Germany's Good Will Tour

THE GRAF ZEPPELIN, the huge German dirigible, has started its around the world flight. The flight might well be termed a good will flight on the part of Germany. The purpose of the flight, however, is for the advancement and promotion of aviation. Germany, restricted from making battleships, has turned her efforts to something more uplifting and beneficial. She has produced the Graf Zeppelin, the greatest air machine ever known. It has made its second successful flight across the Atlantic and is now on its way around the world.

This trip for the Graf is a good will tour for Germany, because everywhere the ship with its German commander and crew have gone they have been received with sincere receptions that completely overshadow the old feeling of suspicion and hostility that the world at large has fostered since the war. At Lakehurst, N. J., where the ship made its landing in the United States, American soldiers and mechanics worked beside the German crew, getting the ship moored and into shape for the return trip. It was housed in the hangar alongside Zeppelins and airplanes of the United States Army.

No doubt on its trip around the world the Graf will be received in the same manner. There is no doubt that Germany is working hard to regain the high esteem held for her people that she enjoyed before the war.

Our Discontented Criminals

WITH the four recent outbreaks in prisons throughout the country as evidence, it seems that the crime problem of the United States has shifted from the question of how to stop depredations on the part of America's criminal element to a question of how to keep them contented after they have been subdued.

President Hoover intends to ask the next session of congress for an appropriation of $500,000 to make it more comfortable in the prisons of our country for the unprincipled inmates. It seems that the prisons of our country do not furnish adequate accommodations for the happiness and welfare of that unruly mob of lawbreakers who have sifted into our country from different nations where the standard of living is far below that of the United States. They have come to America expecting to find a land of plenty, contentedness and happiness. For with few exceptions the leaders in crime in this country are foreigners, and the largest per cent of the inmates of our prisons are of foreign birth.

The racketeers, henchmen, gunmen and killers, who promote the organized crime of the large cities of our country are all foreigners. A few days ago seven men were arrested in Chicago for manufacturing bombs. Each of them was born in Italy and three of them are not American citizens. This is a typical case and it goes to prove that our immigration laws, instead of being too drastic as some declare, are not strict enough and are not enforced strictly enough.

There is no use in locking the door after the horse has been stolen, as the old saying goes; it is too late to bar these criminals admittance into the country, but it is not too late to stop their kind from coming in expecting to find the promised land of peace and comfort even though they are in jail. Neither is it too late to deport a few of these foreigners who have caused us nothing but trouble ever since they have arrived here. Most of our prisons as they are now furnish better homes for these foreigners than they had in their native countries.

If they come to America expecting to find comfort and happiness, let them stay out of the prisons and give the taxpayer a chance to furnish himself with a bit more comfort instead of having to buy overstuffed furniture and feather beds for prisoners.

Veiled Puritanism

NOW THAT several fortunate limelight seekers have made the pajamas-for-street-wear idea famous, it is interesting to note a decided step in the other direction. The step was taken by none other than Stanford University authorities in decreeing that no male student of that institution might appear outdoors shirtless.

So far, so good. But it was not against street wear that the move was directed. Seemingly some naughty men have been playing tennis with their arms bare. Such shocking immodesty was deemed out of place on the Stanford campus.

But aren't college men, like all others, entitled to the traditional rights of liberty, equality, and fraternities? If they may not play tennis with exposed arms, what about their sisters, the co-eds, who flaunt their "sensible summer dress" before the public in undress parade? And what of a proper balance among bodily limbs? Should we grant the female leg a greater freedom from soaking up sunshine than the male arm?

In basketball, track, swimming, and other sports, men appear garbed in even less than they wear for tennis and there is no howl. Yet Stanford Controller A. E. Roth, who probably grew up in the gay nineties era when even chair "limbs" were modestly covered, seems to object.

Helen Wills sensibly set the short hose fashion for tennis playing women. Why could not Tilden, or some other net luminary with more than a flashy service "up his sleeve" set the pace for a shirt-burdened male tennis world?

Another Use for Airplanes

HERE is a statement of deep interest: "Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has applied his technical knowledge of aerial photographic surveying to an international problem. Before the Bolivia-Paraguay commission of inquiry and conciliation he discussed the feasibility of mapping and surveying from the air the 200,000 square miles of undeveloped country in the Chaco Boreal, which is the subject of the historic controversy between the two nations."

When the conference met in Washington in December, 1928, it was immediately confronted with the threatened outbreak of hostilities between Bolivia and Paraguay. As a result of telegrams from the League of Nations and the Pan-American conference, hostilities were averted. Both governments agreed to sign a protocol drawn up at the conference referring the boundary incident which had caused the dispute to a commission of nine members.

Colonel Lindbergh in his plane, the Spirit of St. Louis, made his goodwill flight in December, 1927, and January, 1928. He was greeted everywhere as a messenger of goodwill and his purpose was spoken of as "a gesture of sincere friendliness that has never been surpassed," either in its method or in its results.

