HAWKS BREAKS NON-STOP RECORD

Judge Orders Release of 10 Carloads of Near Beer

Only Intoxicating Beverages Illegal Under Iowa Law

Too Many Technical Issues Involved to Appeal Case

DES MOINES, June 28 (AP)—Efforts of John B. Hammond, veteran dry crusader, to prohibit the sale of near beer in Iowa received a setback today. Municipal Judge J. E. Mershon, by sustaining a motion of defense attorneys, released ten carloads of the beverage seized under a search warrant sworn out by Hammond last week and handed down an opinion that near beer is a legal drink.

He ruled that the state had failed to prove that near beer was an intoxicating beverage and added that it could not be classed as such.

Hammond Obtains Warrant

Hammond had obtained the search warrant on the claim that the near beer, as a malt beverage, was prohibited under the Iowa statutes. He asserted that malt liquor, whether intoxicating or not, was illegal in Iowa and in numerous other states having laws similar to that of Iowa.

Defense attorneys countered with an argument that the fortieth general assembly of Iowa has changed the title of the chapters dealing with liquor from "intoxicating and non-intoxicating liquor" to "intoxicating liquors," and on this point they were upheld.

Near Beer Not Intoxicating

The court finds that the statutes of Iowa do not make illegal the sale or transportation of beverages that are not intoxicating liquors in fact," Judge Mershon ruled "It is conceded that the liquor seized in this case is malt liquor but it is not intoxicating in fact.

"The section of the code classing malt liquor that is not intoxicating in fact for the reason that the title of the act in which that section of the code is found contains the words only 'intoxicating liquors.'"

Under the Iowa law, the judge ruled, only one subject may be dealt with under a single act and therefore the statutes referred to by Hammond would be invalid if they also included "the subject of non-intoxicating liquors."

Hammond announced he planned to appeal the case to district court.

Will Not Appeal Case

County Attorney Missildine said, however, there would be no appeal. "I talked it over with the attorney general," he said, "and we decided this would not be the case to appeal. There are too many technical issues involved such as the interstate commerce and search warrant angles."

Charges will be between $150 and $200. Court costs will add somewhere between $50 and $100 to the total cost of the action, and an appeal, if it were taken, would cost anywhere from $100 to $400, it was said.

Dickinson Speaks on Farm Relief

DES MOINES, June 28 (AP)—Farm relief legislation, carrying with it a formulated remedy and sufficient machinery to benefit vastly the entire farming industry of the nation, today, was the subject of an address by Representative L. J. Dickinson of Algona, before the Des Moines chamber of commerce.

A large audience greeted the speaker in anticipation of a specific statement formally landing his candidacy for the republican nomination as United States senator. While such a declaration was not forthcoming, sufficient indication was given to newspapermen and political friends, at an after luncheon conference, to make the candidacy "absolutely assured."

"No matter what its enemies may say about the new farm bill, it is a definite commitment on the part of the government to find a remedy," Dickinson told the chamber of commerce. "This commitment alone should give encouragement to those living in the farming areas, because when once committed to this problem, the government or any administration in charge of the government, cannot afford to admit failure."

State Appointments Made

DES MOINES, June 28—Secretary of State Ed M. Smith today announced the appointment of S. Louis Ostrem as director of the securities department and W. T. Frame as deputy director. The posts were created by the 1920 legislature after passage of the uniform "blue sky act which will be administered by the department. Ostrem is superintendent of the bond and investment division of the office and Frame, former deputy secretary of state, is a Des Moines attorney.

Good Will Planes Crash; Flyers Escape Uninjured; Tour of State Ends Today

Daily Iowan Entry Continues With Pilgrimage

By VIRGIL L. LEWIS
(Editor of The Daily Iowan)

BEDFORD, June 28 (Special to The Daily Iowan)—Bedford citizens, airminded and enthusiastic, welcomed the pilgrims on the second Iowa good will tour tonight, and entertained them for their last over night stop of the week-long trip during which 18 cities in all parts of the state were visited. A new airport will be dedicated here tomorrow.

Creston is the remaining stop on the tour which will end tomorrow noon at Des Moines.

Mrs. Muriel Hanford of Sioux City, who has been racing neck and neck with the three musketeers of Waterloo, signed off all hostilities and came into Bedford tonight flying as one of the formation. She took the place of one of the trio who was forced to drop out at Ida Grove after his plane had been injured in landing.

The Daily Iowan plane piloted by Paul B. Shaw was the third to settle on the port here tonight. The new motor installed at Ottumwa has been working well.

Our trip today started from Sioux City and included Ida Grove, Harlan, and Clarinda, and ended tonight in Bedford.

Two Crafts Definitely Out of Last Day of Flying

BEDFORD, June 28 (AP)—Another plane dropped out of the second Iowa air tour today when Wilford Gerbracht of Ames and Junior Easton of Des Moines crashed about five miles from the landing field here, which was tonight's stopping place. Neither was seriously injured, although the plane was wrecked.

They were flying with two other planes and were seen to go into a tailspin and crash to the ground. The engine was found about 20 feet from the body of the plane.

Governor Hammill and Congressman Lloyd Thurston of the eighth Iowa district arrived by auto to see the planes.

Hammill Gives Address

Hammill spoke tonight at a dinner for the pilots at the Bedford country club.

Gerbracht's accident was the fourth today, but only two of the planes will be out of the race.

The plane of Killip, one of the 'three musketeers," fell 16 feet at Ida Grove and was wrecked, but Killip and his two passengers were unhurt. The ship hit what the pilot described at an air pocket.

In attempting to take off at Clarinda, R. Kroening of Cedar Falls swerved sharply and hit obstacles at the end of the field, smashing a wing. He expected to fly to Des Moines Saturday.

Planes Out of Race

Gerbracht's plane and that of Killip will be unable to rejoin the tour. With Burd White's ship, which was forced down Monday, they brought to three the craft which have been eliminated.

To replace Killip's plane in the three musketeers V formation, the craft of Mrs. Muriel Hanford of Sioux City was added. Unofficial figures place her plane in a tie with those of the two remaining musketeers.

The flyers learned tonight that Clarence Chamberlin, Iowa's trans-Atlantic aviator, will speak at a dinner in Des Moines at the close of the tour tomorrow.

Hoover Appoints Three to Board

Hopes for Acceptance of Other Members by Next Week

WASHINGTON, June 28 (AP) — James C. Stone of Kentucky, C. B. Denman of Missouri, and Carl Williams of Oklahoma, were appointed today by President Hoover as members of the federal farm board created by the new administration farm relief act.

The president said he hoped to have the acceptances of three or four more members by the middle of next week and added that it was his belief that the full board of eight would be able to organize by Aug. 1.

While Hoover made no designation of a chairman among the group of three announced today, the general expectation is that Stone, founder and president of the Burley tobacco growers' cooperative association, will be designated as chairman.

After the names were made public by the president, it was explained at the white house that Secretary Hyde of the agriculture department, had been cooperating with farm organization and others interested in making the selections. Names of the organizations and individuals who endorsed each of the three men were made public.

The list appended to the brief sketch of Stone was by far the most formidable and included Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, a candidate for the republican presidential nomination which Hoover won, and one of the foremost proponents of the equalization fee plan of farm relief.

Fur Breeders Meet

AMES, June 28—Plea for a strong organization of Iowa fox and fur breeders was made today by J. H. Buchanan of Ames, association president, at the group's annual summer school. Other speakers were Dr. R. G. Green of the University of Minnesota, Dr. Earl Dewey and Dr. Karl B. Hanson of the federal biological survey, and Dr. E. A. Benbrook and Prof. W. V. Lambert of Iowa State college.

THE WEATHER

IOWA—Mostly fair, and warmer Saturday: thunderstorms Saturday night or Sunday; cooler Sunday in northwest portion.

Fair & Warmer

Lowest temperature yesterday, 65; 7 a.m. yesterday, 64; highest temperature yesterday, 81; 7 p.m. yesterday, 74; reading at midnight, 62. All readings unofficial at the Welt agency recording thermometer.

Madison County Bond Issue Fails to Pass at Polls

WINTERSET, June 82 (AP)—A large rural vote today defeated Madison county's proposed $1,200,000 primary road bond issue. Final returns were 1,599 for the project and 1,869 against, an unfavorable majority of 270.

Winterset approved the bonds 766 to 210, and Earlham voted 192 to 76 for the issue. Smith township, in which T. Charles is located, gave the largest negative vote, 16 for and 388 against. In Ohio township the tally stood 20 for and 255 against.

Failure of the bonds to pass will stop early completion of highway No. 16, north and south across the state, and No. 2, an east and west road. Only a few counties on these highways have not provided for paving.

Madison county was the second this year to vote down a bond issue, Cherokee having disapproved of a similar proposal.

Dickinson County to Vote July 10

SPIRIT LAKE, June 28 (AP)—Dickinson county supervisors today set July 10 for a special election on authorizing $723,000 in primary road bonds.

The bonds, if authorized, would provide for paving 23 of the 43 miles of primary roads. Completion of No. 71 probably would be the first project.

Mother Reclaims Baby Given up to Negress in Kansas

KANSAS CITY, June. 28 (AP)—Mrs. Irvin Thompson, who said she recently came here from Des Moines, has claimed a baby she had given a week ago to Mrs. Ruth Walton, a Negro.

The baby has been cared for at a charitable institution since Mrs. Walton called police and said the baby had been given her and asked if it would be all right for her to keep it.

Mrs. Thompson had nothing to say when she took the three months old child yesterday. The "gift" was made when the Negro woman observed Mrs. Thompson had difficulty in caring for several children at a local bus station.

LINDY, WIFE IN ST. LOUIS ON WAY TO COAST

ST. LOUIS, June 28 (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his bride, the former Anne Morrow, who landed last night after a flight from Indianapolis, plan to remain in St. Louis at least until tomorrow afternoon and perhaps until Sunday, the colonel said today.

At a hotel where he is staying with his bride, Colonel Lindbergh greeted reporters affably today, discussed aviation and parried personal questions.

Colonel Lindbergh, who is making a final inspection trip over the route of the transcontinental air transport coast to coast train plane service, said he and his bride expect to arrive in Los Angeles not later than July 8, the day the new service is to be inaugurated.

Woman Bandit Stages Holdup

Gets $14,000 With an Unloaded Gun; Disappears

TOPEKA, Kan., June 28 (AP) — A young woman, unassisted, and with a revolver believed to have been unloaded, coolly held up two employees of the Security Benefit association here today and escaped with approximately $14,000.

The holdup occured in front of the headquarters of the association after the woman had forced A. J. Perlich of Kansas City, to drive her six blocks to the scene of the robbery.

Escaping on foot the woman fled to an apartment building a block away where she discarded a hat, smock and other articles of clothing. She then ran out the back door and disappeared.

Near the building, the woman dropped her revolver. It was unloaded when found. She stopped W. L. Stalons, chief clerk of the association, at St. Louis street, as they were returning from a bank with payroll money. She held a handkerchief to her face.

"Drop that package or I'll blow your insides out," she commanded, drawing a revolver.

