DEFENSE COUNSEL RECEIVES THREAT

Negro Arrested for Teacher's Murder

Officials at Paris, Ill., Nab Suspect of Preher Slaying

Negro Claims Terre Haute, Ind., as His Home

PARIS, Ill., Dec. 22 (AP)—A Negro who officers said gave the same name and answered the description of the man sought in Carmi, Ill., in connection with the slaying of Miss Anna Preher, 47 years old, a teacher, was arrested here this afternoon.

The Negro who gave his name as William Hoyt McMurry, was arrested as he stepped from a northbound train here. Conductor J. E. Sanderson had notified police that the man had boarded the train at a station near Carmi.

Officers were on their way here tonight from Carmi to identify the prisoner.

The Negro said he was from Terre Haute, Ind., and that he was on his way to St. Louis. He had $37, and a pint of alcohol in his possession when arrested.

Police at Carmi had spread a drag net for Hoyt "Mack" McMurray, 28 years old, hotel bell boy and porter, after it was learned he was missing and a bloodstained coat was found in his home. Motive of the crime was believed to be robbery, after it was found that Miss Preher, treasurer of the White County Teachers institute, had collected $84 which was missing when her body was found.

The Negro's father, Grenville McMurray, said his son was home for a few hours last night. The elder McMurray, said he and his wife called their son into their bedroom and told him that he was under suspicion as the slayer of the teacher.

The son straightened up and said, "I didn't do it," according to the father's story. The son left at six o'clock, this morning. The elder McMurray said he advised his son to go to the police and "straighten things out."

The slayer of the teacher left bloody fingerprints on a scarf and a piece of latticework. The fingerprints on the scarf were found to be valueless by a fingerprint expert who examined them late today, but the prints on the lattice work will be micro-photographed and taken to Michigan City, Ind., where McMurray served a sentence in the state penitentiary.

Dr. Dean to Direct Research Teaching at St. Louis, Mo.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 22 (AP)—A Christmas gift of $500,000 to Washington university for an institute for research and study of eye, ear and nose diseases as a memorial to the late Oscar Johnson, one of the founders of the International Shoe company was announced today by Dr. W. Mokim Marriott, dean of the school of medicine. The money was given by Mrs. Oscar Johnson and three children of Johnson.

Teaching will be directed by Dr. Lee Wallace Dean, former dean of the medical school at the University of Iowa. Scientific work on diseases of the eye in the new institute will be under the direction of Dr. Harvey J. Howard, formerly director of the eye department of the Rockefeller medical school in Peking, China.

'$12,000,000 Story' Boy, Father Start on Prison Journey

OMAHA, Dec. 22 (AP)—Handcuffed to a dope peddler, Jack Parsons, "the young man with the $12,000,000 inheritance story," who with his father, Arthur Parsons, was convicted by a jury ten days ago of mail fraud conspiracy, left Omaha today for Leavenworth federal prison.

Opposite him sat his father, chained to a narcotics law violator.

Jack's wrist was chained to that of Victor "Bedo" Bonnaccio, who last Wednesday attempted a sensational escape from the federal building here.

Jack will spend one Christmas in prison, as his sentence calls for one year and a day, but his father will be there two years.

Charles Fachot, Shot, Makes Fight for Life

PARIS, Dec. 22 (AP)—Charles Fachot, public prosecutor, who was shot yesterday by an Alsatian autonomist, was making a brave fight with death tonight and it was believed he had a chance to pull through.

The vigor and courage that he showed are giving great hope. The government has conferred the grade of commander of the legion of honor on him.

One Bulletin for King; Gains Rest

Curt Statement Shows Royal Patient Improving

LONDON, Dec. 22 (AP) — King George took another feeble step toward health today and his doctors announced that only one bulletin would be issued tomorrow.

This will be the first occasion since his illness became serious that only one bulletin has been forthcoming on any single day. It was taken as indication of an added degree of confidence on the part of the physicians that though they were unable to report any striking progress, the royal patient continued to hold his own.

Doctors Make Hasty Visit

The visits of the doctors today again were comparatively short. The ultra-violet ray experts came as usual in the evening to administer their light treatment.

All of the medical men departed early except Sir Stanley Hewett, who as a matter of precaution, continues to sleep at the palace. He, Lord Dawson of Penn, and Sir Hugh Rigby, the surgeon, signed the evening bulletin which said:

Issue Terse Bulletin

"The king had a quiet day and there is no change in his progress to report. No further bulletin will be issued until Sunday evening."

The morning bulletin, signed by the same trio, was almost terse. It consisted of this single sentence:

"The king had a fair night and his condition remains unchanged."

The confidence of the physicians was so impressive that in palace circles it is said that a strong belief prevails that should there be no further setback in the next few days, it is quite possible that they will have a Christmas gift for the nation in the shape of an official assurance that the king is out of danger.

In any case, it now is evident that the royal family, which will be completed by the arrival of the Duke of Gloucester on Monday, will celebrate Christmas with a degree of quiet confidence which had seemed impossible only a week ago.

It is understood that his majesty now is well enough to talk about domestic affairs and has expressed his wishes about gifts to the doctors, nurses and others who have attended him during his illness.

Dies When Thrown by Horse

FAIRFIELD, Dec. 22 (AP)—Andrew Speer, 67 years old, died here today from injuries received when he was thrown from a horse. His wife died in September.

Muscle Shoals Bill Still Questioned

Norris Claims That Measure Should Be Statue

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—The question whether the president killed the Muscle Shoals bill or allowed it to become a law by failing to sign it at the fag end of the last session of congress still was undecided today after a department of justice memorandum on pocket vetoes was transmitted to congress.

The 99 page statement, dated Oct. 10, and forwarded to the house with a brief letter of transmittal by the president, contained no conclusions and merely went into the history of bills sent to the president within less than ten days of adjournment of congress and remaining unsigned. Instances were cited as far back as 1815 where such measures were not allowed to become law, but the only reference to Muscle Shoals was the fact that the measure still was at the white house with a penciled memorandum, "pocketed," attached.

The Muscle Shoals bill was received at the white house May 26, 1928, three days before congress adjourned. Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, has contended that congress was merely in recess after May 26 and until the second session of the 70th congress began and that failure of the president to sign the bill automatically placed it on the statute books.

47 Year Prison Term Faces Sioux City Man

SIOUX CITY, Dec. 22 (AP)—Five charges of cheating by false pretense were filed here today against Fred L. Schmidt, held on two other counts involving alleged embezzlement of more than $20,000 from the Peirce and Gamet commission firm.

Police said that if Schmidt should be convicted on all seven counts, he would be subject to 47 years in prison. Conviction for cheating by false pretense embodies a seven year sentence, it is said, and conviction on an embezzlement charge involves a five year sentence.

Convict Swallows Camera; Scientists Test Device for Gastro Photography

OSSINING, N. Y., Dec. 22 (AP)—Demonstration of a "Gastro-camera" which takes pictures of the stomach from the inside was made before 100 physicians at Sing Sing prison tonight with a convict as the laboratory.

One of the doctors who arranged the demonstration said that the invention was expected to be of great aid in the study and treament of cancer and stomach disorders.

The camera is the invention of Franz Gerard of Vienna, Austria. Dr. Lawrence Cremin, a specialist of Ossining, was in charge of the demonstration. Alexander Vollero, 40 years old, who swallowed the camera, was selected because he recently had been operated on for a gastric ulcer and the doctors wished to see how the wounds had healed.

The apparatus used consists of a rubber tube about 25 inches long and about five eighths of an inch in diameter. About two inches from the end of the hollow tube, which is shoved down the throat, is a small cylinder shaped camera, two inches long and about half an inch in diameter, equipped with tiny lens and tiny films. Just above the camera a short section of the tube is perforated and through it at this point inclosed in quartz glass, runs a fine wire. This wire, when the camera is operated, lights up like the wire in an ordinary electric lamp only more brilliantly.

With the one "shot" 16 different sections of the stomach are photographed on the sectional films. The films are enlarged many fold for inspection.

The cameras are so constructed, it was said, that if they ever got loose, which was considered unlikely, they would pass through the body without difficulty.

Health Officials Predict Second Influenza Wave

Month's Sickness Peak Rivals Heighth of 1920 Wave

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—The possibility of a second and more severe wave of influenza following the present outbreak was discussed today by public health officials who began considering plans to study the situation at first hand with a view of preventing such an occurence.

While their program was not completed, federal authorities indicated they would seek to add to their knowledge of the disease through both laboratory and field studies, these studies would be carried on by public health officers in several representative areas in various parts of the country.

Two Periods in 1918

"The percentage of cases in the United States for the week ending Dec. 15," it was said, "was as great as it was at the peak of the epidemic of 1920."

At the same time they noted that the most severe epidemic of recent years, that of 1918, came in two waves, the first mild and the second one of severe cases. While they saw no reason for public alarm, they said the second wave was "always to be considered."

Will Study Situation

The studies under consideration would be undertaken, they explained, in the hope that the information gained would prove helpful in combatting a second wave.

Statisticians of the public health service completed a chart today showing that if the number of cases for the week ending Dec. 15—200 per 100,000 population—continued throughout the year, the annual percentage of cases would be 10,000 per 100,000 population.

Reports from 78 large cities showed 1145 deaths from influenza and 5,608 from pneumonia from Oct. 28 to Dec. 15. There were 500,000 deaths from influenza and pneumonia, it was stated, during the 1918 epidemic.

Leaders in Senate Want Treaty Vote

Believe It May Get Ballot Ahead of Naval Bill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—Hope of early and favorable action on both the Kellogg anti-war treaty and the cruiser construction bill after the holiday recess was expressed to President Coolidge today by senate leaders.

Confidence of Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee, who is sponsoring the treaty in the senate, in the pact's ability to draw support has led the leaders to believe it may get to a vote ahead of the naval bill.

Coolidge was represented as well pleased with the program whereby the naval bill and the treaty will come before the senate on an equal footing so far as consideration is concerned and expressed the hope there would be no conflict between the two.

The naval bill, providing for 15 new cruisers, will be the unfinished business on the executive calendar. It will be up to the senate to decide by majority vote which shall be considered. There is no doubt that the republican independents led by Senator Norris, Nebraska, will make a determined fight against the naval bill. Senator King, democrat, Utah, is also bitterly opposed to the bill.

Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, and Senator Moses, republican, New Hampshire, will wage a stubborn fight for adoption of "their interpretative" resolution in connection with ratification of the treaty.

Money Talks; Eller Henchmen Pay Fines Over $8,000, Costs

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 (AP)—Money talks; it bespoke the end of the election conspiracy case against 15 henchmen of Morris Eller, 20th ward republican committeeman and party leader, today when counsel for the convicted conspirators paid out more than $8,000 in fines.