Surely he is one and possibly the only one, who might offer such a suggestion as that quoted above, and not be suspected of having an ulterior motive for the act.

Work of Merit

IOWA CITY has reason to be proud of at least one of its local organizations. Through efforts which were for several months unheralded and practically unknown, members of the Pilgrim chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution have placed the name of Iowa City before the eyes of the world, and especially the United States.

Honoring the president of our country in a fitting manner, a boulder, itself a product of the state in which President Hoover was born, was placed in front of the humble cottage in which the executive was born 55 years ago yesterday.

The ceremonies yesterday were especially impressive because of the presence of the orphan boys band from Father Flanagan's boys' home in Omaha. These boys made the pilgrimage to the birthplace of the first president born west of the Mississippi river especially to honor the first orphaned boy to become president of his country. In the words of their worthy teacher and benefactor, Father Flanagan:

"The story of Herbert Hoover's life has a profound message for America. It beckons to America that it must not be inattentive to its unfortunate young. It is a forceful reminder that tucked away in an orphan mind may be the genius to guide the destinies of a great nation, that hidden in an orphan heart may be the surging humanitarian to feed and nourish a war-racked and desolate world."

Due praise was given the Pilgrim chapter by Prof. Benjamin F. Shambaugh, superintendent of the state historical society of Iowa, in a few words spoken at a dinner given previous to the public program.

Professor Shambaugh pointed to the appropriate size of the marker, its selection, and the inscription which the society caused to be placed on the bronze plate.

The Daily Iowan wishes to congratulate the Pilgrim chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution upon the achievement. Newspapers throughout America will carry stories today telling about the ceremonies attending the dedication of the marker. Associated Press wires have already told the story to the world of how a group of loyal citizens, far from the site where the executive they admire was spending his fifty-fifth birthday, had gathered to mark in a small way the spot where he had been born in extremely different circumstances so long ago.

Next week other citizens of the nation will see in movie news reels the story in pictures of how the first home of the orphaned boy was marked 55 years after he had received his first breath of air in the country of which he was destined to become president.

Iowa City should be proud of such an organization as the Pilgrim chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Many and varied have been the rules for achievement, but it would not seem extremely difficult for wideawake youth to follow that handed out by Christian Gauss, dean of Princeton, who says: "My recipe for success is to do things better than other people do them."—Christian Science Monitor.

WASHINGTON BYSTANDER

Farm Board Rolls Up Sleeves, Gets to Work Doing Business Right at Start

By KIRKE SIMPSON
WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—What ever else may be said about that group of $100,000-caliber government executives whom Mr. Hoover thinks of as "new patriots," there is evidence of a will to work.

Take the farm board, for example. It was doing business and getting almost before the ink was dry on the commission of Alexander Legge, chairman.

It also was announcing, via Legge, that there was not going to be any direct government buying and storing farm surplus, which may have surprised some folks. But the fact that any organization under Legge's control got busy right away should have surprised nobody who followed his career with the International Harvester company. "Get busy" seems to have been his first, last and middle name since he took his first job collecting bad debts for the Harvester folks.

Legge, as the Bystander has said before, is about the most publicly shy man Washington has known in a long time. He may get over it of course, but those who have known him long think not.

In any event, Mr. Hoover's group of high powered, low paid government workers still is to be tested under direct political fire. That is an inescapable aspect of the American form of government. And "the chief," which is the way Hoover is known to most of his draftees to public service, is not supposed to be a political wiseacre himself. At least, he wasn't before nomination noses were counted at Kansas City a year ago.

Maybe that little affair proved the contrary.

ICE CREAM MEN STRIKE
CHICAGO, Aug. 10 (AP)—The strike of workers in 35 of the city's ice cream plants today threatened Chicago's ice cream supply over the week-end. The workmen offered to arbitrate the wage difference upon the condition that the employers would recognize their union.

Anyone familiar with the Washington political hotbed, which includes a varied assortment of politics, naturally examines the Hoover administration personnel set-up for political experience.

Henry Stimson, of course, is a former cabinet member and Jim Good, in the war department, a veteran of practical politics. Outside of that the upper crust of the Hoover ensemble can hardly be said to represent a mobilization of known political genius. That may prove to be important as time goes on.

Adjustment Advantageous

The first act of the farm relief special session was fairly well gamed up with inter and intra party politics one way and another. The farm board probably is to be congratulated that the tariff framing recess came along just in time to let it launch its initial steps to fit things up for the farmer without the running accompaniment of congressional remarks which otherwise might have played a verbal obligation to its doings.

Legge, as the Bystander has said before, is about the most publicly shy man Washington has known in a long time. He may get over it of course, but those who have known him long think not.

J. H. Cousins Selects Theme of Convocation

"The university and the future" is the subject of the address to be given by Prof. James H. Cousins at the August convocation. In developing this topic, Professor Cousins hopes to point out some speculations as to the adaptation of education to the growing demand of youth for liberation.