New Labor Head Dismisses Three From State Board

DES MOINES, June 28 (AP)—J. D. Seaman, deputy labor commissioner, was notified today by Henry V. Hoyer, new labor commissioner, who succeeds A. L. Urick, that he will not be retained in the department.

Seaman went to the labor bureau as factory inspector in 1913 when Urick was appointed commissioner and has been deputy for 10 years.

Ellen M. Rourke, factory inspector, and Mrs. Beatrice Stevens Suttek, also were advised by Hoyer that their services will terminate with those of their chief.

George B. Albert, manager of the state free employment bureau in Des Moines, and John W. Holmes, supervisor of the state fire employment bureau in Sioux City, are to be retained, it was announced.

Byrd's Observers Find 20,000 Miles of Antarctic Land

WASHINGTON, June 28 (AP —A report from Commander Richard E. Byrd, made public today by Secretary Adams, related that observers in the airplanes of his south pole expedition had discovered approximately 20,000 square miles of hitherto unknown land in the Antarctic.

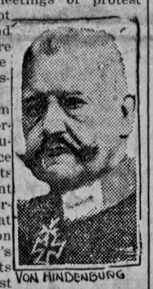
The flights, according to the report to the secretary of the navy, were made during the period preceding the winter-long polar night which now has forced a dispension of exploration.

The major part of the report described the discovery and partial survey of the Rockefeller mountain range which one of his airplane parties discovered in January. It was surveyed principally from the air in the two months following.

Germany Echoes Protests Against 'Blame for War'

BERLIN, June 28 (AP)—From one end of Germany to the other today echoed a great voice of protest against the stigma of the "war guilt lie" on the tenth anniversary of the signature of the Versailles peace treaty and on the fifteenth of the shots at Sarajevo which precipitated the world war.

There were meetings of protest everywhere except in the Rhineland where they were forbidden by the interallied commission.



VON HINDENBURG

Most of them seemed to be orderly, though students and police fought with fists and clubs in front of Berlin university and again at President Von Hindenburg's home. Students protested against an order forbidding the demonstrations.

Former Kaiser Wilhelm was a spectator from afar of the national protest against responsibility for the war in which he was a principal figure. Failure of the Reichstag last night to prolong the defence of the republic act caused a slight flurry in Berlin today, for by its terms the former kaiser was supposed to be definitely excluded from republican Germany at the pleasure of the government.

Officials of the Berlin police today made clear that the law itself "in no way contains a definite refusal of permission to return to Germany, but full freedom of decision is left to the German government."

They pointed out that the Reichstag's failure to prolong the law beyond July 22 still left this freedom of decision to the government because the former kaiser would have to apply for visas and other papers like any private individual.

Berlin newspapers were draped with borders of heavy black as a sign of mourning. A great sky sign in the west end of Berlin urged citizens to unite in repudiating the "war guilt lie."

Livingston Letters Reveal Ann's Love for Manufacturer

CHICAGO, June 28 (AP)—Further details of the shattered romance of Ann Livingston and Franklin S. Hardinge, oil burner manufacturer, were read today at the trial of her $250,000 breach of promise suit against him.

The letters, written in Tulsa, Okla., by the 29-year-old divorcee to the 62-year-old defendant in Chicago, starting with the modest salutation of "My dear Mr. Hardinge" and advancing through "Dear Franklin" to "My own darling," revealed Ann jumping with joy at the prospect of again seeing Hardinge.

They also revealed that Ann held back from quitting her secretarial job in Tulsa and coming to Chicago because of $200 in debts. Although she confessed in one of the epistles that she disliked having her gray-haired suitor paying the debts, a later letter thanked him for the check, which ostensibly, was for the purpose of freeing Ann from her creditors.

She told him in one letter how her friends were teasing her about getting married, and how her denials did no good because her friends would just have it that way.

Lutherans Plan Picnic

AMES, June 28—Several thousand central Iowa Lutherans will picnic here Sunday, it was announced today. The Rev. T. F. Gulixson of Minot, N. D., will speak.

Airplanes Collide; Two Die in Crash

Instructor, Student Fall to Death in Wreckage

RIVERSIDE, Cal., June 28 (AP) —A collision of two United States army airplanes above March field, here today sent a flying instructor and his student cadet to their death. The dead: Lieut. William G. Plummer, 28 years old, Mobile, Ala.; Cadet Cyrus Wallace, 22 years old, San Gabriel, Cal.

The men died in the wreckage of their ship which fell about 400 feet and was demolished. The second plane piloted by Cadet Letzig, escaped with little damage.

Observers said Wallace was leading a three formation plane flight. As the ships banked, Letzig apparently misjudged distance and the wing of his plane brushed the tail controls of the ship in which Wallace and Plummer were flying. The contact unbalanced Wallace's ship and it dived into a tail spin.

Other Ambassadors from U. S. Precede Dawes As "Drys"

LONDON, June 23 (AP)—The American embassy in London now "dry" in accordance with the decision of Ambassador Dawes, is not the only "dry" spot in the American diplomatic service.

No spirits have been served in the American legation in Denmark for the last two years.

The embassy in Berlin is officially dry and only tea and coffee were served at the "house warming tea" in April, the only official entertainment held in the new building. The situation, however, is not comparable to that in London because the embassy building houses only the chancellery and note the ambassador's residence. Consequently there is little entertaining there.

The American minister at Oslo is a total abstainer and the question of serving alcoholic beverages or of following the example of Ambassador Dawes has not arisen there.

Miss Minneapolis Continues to Near Endurance Record

Flyers Up 131 Hours; 42 Hours Still Remain

MINNEAPOLIS, June 28 (AP)—Droning its monotonus song of a perfectly working motor, the Cessna monoplane of Thorwald "Thunder" Johnson and Owen Haughland bore steadily toward the world's endurance flying record tonight after more than 130 hours in the air.

Having ridden out two storms in the last two days and completed a refueling operation when only a five minute supply of gas remained in their tank, the flyers successfully passed their one hundred and thirty-first hour of continuous flying at 4 p.m. They must remain up 42 1-2 hours longer to surpass the record of 172 hours, 32 minutes, one second.

All has gone well, the flyers said in notes dropped to the ground, since the take-off at 5 a.m. Sunday. If they attain their objective, they will equal the record of 9:32 a.m. next Sunday. They must exceed the record by one hour to obtain official recognition by the National Aeronautical association.

Their feat of soaring safely through two storms when hail might have shattered their propellor has given the flyers confidence that their ship, the "Miss Minneapolis," can stay aloft the necessary time.

The refueling contacts were made today without incident after the one of last night made under extreme difficulties in a storm near Rosemont, south of the twin cities. Gene Shank, pilot of the refueling ship, said it was the roughest weather he ever had encountered. Afterward it was learned that the endurance ship had only a five minute supply of fuel when contact was made.

Chicago Tribune Sponsors Flight

Cramer to Chart New Air Route; Chicago to Berlin

CHICAGO, June 28 (AP)—Chicago Tribune officials tonight revealed that the newspaper's amphibian plane, would take off from Roosevelt field, Long Island, tomorrow morning for Chicago preparatory to a round trip flight from Chicago to Berlin. Park Cramer, co-pilot with Bert Hassell on an attempted Rockford, Ill., to Stockholm flight last year, will be at the controls.

With Bob Gast sharing the controls with Bob Ward, Tribune aviation editor, as a passenger, Cramer will seek to chart a new air route along the great circle from the Chicago industrial center to Europe.

The start to Berlin probably will be made next Saturday, the ship starting for the north as an ice and ocean-going flying boat.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Tribune, is owner of the plane and sponsor of the flight.

It is estimated that the trip to Berlin will be made in five days, weather permitting. The route, as mapped by the American geographical society, embraces only two jumps over open sea and those of less than 300 miles in distance.

Jensen Plane Passes Three Days Aloft in Refueling Endurance Test

Ashcraft-Gentry Crash Reveals Love Affair With Ulbrich

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., June 28 (AP)—Their plane wrecked by the stress of a rising storm and their hearts torn by tragedy which befell their friendly rivals, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Jensen and William Ulbrich jolted along the skies tonight awaiting the third dawn since they began their assault on the refueling endurance flight record.

The Jensens and Ulbrich went aloft Wednesday, and last night Jack Ashcraft and Viola Gentry went up in a rival craft. This morning the Ashcraft-Gentry plane ran out of fuel in a fog and crashed near Old Westbury. Ashcraft was killed, and Miss Gentry seriously injured.

Girl Calls for Ulbrich

The crash and the subsequent events revealed an apparently romantic attachment between Miss Gentry in the plane that fell and Ulbrich in the plane that stayed aloft.

As Miss Gentry was lifted from the wreckage of the plane, she murmured: "I'm Viola Gentry. I just got a tough break, that is all. Tell Bill Ulbrich. Oh, Bill, Bill."

Through the hours in the hospital as her life hung in the balance, she called intermittently for the man who still rode heart-broken through the skies.

Not that Ulbrich knew the extent of the tragedy, for the Jensens, close friends of both Ulbrich and Miss Gentry, saw to that.

They told Ulbrich that Miss Gentry had broken an arm, which was true as far as it went. She had broken both arms in several places and was bleeding internally. They told him they'd try to rig a microphone at her bedside so she could tell him not to worry.

Blood Transfusion Given

Volunteers for blood transfusion were requested during the day and everyone at the field vied for the opportunity to try to save the woman flyer's life.

Late today it was learned that Miss Gentry was married about a year and a half ago but was separated almost immediately and had retained her maiden name. The name of her husband, said to be an aviator in Florida, was not learned, nor could anyone tell whether a divorce was pending.

Plane Crashes on Landing But Pilot Escapes Uninjured

17 Hours, 43 Minutes for West-East Flight

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N.Y., June 29 (AP)—(Saturday)—Capt. Frank M. Hawks broke his own record for a non-stop transcontinental flight from west to east upon his arrival here from Los Angeles at 1:20 a.m. (eastern standard time) today.

As Captain Hawks brought his plane to earth it taxied and struck a fence surrounding the Meadowbrook Polo club. Its landing gear was broken and its fuselage ripped but Hawks was unhurt.

The flyer's unofficial time for the west-east flight was 17 hours and 43 minutes. This would make the elapsed time for the round trip flight approximately 36 hours and 53 minutes, since Hawks flew from New York to Los Angeles in 19 hours, 10 minutes, and 32 seconds.

Breaks Own Mark

Hawks arrived here yesterday from Roosevelt field, New York, in 19 hours, 10 minutes and 32 seconds, a new record for the east-west trip. The previous record of 24 hours, 51 minutes was established last year by the late Capt. C. B. D. Collyer and Harry Tucker.

The record Hawks sought to beat over the west-east course was his own, 18 hours, 21 minutes, and 59 seconds. He left intent on setting a new record of 14 hours. The flyer left New York yesterday hoping to be back there again within 36 hours. This was made unlikely because of delay for repairs after arriving here.

Hasty Repair Work

Captain Hawks hopped off at the Metropolitan airport here at 3:37 a.m., seven hour, and 14 minutes after arriving.

Repairs were made rather hastily when the stabilizer was found damaged on the westward flight and a leak was found in the carburetor which had to be replaced.

Hawks took 525 gallons of gasoline and 25 gallons of oil, more than enough for the distance, estimated around 2,800 miles, route considered.