This action, writing finis to the extended court fight growing out of the alleged terrorism of the 15 Eller men on primary day last April, was taken by the defendants who decided to abandon their plans to seek new trials. More than $800 in court costs was also assessed.

MAFIA THREATENS RANIERI JUD

"Judge Robert Gentzels—You ar to late. You are die now. Quit our case. Yours struly." This note was received by Judge Robert E. Gentzel, in whose court the Ranieri kidnaping case is being tried in Chicago. Ole Scully, witness, was slain after a similar threat a few days ago.

Congress Prepares for Holiday Period

Business Rushed as All Members Start on Vacation

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—Governmental machinery slowed to a virtual halt today in preparation for observance of the Christmas holiday.

Many officials have left the capital or will leave before Tuesday to hang their stockings in widely scattered places. Of those who planned to remain here, the majority were members of congress from western states who will not have time to make the trip to their homes and return for the reconvening of congress on Jan. 3.

Congress itself recessed for 10 days after a short session today.

Coolidge to South

President and Mrs. Coolidge expect to leave on Christmas day for Sapelo island, off the coast of Georgia. It will be their first Christmas away from Washington since Mr. Coolidge became president. The date for the president's return to the capital is still uncertain, some doubt having been expressed as to whether he would arrive in time for the reconvening of congress.

Before departing for the south, the president will participate in brief ceremonies at the lighting of a community Christmas tree on Sherman Square, adjoining the white house grounds, at eight o'clock Christmas eve.

Extra Holiday Granted

On Monday government business will cease entirely, all employes having been granted an extra holiday.

Affairs of the Pan-American conference, in an urgent state because of the Bolivia-Paraguay dispute, caused Secretary Kellogg to abandon a holiday trip to Minnesota and he will keep in close touch here with the negotiations of the conference.

Vice President-elect Curtis had planned to go to his Kansas home but decided today to remain here.

One of the high lights of Washington's social life of the week will be the debut of Miss Marian Jardine, daughter of the secretary of agriculture, at a tea dance on Christmas eve.

Navy Takes 1,000 Men From China

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—The navy department has authorized the withdrawal of approximately 1,000 marines from China. The men who compose the headquarters of the sixth regiment and the engineer company, now on duty at Tientsin, will leave for the United States late in January.

This withdrawal will leave about 1,150 in China in addition to the usual guard detachment on duty.

Big Beer Baron Scrubs Floor in Chicago Cooler

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 (AP)—About the only thing Joe Saltis may look forward to with eagerness for the next two months is bed time.

The long sought Beer Baron who kept authorities guessing for more than two years just about summed up his predicament himself today when he said: "What're they tryin' to do? Make a housekeeper out of me?"

Big Joe's remark followed information given him by jail authorities outlining his duties while spending 60 days in jail for carrying concealed weapons. After washing the dishes, he has to mop floors until noon when he returns to his kitchen work. He spends the afternoon dusting and cleaning until supper time when back to the kitchen he goes. He's through at 8 p.m., and then its bed time.

Ending a 208 day search, Saltis surrendered last week and began the 60-day jail term for carrying a pistol. In the meantime he faces other charges, such as dry law violations, conspiracy and contempt of court.

Question Raised as to Validity of Measure

DES MOINES, Dec. 22 (AP) — State house attaches said today that some doubt has been raised as to the validity of the Gilchrist constitutional amendment limiting each county to one senator, which was passed at the Nov. 6 election.

Inquires have been made at the capitol, it was said, about compliance with steps necessary to amend the state constitution. Legislators suggested that when redistricting of the senate which the measure is designed to promote, is brought up, search will be made into the record of passage of the amendment to determine its validity.

Death Demanded by State for Two in Ranieri Case

Case Halted by Killing of Witness; Others Disappear

Bulletin

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 (AP)—The fate of three Italians accused of abducting 10 year old Billy Ranieri and holding him for $60,000 ransom was entrusted to a jury in criminal court at 9:42 p.m., tonight.

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 (AP)—Under a sinister cloud of threatening blackhand letters the Ranieri kidnaping trial drew to a close today with the state demanding death for two of the three defendants.

Sixteen year old Tony Cappellano was virtually ignored in the closing argument of Assistant State's Attorney Samuel Hoffman who trained his entire battery on Angelo Pettiti, saloon owner, and on Tony's father, Andrew Cappellano.

On these two he laid the blame for the kidnaping of ten year old Billy Ranieri and his being held captive on the Cappellano farm near Bourbonnais, Ill., while demands for $60,000 were made on the father, A. Frank Ranieri Italian contractor. Tony's only connection with the case, according to the testimony, was in obliging his father's command to act as a personal guard for the kidnaped lad.

Defense counsel received its first threatening letter today, the members of the prosecution heretofore being the only recipients. Attorney Benjamin Short was advised by one who signed " a white man who means business" that he ought to be shot for defending Pettiti and the Cappelanos. The writer was anxious that Short understand "this is not a blackhand letter."

Interrupted by Killing

The case, interrupted by the killing of a principal witness, disappearance of ten others, and the frequent arrival of epistles containing dire threats, was expected to be in the hands of the jury before tomorrow. Each session of the trial has seen police lining the courtroom and spectators carefully questioned and searched for weapons before being admitted. Judge Robert E. Gentzel, the prosecutors, the kidnaped boy's father, and several important witnesses are under the threat of death.

Reprisal has been promised them if the defendantts are found guilty and sentenced. Ole Scully paid with his life for his knowledge of the case, on which the prosecutors counted much to send the defendants to the electric chair. He was slain in an Italian club.

Witnesses Shun Court

Fearing their lives, other state witnesses made themselves scarce, and the prosecution closed its case without calling nearly a dozen on whom it had counted. Defense attorneys took only a few hours for their case. They placed only Cappelanno, his son, and Pettiti on the stand.

Kidnaping is a capital offense in Illinois and Attorney Hoffman plead with the jury to send the two elder men to the electric chair. As court opened, he announced he would not ask the death penalty for Tony Cappellano.

"If the evidence against Tony Cappellano does not convince you of his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, it is within your power to send him home to his family as a Christmas present," Attorney Hoffman told the jury.

"The evidence against Angelo Pettiti and Andrew Cappellano allows of no doubt—the evidence shows them to be guilty."

Defense counsel answered the state's plea for death sentences with the argument that circumstantial evidence is too dangerous ground on which to send men to death. Attorney Clifford Beach asserted there was no evidence to show that Billy's kidnapers ever discussed the case with the Cappelanos.

Judge Gives Instructions

State and defense had completed their closing pleas a half hour before Judge Robert E. Gentzel gave final instructions to the jurors. Death in the electric chair had been the demand of the prosecutors for Angelo Petitti, alleged master mind of the extortion ring, and for Andrew Cappellano, on whose farm near Bourbonnais, Ill., the boy told the jury he had been a prisoner for 13 days in September.

The trial, which had been punctuated by one sensation after another since the selection of jurors, began several weeks ago, nearly ended in a fist fight between opposing attorneys tonight. The argument arose over the assertion of Prosecutor Charles Mueller that Petitti and Cappellano had taken out only their first naturalization papers. George Guenther, defense counsel, called the statement a lie, and Mueller invited him into the corridor to "settle the thing man to man."

To Make You Merry

YOU have planned "a big time" for Christmas eve and Christmas day. You will go to the Christmas dance and meet all your friends who have returned for the holidays. You will fill up the old car and take a holiday excursion. You will go to the restaurant and eat a big Christmas dinner where you can take things easy and have other people wait on you. You will go to the theater and enjoy a good movie. You will call up the family in Chicago and wish them a merry Christmas, or send a telegram to a friend in Los Angeles. Or perhaps you will make it a day of rest and stay at home to read the newspapers and listen to the radio programs. Oh, it will be a merry Christmas all right!

One or more of these diversions may be on your Christmas program. But have you stopped to think of the thousands who must spend Christmas doing the same monotonous, routine work that they do every other day, just to make your Christmas merry?

A dance orchestra must drive perhaps five hours to "play" perhaps five hours for your Christmas party; then drive home again. Filling station and garage employes must stay on the job all day so that you may have service if the old car needs it. Chefs and waiters must work all day to give you that big Christmas dinner downtown. Motion picture operators must go through the old daily grind in order that you may enjoy a good movie. Telephone and telegraph operators must be at your beck and call if you should desire their services. Newspaper reporters, editors, printers, and carriers must maintain their alertness and keep you in touch with the doings of the world. Radio artists and announcers must work overtime to make your "day of rest" a success. Policemen and firemen must not relax their vigilance over the peace and safety of the city.

These facts are not brought to your attention to dampen your Christmas spirits. In the majority of cases, those who work on Christmas day are adequately compensated.

However, the fact that others are sacrificing their good times to give you a good time should make you appreciate your holiday recreations.

Dedicated to Safety

THE submarine S-4, which was sunk in a crash off Provincetown, Mass., a year ago with the loss of 40 lives, is now being used as a "safety laboratory" to test lifting methods of submarines.

The submarine has purposely been sent to the bottom to test the new lifting hooks. The hooks were not very successful, for although the bow loomed up out of the water, the stern remained on the bottom.

It seems necessary in this country that some tragedy must occur before the necessary preventive measure is taken. Tests are made after the thing has happened instead of before, as it should be.

However, it is proper that a boat on which 40 men lost their lives might be used to experiment that other men need not die in the same way.

Iowa's Cheering

A THRONG of Iowa alumni and admirers, gathered at the football game at Michigan last fall, were unable to encourage the Hawkeyes with organized cheering because they did not know the yells for which yell leaders were wildly clamoring. This fact came to light recently, in a letter from one of those alumni to the alumni association here.

"It really was a pathetic situation," the letter reads. "Has the good old Who-Wa-Wa gone out of style? And the Iowa Fights? I ask you, have they?"

No, these cheers have not become obsolete. They are very much in evidence, now that the basketball season is on, and we are victors over the team which defeated Indiana. But this letter does bring to the fore the yelling situation at Iowa. Even a casual observer would note the difference between Iowa yells and those of other schools during football games. When the students are together at pep meetings, and at basketball games, they show that they "Are made of sterner stuff," but during football season, there is not a satisfactory response to cheer leaders.

Iowa has not introduced very many new yells. She has maintained her old ones until some of the undergraduates have complained of the monotony of them. The fault lies not in the yells but in the yelling, and the lack of spirit may be blamed upon the seating arrangement which is now in practice. If the undergraduates were in a compact mass, there would be an echoing roar of shouting. But we can do nothing where we are surrounded by many who are interested in their cigars, not in the yells; or by students from other schools, or by visiting high school men, or members of some convention which is meeting here.

If we could sit together in a good section, where our efforts would swell one great surge of spirited noise, then we would have volume. Those who attend football games with any degree of regularity will not have trouble in learning our yells. They are as constant as the north star.