Professor Cousins has held several honored positions in universities of India and Japan. He is now on leave from his duties as principal of the Brahmavidya Ashrama or school of international culture of Madras.

He is a member of the academic council of the University of Madras and is a post-graduate lecturer in Benares Hindu university, and the Universities of Calcutta, Madras, and Mysore.

While in Japan he was awarded the doctor of literature degree from Keio university at Tokyo.

He has been a graduate student at the University of Dublin. At one time he was head of the practical geography department of the high school in Dublin. In the summer session of the Royal college at Dublin, Professor Cousins was a demonstrator in practical geography.

Cotton Strike May Have Early Close; 500,000 Out of Jobs

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Aug. 10 (AP)—Hopes revived tonight for early settlement of the dispute in the Lancashire cotton trade which for a fortnight has left more than 500,000 workers idle.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald flew here today from his vacation place at Looe in Cornwall and held conference with leaders of both sides.

Although no official announcement shed any light on what was accomplished, it was understood in well-informed circles that the prime minister had induced both sides to accept the principle of arbitration and that the way was paved for a joint meeting in Manchester early next week, possibly on Wednesday. The belief was expressed in some optimistic quarters that the mills would be working again by the end of next week.

Three Former Cornell Players to Meet Again in "Minick"

By MARY J. AINSWORTH

Through the almsness of fate, three men who played colorful roles at various times in the dramatic productions of the Cornell players of Cornell university at Ithaca, N. Y., have come together again at the University of Iowa this summer.

These three players, Joseph Kelly, G. of Grinnell, A. Dale Riley, G. of Chester, Va., and George R. Pfaff, G. of Emporia, Kan., will tread the boards together as a comedy trio of old men in the next university play, "Minick." This play by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, will be produced Wednesday, Aug. 14 at 8:15 in the natural science auditorium.

Mr. Kelly plays the title role of old man Minick, who goes from a small town to live with his son and daughter-in-law in their New York apartment. He has an interesting background of experience to back him in this character. He was an active theater worker for four years at Grinnell college, playing among other characters that of an old man in "Pomander Walk." For four summers he has played here, giving old man characterizations in two of the plays, "Only 88" and "You and I." In his graduate work in Cornell university he was again active in dramatics. He has taught speech at Franklin college, Ind.; Dartmouth college at Hanover, N. H., and at Miami university, Oxford, O.

Writer of Stories

Mr. Riley's dramatic experience has been varied. For 10 years he was in the Philippine islands writing short stories for Asia, Outlook, and other magazines and papers, and writing and coaching plays. At Cornell he took various major roles. During summer sessions here he has played parts, including Craig in "Craig's Wife" and Cliff Mettinger in "Daisy Mayme." Mr. Riley was teaching for several years at Chester, Va., where he is instituting a new dramatic and speech program. In "Minick," he takes the character of old man Minick.

Others Have Experience

The other members of the "Minick" cast also show playing experience. Agnes Lewison, A. of Canton, S. D., is exhibiting a successful attack on the part of Nettie Minick, the modern daughter-in-law. Miss Lewison has played at St. Olaf college and at the University of Iowa. Here she played in "The Amazons" and interpreted Celia in "As You Like It."

Cecil H. Nickle, G. of Des Moines, is handling the part of the married son, Fred Minick. Mr. Nickle is now instructor in the public schools in Des Moines. He has played two seasons with Gifford players on the Acme chautauqua circuit, in "It Pays to Advertise" and "Across the street." His experience also includes three seasons with the Des Moines little theater where he played major roles.

Laubentfels Has Part

Richard de Laubentfels, A. of Burlington, is doing Al Diamond, sport, in "Minick." His playing includes Shakespearean parts in Yanktown college in South Dakota, and various roles in plays at the University of Iowa.

Monroe Lippman, G. of Hibbing, Minn., has been busy with the part of Jim Corey in the coming play. He has played at the University of Michigan in various productions. At the University of Iowa he has done work in major plays throughout the year, including "The Queen's Husband," "The Dark Hours," "As You Like It," and "Daisy Mayme."

Mary Johnstone, A. of Shannon City, does a comedy interpretation in her part of Lula, the colored maid, in "Minick." Miss Johnstone has taught speech in Burt and also has been active in directing home talent productions there.

Evelyn Bowman Evelyn Bowman, A. of Marshalltown, is playing Lili Corey, a flirty friend of Nettie's. Miss Bowman has done parts in plays, including "Dulcy" and "The Importance of Being Earnest," during her work at the junior college at Marshalltown.

Isabel Wolfe, A. of Ainsworth, has worked with the players at Monmouth college, doing major roles. In "Minick" she is taking the part of the maid, Annie.

Meier Art Judgment Tests Show Child's Talent in Selection

Prof. Norman C. Meier of the department of psychology is continuing the work of compiling results of the Meier-Seashore art judgment tests given in Kansas City, Minneapolis, Detroit, and Cleveland to about 2,500 children.