France Prepares for Debates on Debt Ratification

PARIS, June 28 (AP)—Preparatory work for the debate on ratification by the French parliament of the war debts to the United States and Great Britain continued today without interruption.

There was no delay for a reply from Ambassador Claudel in Washington, who was asked by Premier Poincare to endeavor to obtain postponement of the maturity date on the French bill for American war stocks.

Session Over

The plenary sessions which the finance and the foreign affairs committees of the chamber of deputies have been holding, to hear the premier since June 18, are over.

The committees meet separately Tuesday to appoint secretaries and make recommendations to the chamber on the debt agreements.

Premier Poincare, Minister of Finance Cheron, and Foreign Minister Briand, all emphasized the necessity of prompt ratification before the joint committee today. It was inferred that the three ministers entertained little hope that the chamber's request to Washington for delay of the payment of the $400,000,000 bill for war stocks would be successful.

Poincare Reiterates Request

They were aware that in the absence of congress, President Hoover would have to call for a special session, and they were hardly sanguine that he would do so.

Along these lines, Premier Poincare reiterated his request today that the committees recommend to the chamber to grant the government authority for ratifying the Mellon-Berenger accord by decree.

Any reservations could be attached as annexes to the ratification measure.

Iowa Hotel Chain Expands

DAVENPORT, June 28 (AP)—The United Realties, incorporated, of Davenport, operators of the Black Hawk hotel chain of hotels in Iowa, late today announced that it had made a 10-year management contract for 13 hotels and apartment houses in Washington, D. C. It will assume charge between July 15 and Aug. 1. Dick R. Lane and J. Lane are in Washington completing the deal.

SOCIAL EVENTS

Hundreds Attend Summer Session University Party

Forgetting that such banal things as books and classes and dull cares existed, 600 summer session students danced last night at the summer session party held at the Iowa Union. From the oldest faculty member to the youngest freshman there, all testified to the truth of the time-worn statement, "And a good time was had by all."

As the first party of the summer progressed, the union began to resemble the scenes of the all-university parties held during the regular school term. All were bent upon having a good time. They proved that summer session students are versatile, in that they can play as well as study hard.

Music was furnished by the S. S. President Madison orchestra. The orchestra platform was gaily decorated in lavendar and gold.

During the dancing, approximately 40 bridge players enjoyed their game in the women's lounge.

Faculty members and their wives, and members of the administrative staff and their wives met the students informally at the party.

Admission tickets were obtained by calling at the summer session office. Ruth Pieper, executive secretary of the summer session office, had general charge of the arrangements for the party.

Personals

Hilda Schmickle, A, plans to visit over Sunday at her home in Central City.

Margaret Rommel, G, left yesterday to spend the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Rommel of Mt. Pleasant.

Viola Pierson, A, and Elizabeth Binder, A, will visit at their homes in Burlington.

Martha Jane McCormick, A, will spend the week-end at her home in Tipton.

Marion Hamilton, G, left yesterday to visit at her home in Ft. Madison. She will return Monday.

Gertrude Walker, 220 Lexington avenue, and Dorothy Ewers, 1033 E. Washington street, left last night for Hackensack, Minn., where they will remain at Camp Holiday for eight weeks. Miss Walker will be a councilor at the camp. She will be a junior student in the university next fall.

Bert Derry, who graduated from the university this June, will arrive today to visit with friends here. He is now connected with the Hesth Manufacturing company at Davenport.

Due to the serious illness of his mother, Mrs. J. P. Bleeker, who is in the university hospital, Mr. George Bleeker and his wife of San Francisco, have returned to the city for a visit after a three year's residence in California.

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Hart, 730 E. Burlington street, were visitors in Davenport last evening.

Lois Thornburg of Des Moines, who will be a senior student in the university next year, left Thursday for Pasadena, Cal., where she will attend the national convention of the Pi Beta Phi sorority. Miss Thornburg is president of the local chapter.

Arriving today from Indianola, Blanche Crawford will be a week-end guest of Helen Brum, 225 E. Church street. Miss Crawford received her master of arts degree in chemistry from the university.

Eleanor Gildner of Mason City arrived Thursday night to visit with friends over the week-end. She graduated from the university in June and is a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority and Mortar Board, honorary senior women's organization.

Georgianna Smith of Mt. Pleasant is spending the week-end with friends here. She was a former instructor in the English department of the university.

Alfred Bailey, director of the Chicago academy of sciences, with his family, is visiting relatives here over the week-end. Mr. Robertson is principal of the township high school at Rock Falls. On his return he will be accompanied by two of his children who will remain with him as residents of the summer camp.

Several residents of the summer camp colony are on the excursion to Keokuk today. Among them are Mr. and Mrs. Wentz and Mayor Forrest P. Hagan.

Richard D. Reynolds, L of Cedar Rapids, will leave this afternoon for a week-end at his home.

Helen S. Moylan, college of law librarian, has left for her home in Boston, Mass., where she will enjoy her summer vacation. Jean Ashman, assistant librarian, will be in charge of the library during Miss Moylan's absence. Miss Moylan expects to be gone for several weeks.

E. V. Moberly of California, is the new night cook at Smith's cafe.

Mrs. J. J. Kelly and daughter, Anne, of Oxford, were visitors in the city yesterday. Miss Kelly will be a senior student in the university next fall.

Mrs. Herman Peters and daughter, Audrey, 528 E. Davenport street, and Mrs. R. A. Westfall and daughter, Bevelyn, of West Liberty, left this morning for Great Falls, Mont., where they will visit for a month with Mrs. Peters' sister, Mrs. J. C. MacGregor.

After a visit of several days with her daughter, Mrs. E. F. Records, Melrose court, Mrs. J. M. Williams left this morning for her home in Chicago.

University Women Entertain Koehlers at Club Luncheon

In honor of Prof. and Mrs. Wolfgang Koehler of the University of Berlin, the members of the University club entertained at luncheon yesterday at the club rooms at the Iowa Union.

Thirty persons were present including members of the club and their personal guests. Mixed garden flowers furnished by Mrs. Carl E. Seashore decorated the dining room and the tables. Hostesses for the event were Mrs. H. A. Mattill and Beulah Crawford. Mrs. H. G. Plum, Mrs. E. B. Reuter, and Mrs. F. E. Kendrie served on the committee assisting them.

Following the luncheon Professor Koehler spoke to the group for a few minutes on "Woem in research in psychology at the University of Berlin." Saying that women as students worked harder, more faithfully, and more seriously than men, he remarked that grouping there was never done according to sex but rather according to some other division in the work.

President Jessup Extends Welcome

Summer Students Meet for Convocation Exercises

Why do so many persons come to summer school?

"It is because of an inner urge, the urge of doing something all the time," declared Pres. Walter A. Jessup, in his welcome address to the summer session assembly, held yesterday at 11 a.m., in the natural science auditorium.

"They can't let opportunities slip by," he continued. "The summer session brings together a wide range of students.

Age is Remaissance One

"We are reenacting an earlier period, the period of the renaissance. We were never living so rapidly. Never were readjustments made so quickly. We can hardly grasp the significance of the rapidity in which this period makes its changes." He related events of the news world to illustrate.

"Since the beginning of the World war an educational readjustment has been taking place. In a period of 16 years education has undergone great changes. At the beginning of the war there was but a handful of students in college, about 200,000. Now, roughly speaking, there are a million.

U. S. Educates All

"Enrollment in high schools has multiplied three or four times since the commencement of the World war. Every boy can go to high school if he has the brains to carry the load. We have undertaken the task of educating all people up through high school, should they so wish." The speaker then traced those things which have been done toward this end.

Italy Restricts

President Jessup contrasted educational conditions of the United States with those of Italy. "In Italy they are reducing universities, and secondary schools. They are restricting the curriculum. Secondary education is offered only the best students, selected by competitive examinations. In fact, schools in various countries are organized to carry out the ideals of the particular country.

"In America our task is to interpret human values as we think worthwhile. Within the last two months 4,000 high school students have taken part in the musical performances of the University of Iowa. We can catch a glimpse through this event of the new interest in art which is being shown." Examples in dramatics and journalism were also cited.

"We are going through an interesting stage of development. New relations challenges old ideals and traditions.

University Wants Scholars

"The university opens its doors wide to every student who comes with serious purposes and high ambitions," announced the president.

In behalf of the faculty he hopes that the students here will catch the spirit of scholarship; that they will not become satisfied until they have attained their definite aim and a better understanding of the world in which they live.

As other features of the assembly program was the solo sung by Ruth Jenkins, "I will lay me down in peace." Prof. Walter Leon accompanied.

The Rev. Charles Arthur Hawley gave the invocation, scripture and benediction. The entire student body joined in the singing of the university hymn, "Old Gold."

Happenings of Friday in Air

By the Associated Press.

Friday was a day of unusual tragedy in the air. Here is the record of those who went up and those who came down.

Roosevelt Field, N. Y.—Endurance plane, "The Answer," crashes after night in air. Jack Ashcraft killed and Viola Gentry critically injured.

Riverside, Cal.—Lieut. William G. Plummer and Flying Cadet Cyrus J. Wallace killed when flying student in second plane scrapes their wing.

Mitchell Field, N. Y.—Lieut. Maxwell Balfour superficially burned and Corporal Elmer Berry critically injured in crash of burning instruction plane.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Capt. Frank Hawks, holder of both east and west transcontinental non-stop flight records takes off for New York where he was expected late Friday or early Saturday.

Roosevelt Field, N. Y.—Mr. and Mrs. Martin Jensen and William Ulbrich continue endurance flight begun Wednesday night.

Minneapolis, Minn. — Thorwald Johnson and Owen Haughland continue endurance flight begun Sunday, with new record less than two days away.

Cleveland, Ohio — Pilots R. L. Mitchell and Byron K. Newcomb take off, seeking endurance record.

Faville Warns Bar of Civilization's Day in Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE, June 28 (AP)—If Americans, lawyers included, do not pay more attention to religion, American civilization will fall, Justice Frederick F. Faville of the Iowa supreme court told the Wisconsin bar association convention here today.

Justice Faville said there was a tendency away from religion in America today and that American civilization is not immune to the same forces that destroyed the great civilizations of the past.

He urged the lawyer to put more religious thought into his practice and to realize that "there is something more to successful living than merely grasping for money."

Elda Venita Koch Weds Californian

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Elda Venita Koch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Koch of Davenport, to Edward L. Williamson of Riverside, Cal., Thursday noon at the First Unitarian church of Los Angeles, Cal.

Mrs. Williamson is a graduate of the Davenport schools and attended the University of Iowa. She affiliated with Alpha Xi Delta sorority. Mr. Williamson is a graduate of Wisconsin and is a member of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

Thames Williamson, S. U. I. Grad, Writes July "Book of the Month"

"Hunky" Shows Alien "Finding Himself" in America

"Hunky," a novel written by Thames Williamson, University of Iowa graduate, class of '17, has recently been announced by the Book of the Month club as its July selection. The five judges of the club were unanimous in their choice.

Thames Williamson, who earned a scholarship at the university, became a Phi Beta Kappa man. He is listed in the alumni records as having resided at 1113 S. 9th street, Burlington. No information is available concerning his present address. His wife, also of the class of '17, was Florence Louise Zurowski.