Away With the Playthings

WITH kindly and paternal motives, authorities have at last taken steps to deprive the guileless university students of their questionable playthings, the punchboard and slot machines.

The necessity for this is perhaps a sad reflection on the value of higher education, but no one will deny that it was necessary. It would seem that youths who have reached that state of superior mental capacity incident to attending this great institution of learning would grasp the fact that manufacturers do not make bright-colored machines with slots in them and attractive boxes with mysterious punch holes from any philanthropic motive. And yet it is indeed a rare condition when one can make the rounds of the city's cigar stores without noting a group of these intellectually superior persons assembled before one or more gambling devices engaged in pursuing the perpetual illusion.

No estimate of the amount of textbook money and Christmas gift savings that has disappeared down the gilded throats of the pretty playthings is available, but it is large, unquestionably. And since it is quite impossible to conceive that the students will suddenly learn about these things of their own accord it behooves the authorities to not only take the playthings away from the college boys but to keep them hidden.

Reforming the Calendar

(From The New York Times)

Hearings are to begin today on the resolution introduced by Mr. Porter, chairman of the committee on foreign affairs, requesting the president to call an international conference (or to accept an invitation to attend one) on the simplification of the calendar. A committee of the League of Nations has had the matter under advisement, though restrained by an instruction not to consider any changes unless they are definitely demanded by public opinion for the improvement of public life and economic relations. Early this year the committee reported that a questionnaire failed to discover any general desire for a change, except in the particular item of "stabilizing" Easter, and that this involved so momentous a change that all the churches would have to be consulted.

The league has not assumed the authority of a Moses who made a double Sabbath once a year to satisfy the solar demand or that of Julius Caesar or Pope Gregory XIII who took summary measures with the calendar. Pope Gregory introduced the calendar which bears his name, supplanting the Julian, but it was 170 years before it was adopted by England and America and more than 300 years before Russia made the adjustment. China is only this year shifting its New Year to catch up with Occidental calendars, and there are still great areas where the moon remains, as she once was for the most ancient peoples, "the measurer of time."

When the advantages of the proposed thirteen month calendar are widely understood, it is predicted that there will be acceptance of its revolutionary proposal. Mr. Porter seems to think that the most convenient time for its introduction, as Mr. George Eastman has suggested, would be 1933, for then the change of the year would begin with a Sunday and Sunday would thereafter be the first day of the year and the first day of every month as well as the first day of the week. Incidentally, one calendar would serve perpetually, for every year would be as its predecessor. Comparison between months would have the same time basis, and there would be a general equalization of such values as reside in the keeping of the months.

To the suggestion that individuals would wish for reasons of sentiment to keep their birthdays and the present holidays (as the Fourth of July, Washington's birthday, Christmas, &c.), it is answered that Washington's birthday was, after all, 11 days before the twenty second of February, according to the old reckoning, and Christmas had not originally any association with the twenty-fifth of December. As to the Fourth of July, for those who still cling to the old style, it came before the end of June, which is a more comfortable and convenient season for its celebration. The proposed calendar recommends itself especially to those engaged in business, to scientists and government bureaus—in fact, to social and business life generally. And it has left over a day in which the world may in common celebrate what it puts above everything else.

Whee! Here is a poem that was not clipped from the files of bigger and better papers:

"A problem that bothers me much
As I pace up and down the hall—
Shall I shave first, or bathe,
If I get in the bathroom at all?

All through the process it keeps me worried—
What's the logical program to pursue?
Shall I take a bath, or shave—
What's the first I should do?

Even after the duties are performed
I haven't reached a solution.
Now, just which did I do first—
Was it the shave, or the ablution?

A Los Angeles couple were staying recently in China. One day they were served an excellent dinner, the composition of which they knew nothing about. When the Chinese cook came to clear the table, the wife asked him in fun, "I hope you didn't kill a stray dog from the road to make our dinner, Chang?"

"No killee dawk," answered Chang, "him already dead when I picked him up."

The Columbia Spectator, of Columbia university, New York, deplores, in its editorial columns, the prevailing practice of dropping paper bags of water on passing pedestrians. Putting the freshman in their places with a single sentence, the editorial ends, "It would appear on the face of things that certain underclassmen are rather boorish." We sincerely hope that that ends that.

One of the home economics classes made an inspection of the dairy at Ames dairy. In the course of events, a co-ed asked the superintendent:

"What kind of cows are those out in the field"

"They are Holsteins," was the answer.

"Oh, and those little ones, are they halfsteins?"

State Hopeful for Road Bond Sales

DES MOINES, Dec. 22 (AP)—State officials today were not disturbed over the possibility that a soft bond market may impede the sale of the first issue of state primary road bonds amounting to about $17,000,000. It is not likely that the issue will be made before April 1, and it is pointed out that the market conditions for commonwealth and municipal bonds may be considerably improved by that time.

Issuance of any bond will depend naturally on a pronouncement by the Iowa supreme court that the state bond issue is constitutional.

The road bonds of the state will carry a low rate of interest—four per cent, and if that rate will contribute to the unsalability on eastern markets, it is believed that the first issue can be absorbed locally in the communities where paving is to be done.

Fighting Reported in Kubal District

PESAWAR, India, Dec. 22 (AP)—Fighting was going on today in the vicinity of Kabul, capital of Afghanistan. It is believed that the rebels were repulsed. Communications were restored this afternoon between the city and the British legation just outside Kabul which apparently had been within the sphere of military operations during the last few days.

All is quiet in Dakka City, but Jalalabad still is closely besieged. The disorders in the vicinity of the capital have prevented the relief of Jalalabad.

The Sikhs at Lalpura brought their sacred book, the Granth Sahib, here today for safe keeping.

The following message was received from the Kabul radio station this evening:

"The British legation is quite safe and in full welfare. Do not be anxious. Your British messages are delivered to the British legation."

JOLIET, Ill.—Ignatz Polis, Waukegan, once sentenced to death for the slaying of a highway patrolman, and pardoned yesterday by Gov. Len Small, was released from the state prison here tonight.

Hoover Presents Views on Relation With S. America

President - Elect Has Strenuous Day in Capital

RIO JANEIRO, Dec. 22 (AP)—Showered with additional manifestations of friendship by Brazilians for the United States, Herbert Hoover today had the most strenuous morning, afternoon and evening of his whole South American tour. He seemed to enjoy every minute of his round of official and unofficial receptions and greetings.

The most impressive scenes of the day were furnished when he appeared at a special joint session of congress and at a called meeting of the supreme court in mid-afternoon. To these events an elaborate state dinner in the banquet room of the presidential palace tonight furnished a climax with another scene of splendor.

Takes 60 Mile Drive

Between times Mr. Hoover took an autmobile ride of sixty miles along the seashore and through mountains and valleys, he also attended a luncheon at his temporary home in Guanabera palace and held a reception for the American colony to the American embassy.

At the start of the ride the president elect made a magnificent gesture by dismissing the secret service guard with a declaration that he needed no protection from Brazilians.

At Chamber of Deputies

As the president elect of the United States appeared at the chambers of deputies, senators and deputies who had been lounging in their seats, smoking, chatting or walking about and exchanging greetings, arose and applauded vigorously. Crowded galleries looked down upon an unusual scene, the octagonal shaped chamber being bathed in light which swept through a multi-colored dome.

Doctor Azeredo delivered in his native tongue a dramatic speech dealing with the friendship of Mr. Hoover as president. He hailed as a good omen the selection of an engineer as a chief executive, saying that this was an age of engineering.

Hoover's speech, read in English and translated into Portuguese, contained a declaration that new forms of greed and tyranny growing from new discoveries must be met with wise restraint. This sentiment brought renewed applause.

Greeted by National Song

At the supreme court building a few blocks away, he was met at the door of the court by Dr. Godofrendo Cunha, president of the tribunal. A band played the Star-Spangled Banner.

Hoover replied briefly to the welcome by the court, thanking it for the high honor of receiving him. He also outlined his own idea that the growing complexity of civilization has placed upon courts the duty of formulating concepts of justice to meet these new forces and agencies.

Men Marry Sisters, One Shot as Love Becomes Duo Affair

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 (AP)—Charles Geske and Edward Lindenschmidt, married sisters. Tonight Geske, accusing Lindenschmidt of paying attentions to the wrong sister, shot and seriously wounded his brother-in-law and surrendered to the police.

"He has broken up my home by his attentions to my wife," Geske said.

Crazed Man Draws Knife; Runs Amuck in Chicago Crowd

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 (AP)—Apparently in a sudden frenzy of madness, an unidentified man drew a knife and ran amuck today in a crowd of holiday shoppers in front of the federal building, slashing three men and a policemen before subdued and disarmed.

The man suddenly leaped upon M. J. Fox, hurling him to the pavement and stabbing him in the neck and face. A policeman and two other men grabbed the mad man but in the struggle were badly lacerated before overwhelming him.

Mussolini Speaks of Italy's Destiny

ROME, Dec. 22 (AP) — Premier Mussolini wound up the last session of the Italian senate tonight with a speech voicing the utmost faith in Italy's destiny.

After paying tribute to the memory of the late Marshal Cadorna and complimenting the senators on the patriotism which they had shown, he extolled the "gigantic steps" taken in the six years of fascism, adding that the Italian people had "a road of future" before it which would traverse conscious of its strength and position in the world.

The premier closed with homage to King Victor Emmanuel, to the armed forces of the nation and to the Italian people.

It was the last time that the senate will meet as present constituted. The names of 35 new senators probably will be published tomorrow.

After Tmaso Tittoni, retiring president of the senate, made his address, Premier Mussolini thanked the senate for its work. He said President Tittoni had conducted the senate's discussions with much tact and patriotism.

British Subjects to Evacuate Kubal

LONDON, Dec. 22 (AP)—A brief dispatch from New Delhi, India, tonight announcing that the Afghan government had consented to the evacuation of British and Indian women by air from Kabul revived disquietude concerning the actual situation in the capital of Afghanistan.

All previous dispatches had represented the staff of the British legation as safe and not especially anxious, which seemed to agree with the Afghan official reports reaching London that the rebels had been driven from the capital toward the north. While a dispatch from Pheshawar today said that renewed fighting had occurred at Kabul again, it was said that the rebels had been repelled.

The Delhi dispatch did not say that the women and children actually were to leave the city tomorrow, but the inference is that they will do so because, although King Amanullah was said to have been victorious in the first encounters, it is known that the region between Dakka and Jalalabad is dominated by the rebels.

Searchers Fear for Lives of Couple Lost

GRAND CANYON, Ariz., Dec. 22 (AP)—Fear that the treacherous rapids of the Colorado river had claimed the lives of Glenn Hyde of Hansen, Idaho, and his bride grew today as searchers continued a dogged hunt for the adventurous pair who set out two months ago in an attempt to navigate the Grand Canyon in a home made scow.