The tests are planned to aid in the disclosure of promising art talent and enable a teacher to determine whether or not a child has talent. In the past a great deal of wasted time has been spent on pupils who have no talent.

The purpose of the survey of these four mid-western cities has been to obtain the standardization of scores and the standard median. It has required the efforts of Professor Meier and Dean Carl E. Seashore of the graduate college for seven years to assemble this material.

One hundred and twenty-five pairs of drawings, copied from the works of old masters, contemporary artists, and Japanese prints are contained in the textbook published this year. One picture of each pair is similar to the original, while the other differs in some of the fine points or is entirely reconstructed.

Pupils are to choose which picture in their estimation is the better, the one selected determining the judgment for the finer elements of the picture. This is the basic and requisite quality for which the test is searching. Harmony, balance, rhythm, and its variations, stability, symmetry, proportion, and unity, are the requisites of good art which the pupil must correctly perceive.

Palimpsest Reflects Fair in Transition in August Number

The progress of Iowa as reflected in the growth of its state fair is the general theme of the August issue of the Palimpsest. Beginning with a description of the first simple stock show at Fairfield in 1854, Earle D. Ross follows its development to the twentieth century.

The agricultural fair, he says, modeled somewhat on the English cattle show, grew into a peculiarly American product with a combination of exhibit, instruction, and amusement. Today, in keeping with the modern business age, fairs have permanent homes, with ample space and elaborate specialized equipment.

Change from old stock shows has become so great, he says, that complaint has been prevalent that state fairs, especially in the east, cater to city crowds and fail to perform their true function, that of representing and furthering the interests of agriculture.

Forty-seven pages are devoted to this subject. "Signs of the times," "Origin of the state fair," "The first Iowa state fair," "The pioneer period," and "The fair in transition" are divisions of the theme treated separately.

Historical pictures illustrate the subject matter.

Dorothy English Will Give Illustrated Talk

Dorothy English, university Latin instructor, will deliver an illustrated lecture, "Hadrian's wall," Wednesday at 4:10 p.m. in room 116 of the liberal arts building.

Miss English comes from London, where she has taught in the public schools. She has taught two summer sessions in the local university, first coming here in 1928. At the end of this term of summer school she will return to London.

Rev. Leshner Dies After Long Illness

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 10 (AP)—The Rev. Edward Leshner, 64 years old, for the last 16 years superintendent of the Minnesota Congregational church conference, died today after an extended illness. He was prominent in Congregational circles throughout the United States.

He was born at La Porte City, Ia., where his father was a frontier missionary. He served pastorates in Sioux Falls, S. D., St. Paul, and several other Minnesota towns.

Elinor Smith Out to Display "Parachuting"

ROOSEVELT FIELD, Aug. 10 (AP)—In a six-passenger cabin monoplane, equipped with all the latest safety devices and christened "Happy Landings," 18-year-old Elinor Smith will start off tomorrow on a five weeks' barnstorming trip, whose primary purpose will be to make the air-minded public also "parachute minded."

Miss Smith will not do the jump herself, but an unnamed member of the famous "Caterpillar club" will give exhibition leaps at 50 airports between New York and the Pacific coast while she pilots the ship.

The tour is sponsored by Col. Louis J. Campbell of New York. Miss Smith will fly the ship from Wilmington, Del., early tomorrow morning, and the trip will start in the afternoon. She will head up into New England and then start west via Albany and Buffalo.

Cedar Rapids Council Discusses Municipal Ownership of Airport

CEDAR RAPIDS, Aug. 10 (Special to The Daily Iowan)—The city council has started the ball rolling to promote a municipal airport in Cedar Rapids. The council met at a special session Friday night and discussed the advisability of municipal ownership of the airport.

Suggestions were made by members of the council that the civic organizations of Cedar Rapids circulate petitions for a special election on the project. A meeting of all civic organizations in the city is being called at 7:30 p.m. Monday, to discuss the subject and to make further plans.

White Will Represent University at August Carnegie Celebration

Frank G. White of San Francisco has been selected to represent the University of Iowa at a celebration of research activities of the Carnegie Institution at Washington. Mr. White, who received a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering from the university in 1899, is chief engineer of the board of state harbor commissioners at San Francisco.

The celebration will take place on board the non-magnetic ship, "Carnegie," in San Francisco harbor at 2:30 p. m. Aug. 26. It has particular importance with relation to results of work accomplished by the institution in the fields of terrestrial magnetism, atmospheric electricity, and oceanography.

Fierce Storm Takes Toll in Chile; Train Snowbound in Audes

SANTIAGO, Chile, Aug. 10 (AP)—A terrific storm that raged all last night did damage almost the full length of the Chilean coast and in the mountains of the east took the form of a blizzard.

A tug boat was sunk and its captain drowned, and several freighters and launches were lost at Magellanes in the extreme south.