Tried Everything Else First

Williamson has had a wide range of interests and experiences. When a boy he herded sheep in the Sierra Nevada mountains. He later went to sea as a cabin-boy on a whaling vessel. On the Alaska coast he deserted ship and became a hobo. Later, in Chicago, he drifted into newspaper work.

When 20 years old he became secretary to a prison warden. Later he became a finger print expert. He next took to writing stories about convicts, and then went into social work.

While yet in his twenties he went to college. After getting his B. A. at the University of Iowa he continued at Harvard, obtaining his M. A. there. He next wrote advertising and publicity news; then became a professor of economics at a Boston college, and for a while at Smith college. He has written several books on such subjects as democracy, economics, and sociology.

In the writing of novels he found himself. His first novel was "Run Sheep Run," a simple but vivid story of the life of the Sierras, according to Henry Seidel Canby, editor of the Saturday review of literature.

"Simple, Vivid Narrative"

According to Professor Canby, "'Hunky,' his latest novel, is a very different book, in a different scene, but with the same qualities of a simple, yet vivid narrative, and an abiding interest.

"It's hero, Jenic, is a Hunky. Jenic is an immigrant. He is a baker's assistant. Bread is his life. His American soul is born in him by installments.

"The first, comes when he buys his 'papers' for $2 from the local Irish boss; the second, when Kusock, certainly an American, becomes his friend; the third, when he falls in love with the hardboiled little Teena; the fourth, when he conquers his peasant meekness in a fight with her roughneck lover; the fifth, when he marries Teena.

"Interest Never Waves"

"At the end the mists are clear. The big slow man is beginning to believe in himself, to see what the new world is like. His new soul is coming out of the clouds that for centuries have fogged his peasant mind.

"The story is as abstract as the summary given. It is simple, direct, full of incident and color, completely focused on a small group of characters, so that interest never for a moment wavers."

Lucky Lieutenant Almost Uninjured As Plane Burns

MITCHELL FIELD, June 28 —The luck of Lieutenant Maxwell Balfour held good today, though others around him were less fortunate. He was 2,000 feet in the air teaching Corporal Elmer Berry how to fly when his all metal army observation plane caught fire. The plane crashed and Berry was critically injured and burned, but Lieutenant Balfour escaped with burns that doctors said were superficial.

Lieutenant Balfour won a name for himself as a lucky flyer last year when a plane fell apart under him during a test flight at 5,000 feet and he and a companion floated safely to earth in parachutes.

Senator Scores Customs Officer

Campbell's Employees Make Illegal Entrances

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., June 28 (AP)—A border customs collector who admitted he drinks beer occasionally in Mexico and that perhaps half the Mexican laborers employed on his farm may have entered the United States illegally was severely scored by Sen. Kenneth McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, at the senate patronage hearing here today.

Roy Campbell, the customs collector, who is stationed at Laredo, Tex., and is said to owe his appointment to R. B. Creager, republican national committeeman for Texas, was questioned after Senator McKellar had threatened Creager with arrest for an innuendo attack on Congressman John Garner, democratic leader in the house.

The warning to Creager against subjecting himself to contempt of the senate came while the committee was inquiring into conditions in Hidalgo county. Mrs. H. O. Shaleben on the witness stand, had renewed charges of a combine between Creager and Sheriff A. Y. Baker, reputed democratic boss of the county.

Mrs. Mott Hostess to L.T.L.

Election of officers will take place at the meeting of the children of the Loyal Temperance legion at 2:30 this afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. C. Mott, 1021 E. Burlington street.

Controversy Over Proposed Increase in Tariff Grows

Claim Hoover Favors Sliding Scale Plan on Sugar Duty

WASHINGTON, June 28 (AP) — The intensity of the controversy over the proposed increased sugar tariff grew apace today as another group of witnesses representing varied interests gave their views before a senate finance subcommittee.

As the hearing approached an end, a second subcommittee took up another contested set of duties, proposed in the house bill, on hides, leather and shoes, now free list commodities. A third subcommittee heard testimony for and against various rates of metal products.

White House Statement

In the hearing on the sugar duties the democrats were not long in injecting into the discussion yesterday's white house statement declaring that President Hoover favored a plan which would protect both the producer and consumer.

Although the president was represented as having committed himself to no particular form of sugar tariff, Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, said some newspapers had stated the chief executive favored the sliding scale plan under which rates would vary with the price of sugar.

Harrison expressed the view if such a plan was to be submitted by Chairman Smoot, who has announced he was considering the substitution of a sliding scale for the proposed flate rate increases, that witnesses should be heard on it now and the democrats not "kept in the dark."

Smoot's Reply

Smoot replied that there would be nothing to gain by questioning witnesses on the plan now because it was only tentative and nothing definite had been agreed upon.

The Harrison-Smoot colloquy come during the appearance of W. D. Lippet of Denver, general manager of the Great Western Sugar company, operating 42 plants in four western states, who replied to criticisms of his company because he said it "had been fortunate" in making money in the sugar business.

An increased tariff, he declared, automatically would result in a higher rate of payment to farmers for their beets.

A Modernized Home Often Adds to Your Social Prestige

Strangers Judge Home's Exterior

Social Prestige Often Judged by Type of House

To the stranger or casual passer-by the appearance of the home is the only criterion of the social prestige of the owner. The occupants of the home are judged largely by the exterior lines of the building.

If the home is modern in appearance, with pleasing lines and well-proportioned accessories, the onlooker is influenced more favorably toward the owner than toward his neighbor down the street who lives in an antiquated-designed residence which was the style back in the eighties.

An unfair and often entirely an erroneous estimate, it must be admitted, yet one based on human nature.

Adds to Prestige

A modern house adds to social prestige. The owner of a modern residence is looked upon with respect because visible evidence is present that he has taste and appreciation of beauty and the ability to gratify these.

From the standpoint of the mistress of the house, a modernized home has its social advantages. She can welcome her guests with a more pronounced feeling of satisfaction. She knows that the exterior lines are charming and that the interior shows good taste and breeding.

Apologies are entirely unnecessary when the house is modern. Even though these apologies are silent, the feeling remains that the house is not what it should be.

Outsiders Are Curious

When an outsider comes into the house, the furnishings and other appointments of the home are immediately appraised and the position of the owner established more or less accurately.

Should the draperies, fixtures, and decorations be modern and up-to-date the reaction is usually favorable. If, on the other hand, the home is still decorated in the fashion that prevailed during Spanish-American War days, the onlooker sometimes assumes that the family also is behind the times, or that the owner is deficient in taste and lacking in the initiative to keep abreast of the times.

Basis of Social Prestige

Social prestige is a precarious thing. Its foundations are often based on little things. It is easy for this prestige to be lost. And on the other hand, often the expenditure of a few dollars establishes it more firmly than ever.

It must not be assumed that modernizing the home is a sure way to social prestige. It is evident that many other elements enter into a consideration of the social status of a family. Yet the home is often the index to social esteem. Such being the case, social esteem has its place when considering home modernizing. It is an aspect of the general topic that should be definitely acknowledged.

Children Judge by Visible Evidence

Perhaps young people are less thoughtful when considering social prestige. They are more apt to judge social position by visible evidence rather than by honorable lineage, family prominence and true worth of character. The parents of a growing family therefore must acknowledge the superficial judgment of the young people and by means of modernization give their children that social prestige to which they are rightly entitled, but which is not evident when the residence is allowed to grow out of date.

Money spent on modernization has a definite social value. This aspect must never be overlooked when considering this most important subject.

An Apartment Building 28 Years Old—Yet New

Hidden Radiators Aid in Decoration

The older type radiator often does not fit in with the decorative plan of well-appointed homes. For these the obliging manufacturer now builds a low, broad radiator which can be enclosed in a metal or wooden cover, thus virtually becoming a piece of furniture.

These low radiator covers may be used as window seats if by chance the radiator is placed under the sill of the window.

Such an arrangement as this places the radiator out of sight. The cover of the radiator may be finished to match the furniture of the room.

What Was Old Public School House Becomes an Apartment Building

Large Buildings Make Multi-Family Dwellings

The demand for three and four room apartments in our cities has caused many old buildings to be remodeledd and modernized into apartment buildings.

These old buildings, soundly constructed in a workmanlike manner but now made obsolete by the requirements of a new generation, are purchased by investors and reconstructed into a useful group of homes.

Before the carpenters and contractors touched them, these buildings were of little value, commanding only a slight price on the market. Often the buildings were purchased at a figure that barely covered the value of the ground upon which they stood.

But modernized, they proved to be a sound investment and paid substantial returns in dollars and cents. Their value as producing property leaped to a remarkable extent because they were profit producers.

An Illustration

To the left is an illustration of a building which will soon be the home of four families. Sturdy and upright, the building carries an air of dignity and worth. The white limestone trim relieves the monotony of the brick veneer and conveys a spirit of quiet reserve.

This building, modern as it appears, is the old public school pictured below. You can tell that it is the same building by the fan-like decorative design in the gable and the remains of the old frame that set off the number of the school.

These illustration show how simple is the problem of modernization as applied to exterior lines.

Now Brick Veneer

The old board siding has been removed and the side faced by brick veneer. The window arrangement has been entirely changed.

Oil Burner Uses New Principle

A new principle for domestic use in homes is embodied in the new Century fuel oil burners according to William Boyce of the Boyce Plumbing company. It has been used successfully on battleships, ocean-going liners and in oil refineries.

It is a principle of "pressure atomization." The method is accomplished entirely by the pressure exerted on the oil, and air is used for combustion of gases only. It is directed to simplify and perfect the oil burners.

The accessibility of Century moving parts is another outstanding feature of the Century design and workmanship. The nozzle and electrode assembly are removable. By simply loosening one pipe union the assembly can be withdrawn through the opening on top of the manifold. The Century oil suction strainer is cleaned by simply removing the strainer cap and withdrawing the screen from the chamber. All adjustments are made while the burner is in operation.

A model of this fuel oil burner is now on display at the Boyce Plumbing company, 17 S. Dubuque street.

Built-in Cupboards Take Place of Pantry

Many of the recently modernized homes are being reconstructed with built-in cupboards instead of the older pantry.

The modern housewife has been educated to arrange her kitchen to save steps. Since she spends many hours each day in this workshop of the home, the layout of the kitchen should be such that the work can be done quickly and easily.

The pantry was seldom located in the older houses with labor saving in mind, but was placed in a spot most convenient to the general plan of the house.

For this reason the pantry did not save steps but often caused the housewife to lose time when doing her work.

Cupboards, however, may be placed along the walls of the kitchen, so located that only a step or two is needed to reach them. These cupboards are as commodious as the average pantry. Pots and pans may be placed below near the floor while china and cooking dishes as well as canned goods are located on the upper shelves.

The woodwork of the cupboards may be painted in the same general color scheme of the kitchen.

One housewife who grew tired of the weekly changing of papers on the shelves of the cupboard, now uses heavy linoleum to take the place of the shelf paper.

Who's Guilty?

THE day of mourning in Germany on the tenth anniversary of that country's signing of the Versailles treaty and the subsequent resolution of the reichstag denying sole guilt for the starting of the war makes a very good excuse for a taking of stock.