It had been hoped that snow might tell the tale of the disappearance of the Hydes after army aviators had sighted their scow, but slightly damaged and with its provisions intact on a jagged rock early this week.

The Hydes were last seen at Bright Angel trail Nov. 18 when they cast off to dare the remaining stretch of the river down to Needles, Cal.

EXAMINATION SCHEDULE
First Semester, 1928-1929

Saturday, January 19, 1:10 P. M. to Saturday, January 26, 12 m., 1929

The regular program of class work will be suspended, and the following semester examination program substituted for it. Classes will meet for examination in the rooms in which they have been regularly meeting. The Committee directs the attention of both students and instructors and professors to the regulation that there is to be no deviation, in the case of any examination, from this schedule—except as authorized by the Committee on the student's written petition filed in ample time, supported by the recommendation of the department concerned—to provide relief from an excessive number of examinations within a single day. Deviation for the purpose of getting through earlier will not be permitted.

Classes (except in freshman English and in first and second year French) —(see N.B. below) whose first meetings occur:

Monday at 8, meet for examination Tuesday, January 22, 10-12
Monday at 9, meet for examination Tuesday, January 22, 8-10.
Monday at 10, meet for examination Friday, January 25, 8-10.
Monday at 11, meet for examination Monday, January 21, 2-4.
Monday at 1, meet for examination Saturday, January 26, 8-10.
Monday at 2 meet for examination Thursday, January 24, 8-10.
Monday at 3, meet for examination Thursday, January 24, 10-12.
Tuesday at 8, meet for examination Tuesday, January 22, 2-4.
Tuesday at 9, meet for examination Monday, January 21, 8-10.
Tuesday at 10, meet for examination Wednesday, January 23, 8-10.
Tuesday at 11, meet for examination Friday, January 25, 2-4.
Tuesday at 1, meet for examination Wednesday, January 23, 2-4.
Tuesday at 2, meet for examination Thursday, January 24, 2-4.
Tuesday at 3, meet for examination Wednesday, January 23, 10-12.

The first meeting of a class means the first lecture or recitation period in courses having both lectures and recitations, and laboratory periods; or in cases of courses involving only laboratory work, the first clock-hour of the first weekly meeting. For example, chemistry 1B meets for lectures T Th at 11. The first meeting is, consequently, Tuesday, at 11; and the class will meet for examination Friday, January 25, 2-4, according to the foregoing table. Again, physics 125 meets twice each week, T F, for a three-hour laboratory exercise, 1-4. The period for the examination is, therefore, Wednesday, January 23, 2-4.

N.B. All sections of freshman English will meet simultaneously in rooms to be announced later, Saturday, January 19th, 1:10 to 3:10 P.M.

All sections of French 1 and all sections of French 3 will meet simultaneously in the rooms specified below, Monday, January 21, 10-12. (This one variation from the general plan is due to the circumstance that a control experiment is being carried on in the teaching of first year and second year French, involving the necessity that the same examination, in each of these two courses, be given in all sections on the same day and at the same hour.)

French 1 Sections A, B, C, D, E, F, H—LA Auditorium.
French 1 Sections G, K, O—LA 225
French 1 Sections L, M—LA 203.
French 3 Sections A, C—LA 309.
French 3 Sections B, E, H—LA 204.
French 3 Section D—LA 4.
French 3 Section F—LA 16.
French 3 Section G—LA 118.
No examination in freshman lectures will be given.

"Odd" classes, whose first or only weekly meetings occur on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, or Saturday; or which meet "as arranged;" will be assigned for examination at either one or another of the following three periods, as announced to each such class by the instructor in charge of the class.

Monday, January 21, 10-12.
Friday, January 25, 10-12.
Saturday, January 26, 10-12.

It should be borne in mind that there is possibility of announcing two or more "odd" classes for any one or more of these three periods available for "odd" classes. Therefore, in connection with any such announcement it would doubtless be well for the instructor making the announcement to ascertain whether any member of his class is already under appointment for examination in some other class for the proposed period. To be sure, it is possible to have examinations in more than one class at any one of these times—if no student is a member of more than one of these classes. Since very few students in French 1 and 3 will also be in "odd" classes, it is possible for certain "odd" classes to be accommodated during the period provided for these classes in French subject to the precaution suggested in the second sentence of this paragraph.

According to one clause in the formal faculty action providing for a special semester examination program, "The instructor may use the examination period as he sees fit provided he holds the class for the full period. He may have an oral or a written examination, or both, or neither. He may continue regular work or he may use the time for review, or for any phase of his work which may seem to him desirable at this time."

PROGRAM COMMITTEE, H. C. DORCAS, Secretary.

Kane, Sought for 2 Years Arrested

Wife's Remark Results in Capture of Jewel Thief

KENOSHA, Wis., Dec. 22 (AP)—A trip east to see his wife and her indiscreet remark to a private detective today had resulted in the arrest of Edwar dKane, sought two years as a member of the notorious "Boston Billy" gang of jewel thieves to whom robberies totalling more than $2,800,000 have been charged.

Kane, taken into custody at midnight by police on the request of Edward Sheriton, private detective who trailed him here, was said to be the last of the gang, the leader, James F. Monahan, now is in Sing Sing prison.

Seven Murder Charges

Kane faces seven indictments for murder and also is charged with the share in the robberies which police said, included active participation in theft of the famous Jesse L. Livermore pearls in 1927 at New York. Other robberies laid to his gang were those of the J. Pierpont Morgan, Percy A. Rockefeller and J. P. Thayer homes in New York.

Although admitting his identity, police said, Kane refused to say that he was connected with the gang.

Killed Motor Cop

Kane, for the last two years has been employed in a factory here but he made two trips to New York during that time. After one of these, Sheriton said he learned from Kane's wife that he was in Kenosha.

One of the charges against Kane is the slaying of James McCormick, Connecticut state motorcycle policeman near Greenwich, Conn., May 18, 1927.

The leading role in the Livermore robbery, police said, was played by Kane who obtained a position as chauffeur at the home of Livermore, noted broker, and shortly after disappeared.

At the same time, pearls valued at $127,800 disappeared.

Describing his two year hunt for Kane, Sheriton said that he trailed him closely and on one occasion nearly arrested him in New York where he climbed out the rear window of a flat while Sheriton was walking into the front rom.

Yellowly Wishes District Merry, Dry Christmas

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 (AP)—Prohibition Administrator E. C. Yellowley wished his district a merry and dry Christmas week today, and said he thought his wish would come true.

Hotel and cafe owners in the Chicago prohibition area have pledged their cooperation in preventing patrons from drinking alcoholic beverages, Yellowley announced. The "tougher dives" where set-ups and sometimes the contraband liquor itself are served will be under the eye of a special corps of federal agents.

The administrator for Illinois, Iowa, and eastern Wisconsin made known, the supply of bonded liquor and industrial alcohol in this region is "practically under control."

"Our great problem," he added, "is moonshine from wildcat stills. Our chemists report that this stuff is very dangerous either because of metallic contamination from the still, because of filth, or because of fermentation of products other than ethyl alcohol, such as wood alcohol or acetone."

There is less liquor in Chicago than at any time in 10 years, Yellowley is convinced.

German Villages Adopt American Christmas Idea

BERLIN, Dec. 22 (AP)—Christmas eve will find the American custom of setting up a community tree adopted in many German villages and cities for the first time.

This is especially true of Bavaria. Munich will put up a decorated community tree on Lenbach place in the heart of the artists' colony.

In many villages illuminated trees will be placed at railroad stations to cheer passengers compelled by duty to travel on a night regarded in Germany as the most sacred.

Following Bavaria in frequency of the community tree custom comes Thruingia where many Harz mountain resorts, such as Schierke and Halberstadt, voted to adopt this American idea.

Unusual among German pre-Christmas scenes is that offered by Hamburg where for centuries "Hamburger Dom" meaning market, is an annual feature. Berlin too, adheres to the traditional outdoor Christmas market despite its thousands of attractive shop windows and spacious department stores.

While up to ten days ago the Christmas business had been disappointing, a sudden spell of good weather which lasted throughout this week, gave trade a heavy stimulus.

Condition of Goebel Reported as Hopeful

WICHITA, Kan., Dec. 22 (AP)—Colonel Arthur C. Goebel, noted aviator, who contracted pneumonia a few days ago in one lung after an appendicitis operation, was recovering "satisfactorily" tonight his physicians reported. The flyer was cheered by news that his mother would be here for Christmas day.

PHILADELPHIA — Sergeant Wadsworth, his wife and three children were found dead from asphyxiation in their home late today. Another child was unconscious.

Europe to U.S. In 3 Days Via Giant Dirigible

Members of parliament having tea aboard the R-100 at her formal unveiling to the public. Inset, Lieut. George Noville, U.S.N., who will navigate giant air liner on her maiden voyage.

LONDON—When Charles Lindbergh gambled his life on one motor and his knack of nursing a plane through the air to get him safely over the Atlantic to Paris he believed that his flight might point the way to the ultimate linking of the new and old worlds by regular air lines.

But his most optimistic guess was that it couldn't come before five years. Now, a year and a half later, his dream is actually on the point of realization—in a luxuriously appointed monster of the sky, fitted out with every comfort of an ocean liner.

Huge Bag Undergoing Tests

This amazing airship, now undergoing tests at Howden airdrome, fulfills the most imaginative word pictures of the enthusiasts. Her official designation is the R-100; her builder is Com. Richard Burney, formerly of the Royal Navy. An idea of the super air liner may be had from a mere statement of her dimensions:

She is 709 feet long, 130 feet high and will easily carry 135 persons, inclusive of crew, in addition to ten tons of mail and freight. Six Rolls Royce engines will drive her through the air at a cruising speed of 75 miles an hour.

Comfortable, Safe and Speedy

Every detail of comfort, convenience, safety and speed has been attended to in her building, so that Europe may be said already to be only 48 hours away from the western hemisphere. The R-100's maiden voyage will probably be made early next spring, a tentative timetable for it and other early voyages having been made public as follows:

Egypt, two and one-half days; India, five to six days; Australia, ten days; Capetown, six days, and Canada, three days.

Navigation of the R-100 across the Atlantic to a mooring mast in Canada is to be in the capable hands of Lieut. George Noville, U.S.N., aide to Com. Richard E. Byrd on his trans-Atlantic flight from Roosevelt field, L.I., to the coast of France.

Child Tells Calvin to Ask Santa for Return of Daddy

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—Santa Claus didn't bring little John Chen's daddy to him last Christmas, so he has appealed to President Coolidge this year.

John's home is in Northfield, N.J., and he thinks Santa will do what the president of the United States wishes. He wrote the following letter:

"Dear President—I am writing for you to ask Santa to find daddy. We all know to mind the president and I know Santa is so good he will mind you. Have asked Santa last year but he has not found daddy. To make sure I ask you to ask Santa. Daddy went away three years ago. His name is Wilbur S. Chen."