Two British cruisers escaped by putting out to sea. The breakwaters at Antofagasta were destroyed and damage was done at Valparaiso, Miramar, and Talcahuano.

All train service and air service between Chile and Argentina was suspended. Passengers on one trans-Andean train were snowbound in a tunnel. They were believed to be well provisioned, but efforts were being made to open the road to them.

Court Arraigns Show Magnate

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 10 (AP)—Alexander Pantages, 52 years old, multi-millionaire vaudeville theater magnate, today was arraigned and released under $25,000 bond for preliminary hearing next Wednesday on two assault charges filed by District Attorney Byron Pitts on complaints of Eunice Pringle, 16-year-old dancer.

The girl, daughter of a Los Angeles physician, Dr. Lewis Pringle, alleged Pantages attacked her yesterday in his office, where she had gone in an effort to reinstate her dancing act on his vaudeville circuit. Dr. Hanna Beatty of the juvenile bureau, told Pitts an examination of the girl had substantiated the charges.

Two complaints, one charging a statutory offense and the other an attack upon a young girl by force and violence, were filed against Pantages.

The arraignment followed in municipal court, and Pantages, who had been in jail over night, deposited bail saying he was in a hurry to go down town for food as he "couldn't go the jail grub."

Pantages was taken into custody at 6 p.m. yesterday by a traffic policeman who rushed into the theater after hearing a girl scream. The millionaire, Miss Pringle and six witnesses were taken to police headquarters. They had been in a hall adjoining Pantages' office when they heard screams. They said the office door was opened and Miss Pringle, with her clothes torn, fell fainting into the arms of one of them. They also declared Pantages followed the girl into the hall, and that his clothes were in disorder.

THE GREEN ARCHER

By Edgar Wallace

THE STORY SO FAR
Valerie Howett, adopted daughter of Senator Howett of Pennsylvania, is searching for her mother, Elaine Heid, who, as Valerie suspects, was hidden in Garre castle, the owner of which, Abe Bellamy, is a Chicago millionaire with a repellent past, who now resides in England. Bellamy's motive was vengeance on the woman for refusing to marry him. The Howetts lease Lady's manor, which adjoins the castle grounds. Bellamy identifies Valerie as an infant whom years before he delivered to Howett to rear when the latter was a poor farmer. Spike Holland, an American reporter working on a London newspaper, is investigating reports that a ghostly archer clad in green haunts the castle. Bellamy suspects Valerie of being the green archer. Featherstone, a Scotland Yard official, who is in love with Valerie, is helping her search for her mother. When next Bellamy enters the secret underground chamber where he has been keeping Valerie's mother he finds that his prisoner has disappeared. Bellamy and Coldharbour Smith, keeper of a law resort in London, find a note pinned to the wall. It is Valerie. She is carried off by a ruse and put on board the steamer Contessa, and is rescued. Julius Savini and his wife, Fay, accept positions at Garre castle. In the night they hear mysteriousappings from underground and a muffled explosion. Old Bellamy is working at some unexplained plot. Later Bellamy entices the Savinis into the dungeon and imprisons them.

CHAPTER LXXII

WHEN THE WATERS ROSE.
While Abe Bellamy was still in Sanctuary Keep, fingering the hot barrel of his rifle, five persons in the cellars below waited for death. Lacy, mute with fear, the Savinis crouched together, silent, resigned.
"Featherstone?"
Jim did not answer.
"If bank notes are soiled with water, are they any good?"
Lacy whimpered something. It was the only answer that Julius received. And then came a miracle. The waters began to recede faster than they had risen.
"What has happened?" gasped Julius.
"A respite," was the grim reply. "The trap to the lower dungeon has broken and the waters are rushing in there. As soon as the lower vault is filled the waters will rise again."
"Can't we get out?" whined Lacy.
"It's all very well for you—you're a copper and you're expected to take risks. It's your job to get us out—"
"Shut up!"
But the man was crazy with fear.
"You've got my money, Savini, you sneaking thief—took it from me when I was knocked out."
Jim heard a scuffle and a scream from Fay. There was the sound of a blow and a splash.
"Julius has gone!" screamed the girl. "He can't swim—no beast!"
There was a second splash and a roar from Lacy as he struck the water. Jim ran down the stairs. The waters were still receding and there was no danger from drowning. He stepped to the floor of the room and waded to the sound of the struggle.
Presently his outstretched hands found a head and he gripped it by the hair and jerked it backward.
"Up the stairs, you dog!" he hissed. Lacy turned and grappled him.
Valerie stood frozen with horror. The darkness was absolute; she could see nothing of that fight in the black void, but the shrieks of the half-madened Lacy were terrible to hear. She felt Fay push past her and go down.
"Julius!" Her agonized call echoed through the vaulted death room.
"I'm all right—where is the captain?"
"Here, toward the steps," she screamed, and, launching herself into space toward the pandemonium she fell on the bent back of Lacy. He had Jim by the throat and was forcing his head under water when Fay's arrival turned the tables.
"Get back to the stairs," gasped Jim.
His head had struck against the stone wall in the earlier stages of the struggle, and he felt the blood running down his cheek. Fay fell back as the men clinched, but by now Julius had groped his way to the combatants and by their united efforts the madman was overpowered.
"Bring him to the stairs, quick, the water is rising!" said Jim.
Lacy was still struggling, and the journey up the stairs was a nightmare.
"I'll keep him in front of me," said Jim, when they had reached the limit of height.
Jim heard voices above—two men were talking. "One was Bellamy's. He could not recognize the other. To shout for help would be a waste of breath.
"The water's up to my neck!" gasped Lacy, and began to struggle.
"I'll throw you from the steps if you don't keep quiet," said Jim, sternly, and as he spoke the man wrenched himself free and struck at him. The blow did not reach home. They heard him fall into the water.
"I can't swim—help!"