Immediately following the war, Europe was divided into two camps. That is, Wilson was in Europe representing a newer and more ideal type of diplomacy, while the war lords of the allies stood for another. Of course it was the natural reaction after a victory. Wilson succeeded in embodying in his famous "Fourteen Points" a statement which led everyone to believe there would be little said about the guilt for the war.

Wilson was overruled by the European statesmen. As had been done in every treaty for centuries, Germany and the other Central powers were forced to accept sole responsibility for the war.

Much research has been done in the 10 years just past. Books have been written. Controversies have arisen. The most recent and the most dispassionate treatise on the guilt is that of Bernard Fay. Viewing judiciously as he does the available facts and existing conditions before the war, Mr. Fay makes some startling conclusions.

Heretical as Mr. Fay's thesis seemed at first, it has come to be generally accepted. Mr. Fay places the guilt for the World war in this fashion: Russia is most guilty because through the ignorance and incompetence of the czar she began mobilization when arbitration could have been possible.

France, the country that held out for the German acknowledgement of guilt, is held by him to be second most guilty because she, too, mobilized and took steps which made it necessary for Germany to attack.

Germany is third in the list of guilty parties. She is placed there by the fault of the kaiser who sent the famous "blank check" to Austria. Serbia is given a rank because of the Sarajevo incident and England is placed fifth.

A word can be said for Mr. Fay in that he did not attempt to rank or absolve his own country, the United States. Perhaps we are more guilty than we ourselves are aware; but that is beside the point.

The clause in the treaty which fixes the guilt solely upon Germany and her allies is now entirely out of harmony with world opinion. Mr. Fay has shown conclusively that Germany is not nearly so guilty as some of the countries that swept their skirts so clean.

We think that in view of the facts, the finest act of international good feeling would be for the victor nations to individually and collectively send Germany a note acknowledging their haste and passion and to formally strike the hated clause from the treaty. The possibility of such an act hinges entirely upon France.

What Is Greatness?

A FEW days ago Queen Mary of England was riding in her car and, due to motor trouble, she had to stop and wait by the roadside. While she was waiting, an autoist, traveling in the same direction, stopped and asked the queen to ride on to the next town. The queen of England accepted the invitation in the spirit with which it was given.

The incident furnishes a key to the great popularity in England of Queen Mary and King George. They are not monarchs of the "keep your distance" type. They are affable and friendly, at the same time maintaining the dignity which is expected of royal personages.

This characteristic of the reigning sovereigns of Great Britain is in marked contrast to the attitude held by many persons of nobility. It is a characteristic held impracticable by many persons in a republic such as ours.

There are American citizens in New York and other cities who pride themselves on the distinctions which separate them from the common herd. There are persons of Nordic ancestry who take the greatest pains to emphasize their superiority to the Latin race, the Hebrew, or the Slav. There are business men at the head of institutions here in Iowa who do not want to be greeted by the workers or clerks of the company. There are some professors in our universities who prefer to remain on "blank stare" terms with students when out of the classroom.

Without any doubt there are reasons for reserve on the part of executives, government officers, and professors. We grant that the dignity of office should be maintained. But who shall say that men like Theodore Roosevelt and Grover Cleveland were any less great than those public men who are noted for the self-raised barriers that insulated them from the common people.

Charley, My Boy!

WHEN in London, do as you would back home. That is the formula of Ambassador Charles Gates Dawes for producing a compound of social success and popularity on two sides of the Atlantic at once. And it works.

George F. Babbitt wouldn't have asked a member of the royal family for permission to smoke in the palace except as a faux pas. An underslung pipe was lit there just the other day.

Plump Babbitt would have found it torture to get into silken knee breeches, gaudier than his gayest lodge uniform. An American ambassador appeared at a London reception in evening dress.

Surely Babbitt would never have overlooked the opportunity of serving liquor in the embassy. Dawes, not given to the custom over here, does not care just to follow precedent and serve liquor on American property in London.

Charles Dawes is an individual with an apparent motto, "As you think, do." At a time when Uncle Sam is accused of producing men all alike, it must be a relief that one of his nephews should be so refreshingly different.

Invest in Yourself

A YEAR ago, Henry Ford stated that "no successful boy ever saved any money. They spent it just as fast as they could for things to improve themselves." The statement was the beginning of a great deal of newspaper comment. Was Ford preaching against thrift? Did he and Rockefeller, whose advice is always to "save your dimes," disagree in this important respect?

Now we read that Ford has revealed the sale of his Detroit, Toledo and Ironton railroad. The history of this railroad in the hands of Ford is a vindication of his belief in investment. For he not only believes in investing in himself, but in investing in his business. When he bought the railroad, it was in an insolvent condition. When he turned it over, he could show a handsome profit of more than $4,000,000 that it had earned for him. His policy at the outset had been to increase expenditures, raise wages, and make employees partners in the undertaking, not to economize.

Ford has built up his fortune because he has had faith in himself, and in his ability. He has had faith in his business. He has invested in himself. And others have had faith in him, and in his products.

Edison is another man who has invested in himself to the benefit of humanity. Examples could be multiplied of others who have done the same. But investment in one's self does not mean that one lacks thrift. It simply means that one knows how to spend and spend wisely.

A Growing, Reliable Industry

AS 30 PLANES taking part in the second annual statewide tour of Iowa soar over this middle west commonwealth this week, each carrying from two or three to as many as 10 passengers, as well as heavy baggage, we are forced to ponder on the rapid development through which aviation is passing. The time when flying with heavier than air machines was an experiment is passed.

Today large business firms depend upon airplanes. Express companies accept goods for delivery within remarkably short periods of time. Passenger air lines run on regular schedules. Mail is speeded across the continent on regularly operated planes.

It is no longer a question of "Will aviation succeed?" Instead it is a question of "How rapidly is it going to develop into other commercial fields, with dozens of uses undreamed of today?"

We have come to the conclusion that, regardless of questionnaires, the future Edison will pick himself out, as was the case with Edison.—Detroit News.

KNOW YOUR UNIVERSITY

Power Plant Converts River Flow into Heat, Light for Entire University

The university may outgrow its stadiums; it may be forced to build larger dormitories; it may replace present classwork buildings with bigger ones—but it is in no immediate danger of having to provide better heating and lighting facilities.

According to all indications, the present power plant, completed in 1928, will adequately supply the university for some time.

Housing one of the most complete systems of boilers and power generators in the middle west, the plant, located at the east end of the Burlington street bridge, is able to generate heat and electricity, enough for a city of 10,000.

400 Tons Coal Daily

Six boilers, each capable of developing 615 horsepower, are necessary under winter conditions to supply steam for university buildings. When running at capacity, the boilers use in excess of 400 tons of coal per day.

Each boiler delivers 40,000 pounds of steam per hour, through reduction valves to a system of pipes going to all university buildings.

The coal used is taken from the cars by elevator to the top of the building, where it is dumped into bins, three of which have a total capacity of 18 carloads of coal. From the bins it is taken by conveyor to fuel hoppers on the boiler furnaces, each of which hold three tons of coal. A hopper full will last, in the cold weather, approximately one-half hour.

Ashes to Ash Pits

The fuel is fed into the boiler furnace by an endless chain feed stoker, which insures uniform firing and less danger of overheating. Owing to the intense heat, the furnaces have to be replaced at regular intervals, new firebrick being laid and flues repaired.

Ashes are wetted down by a sprinkling system as they leave the grates, and are taken to ash pits. From there they are carried by elevator to a point above the dumping chutes, which unloads into cars on the railroad siding built for that purpose.

Feed water for the boilers is pumped from the river to large tanks in the building, where it is softened and treated to remove impurities. After preliminary heating, the water is run into the boilers, where it is transformed into steam.

The miracle of the steam is evident on the second floor of the plant. Here are turbines, water wheels, meters, and switchboards through which the electrical supply of the university comes. Steam driving the rotors of the great steam turbines is run from the boilers to the turbines, out into condensers where it is transformed again into water, and back into the boilers.

Filters Purify Water

A traveling screen is a recent addition to the plant. It serves to screen debris from the river water before it goes into the condenser. The condenser is made up of small diameter brass pipes through which cold water is run. Steam passing over these pipes is converted into water by the change in temperature. Because of the small bore of the pipes, it is essential that they do not become clogged, hence the precaution of screening the water.

Efficiency is stressed nowhere more than in the heating plant. Even the gas that goes up the tall smokestack is measured, to determine the content of carbon dioxide in the smoke. This operation is useful in determining the amount of fuel that is being wasted in each boiler.

Spick and Span

In summer only two of the six boilers are needed, each running at a low steam pressure. Only about 50 tons of coal are used now instead of the 400 tons daily in the winter.

In spite of the material used to generate power, the floors and the machinery are kept spotlessly clean. No dust is allowed to settle on any part of the machinery. In fact, the coal is dampened before being taken to the hoppers.

Noise? Of course. Hisses of steam prevail, interspersed with roars as valves are released or steam jets opened. In the turbine room there is a steady hum of generators, but one soon gets used to the sound and is not bothered by it.

The plant was designed as a model of efficiency, and as such has gained no little prominence throughout the middle west.

Neff Stresses Need for Social Service to Hospital Patients

Robert E. Neff, administrator of the university hospital, spoke yesterday to the students of social work in room 308 university hall at 10 a.m.

Dr. Neff discussed social service in its relation to hospital service He emphasized the fact that each hospital should have a social service department which would be the medium of contact between the patient and the doctor, and between the hospital and the community. The records of such a department are a very important asset to the hospital and are kept in the strictest privacy..

The arranging of details of expense to patients, he declared to be important. When social service is related to hospital work, the very poor are admitted as charity patients; the well-to-do can pay easily. The difficulty, he asserted, lies in assessing charges to the patient of moderate means who has pride and wishes to pay.

"Hospitals have developed very rapidly in the last 15 years," he said. "Today a community is judged by its hospital facilities. The standards of hospitals are rising and increasing."

Some interesting facts concerning hospital beds were learned. Since 1909 there has been an average increase of 25,000 hospital beds yearly. The north Atlantic section with one bed to every 198 persons, has the highest average; the western section is next with one bed to every 209 persons; the south central is lowest with one bed to every 508 persons. In Iowa 77 per cent of the counties have hospitals.

FACULTY NOTICES

GRADUATE COLLEGE

Notice is hereby given to students and faculty that the rule for the outlaw of credits more than five years old shall not go into effect until May, 1933. This ruling should, however, not deter instructors and students from recognizing that it is not advisable for students to attempt to present credits more than five years old in the final examination which is required for the master's degree, a principle which the rule was intended to cover.

C. E. SEASHORE, dean of the graduate college.

CANDIDATES FOR ADVANCED DEGREES

Candidates for advanced degrees may take their reading test in French at 11 a.m., or 5 p.m., on Monday. This arrangement will hold throughout the first term of the summer session.

COLBERT SEARLES, dep artment of Romance languages.

GRADUATE STUDENTS

The final time limit for the depositing of theses in the office of the Dean of the Graduate College for students who are coming up for a degree this term, will be July 5.