Steamer Hits Dyke

VALLEJO, Cal.—Running in a blinding fog in San Pablo bay, today, the steamer Calistoga, owned by the Monticello Steamship company, sighted the submarine S-29 close to her bow, and in order to avoid striking the undersea craft, rammed a government dyke off the Mare Island navy yard, ripping away 200 feet of the dyke and doing damage estimated at $6,000.

Ho, Hum, Florence, John Arrive in Sport Roadster

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Dec. 22 (AP)—John Coolidge and his fiancee, Florence Trumbull of Hartford, Conn., arrived here this afternoon from New Haven, Conn., in Miss Trumbull's sport roadster and saw Mrs. Calvin Coolidge for the first time since the formal announcement of their engagement.

Mrs. Coolidge had just left the sick-bed of her mother, Mrs. Lemira Goodhue, whom she has been visiting at the Dickinson hospital, when the young couple arrived. Together they went to the home of Mrs. R. B. Hills, Mrs. Coolidge's friend, for dinner and the evening.

Mrs. Coolidge will leave for Springfield at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

Army Engineer Dies

He was commander of the first army ballon corps in the Spanish-American war. Colonel Wildman designed and erected the first wireless station in Alaska in 1910.

Prince Nicholas Presents Reform

Makes Promise for Protection Against Foreign Goods

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Dec. 22 (AP)—The program of governmental reform which Juliu Maniu, head of the peasant party cabinet, has projected for Rumania, was presented at the opening session of the new parliament today. It was embodied in a speech from the throne by Prince Nicholas who acted on behalf of the regency for the boy king Michael.

Conspicuous in the long list of internal reforms was a promise for rational protective measures against an influx of foreign goods. The document also called for decentrallzation of the government and a policy of local autonomy for the various provinces.

No Obstacles for Loan

Prince Nicholas announced that there were no obstacles to prevent a favorable foreign loan that could be used for stabilization of the currency and the rehabilitation of railroads and industries.

The opening ceremony itself was a brilliant affair. It was preceded by a solemn te deum at the national cathedral attended by the regents in rich robes of state, high church dignitaries in full ceremonial garb, including ancient mitres; military officers in brilliant uniforms and women glittering with jewels and radiant in expensive finery.

Contrast at Opening

In contrast to these were the deputy peasants in immaculate white home spun, richly embroidered in rainbow hues.

After the cathedral ceremony the entire company proceeded to the parliamentary house. There were frequent cries of "long live King Michael," but these were dwarfed by the hurrahs which greeted Maniu.

Invitation Extended for Vare to Appear Before Committee

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—Senator-Elect William S. Vare of Pennsylvania was extended another invitation today to appear before the senate campaign funds investigating committee headed by Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, and was told that an indefinite postponement of the case because of Vare's illness could not be considered.

Senator Reed on behalf of the committee asked Vare in a letter to appear either personally or through counsel Jan. 4. The committee now is preparing a report on its inquiry into Vare's 1926 primary expenditures.

The Best Shot Came Last

By BRIAN BELL
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd of Philadelphia, who has been three times champion of the United States and who held the women's title of Great Britain and Canada as well, was one of the great finishers in the women's championship at Hot Springs, Va., in which she advanced to the semi-final round.

The Virginia hills, especially prominent on the second nine of the Cascades course wearied the former champion and in spite of leads she compiled on the first nine, in all her matches she was forced to come to the home green for a decision. Until the semi-final round she always had something left for the eighteenth.

In her defeat of Maureen Orcutt, the Englewood, N. J., girl who was runner-up in the 1927 championship, she saved her best short for the last. Mrs. Hurd had assembled a lead that seemed to permit no dispute, but she found herself deserted by her putter and lost four holes in a row. Although dormie two, she lost the seventeenth and climbed a long hill to the eighteenth tee, facing defeat unless she could get a half at the home hole, for the hard-hitting Maureen, after a period of shaky play, was herself again and there was little doubt that youth would triumph if extra holes were played.

The eighteenth hole of the championship course is one to make the mouth of a golf professional water, for a deep lake between the tee and green makes the sale of golf balls extremely profitable at Hot Springs.

The hole measures 200 yards, most of them buried deep in mud under water, and there are traps all around the green. Maureen drove first and saw her ball find one of the traps. The fast tiring Mrs. Hurd then showed that if her putting touch might have deserted her she had at least one tee shot left. She placed the ball squarely on the green hole high. She did not have to take another club in hand. Maureen exploded from the sand, missed the long putt and with Mrs. Hurd left with two putts for a win and three for a half, walked over and congratulated her on her victory.

Republican House Leader Asks for Session in April

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—Representatives Tilson of Connecticut, house republican leader, believes that April 15 would be a proper time for convening an extra session of congress to consider tariff revision and farm relief legislation.

Declaring that he was certain no one could speak with authority as to whether or when President-Elect Hoover would call a special session, the majority leader said he felt such a session would be called in event no generally acceptable farm relief legislation was passed at the present session. He added few members of the house seemed hopeful that a satisfactory farm relief measure would be passed at this session.

With one house considering tariff revision, and the other farm relief in a session called about April 15, Tilson said, better legislation affecting those problems probably would result in a much shorter time than at a later date. The laws could become effective before July 4, he added.

Pointing out that the house ways and means committee had completed plans to hold hearings in January and February on the proposed tariff revision, Tilson said this was done so that a bill could be prepared within six weeks of March 4, and be reported later to the house for action.

Tilson said that he believed his plan could be "rapidly carried out provided there is a reasonable disposition to waive minor differences and act together promptly for the public good."

President Grants Former Member of House Full Pardon

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—President Coolidge gave former Representative John W. Langley of Kentucky a Christmas gift today in the form of a pardon restoring full citizenship rights which he lost in 1924 upon his conviction of conspiracy to illegally withdraw whiskey from government storage.

The representative, whose seat has been held since by his wife, Katherine Langley, was in congress serving his ninth term when he was indicted with five others in March, 1924. He resigned from the house when the supreme court refused to review his case and began serving a two year term in Atlanta penitentiary.

Slayer Questioned as to Wife's Death in Murder Puzzle

CANTON, O., Dec. 22 (AP)—Questioned for seven hours today, Wilbur O. Heldman, husband of Mrs. Margaret Heldman, who declared she confessed to the slaying of Vernard E. Fearn, Waco coal dealer, Dec. 6, and took her own life, will go through another examination Monday, in the attempt of Ora Slater of Cincinnati, special detective, to determine what caused the death of the two persons.

A close check of all circumstances in the case has revealed certain discrepancies in his story, which he told to Sheriff Ed Gibson, to whom Heldman brought his wife's body a week after the slaying of Fearn.

Heldman has insisted that when he learned that his wife had slain Fearn, he brought her to Canton, intending to turn her over to authorities, but that as they neared the city, she took her own life.

Cooper Denies Report of U. S. Appointment

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Dec. 22 (AP)—William John Cooper, retiring state superintendent of public instruction, today denied a report originating yesterday in Bakersfield to the effect that he had announced his appointment as United States commissioner of education.

Cooper said that he paid an official visit to Lawrence E. Chenowith, Bakersfield superintendent of city schools, the supposed source of yesterday's disatch, but that he gave Chenowith no information concerning the appointment. Recommended to President Coolidge by Senators Hiram W. Johnson and Samuel M. Shortridge of California for the federal post, he has been under consideration for two months, Cooper said.

Arbitration Group Will Finish Work

Secretary Anticipates Adjournment by Jan. 1

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—Determined to adjourn not later than the end of next week, delegates to the Pan-American Arbitration conference strove earnestly today toward the conclusion of the treaties for which they gathered. The conference has been in session since Dec. 10, and Secretary Kellogg, its chairman, expressed confidence that sufficient progress has been made to assure adjournment before the new year.

Endeavors to reconcile Paraguay and Bolivia following their boundary clash were still in abeyance pending replies from both countries to inquiries which were addressed to them by the party's special committee two days ago. The replies, however, were expected hourly, and Victor Maurtua, of Peru, chairman of the special committee, said he expected to call a meeting for Monday. He based this on information that word from both countries would arrive tomorrow, and that the tenor would be such as to facilitate the committee's task.

A subcommittee of the committee on conciliation treatries met today to complete a draft of such a pact. The principles to be incorporated were agreed upon earlier and in general consist of amplifying the power of the existing Gondra investigation commissions to undertake conciliation activities in case of serious international disputes.

Dr. Maurtua was confident that the conference's activities in mediating the Paraguayan-Bolivian tangle would be completed shortly.

What Has Gone Before

It was May 31 in a southern English city. Martin Templeton could not sleep; there was something unusual and ominous about the terrific but steady wind. It worried him.

The telephone rang. When Martin lifted the receiver, a tense voice was already repeating, to all who might hear, a general alarm sent out by the government. A terrible calamity had stricken southern Europe. The land was subsiding; Spain, Italy, and part of France had disappeared under the overflowing waters of the Mediterranean; communication was crippled. Although the British government was doing everything possible to meet the emergency, the gale was increasing steadily.

Martin decided that his wife, Helen, and the two small children would be safer outside the house until the storm subsided. Before they were ready to leave, however, a large tree crashed through the north wall of the house pinning Helen beneath a mass of masonry.

Martin carried the two children to a deserted marl-pit near the house, then returned to help Helen. She was alive, but pinned beneath a huge beam. Martin succeeded in extricating her from the debris, only to find that she had received a wound in the side and was weak from loss of blood. Since the wound was not serious, Martin left Helen with the two children in the marl-pit and went foraging for food and other necessities.

Fire had destroyed his home and the neighboring cottages. In the street Martin came upon a woman, hopelessly injured when her automobile had crashed into a fallen tree. She was moaning pitifully, but resisted all his efforts to help her. Martin wandered on, leaving her to the death he was powerless to prevent. In a deserted shed he found some eggs, which he took.

Suddenly Martin became aware that he was walking unsteadily. A wall of solid masonry which had withstood the fury of the tempest the night before, crumbled and fell in a cloud of dust. Then he felt a sensation as when an elevator starts suddenly downward. The land was sinking! Gradually he became so accustomed to the movement that it ceased to affect him consciously. He continued on his way; then he came upon a river where there had been no river. He climbed a hill for better view.

A sea of turbulent water stretched beneath him to the horizon. Foot by foot it was rising above the falling land.

Martin realized with a shock of horror that the whole city must be under water: he could only hope that the flood had not yet reached his loved ones. Vainly in the failing light, he groped his way along the lapping edges of the water, seeking the spot where he had left Helen and the children.

Night fell, and the water was around and beneath him on every side. He could no longer doubt that they were dead, nor could he hope that there were many hours of life left for him.

He sat on a fallen rail and watched the moonlight on the ruffled waters, unconscious of fatigue, cold, or hunger—awed, rather than miserable; even elated by the greatness of the events around him.