"Stay where you are, Featherstone." It was Fay's voice and it held a note of command. "It only means a few minutes more for him!"
But Jim had heard the voice almost by his side, and again he dragged the gunman to safety, a blubbering, weeping creature, more dead than alive.
And then Jim spoke, bending his head to the girl.
"Valeri," he said, "I was jealous of John Wood."
"I was afraid you were," she answered in an even tone. "He fascinates me. I like him. But it's not the kind of liking that I have for you."
As she dropped her head, her chin touched water and she closed her eyes. Silence reigned, save for the whimpering of Lacy. There was no hope now, save to throw themselves into the water and float until the end came when they could float no more.
He stretched on tiptoe to keep his mouth from the water and told her to do the same.
"What was that?" whispered Julius.
"They had heard a thud above them, as though a heavy article of furniture had dropped, and then on top of it came a noise like thunder that shivered the water and sent little ripples dancing about Jim's lips. It was an explosion, he knew, and it was close at hand. If the police could only get into the castle in time! It was a matter of minutes now, for the water was not rising at the same pace; the obstructions of the doorways called for greater pressure and greater volume.
Then, over his head, he heard a click, and there appeared in the water under his eyes the reflection of a line of light.
The trap was opening!
He put up his hand and pushed, but he had to press the other end of the stone through water.
"Savini—Valerie—push!" he gasped, and their hands went up and slowly the trap moved.
Somebody was above, pressing on the other end of the stone to lift it.
"Are you there?" asked a voice.
"Yes—can you pull at the end that's raised?"
A hand came over the edge of the stone—a brown, sinewy hand, and the trap rose until it was perpendicular.
Fay was the first to emerge. She lay, exhausted, upon the rug before the fireplace. Julius followed, and then Lacy thrust his way madly, striking out left and right in his terror.
Valerie caught the edge of the trap, and Julius drew her to safety. She looked back—Jim had disappeared, and she was staring into the black water.
"Where is he—Jim?" she said wildly. "That man threw him into the water!"
Julius dragged off his soddened coat and went down the steps. There was no room to swim—he must dive. Without hesitation the Eurasian plunged into the darkness. He could see the square of light from the open trap, and presently his hand touched the coat and he clutched it.
Striking out with all his strength, he dragged the unconscious Featherstone to the top of the submerged steps, and a few seconds later Jim was safe.
When he opened his eyes the first thing he saw was a Tommy, rifle in hand, his bayonet glistening. The soldier stood in the doorway, and he was staring at Abe Bellamy—spread-eagled on his back, his arms outstretched, and through his heart two arrows, so close together that they almost touched.
"Who did that?" asked the soldier.
Jim struggled to his feet and looked around the room. But the man who had opened the trap and who had slapped terror had vanished.
Senator Howett met them in the hall and drew the girl away from the still figure of the Chinaman that lay there so quiet.
Jim left the girl to the care of her father and staggered back to the room, faint and aching. Lacy's blow had caught him on the point, and he had momentarily been knocked out. The water was now welling up through the floor, and had already covered the passage from the dining room and was flowing into the hall. He sent a police officer to find the main supply and turn it off, and, with the assistance of Jackson, who was one of the first to enter the castle, lifted the body of Bellamy to the sofa and searched his pockets.
He was thus engaged when Spike Holland came into the room.
"Is he dead?" asked Spike.
Jim nodded.
"He is quite—I am nearly. Get an ambulance to shift that."
"That" was Lacy, who still lay moaning on the floor.
When Spike returned Jim was sitting on the sofa by the side of the dead man, head in hands. He looked up as Spike came in.
"Where are Savini and his wife?" he asked.
"I've sent 'em to my rooms. Savini was anxious to know whether I