All graduate students who are registered as candidates for degrees and are now in their second registration should select a thesis topic at this time and secure its approval. C. E. SEASHORE, dean of the graduate college.

British Lady Minister May Wear Breeches, Cocked Hat at Levees

Recognition Granted Only to Male Attire

Would Margaret Bondfield, minister of labor in the British cabinet, look "chic" in velvet knee breeches and a cocked hat?

Decidedly not; but that is the costume she must wear if she decides to attend the court levees, of which the third of the season will be held on July 1 with the Prince of Wales presiding.

If Miss Bondfield, who is the first woman member of the British cabinet, having been appointed by recently-elected Labor Premier Ramsay MacDonald, would assert her rights to equal recognition, then she must wear that garb—it is the only solution of the problem created by her appointment as privy councillor.

Responsible officials are hoping the occasion will not arise when they will have to tell Miss Bondfield that, while she may be in the cabinet, the levees are still very much a male province, and that she can obtain admittance to them only in male guise, since that alone is officially recognized.

"The question of Miss Bondfield's uniform would not arise except in the case of the levees," said Austin Hertslet, attached to the Lord Chamberlain's office. "And it is not likely to arise, since levees have heretofore been exclusively for men. At court functions Miss Bondfield must wear the usual court dress for women.

MISS MARGARET BONDFIELD

"Miss Bondfield, of course, creates a precedent, and there is no ruling to cover the question of the uniform of a woman privy councillor.

Mr. Hertslet is co-author of the accepted "textbook" on dress to be worn at court.

Lutherans Choose Milwaukee Site of Next Conference

RIVER FOREST, Ill., June 28 (AP)—Milwaukee was chosen today for the next triennial conference of the Evangelical Lutheran synod of Missouri, to be held in 1932.

Declaring that it is not always possible to determine whether a congregation is free of members of secret lodge, the synod declined today to make it a rule that only pastors of lodge-free congregations are eligible as synodical officers. This was the recommendation of the synod lodge committee.

This committee said, however, that it is self-evident that ministers notoriously lax in their practice with respect to the lodge-evil should not hold office in the synod.

Association Plans National Park

LANSING, June 28—More than 30 northeastern Iowa newspapermen and merchants made a tour of inspection today along the west bank of the Mississippi river where the Northeastern Iowa National Parks association hopes to establish a national park. The area extends for 117 miles from Bellevue to the Minnesota line.

Escaped Prisoners at Large

WASHINGTON, June 28 (AP)—Albert Himes and Gerald Burkett, two prisoners in the Washington county jail, who sawed their way to liberty Thursday night, were still at large today. After making their getaway, the two men stole an automobile.

Offered Farm Post

Alexander Legge, president of the International Harvester company, has been asked to serve on the new federal farm board by President Hoover. Mr. Legge, who is a Chicagoan, was associated with B. M. Baruch in the direction of the war industries board during the war.

OSAGE, June 28—Oliver Johnson, 40 years old, unmarried farm hand, committed suicide at the home of a sister, Mrs. Earl Jeffries, near here today. He is believed by authorities to have been temporarily unbalanced mentally.

CONTRIBULATIONS

Perhaps you've been touched deeply in the past, folks. Maybe even to the extent of $.85 for missionary work in Patagonia. But have you ever had a chance to contribute to a worthy cause without it's costing you anything?

HIS HIGHNESS THE EDITOR called me in the other day.

"Say," he began, "what is this you think you're writing under the caption 'Chills and Fever' "

* * *

"Wh—why," I answered in my calmest manner, "I th—though it was a hu—humorous column."

A big red pencil slipped out of the editor's fingers.

"I expose so. Whaddaya think the readers of this newspaper are, a big bunch of dumb bells that don't know editorials from the classified ads."

"N—no, I mean y—yes, er, I quite agree with you on the subject."

* * *

"WELL, ARE WE GOING TO HAVE A HUMOROUS COLUMN OR A HUNK OF TYPE ABOUT AS MEANINGLESS AS THE INDEX TO DARWIN'S 'ORIGIN OF SPECIES'?"

* * *

I determined to be hesitant no longer, but come out with my honest intention. I replied firmly, "Y—yes, sir."

* * *

Having read my previous attempts, you know I am not capable of producing a humorous column all by myself. Better you contribute them.

The Green Archer

By Edgar Wallace

The story so far:
Valerie Howett of Pennsylvania is searching for her mother, Elaine Held, who disappeared in London 12 years previously. The Howetts have hired Lady's Manor, adjoining Garre castle, the owner of which, Abe Bellamy, a Chicago millionaire with a repellant past, is suspected by Valerie of having spirited away her mother. She goes to the castle with Spike Holland, an American reporter working on a London newspaper, and Bellamy shows her the dungeons. Coldharbour Smith, who keeps a low resort in London, is called into consultation by Bellamy. Holland is at the castle to investigate reports that it is haunted by a ghostly archer clad in green. Bellamy has ferocious dogs to guard him against the Green Archer. Featherstone, a Scotland Yard official, is investigating the death of Creager, an ex-prison warder, a retainer of Bellamy's, who was shot with a green arrow. He is also seeking Elaine Held.
In protecting a maid at the castle from one of Bellamy's dogs the butler comes into collision with Bellamy, who discharges him. Thereupon the butler reveals that he is Featherstone and that he has a warrant to search the castle for the missing woman.
Now go on with the story.

He went back to the Blue Boar soon after, trying to decide in his mind what would be the best course to take. His car was garaged in the next village; it was the means by which he made his daily visit to London during such slack period as enabled him to slip out through the castle gates, leaving Julius to cover his absence. Mr. Bellamy allowed his butler one clear day's holiday a week, and it was Savini's job to explain, if Featherstone was asked for, that that was the day he had chosen.

He had been in the castle when the tea party was in progress, but he had thought it discreet to keep away from the library while Spike Holland and the girl were present. It was only when Valerie was alone with the old man, that, by a prearranged signal, Savini had shepherded Spike into his room and left the coast clear for the new butler to interfere, as it proved, at the psychological moment.

"I have decided to return to London, but I shall be here off and on and I'm keeping a room at the Blue Boar. You can do a little unofficial police work, Spike, and notify me if anything out of the ordinary happens. I'm leaving a man here."

"To watch Bellamy?"

"No," replied Featherstone, "just to look around."

"To watch Miss Howett," said Spike shrewdly.

On the way to town Jim Featherstone considered from another angle the problem which Abe Bellamy offered. There was danger ahead—of that he was sure, and it was danger for Valerie Howett. He could not help associating the visit of Coldharbour Smith with the contingency and one of the first steps he decided to take was to pay a visit to the Golden East.

CHAPTER XXXIV
THE GOLDEN EAST

The Golden East had once been a reputable club, the membership of which was confined to officers of the mercantile marine who were in the Indian trade. Because no club can live upon the takings from so limited a membership, its qualifications had been extended, until it included almost anybody who could, by a stretch of imagination, describe himself as being interested in the China trade. Even this stage of the club's life was ancient history. Gradually it had fallen from its dignified estates, and when the conditions were altered to admit a mixed membership, the Golden East went rapidly on its downward course.

Coldharbour Smith had come into the club at its intermediate stage, and being alive to its possibilities had purchased a controlling interest, which had still further extended until he became sole proprietor. And probably at no period in its history had the club been quite so prosperous. Strange things happened in the Golden East; offenses were committed against all laws regulating the conduct of clubs, which would have justified the police in closing the establishment again and again. But the Golden East served a very useful purpose from the point of view of police headquarters. It was the sink into which strange flotsam floated. Its very immunity from the attention of the police gave more help to headquarters in the arrest of wanted men than if the place had been closed.

The club had originally occupied a small corner shop and the rooms above, but had gradually grown until it had become a considerable establishment. The ground floor was used as offices. It was on the first floor that the real premises began, extending to a long windowless attic under the roof, where a little game was generally in progress.

To the big dance hall on the first floor came a curious collection of people. Actresses from the west end, young men about town who desired the novel sensation of mixing with the underworld, a few Chinamen, not a few Negroes and always a very plentiful supply of well-dressed women who apparently had no other occupation in life but attendance at the club. Off the dance room was the bar and here Coldharbour Smith could usually be found in his tight-fitting check suit, his invariable white derby and the cigar that never left his face.

The laughter and noise were at their greatest; a syncopated band at its most violent, when Jim Featherstone came through the hall, and with a nod to the doorkeeper went up the carpeted stairs. The doorkeeper pressed a bell push unostentatiously and by the time Jim had reached the dance room something like silence reigned. The orchestra had stopped, the dancers had gone back to their tables, with a pleasant thrill in the case of those who were unused to the place, for Coldharbour Smith had uttered the magic word, "Police!"

"Glad to see you, captain," Coldharbour came halfway across the ballroom and offered a jeweled hand.

"Quiet tonight, Smith."

"Why, yes," said Coldharbour, "but nothing unusual. We don't make much noise here."

Jim had made a swift and professional scrutiny of the company.

"Very respectable lot of people you've got tonight. Who was at that table?"

"Oh, some fellows who when out half an hour ago."

"And left a bottle of wine untouched, with the bubbles still rising? And four nice glasses all fizzing up?"

"Anyway, they're nobody you know, captain," said Coldharbour. "They're some swells from the west end. I suppose they didn't want to be seen here."

He edged for the barroom and Jim Featherstone followed.

"Going to have a drink, captain?" Coldharbour Smith cast a quick glance at his jacketed bartender.

"I think not," said the visitor. "I came here for a little talk, Smith. Have you a room where we can be alone?"

There was a room at the back of the bar apparently, and he followed the proprietor of the "Golden East" through the barkeeper's private domain and into a small room. Coldharbour switched on the light. Jim pulled up a chair and sat down leaning his arms on the table and looking up at the watchful man.

"You were at the Castle the other night "

"You mean Garre Castle—Mr. Bellamy's place Yes, that's true, captain, I was. I've been there twice lately to see Mr. Bellamy on a matter of business. However did you know that?" he asked innocently and Jim smiled.

"The old man's been on the telephone to you today, telling you that I raided the Castle this morning. Don't deny it. We had a man at exchange listening in."

It was the sheerest bluff on Jim's part, but there was an air of expectancy about the place when he had arrived, and he guessed that the old man must have warned his tool to expect a visit.

"I certainly was talking to Mr. Bellamy on the phone this morning ovpr a private mattey," admitted Smith, and seemed inclined to talk about something else.

"What is your busines with old man Bellamy?"

"He's been a good friend of mine," said Coldharbour glibly. "Lent me a lot of money to buy this place."

"So he lent you the money? You are very grateful, and now I suppose you are paying him back? By the way, Smith, where did you live before you came here? I haven't looked you up in the records."

"I lived in this neighborhood for a little while," said the man sullenly. "I used to live in Camden Town."

What part of Camden Town?" asked Jim quickly.

"Little Bethel street."

"Little Bethel street!" Jim was on his feet, his finger pointed accusingly. "You knew Mrs. Held!"

"I never heard of Mrs. Held," Smith's denial was loud. "What do you mean, captain? Who is Mrs. Held, anyway?"

"You knew Mrs. Held, and you helped spirit her away."

Smith's face had gone a shade paler.