Now Go on with the story

So the dawn found him. It came, a faint widening of gold, in a sky that the night wind, which had blown steadily from the northwest, had cleared of the polluting dust of yesterday. The pale gold flushed rose-pink over half the sky, and was reflected upon the waters.

He watched the dawn advance, august and passionless, indifferent to the triviality of human destiny; indifferent and serene, though there should be no man living to observe its beauty, and, as he looked, he knew that life would continue.

Realizing this, he felt sorrow, as the night had been powerless to bring it. He knew that it must even be possible that his own life would continue, and realizing this, he felt fear.

He became conscious of pain and hunger. He rose stiffly, and was aware that he was very cold.

He felt the warm rays of the level sun, and an impulse of satisfaction, if not of pleasure, moved beneath the desolation of his mind.

He looked round, and resignation left him; he was a human atom once again; a private in the losing battle with death which is the common destiny of his race.

The water was around him on every side. It swept in a strong current but 20 feet beneath the place on which he was standing. It ran northeastward, troubled by a crossing wind, but with no great roughness of surface. It broke against the steep slope beneath him with a continued murmur. It sparkled in the sunlight. It was scattered over with many drowned and broken things. A dead ox drifted past. Other things. But he saw neither man nor woman. Only, at the last, washed to his feet (for he had descended, as he gazed, to the water's level), there came a human arm, torn from its trunk by some mechanical violence, with a bundle of drenched parchments still clutched in the dead hand, which was plainly that of a woman.

He went to the top of the little knoll on which fortune had marooned him. The water was round him on every side.

He looked in the direction of his own home. There was nothing there now but the level waste of the flood. He remembered that Helen had been too injured to walk. She could not swim. She would not have left the children. There was no hope, no faintest hope, that the seas could have spared them.

He wondered whether he might find them floating in the water, but he saw that even that hope must be fruitless. The current was sweeping everything to the northeast, far out and beyond him.

He considered the possibility that he could himself escape from his present confinement. He saw that the water was not rising—had even sunk somewhat from its highest level—and though it surrounded his place of refuge, it did not appear to be of more than two or three feet in depth on the northern side, and of a width of about 20 yards, beyond which the ground rose again, and gave prospect of a wider range and a greater security.

He watched it for a few minutes, wondering whether it were still declining, so that an hour's patience might give an easier passage. He supposed that there would be tidal changes, apart from the vital question of whether the land had settled to a final stability. Certainly the water had been higher than it now was. But that might only be because it had swirled further up the slope at the first rush. He observed no change during the few moments that his patience lasted. Then he stepped in.

It was not an easy crossing. He waded more than waist deep in places, and though there was no such current as hurried past on the other side, yet the water that was diverted to this side of the knoll was flowing steadily in the same direction, and made it difficult to keep his feet and a straight course to the nearest point of the dry ground before him.

He stumbled once over an obstacle the water hid, and recovered himself with difficulty, drenched to the shoulders.

Having dry ground beneath him once again, he wrung out his soaked garments as best he could, but he was in no mood to linger. Even beyond the calls of thirst and hunger, or of any physical discomfrot, was the desire to gain the highest point, he could, and learn how much of solid land was still remaining around him.

When he gained this view, he was relieved of any immediate apprehension, for though he saw little either to south or east but wastes of wrack-strewn water, it was equally evident that the land remained unflooded for at least a space of some miles in the opposite directions.

Relieved of the fear that he had been marooned on a spot of land too small for human sustenance, he turned his thoughts to the primitive necessities of the wild—food, and water, and shelter from the certainties of rain and cold.

III.

The first day he saw no man. His search for food was so far fortunate that he came upon the little heap of articles which he had thrown aside on the previous night, when he had first tried to outrun the water, that he might go to the rescue of his family. Among these were the broken remains of the eggs that he had been carrying, from which he was able to recover a sufficient part of their contents to provide the meal he was needing.

Beyond that he got little. He searched in deserted gardens. He ate lettuce and radishes. He made a slow and meager meal of green peas that had scarcely begun to form in the pods. He ate half grown gooseberries, green and hard. He searched in charred ruins for food which was not there.

In the evening he came upon an isolated tool shed in a large garden. Built in a very sheltered corner, it was still standing. There he lay down and slept.

That day he remembered clearly, but he had little recollection of those that followed.

He must have been ill for days. The shock to mind and body, the unusual exertions, the effects of wet and exposure, and of unsuitable food, had their natural consequences.

Had he been unsound in any vital organ he would have had little chance of recovery. As it was, he probably owed his life to the fact that the shed had been used by a gardener who had left a pot half full of cold tea.

This, being desperate with thirst, and after an interval of illness, of which he could not guess the duration, he found a lump of mouldy bread, he found a lump of muldy bread, which he chewed as he lay.

After this he had a time of healthful sleep, and then staggered uncertainly into a sunlit world.

He had little strength, but the instinct for life was strong and his constitution uninjured.

Of the succeeding days his memory was blurred and dreamlike.

Though he had little strength, he had much patience. He lay for many hours over a burrow, till he had caught a rabbit in his bare hands. He cooked it, somehow, for there had been matches in the shed, and he made a fire of wood without difficulty.

He followed a stray hen, it seemed for days, until he had found the place where she was laying.

He dug up potatoes, still unripe and small, but which he could cook till his matches ended. He learned to eat raw beans.

Strength came again, and with it the desire to adventure further.

He had searched among ruined houses, but was several days before he had any means of making another fire.

His greatest find at this time was a sack of sharps in a farm outbuilding, and a small quantity of bran. When he had secured a further supply of matches he made this meal into a kind of thick soup, and it was delicious to his altered palate.

He came on a woman who had sustained life, with an amazing vitality, crawling upon the ground, and dragging after her a broken leg.

He stayed beside her, doubtless prolonging her life, and almost certainly increasing her misery, after the tradition in which he had been educated. He could not save her life, for which an amputation would have been the only hope, and that was beyond his skill or resources.

She died unconquered, as she had lived, being too great for circumstance. Having fought hard for life, she accepted death confidently. "Though He slay me yet will I trust Him," she quoted, when the fever slackened.

She lay unconscious for two days before he was sufficiently sure that she was dead to bury her from the flies.

After that, he came on an open drain in a deserted highway, at which a navvy was blindly excavating. The man begged his assistance for the useless labor. He was plainly mad, and when Martin declined to help him he made a murderous attack, from which Martin escaped with difficulty.

He wondered how the man lived.

He avoided that stretch of road for the following days, until he came on the man again, then in a condition of raving insanity. He mistook Martin for his Creator, and cursed him in words unfit for reproduction.

At this time Martin did not go far from the shore which overlooked the place of the ruins of his own home. When his physical needs were satisfied, he would sit for many hours gazing over the water. His body recovered strength. His health became more vigorous than it had ever been, but his mind lacked incentive to do more than provide for his immediate necessities.

His reason told him that the whole earth could not be under water. He expected continually to see the smoke of some approaching steamer.

But the seas remained empty.

Santa Claus Makes Trouble as Grain Price Rises, Falls

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 (AP)—Santa Claus played the mischief with grain trading today, but enough business developed to indicate that wheat inclined downward and corn the reverse. Pulling down the wheat market were increasing deliveries on Chicago December contracts, whereas scantiness of corn receipts here gave something of an advance to the bulls.

Closing quotations on wheat here were easy at a shade to ½c net decline, with corn unchanged to ½c up, oats unchanged to ⅛ to ½c advance, and provisions varying from 5c setback to a rise of 2c.

With as much as 417,000 bushels delivered here on December wheat contracts today in addition to liberal amounts handed over at previous times this month, it was easily apparent that no end-of-the-month pinch need be expected as to wheat.

Wheat bears put particular stress meanwhile on trade gossip about what was described as the annual outpouring of wheat from the southern hemisphere now due.

If there was any difference, corn was the most active grain here today, the outstanding feature was persistent absence of liberal offerings from the country.

Oats today followed the lead of corn, and was responsive to commission house buying.

Provisions acted easier as a result of scattered liquidation and hedging pressure, but declines were limited, hogs being steady to 10c higher.

Holiday Adjustment Halts Stock Market of Irregular Buying

NEW YORK, Dec. 22 (AP)—Preholiday adjustment of speculative accounts imparted an irregular trend to the price movement in today's brief session. Many traders, leaving the financial district today for a three-day holiday, were reported to have lightened, or closed out, their accounts. Others showed a disposition to take profits in anticipation of the expected "money squeeze" next week.

Friday's call money rate of 8 per cent carries over the week-end, but heavy withdrawals next week are expected to shoot the rate up to 10 or 12 per cent, possibly higher. Time money held firm at the highest level in eight years. Normally, an easing of rates take place after the first of the year when the Jan. 1 dividend and interest payments are out of the way.

There has been some "tax selling" in the market this week but because of the sharp advance in most stocks, this has been confined to a relatively few issues, or to stocks purchased just before the sharp break earlier in the month.

Some fresh buying came into the merchandising group was a result of the cheerful reports of holiday retail trade. National Bellas Hess, which broke below 140 in the early December reaction, was again the feature, closing seven points up at a new high at 205.

Woolworth and Montgomery-Ward cancelled their early gains and closed lower.

Coppers again gave one of the most impressive demonstrations of group strength on buying influenced by the high current earnings of the leading producers, and recurrent rumors of an early increase in red metal prices. Anaconda and Greene Cananea established new high records for the year, although the latter lost its gain, and Cerro De Pasco, Chile and Kennecott showed net gains of two points or more.

Radio ran into heavy selling from the start, closing 10 1-4 points lower at 370 1-2. A. M. Byers, United Fruit, Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies, Marmon Motor, National Supply, Packard Motors and a few others recorded losses.

American International corporation, Goodyear Tire, Adams Express, Columbia Graphophone, International Cement, Jewel Tea, Marlin Rockwell, Mullins, Simmons and Warner Brothers Pictures closed with net gains of three to nine and one half points.

Rails generally moved within radius of two points. Lackawanna sank to a new low at 125 1-2.

Garden

With a five and ten cent store as the highly modern background on which the star paints a glowing comedy-romance, Mary Pickford's latest production, "My Best Girl," opens today at the Garden theater for Christmas offering.

The theme is a pleasing variation of the ever-popular "Cinderella" type, which Miss Pickford in the role of stockgirl in the basement of the great "five and dime" establishment, and the leading man, Charles "Buddy" Rogers, as the son of the millionaire owner. A light-hearted humor that never reaches the slapstick variety, yet which pervades the entire film, serves to carry the audience along irresistibly, and Kathleen Norris, the noted novelist, has introduced an unusual degree of heart interest and appeal into the story.

The added attractions include a Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy comedy, "Early to Bed," and the latest news events.

