of the cabinet for dry storage.

But even with the mechanism in the kitchen, it's so incredibly quiet that you don't hear it start, stop or run.

The patented self-sealing ice trays provide a fresh supply of crystal ice cubes for every meal.

With all its improvements, Frigidaire prices were never lower or General Motors terms more liberal.

Furthermore your New Frigidaire will pay for itself. There will be no more ice to buy. No more wasted food due to spoilage. Foods are kept fresh and wholesome 4 to 5 times longer so you can buy in larger quantities.

These combined savings are greater than its cost and the cost of operation. The New Frigidaire is now on exhibition at our display room. Come in and see it today.

Athletics Win Final Game With Yanks

Ehmke Engages Hoyt in Pitching Duel to Cut New York's Lead to 1 1/2 Games; Orwoll Fails in Relief Role

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (AP)—Prof. Cornelius McGillicuddy marched solemnly about the premises of Jacob Ruppert this afternoon gathering up the bits of wreckage. In them he found one virtually unused ball game, which he promptly appropriated, 4 to 3, over vigorous and sustained protest by the Yankees. The Athletics escaped from the Bronx with one victory in four engagements, and vanished into the west trailing the champions by one and one-half games.

The battle moved through almost eight innings as a pitcher's duel between Waite Hoyt and Howard Ehmke, but then developed quickly into a contest of strategy between Messrs. Huggins and McGillicuddy. The winning blow was Max Bishop's home run with two out and none on base in the ninth. This smash over Babe Ruth's head into the right field seats broke a 2-3 tie in favor of the Macks.

The veteran Ehmke, batted and beaten in almost all of his recent starts, pitched magnificent ball against the champion until he wrenched his knee in delivering the ball to Tony Lazzari in the eighth. The tall right-hander so injured himself that he had to give way to Oswald Orwoll with two out, the A's one run ahead and the bases full of Yankees. Orwoll was no part of the Monday dragon of last Saturday in Boston. He promptly passed Lazzari to force home the tying run, and then worked the count to three and two on Mike Gazella before finally retiring the Yankee third baseman on a high fly to Haas.

Such antics were very trying upon the nerves of Connie Mack already sorely taxed, and Babe Waiberg was found in the center of the diamond in the ninth to defend the new margin the Macks had built up with Bishop's home run. The Rubes passed Collins for a starter, giving the 40,000 spectators something to yell about, but settled to his task and retired the next three men without incident.

The pennant trail remains long and hard for the Mackmen, but they at least have a chance after winning this last battle with the Yankees. The runners-up have thirteen games in the west and must win eleven of these to take the flag. If the rejuvenated champions do so well as to register ten victories in their fifteen skirmishes along the western front.

Such respective performances would give Connie the pennant by half a game. The half-game factor

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 12 (AP)—James J. Fenton of Lawrence, died in a hospital today of injuries received yesterday while tackling a runner in Holy Cross football practice. His neck was broken.

Hawk Gridders Get Lockers in Preparation Step

With thoughts of the approaching football season in their minds, many Iowa gridders took the first step toward beginning work yesterday when they checked out their lockers as a part of registration. Several more are expected to do the same today in order that they may be in readiness for the initial workout Saturday morning.

By the time Coach Burt Lacerwagen opens his practice, he anticipates having a squad of more than 60 warriors in uniform. With at least fourteen major letter winners, several minor "I" athletes, and nearly two score of numeral men, the squad will be the most formidable one which has represented the Hawkeyes within recent years.

Physical examinations will be the next step toward the moulding of a team. These begin in earnest Sunday and will be completed during the first half of the week. In charge of his phase of the griddion work is Dr. Walter R. Fieseler, medical supervisor of athletics of the university.

Doctor Fieseler inaugurated the policy of physical examinations in 1926 when he took over his present duties. Since that time it has been rigidly followed. All aspirants to positions are given thorough tests and the discovery of any weakness bars the candidate from participation in intercollegiate sport.

Bobby Jones Forced Extra Hole to Win

Von Elm Victim of "Ducky" Yates 3 and 2; Quimet, Marston, Sweester, Evans Fade From Title Picture

BRAE BURN COUNTRY CLUB, NEWTON, Mass., Sept. 12 (AP)—The downfall of five former American title holders and a close call for the king himself, Bobby Jones, today furnished a succession of upsets and thrills in the opening rounds of match play of the amateur golf championship.

With his crown hanging in the balance, Jones staged a desperate uphill fight in his second match to outlast R. Ray Gorton, home club veteran, and win one up at the 19th hole, after he had easily disposed of the New Jersey champion, J. Wolcott Brown, 4 and 3 in the morning round.

This victory for Jones, the first extra hole match he has ever played in the title tournament, brought to a spectacular climax a day that saw the defeat of the man regarded as his most dangerous rival, George Von Elm of Detroit, the only man who has beaten Bobby in the last four years of championship play.

Von Elm, eliminated in the first match of the day by Arthur W. (Ducky) Yates of Rochester, N.Y., by 3 and 2, faded out of the title picture along with four other ex-champions—Francis Ouimet, Max Marston, Jess Sweester and Chick Evans—and the champion of Canada, C. Ross Somerville.

A drizzling rain most of the day beat down on the shattered hopes of these golfing giants as the field of 22 that started this morning was abruptly cut down to a select group of eight. This array is composed of six Americans, led by Jones, and two British contenders led by their own champion, T. P. (Phil) Perkins. The survivors, in the order in which they will start play tomorrow morning at ten o'clock follow:

Upper half: Phil Perkins, Great Britain, vs. John Dawson, Chicago, Dr. Oscar F. Willing, Portland, Ore., vs. George Vogt, New York.

Lower half: Phillips Finlay, Boston, vs. Harris R. (Dimmy) Johnston, St. Paul, John B. Beck, Great Britain, vs. Robert T. Jones, Jr., Atlanta.

Seven Hawkeyes Share Honor of Double Captaincy

The honor of captaining two University of Iowa athletic teams has fallen to only seven men since Hawkeye sports began in the early eighties.

This fact is one gleaned from the material compiled for the directory of Iowa letter men, recently issued by the department of athletics.

Wayman K. Hicks is the only athlete in recent years to hold two captaincies. Hicks led the basketball team of 1923 which shared the Big Ten championship with Wisconsin. He was a brilliant back guard. The 1924 baseball team was captained by Hicks from the third base position.

Two men were twice selected basketball captain and once were a repeater in baseball. Chester A. Buckner, now a professor in Pittsburgh, was the cage leader in 1907

Other two sport captains in Hawkeye annals were: Samuel W. Hobbs, Issaquah, Wash., football, 1898, track, 1897; Chris R. Schmidt, Red Lodge, Mont., basketball and baseball, 1912; and Walter L. Stewart, Des Moines, baseball, 1909, basketball, 1910.