"Now come across Smith. I'll make it right for you if you tell. If you don't," he brought his fist down on the table, "I'll shut the Golden East in a week."

To his astonishment a smile dawned upon the unhealthy face of the man.

"That won't worry me, captain. I've sold the Golden East and got half the money." He slapped his pocket. "If you closed it, it wouldn't hurt me."

He was speaking the truth. Jim saw that at a glance.

"Anyway, captain, what's the good of roasting me? I'm straight; you've got nothing against me. I try to live friendly with the police, and if I don't it isn't my fault. Have a drink, captain."

There were three happening that had not escaped Jim Featherstone's notice. he first was the quick glance that the man had given to his barman, the second his insistence upon Featherstone having a drink, though he knew Jim had been there before, and that such a request had been invariably refused. As Coldharbour Smith had taken a sidelong look at the barman, the man in white had signaled with his eyes to somebody in the room, and, following the direction of his glance, Jim had seen a man whom he had not noticed before, and who must have come in after him.

"What's the idea?" he asked. "That drink idea of yours. You know I never take anything here."

"Aren't you going to be friendly for once?" grinned Smith.

There was a telephone on a shelf in the corner of the room. Jim had seen it when he came in.

"Do you mind if I call a friend of mine " he asked suddenly.

Smith hesitated.

"This phone's out of order," he said.

"Let me see," said Jim cooly, and picked up the instrument.

Almost immediately he received the signal from the exchange and gave a number. He saw Smith standing in the center of the room, biting his nails nervously and he understood dimly just what was happening.

"Who is it? The sergeant in charge at Limehouse? Captain Featherstone speaking. I am at the Golden East. Yes—I want four men to meet me outside the club at once. Thank you."

He hung up the receiver. And now Smith's perturbation dispelled any doubts he might have had.

"You had arranged a little party for me outside, hadn't you, Smith?" he bantered. "I saw the man who followed me in and gave you the tip that I'd come alone. What was it going to be—an unfortunate street fight in which I was involved? Too simple, Smith."

With a nod he passed to the door and turned the handle. The door was locked and he spun round.

"I expect my barman locked it," said Smith huskily. "There's another way out, captain."

He opened a door and disclosed a stairway.

"You'll find a door at the bottom, captain"—he began.

"Suppose you find it," said Jim pleasantly, and the man accepted the invitation with alarcity.

He ran down the stairs ahead of the detective and opened the door. Jim saw the gray oblong of light and the outline of Coldharbour's figure against the wall.

"Good night, captain," said Smith loudly.

"Good night," said Jim.

He made as though to pass the master of the Golden East and then, with a sudden twist, caught the man by the collar, and before he could say a word had thrown him through the open doorway. Scarcely had Smith staggered into the street when somebody hidden in the shadow of a wall struck at him twice with a loaded stick and Smith fell with a groan.

Instantly Jim was in the street, following the flying figure of the thug. In 20 yards he had overtaken him, and with a quick kick at his heels, an old rugger trick, had sent him sprawling. Jim gripped him and jerked him to his feet.

"I'm going quietly," growled the man, dropping his weapon with a clatter. "This ain't my job. Coldharbour Smith hired me to hit a man when he came out of the club."

"At this present moment, my friend," said Jim, "Coldharbour Smith is wishing that he hadn't."

He dragged his prisoner to the light of a street lamp and jerked up his chin bringing his face into view. As he expected, it was the man who had followed him into the club. The man wilted in Jim's grasp.

"Coldharbour'll kill me for this," he wailed.

They found Mr. Smith sitting up, nursing a wet and painful head, and to the exchange of recriminations which followed Jim listened with interest and a certain pleasure.

"If you say I told you to wait for this gentleman, you're a liar," said Smith, "and when I get my hands on you I'll beat the life out of you, you dirty little river-shark. Lock him up, officer!"

"Lock him up!" sneered the other. "If you ain't pinched, Smith, it is because you've got the police straight. You'd look fine in jail, you would, you crimping hound!"

Smarting under the treachery of his employer, the assailant grew more and more violent in Jim's hand.

"You wouldn't have any drinks here. You wouldn't have no Valerie—"

The words were scarcely out of his lips before Jim jerked him around.

"What's that?" he asked sharply. "Valerie Howett—Mrs. Smith to be," screamed the prisoner, and Jim felt his blood go cold.

GREAT POWERS TALK NAVAL DISARMAMENT

Developments of the last few weeks have been interpreted as presaging another conference for curtailment of armaments. Taking the initiative is President Hoover, whose spokesmen are Ambassador Charles G. Dawes (left) and Ambassador Hugh Gibson (upper center). On the right is Premier Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain, and lower center is Baron Tanaka, premier of Japan, who promised full cooperation of his country.

Public Utilities, Electrical Issues Soar to New High

NEW YORK, June 28 (AP)—Public utility and electrical equipment stocks monopolized speculative interest in today's stock market forging to new high records under a tremendous volume of trading. Industrials also presented several points of strength, but the advance was unevenly distributed, and the rails were inclined to heaviness.

Call money held steady at 10 per cent.

Resumption of dividends on both classes of Erie railroad preferred after a lapse of 22 years was one of the most important developments of the day. The weekly mercantile reviews reported some irregularity in general business, due largely to seasonal influences.

One of the most significant developments of the day was the revival of market activity by the Cutten, Fisher and other powerful interests, who had curtailed their operations during the recent credit stringency, and practically withdrew from the market.

Unconfirmed rumors that another huge public utility holding company was in the making provided the background of the heavy turnover in the power and light stocks. Measured by the Associated Press index of 20 leading issues, the utilities showed a gain of nearly 8 points on the day, touching another new high record at 275.4, which contrasts with the year's low of 193.1.

The index of 20 rails lost about a point while the index of 50 industrials advanced 2 points to within 3 points of the high mark established just prior to May reaction.

Drought Reports Predict Decrease in Wheat Market

CHICAGO, June 28 (AP)—An almost wide crop scare in wheat is already apparent, according to J. P. Griffin of J. S. Bache and company. He called attention today to the fact that the United States, Canada, Argentina, and Australia have a grand aggregate of around 120,000,000 acres, or about 45 per cent of the total world's acreage, exclusive of Russia and China.

Drought reports are coming from all four countries, an almost unheard of condition. Recent cables have suggested that only an average crop is in sight in Europe.

As Mr. Griffin sees it, present reports suggested a reduction in the world's crop of 300,000,000 bushels or more from the 3,710,000,000 bushels harvested in 1928. This would make a yield of well below the apparent disappearance during the 1928-29 season, and force the world to draw heavily on the carry-over from the old crop to meet actual requirements. He believes that present prices for wheat are too low.

In some quarters the belief prevails that perhaps foreigners have overstayed their market, and may come in as liberal buyers of cash grain in the immediate future, especially if dry weather continues in the southern hemisphere.

Private crop reports on the United States will be given to the trade on Tuesday, July 2, and are generally expected to suggest smaller yields of winter and spring wheat than on June. At this time the average of the private returns was for 632,000,000 bushels winter and 252,000,000 bushels spring wheat, an aggregate of 884,000,000 bushels against 903,000,000 bushels harvested in 1928.

Convertibles Lead Bond Mart to New 1929 Volume Mark

NEW YORK, June 28 (AP)—An avalanche of trading in convertibles swept the bond market to a new high volume for the year today. Eight of the stock feature issues, led by American Telephone 4 1-2's, and International Telephone 4 1-2's, which made net advances of 6 1-2 and 6 points, respectively, to record peaks, turned over to the extent of $10,000,000, par value. Sales in the entire list totaled slightly more than $18,000,000.

The American company's obligation changed hands to the par value total of $6,800,000, closing at 143, a point above its previous high established in May, while the International bond reached nearly $1,500,000, finishing the session at 149.

Other convertibles sharing in the broad upward movements were the two issues of Allegheny corporation 5's, up 5-8 to 1 1-2; American International 5 1-2's, up 2 1-4; Atchison 4 1-2's, up 1-4; Missouri Pacific 5 1-2's, up 1-2 to equal the high; Public Service of New Jersey 4 1-2's up 9 to a new high at 253, and Southern Pacific 4 1-2's, with warrants, up 1-4.

Easier time money proved a favorable influence for the rest of the list, which held firm to stronger, especially in the rail and utility groups.

Report of Short Yield in Canada Sends Wheat Up

CHICAGO, June 28 (AP)—Widely circulated estimates that 1929 Canadian wheat production will be away below last year's total put wheat values up with a rush today. According to one current forecast, the Canadian spring wheat crop of the prairie provinces this season will amount to only 315,000,000 bushels, compared with 508,000,000 bushels harvested in 1928.

Officials of the Canadian growers' pool, however, denied having made this estimate, and instead suggested that western Canada with ideal conditions from now on would raise 400,000,000 bushels.

Wheat closed unsettled, 2 1-4c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 3-4c to 1 1-4c up, oats 1-4c to 1-2c @ 5-8c advance, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 17c.

Wheat made an irregular start, but then scored an almost perpendicular upturn of more than 3c.

Corn and oats went higher as a result chiefly of wheat strength. There was also talk that monthly unofficials surveys next week will indicate a relatively low condition of corn growth.

Too much rain in parts of the corn belt was a bullish factor, but selling increased on the hard spots and there was free selling against the offers. However, buying appeared on small setbacks, and the strength in wheat caused buying.

The cash trade was fair, and country sales increased on the bulge. Chicago arrivals of corn today were 160 cars against 193 cars a week ago and 67 cars last year. Shipments from Argentina were 6,455,000 bushels. The weather was mostly fair and the forecast for all states was fair, with higher temperatures.

Witches Still Weave Their Spells in England, Says London Professor

LONDON, June 28 (AP)—Witches, with all their eerie incantation with their mysterious midnight rides to wreak vengeance on offending farmers, and with their spells that bring happiness to their friends, still exist in England, in the opinion of a London professor.

Margaret M. Murray, assistant professor of Egyptology in the University of London, further believes that the witches, both men and women, have a secret society through which they get new ideas for their profession.

"They exist in practically all parts of rural Britain," she said. "They are very common in the west country and East Anglia, and there are even some in the towns.

"In France there is a witches' society which has ramifications all over the country, and I believe the same sort of organization exists in this country though I have never been able to join. The difficulty is that one has to take a solemn oath of secrecy before the secrets of the craft are disclosed."

Apparently the only qualifications for being a witch are a knowledge of herbs and an ability to impress one's personality upon other people to make suggestions take effect.

"A witch might suggest to a certain person that he was going to die on a particular day," explained Miss Murray. "If he happened to have a slight illness about that time and be superstitious as most country people are, the chances of his dying are very good.

"A common complaint in country districts is that the milk will not turn into butter. An up-to-date witch might drop a bit of soda in the milk and prevent its turning. The net result to the witch would be that her reputation would go up and she would also be likely to receive propitiatory gifts as an inducement to remove the "spell."

Miss Murray, who is the author of a standard work on witchcraft, has traveled in all parts of European country districts to secure her material, and has even persuaded some of the profession to teach her their incantations.

Student of Speech Will Read Cutting From Phillips Play

Gladys Lynch, an advanced student in interpretative reading, will read a cutting from Stephen Phillips' "Paolo and Francesca," Monday, July 1, at 8 p.m. in the natural science auditorium.