Englert

The Englert theater is now playing "White Shadows in the South Seas," the book of flaming loves on the Isle of Tahiti, with Monte Blue and Raquel Torres, the girl who was offered a South Sea island and $2,000,000 in pearls by Chief "Mehevi." This feature is a Metro Movietone production, and is featured with languorous native songs, and lawless traffickers in pearls and human lives. It was two years in the making.

One Movietone and one Vitaphone presentation, together with Paramount's latest news events, round out the program.

Tuesday brings "Manhattan Cocktail," with Nancy Carroll and Richard Arlen in the cast, synchronized on the Movietone with sound and music effects, introducing the song hit, "Another Kiss," as the theme song. An "Our Gang" comedy, one Movietone act, and Movietone news, the talking newsreel, round out the bill. The Englert management announces a special New Year's eve show starting at 11 p.m.

East-West Football Squads Prepare for Charity Contest

Star Northwestern Fullback Reaches Stanford for Tilt

Hollingbery Puts Men Through Long Scrimmage

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 22 (AP)—Long practice grinds were chalked up today by the eastern and western players who will compete here Dec. 29, in the annual east-west charity football game.

Their personnels complete, both squads raced through workouts that included signal drill, kicking, a scrimmage on the part of the eastern delegation and all the other necessary details coaches can think of.

One of the best bets of the east, Walter Holmer, reached Stanford where his team mates are sojourning. Holmer probably will share the burden of attack with Howard Harpster, Carnegie Tech quarterback.

That Coaches Kerr and Dick Hanley are banking on an aerial attack to settle the issue is evident. In every workout, much time is devoted to long tosses from Harpster to Haycraft, Minnesota end, and the other backfield men.

The westerners, two days behind their rivals in practice, functioned more like a football team today. Coach Orin E. Hollingbery has found himself hard put for a safety man and signal caller. He is breaking in Bob Sims, Stanford halfback, for the safety position, while Dan Allen, former Yale star and this year with the Olympic club, is being used at calling plays.

California Gets Heavy Workouts

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 22 (AP)—California's Golden Bears, although muscle weary from the strenuous workout of over two hours yesterday, were given little respite today from the gruelling conditioning planned by Coach "Nibs" Price to prepare them for the east-west struggle here New Year's day with Georgia Tech.

The California mentor trotted his charges onto the grass covered field at Tournament park twice today and each time shot them through a lengthy practice. He sent them through a two-hour session this morning, carted them off to lunch, and then returned them to the park for another spell of grilling work.

Feeling that his charges have put on too much weight during their month's absence from the gridiron, Price plans to work them strenuously, until next Wednesday, when he he will start easing off.

Steve Bancroft, star tackle, and Bob Norton, sub end, appeared at the morning workout, completing the squad. Both were held over a day in the north.

Friedman Chosen on Professional All-American Team

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 22 (AP)—Benny Friedman, of Cleveland, All-American quarterback from the University of Michigan, has landed another mythical 'All-American" berth, it was announced today by managers of the national professional football league.

The former Wolverine star quarterback has been selected as quarterback on the "post graduate" All-American team, composed of players in the National football league. Managers, officials and newspapermen chose the mythical professional team and their choice of Friedman as the field general was virtually unanimous.

Airplane Carrying Meeker, McConnell Hops Off for Reno

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 22 (AP)—An airplane has been chartered by officials arranging the charity football game here New Year's day between all star elevens of the Big Six and Southwest conferences in order that two of the principal players may be on hand when the whistle blows.

"Blue" Howell, star Nebraska fullback, and Dan McMullen, giant Cornhusker guard, are the ones for whom the plane was obtained. They are participating in the annual east-west game at San Francisco Dec. 29. They will leave the coast that night by rail, reaching El Paso, Tex., the morning of Dec. 31. There they will board their ship. If everything goes well they will reach Dallas the afternoon of Dec. 31.

Both Howell and McMullen are familiar with Nebraska plays, which Coach Ernie Bearg will use in the game here, so they will not be greatly handicapped by their late arrival.

Plane Avoids Smash Up

RENO, Nev., Dec. 22 (AP)—Miss Ruth McConnell and Dr. D. O. Meeker landed here shortly before 6 p.m. in a plane. In landing, the plane's tail skid hit the top wire of a fence causing a near crack up. The pilot straightened the ship out and no one was hurt. The couple expect to leave here tonight on the gold coast limited for the east.

Will Spend $500,000

URBANA, Ill., Dec. 22 (AP)—More than a half million dollars will be spent in 1929 by the University of Illinois athletic association on two projects from funds raised by football games. The two projects are an artificial ice skating rink at a cost of $250,000, and the replacement of the temporary wooden stand at the south end of memorial stadium with concrete seats, which also will cost $250,000.

Tending Nets for Maple Leafs

By QUIN HALL

The Toronto Maple Leafs got away with a burst of speed in the start of the current hockey season and a lot of bugs who follow the ice sport carefully will tell you that Connie Smythe's gang is going to cause plenty of trouble before any clubs square off in the Stanley Cup playoff next spring.

This winter the play throughout both leagues is likely to be much peppier than last season. Several of the clubs, including the New York Americans and the Detroit Cougars, have bolstered up their ranks and the former underdogs of the hockey world are ready to reach up and take a nip at the leaders almost any time. The Chicago Blackhawks got off to a miserable start but are apt to show improvement and hit a fast stride later in the season.

Toronto Club Strengthened

At Toronto the major change in the makeup of the team centers around the nets, where Connie Smythe has Lorne Chabot, the goalie who up until this season has been turning in good performances for the New York Rangers—last year's Stanley Cup winners.

During last season's play-off for the mug, Chabot was injured and was out for the remainder of the series. During the off season it was announced that Chabot would be sent to Toronto this season and that Goalie Roach, of the Maple Leafs, would be in the nets for the Rangers. The deal was rather a shock to close followers of the game as Chabot had always given a good account of himself in front of the Ranger goal and was given credit for being responsible for a good many of the New York victories.

Interviewed about the change, Lester Patrick, the manager of the Rangers, said that he was afraid Chabot might be a trifle puck shy following his injury last spring, but so far this season Lorne has shown no desire to leap out of the rink when the puck sings through the air announcing that it is bound toward the Maple Leafs' goal. On the contrary, Chabot has been doing a bang up job of defending the Toronto nets and if he continues his good work he is likely to be one of the outstanding stars of the season.

Chabot Anxious to Succeed

Connie Smythe knows a lot about the ability of Lorne Chabot. It was Connie who steered Chabot into the job as the Ranger goalie, and Smythe still has the utmost confidence in what Chabot can do. This is sure to give Lorne added confidence in himself and this will be reflected in the performances he turns in while working in front of the Toronto nets.

Chabot knows that a lot of the success of the Leafs hinges around him and he is especially anxious to prove to the hockey world that Manager Patrick made a terrible mistake when he sent his goalie to Toronto. That alone might be enough to make Chabot star at the goals again this year and there are a lot of other reasons why Lorne wants to make good. One of them is his friendship for his new pilot, Smythe.

Andy Blair a New Star

In Andy Blair the Leafs have another new player who is apt to form the background for a strong relief line. Blair is a youngster who was much sought after by other clubs and even in a secondary position his acquisition may have considerable to do with the success of the team. Last year he was with the University of Manitoba, Canadian amateur champions. Horne, another newcomer, looks good and in an early game with the Chicago Blackhawks both of these youngsters dented the nets with scores after the first string players had failed to ring up any tallies.

And fans, everywhere, are pulling for Chabot to make good.

Loughran Signs With P. Harmon

CHICAGO, Dec. 22 (AP)—Indications that Paddy Harmon, president of the Chicago stadium corporation, intends to have a heavyweight elimination tournament of his own were seen tonight with the announcement that he had signed Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia, world's light-heavyweight champion.

Loughran, now campaigning for recognition as a contender for the heavyweight title, agreed to fight any outstanding heavyweight for the opening bout in the new stadium, which will seat 25,000.

The contract calls for Loughran to meet the best heavyweight obtainable on or before Mar. 31. The match was to be staged late in February or early in March if the stadium is completed.

Harmon said the date would be held open for Jack Dempsey, Jack Sharkey, Paulino Uzcudun, Johnny Risko, Jack Delaney or any other heavyweights important enough to attract the cash customers.

Phillies Sign Up Springfield Infielder

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 22 (AP)—The Philadelphia Nationals today announced the signing for 1929 of Joseph L. O'Rourke, 21 years old, infielder. Last year O'Rourke played third base for Springfield in the Central league, where he had a season's batting average of more than .300.

The Phillies also announced a schedule of 15 games with other clubs to be played next season during the training season in the south. The exhibitions begin March 14 with the Athletics at Winter Haven, Fla., and conclude April 2, with Columbus, also at Winter Haven. Other games will be with St. Louis Nationals and Americans, Brooklyn, Boston Americans and Rochester.

Hagen's Golf Eye Good for 7 Goats

AVALON, Santa Catalina Island, Cal., Dec. 22 (AP)—Walter Hagen, dean of professional golfers, has a faultless aim also as a marksman.

"The Haig" who is playing in the $2,500 Santa Catalina Island open tournament, got up in the early hours this morning to go goat hunting. Many wild goats abound in the mountains of this island.

Although out for just a short time, Hagen's crack marksmanship accounted for seven goats. As a result, the hundred-odd golfers on the island had a goat barbecue tonight.

Williman May Coach at Ohio

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 22 (AP)—Ohio State university still is without a head football coach to succeed Dr. John W. Wilce.

The university athletic board conferred for an hour today on the selection of Dr. Wilce's successor but adjourned without making any announcement other than that no decision had been reached.

The board did not set a date for a future meeting. Whether it considered anyone besides Sam Williman, Wilce's chief assistant, who has been regarded as the most likely candiddte for the position, is not known.

The fact that no date was set for future consideration has served to strengthen the belief held by some that a head coach may not be chosen until after another football season, thus permitting Williman to take the Scarlet and Gray through one season before formally placing him at the head.

California, N.U. Will Not Meet on Gridiron

BERKELEY, Cal., Dec. 22 (AP)—An intersectional game with Pennsylvania at Philadelphia next October will prevent the University of California from entering into a home and home agreement with Northwestern university during 1929.

Hawkeyes Prepare for Pittsburgh in Daily Practices

Hope to Make Up for Last Year's 40 to 44 Loss

With three non-conference games tucked safely away, and the fourth and hardest looming up next Saturday, the Hawkeye cagers are swinging through their double practices daily, in preparation for the Pittsburgh game, Dec. 29.

Last year the Panthers made the Hawkeyes for a 44 to 40 victory in an overtime period. Iowa seemed to have the game won and were leading by a nice margin, but the wild-eyed Pennsylvanians went on a scoring spree, that did not stop with the whistle, but continued right on through the extra period.