Wheat Market Finishes With Upward Slant

Despite Bearish Aspects of Crop Reports Prices Rise
CHICAGO, Aug. 10 (AP)—Despite some bearish aspects both of the Canadian and United States government crop reports, wheat prices today closed with a distinct upward slant. Many violent fluctuations were witnessed, but in the end a majority of traders here appeared to be acting on belief that in view of immense crop losses confirmed, the export demand for North American wheat is bound to become urgent, and that stocks of wheat on this continent will thus be greatly depleted.
Chicago closing quotations on wheat were nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to 2 5/8c higher. Corn closed 3/8 to 1 1/8c net lower, oats 3/8c off to a shade up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7c. Somewhat better crop conditions, including a forecast of beneficial rains, did much to weaken corn, although early in the day the chief price making factor was a bullish construction placed on the government crop report as to corn. Bullish crop comments from the Canadian northwest had but little effect on oats.
Provisions went higher, early, but afterward sagged as a result of selling by scattered holders oflard.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Aug. 10 (AP)—Cash wheat trade was active. Elevator houses were the principal buyers. Trading basis steady to 1c better, latter on lower grades. Shipping sales 25,000 bushels, booked to arrive only 10,000 bushels. Seaboard reported export business in all positions small.
Trade in corn light. Trading basis unchanged. Eastern demand good, sales up to close totaled 125,000 bushels. Country offerings to arrive very light, no bookings reported. Cancellations 15,000 bushels.
Oats ruled weak. Trading basis 1-4 @ 1-2c easier. Local sales 67,000 bushels and cancellations 5,500 bushels. Booked to arrive 5,000 bushels.

Stock Prices Revive After Sudden Slump

Yesterday's Torrent of Selling Appears to Have Vanished
NEW YORK, Aug. 10 (AP)—Prices rebounded sharply in a dull two hour session on the stock market today. Yesterday's torrent of selling appeared completely to have spent out weak holdings, for the moment at least. Traders who had sold short, hastened to cover their commitments, and were forced to do so at rapidly rising prices.
Short coverings and some buying by bargain hunters, appeared to comprise the bulk of activity. Total sales aggregated but 1,478,450 shares, one of the smallest, Saturday turnovers of the year.
The rails made the most spirited recovery. The standard statistics co. Associated Press index of 20 leading carrier stocks indicated that about two-thirds of yesterday's losses were recovered. The index of 50 industrial regained about one-half its loss, but that of 20 utilities rallied less than two-sevenths.
Yesterday's flood of selling was generally regarded, on sober second thought, as a psychological rather than a logical reaction to the New York reserve banks 6 per cent discount rate. It was recalled that last May, when a higher rediscount was being momentarily expected, Wall street was coming to the belief that it would be a positively bullish development.

Cincinnati Reds Bunch Blows to Overcome Giants

NEW YORK, Aug. 10 (AP)—Bunching nine of their 15 hits into two scoring innings, the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Giants, 7 to 2, here today in the second game of the series. Red Lutes held the clan McGraw to five safeties.

Cubs Stage Late Inning Rally to Conquer Boston by 4-1 Score

Freddy Blake Gives Way to Pinch Hitter

Harry Seibold Holds Chicago Hitless for 5 Innings

BOSTON, Aug. 10 (AP)—After going hitless before Harry Seibold for five innings, the Cubs rallied in the later rounds to win by 4 to 1. Fred Blake gave way to a pinch batsman in the big eighth inning which saw three Cub runs come home, but retained official credit for the victory.

Glassgow in Wheat Fields This Summer

Master of the sudden pivot, exponent of the baffling change of pace, and executor of sure tackles on defense—such a player is Willis A. Glasgow, all-conference halfback who is captain of the University of Iowa's 1929 squad.

The Shenandoah man now is laboring in the wheat fields of Kansas, hardening himself for his third season on the gridiron.

As in the last two years, Glasgow will be the arrowhead of the sweeping Hawkeye attack. He makes a specialty of off tackle runs and forays around the ends, aided by a screen of interference. Once in the open, he can outrun or outdo most of his attackers.

Glasgow was leading ground-gainer from scrimmage in each of Iowa's last two campaigns. He was credited officially with 546 yards in 145 trials in 1928, which was an increase of 115 yards over his 1927 total. He stepped off 377 of those yards in the five Western conference games.

The captain is one of the six two-letter men who will play on the squad. He has completed his third

Year of baseball, winning the "I" each year at shortstop. Next February, Glasgow will be awarded the bachelor of arts degree.

Here are his personal statistics: age, 22; playing weight, 165 pounds; height, 5 feet, 9 inches; born, Wheeling, Mo., April 21, 1907.

SOME VERSATILE STARS

This specializing age tends to discourage versatility even in sports, but while there numbers grow fewer, the all-round athlete is nowhere near becoming an extinct genus. Individual enthusiasm and talent, encouraged by strong public admiration, will always make versatility a popular attraction.

Of all the versatile stars that ever shed radiance throughout the world of sports, Jim Thorpe was the brightest of all. He was a marvel of all events, and he just missed stardom in big league baseball, though he started at the late age of 28! This Carlisle Indian could do so many athletic things superlatively well that he is unanimously recognized as the paragon of all-time, all-round athletes.