Miss Lynch, who has been studying under Mrs. Alice Mills of the speech department is working at present for her master's degree.

After receiving her B.A. degree from Iowa State Teachers college at Cedar Falls, Miss Lynch taught speech in Cheney State Normal in Washington, in Iowa State Teachers college extension department, and in Ft. Dodge high school.

Miss Lynch read "Paolo and Francesca" for her spring recital here this year. It met with such general approval that Prof. E. C. Mabie, head of the speech department, asked her to repeat her reading this summer.

Enrollment Shows Academic Standing

AMES, June 28 (AP)—The academic complexion of a college summer school is illustrated by the enrollment at Iowa State college. More than 200 of the students enrolled are engaged in educational work.

The list includes 117 college and university instructors, 61 of whom are from 26 states other than Iowa. Yeh Fu Zung of Shanghai, China, and D. I. Aquino of the Philippine Islands, came the farthest distance of those enrolled from five foreign countries. Forty superintendents of schools and 52 high school principals are enrolled. They hold positions in a number of nearby states as well as in Iowa.

Petit Jurors Dismissed

The panel of petit jurors for the May term of district court, were finally excused yesterday, with the exception of the 12 who are now serving. In two or three weeks the panel for the September term will be drawn.

The reason for the early drawing is to abide by the law which demands sufficient time before the term begins. The September term commences Sept. 3.

Carleton vs. Horst Case Will Continue in Session Today

The case of Carleton vs. Horst will continue at 9 o'clock this morning in district court before Judge R. G. Popham. Examination of witnesses will be concluded today. The jury for the case was selected yesterday morning.

Constable C. H. Horst has $717 tied up in an attachment proceeding. The action is for damages to determine whether Lawrence S. Carleton, the claimant, or Karl Krupp, the intervenor, will recover.

Carl H. Lambach of Davenport, is attorney for the plaintiff, while E. B. Wilson is counsel for the defense.

The jury, which was selected yesterday, consists of: Glenn Bell, fourth ward; Alice Bordwell, second ward; Ethel Held, third ward; William J. Holub, second ward; Edmund Langenberg, Madison township.

Leroy Mercer, fifth ward; Mame Prosser, second ward; Joe Rouner, third ward; J. O. Taylor, first ward; C. J. Toms, second ward; Emma Viers, W. Lucas township, and Marie Waters, E. Lucas township.

Bobby Jones Drops to Third Place in National Open Tourney

Sarazen, Espinosa Tie for Lead as Rain Holds Champ

Hagen and Farrell Out of Running; Shute, Von Elm Gain

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

WINGED FOOT CLUB, MAMARONECK, N.Y., June 28 (AP)—A terrific storm that at times bore every resemblance to a cloudburst struck the national open golf championship today, scattered title hopes all over the place and helped remove the famous Atlanta amateur, Bobby Jones, from the leadership, as the field wound up the first half of the spectacular 72 hole championship battle.

Early in the morning, before the gale broke over the bunkered battle ground, stocky Gene Sarazen of New York, champion in 1922, and equally sturdy Al Espinosa, Spanish star from Chicago, shot out in front, deadlocked with totals of 142 each for 36 holes that withstood attacks throughout the day.

Jones Fights Storm

Sarazen, putting in sensational fashion, duplicated his first day's score of 71. Espinosa, a few minutes later, added a par 72 to his 70 of the opening day to create a deadlock that Bobby Jones failed to break.

Jones started with the storm, fought the gale and rain with dramatic brilliance but finished his second round with 75, three over par.

A bad six on the 17th hole, just when it appeared his rally would at least carry him into a tie with the pace-setters, forced Jones to forget the advantage gained by his remarkable 69 yesterday. With a total of 144, he dropped into a tie for third place, with 24 year old Densmore Shute of Columbus, O., the "dark horse" of the narrowed group. Shute added a fine 71 today to his opening 73.

Farrell Out

The results reduced the array of contenders to no more than about eight stars, removed the 1928 champion, Johnny Farrell, from further competition with a shocking total of 167 for 36 holes, and disposed of the slight remaining title chances of Walter Hagen, British open king, and Horton Smith, sensation of the winter season and holder of the French open crown. Hagen, adding 81 to his 76 totalled 157 to be 15 strokes back of the leaders while Smith, attaching a 77 to his first round of 76, was at 153 and out of the running.

With the field reduced to some 65 competitors out of the original entry of 152 for the final double barrelled chase of 36 holes tomorrow, the main fight centers among the twin leaders, Espinosa and Sarazen, along with Shute and Jones. Should any of these four slip off the pace, Tommy Armour, who added a brilliant 71 late today to his 74 of yesterday for 145, may be ready to step into the breach.

Von Elm Threatens

Six strokes behind, but nevertheless threatening, are Leo Diegel, 74-74-148 and Leonard Schmutte of Lima, O., with 73-75-148 in eighth place, another stroke away, loomed the blond amateur ace, George Von Elm, of Detroit, who shot himself back into the picture with a sensational 70, two under par, and a 36 hole total of 149.

University of Iowa Athletes Earn 351 Awards; Grants From Athletic Council Constitute New High Total

University of Iowa athletes earned a total of 351 major and minor letters and freshman numerals in 1928-29, a 27 per cent increase over 1927-28, and a new record.

Compilation of the awards, made at the department of athletics, shows that men won 83 major letters, 45 minor letters, and 223 freshman numerals.

The former all-time record was 276. Each year since 1924-25 the record has been cracked, successive figures being 194, 226, 265, and 276.

Issuance of 223 freshman numerals as compared to the 168 of last year is the chief reason for the large increase, the records reveal. The major "I" went to seven more men, and the minor letter to 15 more than 1927-28.

No athlete won three major letters but Mike Farroh narrowly missed taking a track letter, which would have been his third of the year. Seven men were issued major letters in two sports.

Seven Win Two Major Letters

Iowa's two sport major "I" men were: Mike Farroh, Michigan City, Ind., football and basketball; Forrest Twogood, Westfield, basketball and baseball; Willis Glassgow, Shenandoah, football and baseball; Virgil David, Oskaloosa, basketball and baseball; Irving Nelson, Omaha, Neb., football and basketball; Oran Pape, Dubuque, football and track; and Fred Roberts, Knoxville, football and track.

For the first time in recent years, an athlete won varsity awards in three sports. John Gilchrist, Keosauqua, placed in the National Collegiate meet, final affair of the season, to win the major "I" in track, and also was granted the minor letter in football and wrestling.

Oakley Carlsen, Clinton, football and baseball player, Seward Leeka, Independence, Mo., and George Rogge, Ida Grove, basketball and football, took the major and minor letter.

Three Frosh Triple Winners

The distinctive feat of winning three numerals was accomplished by a trio of freshman athletes. E. C. Handorf of Coin and A. W. Hannes, Council Bluffs, successfully combined football, basketball, and track, while O. E. Nelson, Clearfield, was a football, baseball, and track luminary.

Thirty-one freshmen were numeral winners in two sports, the best combinations being track and cross country, football and track, and football and basketball.

Here are the recipients of two numerals: W. J. Balzer, Davenport; R. Hildreth, Valparaiso, Ind.; R. C. Jongwaard, Sioux Center; B. A. Mitchell, J. Wyatt, and H. R. Eschleman, Sterling, Ill.; D. D. Brown, Iowa City; J. Schwartz, Chicago; J. A. Hratz, Muscatine; C. J. Blickham, Quincy, Ill.; R. J. Dlwoky, Council Bluffs; R. F. Hickman, Charlton; O. M. Sansen, Alta; J. E. Miller, Quincy, Ill.; J. S. Figg, Muscatine; L. G. Case, Grinnell; G. F. Deim, Swea City; F. S. Hausman, Oak Park, Ill.; H. E. Hantleman, Dubuque; C. M. King, Grinnell; S. W. Skowbo, Emmetsburg; H. G. Miller, Valparaiso, Ind.; J. M. Boyer, Des Moines; L. H. Tennant, Seymour; H. W. Wickey, Pomeroy; D. P. Parrish, Webster City; E. G. Trott, Iowa City; E. I. Nagle, Clarion; P. Righter, Ames; J. O. Hart, Los Angeles, Cal., and H. E. Mallory, Chicago, Ill.

Seligson, National College Net King, Defaults by Error

HAVERFORD, Pa., June 28 (AP)—Julius Seligson of Lehigh university, lost an opportunity to defend his singles title in the intercollegiate tennis championships when he was defaulted today by Referee Charles N. Beard for failing to appear for his semi-final match with Berkeley Bell of the University of Texas.

Bell will clash with Gregory Mangin of Georgetown, who gained his final round bracket by scoring a sensational straight set victory over Edward Jacobs, of Pittsburgh, 11-9, 6-4, 6-4, in a semi-final match today.

Shortly after the Mangin-Bell match got under way it began to rain, and the match was halted when the score was four all. Convinced, apparently, that the rain would not cease for several hours, precluding any possibility for play, Seligson disappeared.

The Mangin-Jacobs match was resumed at 4:15 and concluded half an hour later. The officials waited until 5 o'clock and then Referee Beard announced his decision.

Seligson returned to the club house shortly after 7 o'clock.

"The way it was raining I didn't think there would be any chance of playing," he said. "I do not intend to make an appeal, although I believe I have been dealt an injustice."

First round matches in the faculty golf tournament were completed yesterday when Prof. Harry A. Greene defeated Prof. Harry G. Plum, 3 and 1.

Campus Golf Fans Have Crack at Cup

Plans for a men's all university summer school golf tournament are nearing completion, according to assistant professional "Bob" Wilton. The tournament will be played on Finkbine field.

Qualifying scores must be turned in at the club house by Wednesday. At least one other 18 hole card must be turned in so as to determine handicaps for qualifying. Matches will be played with handicaps. The number of flights will depend on the number of entries.

A cup will be awarded to the winner and other prizes given to runners-up. All trophies are now on display at the field house.

Hawkeyes to Drill at Denver Camp

In order to acclimate themselves to the rarified air of the Rocky mountains, the four Iowa athletes entered in the National A.A.U. track and field championship, will be allowed two days of practice at Denver, preceding the meet July 3 and 4.

The performance in the national championships will mark the initial competition of Iowa track aspirants in Colorado, and one of the few sallies westward made by Old Gold emissaries.

Although the runners may feel the effect of the higher altitude, Iowa coaches feel that field event men will not be greatly hampered by the change. It is reasonable to predict at least normal performances of Edward Gordon, Henry Canby, John Gilchrist and L. D. Weldon, Old Gold hopes in the meet.

Gordon, Negro Olympic jumper is priming to renew hostilities with Bill Portmess, now competing for the Illinois A. C. Gordon gave Portmess his first beating of the year in the broad jump, at the Drake relays last May. Both men have leaped nearly 25 feet.

Canby will find plenty of stiff competition in the pole vault with such men as Sabin Carr, holder of the world's record, and Ward Edmonds, sharer of the N.C.A.A. title, entered.

Little is known about the brand of competition which Gilchrist and Weldon will face in the junior hammer and javelin throw events.