Iowa was only one of a series of victims last year, for the Pittsburgh quintet knocked off a bunch of other Big Ten teams.

This year's invasion of the middle west was not so successful, and the Smoky City men were cracked down regularly. They did manage to beat Ohio State, however.

The squad took a limbering up practice yesterday afternoon. Rogge, substitute forward provided the entertainment for the afternoon with his lightning like pivots, that made some of the regulars look slightly foolish.

Coach Barry used two combinations yesterday on offensive and defensive plays. Wilcox at center, Twogood and Nelson at forwards, and Geneva, Kinnan, and Farroh at guards, made up one group. The second bunch was composed of Wagner at center, Spradling and Plunkitt at forwards, and David and Jebbens at guards.

Christmas will not mean a thing to the squad as far as work is concerned for the men will practice straight through until they leave for Pittsburgh, either Thursday night or Friday morning.

St. Mary' Has Tough Schedule

To Play Three Games in Three Successive Days

Francis Sueppel, St. Mary's basketball coach, is driving his men overtime in an effort to get them ready for the heavy schedules that face the Blue and White cagers next week-end. Three games in three days is the tough assignment that is to be handed out to the cagers.

Thursday night they will clash with the Central high school team of Ft. Madison. Friday night the local aggregation will tangle with the St. Joseph's team on the Ft. Madison floor, and Saturday night they will match with the St. Mary's quintet at Burlington.

Coach Walter S. Knox's Iowa City high basketball squad is taking a lay-off for awhile, and does not swing into action again until Jan. 4, when they will meet Dubuque at Dubuque. Due to an epidemic of influenza the game with Washington, Cedar Rapids, which was scheduled for last Friday was cancelled.

The University high basket-tossers are having a lay-off from the maple floor during the vacation. The next game for the U. high cagers is Jan. 9 with West Liberty.

St. Patrick's has started work for its tilt with St. Mary's Jan. 2. The game will be played on tthe St. Pat's floor.

Northern Railroads Profit by Decision of Commerce Group

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—Railroads located in north Mississippi valley territory will experience a marked increase of revenue on a portion of their north-and-south traffic as a result of an interstate commerce commission decision issued today which will decrease revenues of southwestern railroads that cooperate with the northern lines in handling the traffic under consideration.

The commission's decision will install a new base on which will be calculated divisions or joint rates applying to north and south traffic, moved over two or more railroads and transferred through the gateways of Kansas City and St. Louis Mo., and East St. Louis, Cairo, Gale, and Thebes, Ill. Though the change in divisions is comparatively slight, the commission said it would considerably increase the share of rate receipts going to the northern lines from the traffic. Roads were instructed to put the new divisions into effect within 60 days.

This and That in Sports

Current Comment By Skelley

The value of keeping one's wits about him while under stress was demonstrated in Chicago yesterday during the Taberski-Greenleaf battle for the world's pocket billiard championship.

Greenleaf, who on the average is as good as Taberski, was under strain during the whole tournament. He and Taberski were so antagonistic that at times play had to be stopped and the players warned by the referee. As a result both players played poorly. If Greenleaf had kept his head even had Taberski got mad, he would undoubtably have been the champion of the world at pocket billiards.

Star representatives of the east and west will play a football game Dec. 29 in San Francisco, with the results of the contest going to charity. The teams are not truly representive of the football calibre of the sections of the countries, but the occasion is very praiseworthy.

The basketball squad went through a fast workout yesterday afernoon, as an after-practice to the Marquette game. Rogge, Ida Grove sophomore, having a lot of fun with the regular forwards with his clever pivoting.

He was dodging away from Twogood and leaving the ex-captain grabbing the air. One time Plunkitt was making a grab at the elusive Rogge, and missed him entirely and spilled up under the backboard on top of three of the other players.

We wish it would be possible to take some of the characteristics of the players on the squad and make up the perfect player. This mythical man would be about five feet 11 inches tall and weight about 175 pounds.

He should be able to jump like Wilcox, have the cool-head of Twogood, be able to pivot like Rogge, handle his feet like Nelson, dribble like Geneva, guard like Kinnan, have a left arm like David's and a right arm like Wilcox's. Have Barry teach him to pass and shoot, and he would be just about perfect.

Minnesota Comes From Behind to Beat Drake 33-25

Gopher Center, Guard Make 25 Points for Winners

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 22 (AP)—A last period assault, in which the Gophers reached the pinnacle of effectiveness this season, swept Minnesota to a 33 to 25 victory over Drake university of Des Moines here tonight.

The Gophers' victory was as spectacular as it was decisive, Coach MacMillan's team struggling up from behind at the opening of the second period to knife through the opposition's defense for consistent scoring.

Minnesota trailed at the close of the first half, 14 to 13, but its startling attack began immediately after the first tip off in the following period. From then on the Gophers ran rampant to pile up 20 points and assure victory well before the period ended.

It was no one man entirely, however, as MacMillan's comparatively youthful aggregation played together so well that the Bulldogs had few chances to stop them, much less to score themselves. Capt. George Otterness was the same adept leader of his team that he has been since the campaign began, scoring five field goals and two foul baskets besides being the key man on both the offense and defense.

Scouts to Help Santa Claus in Toy Distribution

Gift Giving by Boys Annual Custom in Iowa City

Santa Claus is to have plenty of help in Iowa City if the Boy Scouts have anything to say about it.

A shining array of toys of every description has been gathered by the scouts. Many toys which were just a little the worse for use have been repaired and painted in the regular manual training classes at the Iowa City high school under the direction of C. R. Cannon and during the last week the scouts have been unusually busy gathering additions to the collection.

Scout Executive Paul R. McGuire tells several incidents where children have brought in toys which they admitted they might like to keep but which they felt would be appreciated more by some members of poor families not able to have a merry Christmas unless Santa Claus receives some aid.

This collection of toys for the less fortunate sons and daughters of Iowa City is an annual custom with the Boy Scouts.

Distribution of the gifts will be through the social service league in order that they may go to homes where they are really needed and where they will do the most good.

Benjamin Asked to Write Review

Gilbert G. Benjamin, professor of European and economic history at the University of Southern California, has been asked by The Christian Century to write a 2-000word review of Fay's new work on the origin of the World war, says a recent issue of The Daily Trojan, student newspaper.

Professor Benjamin was formerly a member of the University of Iowa faculty, being connected with the history department. He taught at Southern California for two summer sessions and last year accepted a permanent position on the faculty there. The Trojan makes the following comment on Professor Benjamin:

Dr. Benjamin is one of the new professors this year, although he taught during two summer sessions on the Trojan campus. He was graduated from Yale and then did some research work in Europe. Dr. Benjamin has taught at New York university, Chicago, Texas, Yale and Iowa. While at Iowa he and Howard Jones were great friends, and one of his life-long friends has been Dr. Riddle of the Southern California faculty.

In the past three Who's Who, Dr. Benjamin's name appears. He has written a large number of magazine articles and a number of books.

Benjamin is one of the best read men on the Trojan campus, and his reading has not been confined to a single field. He is interested in student life, and odd as it may seem to some professors, wants to engage in campus activities.

The Trojan campus needs more men and professors like Gilbert Giddings Benjamin.

Fire Burns Home South of Iowa City

The farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Asbury, seven and one-half miles southeast of Iowa City in Lincoln township, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The cause is attributed to a defective flue. The house was on the C. A. Paulus farm.

Mrs. Asbury, who was in the home when the flames broke out, carried her two small children out of danger but was unable to save much of the furniture. Mr. Asbury was husking corn and did not reach the house until the fire had done most of its damage.

Holiday Greetings Sent by Commander of Spanish Veterans

SAVANNAH, Ga., Dec. 22 (AP)—Col. William L. Grayson of Savannah, recently elected commander-in-chief of the United Spanish War Veterans, today made public holiday greetings sent to his comrades in which he expressed "the hope and faith that the star of Bethlehem will guide us in obtaining from our gracious government such equalization of assistance in justice to which our faithful service commends us."

"Thirty years have passed since, as young men, we marched beneath the folds of old glory," he said. "Our eyes have lost some of their luster and our step is not as quick as in the days of '98. We have lost none of our love of country nor our courage, and we are still unyielding in our devotion to our national ideals and institutions.

"The Spanish war veteran has reached the age when, because of expert efficiency, mass production and the age limit, industry—and even our government—has closed the door to those seeking employment. But the spirit of '98 still lives and is as irresistable as it was in the days when we rushed to the shores of Cuba in the cause of humanity."

Congress Active as School Kids Before Holiday; Exchange Wishes

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP)—The senate and house might have been large classrooms on the eve of the seasonal holiday for the little work done and the profusion of greetings exchanged today. With the routine sessions quickly over, the few members who were on hand made their exit, many going home for Christmas, not to return to their desks until Jan. 3.

In the senate, Heflin of Alabama, paid tribute to Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, and Senator Warren of Wyoming. After that he recited on how great it is to be a boy. Brookhart of Iowa, dwelt on the merits of cooperative marketing, and Christmas bells was the topic of a poem read by Frazier of North Dakota. Judge Decides in Favor of Children Seeing Santa Claus

WICHITA, Kan., Dec. 22 (AP)—In answer to a mother's tearful request, Judge J. D. Dickerson today ruled in favor of Santa Claus visiting three children in their own home, rather than in a county institution.

The mother, Mrs. Cora Allison, told the judge that the children's father, James Allison, would not support the family. Dickerson committed the children to the Wichita Childrens' home. It was a relief to Mrs. Allison to know the children would receive care and good food, but she wasn't happy.

"I have the rent paid for the coming week and I'd like to have them on Christmas," she told the judge. "I have a little gift for each one—some clothes and things."

"Any toys?" asked the judge.

"I couldn't afford them," Mrs. Allison replied.

"But we can," Judge Dickerson said, reaching in his pocket.

Spectators, a deputy sheriff and two newspaper reporters also contributed. The judge handed a little heap of bills and silver to Mrs. Allison who set out to do some belated Christmas shopping.

"Santa Claus" of Pasadena Victim of Double Tragedy

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 22 (AP)—Tragedy came today for Pasadena's Santa Claus just as he completed one mission of good cheer for a throng of children and prepared for another.

Henry L. Dickson, 57 years old, wealthy furniture dealer, played "Santa Claus" at a masonic celebration last night. Today as he drove his car from his garage, a 74 year old woman stepped across the driveway and was knocked down.

Mrs. Dickson, standing at a window of her home, fainted. The husband discovered his wife prostrate when he ran into the house to call for an ambulance.

After telephoning for aid for the injured woman, Dickson attempted to revive his wife. Several hours passed and a son-in-law called the house. He became alarmed when the telephone failed to answer and went to the home, where he found the husband and wife apparently asphyxiated. An inhalator squad attempted to save their lives but they died.

Dickson was to have played "Santa Claus" again Christmas eve.