For several years, Thorpe's activities have been diminishing until now, in his middle forties, he is but a bulky shell of his former self, although, occasionally, he still flashes on the pro gridiron or minor league diamonds.

With Thorpe but an immortal memory, turn for a moment to some current specimens of versatility as drolly sketched by cartoonist Hardin Burnley.

Baseball has its Jimmy Dykes, of the Athletics, who can play any position expertly save, perhaps, battery jobs. He is the most versatile player in the big leagues.

Boxing has its Pete Latzo, exwelter champion of the world, who is now a light heavy contender. Pete's baseball was not quite good enough for the International league, but he

Grove Falters as Athletics Trim Detroit

Simmons' 2nd Homer Cinches Game for Philadelphia

DETROIT, Aug. 10 (AP)—Two home runs by Al Simmons, his twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth of the season, enabled the Athletics to nose out the Tigers, 6 to 5, here today in the first game of the Mackmen's final western invasion. Bob Grove, for the third time in a week, failed to clutch his elusive eighteenth victory. He surrendered the mound to Bill Shores just before Simmons' second homer won the game for the Athletics in the seventh.

Boston, White Sox Play Laughable Tilt; Chicago Bows, 10-7

CHICAGO, Aug. 10 (AP)—Boston beat the White Sox, 10 to 7, in a laughable game here today. It was a free hitting affair in which both teams contributed to the jocosity of the event. Ed Walsh, Jr., and Jack Russell were knocked out in the melee. The Red Sox made 13 hits off Walsh, Welland and Adkins. Ed Morris finished for Boston and checked the Sox.

Year Shows Extensive Paving Program in 56 Iowa Counties

739 Miles of Paving Added Since January

Two Paved Highways Planned Across State in 1930

AMES, Aug. 10 (AP)—The extensive paving program in progress in Iowa this year is indicated by a compilation of the highways now under construction or for which contracts have been let. In 56 counties, well over half of the 99 in the state, 739 miles of hard surfacing is being added to the 1,624.5 miles of paving Iowa had last Jan. 1.

Thirty-one of these miles were contracted for this week when the highway commission let contracts for paving in Hamilton, Guthrie, and Marion counties, while an additional 27.438 miles will be contracted for at the semi-monthly road contract letting Aug. 20.

Some of this paving, no doubt, will remain unfinished when contractors store their construction machinery for the winter on Nov. 1, but work next spring will go on where it leaves off this fall. In addition, the commission is to continue the letting of contracts hoping to push Iowa's road building program without a halt.

Kansas City to Minneapolis
With the approximately 750 miles of paving that will be laid this year and a like amount to be completed next year, the fall of 1930 should see Iowa with at least two highways paved the entire length of the state. Only short gaps now remain to be contracted for before the Lincoln highway (U. S. No. 30) and the Jefferson highway (U. S. 65) will be completely hard-surfaced.

The Lincoln runs east and west across the state from Council Bluffs to Clinton while the Jefferson extends the width of the state from the Missouri state line to the Minnesota state line, being the highway that carries tourist traffic from Kansas City to Minneapolis across Iowa.

On top of that, contracts awarded or paving under construction indicates the early completion of other cross-state roads. There are, for instance, U. S. 32 which already is paved well over half the way from Des Moines to Davenport and on which two short stretches of paving are under construction between Council Bluffs and Des Moines.

Emmetsburg to Chicago
There also is U. S. 34, from Burlington to Council Bluffs, which is paved or under construction all the way from Burlington to Osceola and is paved or under construction about half the distance west of Osceola to Council Bluffs.

Iowa primary road No. 3 also has an appreciable amount of paving over its east-west length, while U. S. 20 in the northern part of the state is paved nearly half its length, the bulk of the hard surfacing being in the eastern section.

U. S. 18, still farther north, is paved from Emmetsburg to Charles City and graveled the rest of the way. It gives Emmetsburg a completely paved road to Chicago, over U. S. 18, U. S. 218, and U. S. 20.

In the western part of the state, the highway from Council Bluffs to Sioux City is either all paved or under construction, while the hard surfacing continues south of Council Bluffs to the Missouri state line.

More Contracts Open
The four paving contracts the commission has called for bids upon Aug. 20 are in Black Hawk, Bremer, Mahaska, and Page counties. They are:

Black Hawk: 4.143 miles of U. S. 218 between Cedar Falls and Waterloo.
Bremer county: 3.712 miles of primary No. 10 from Waverly west.
Mahaska county: 7.913 miles of primary No. 59 from New Sharon south.

In addition, the commission will let on Aug. 20, grading contracts in Clayton, Dickinson, Jones, Hardin, Osceola, and Jackson counties, all with a view to later paving work. It has scheduled graveling contracts for award in Dallas and Johnson counties and bridge and culvert contracts for Carroll, Clayton, Delaware, Jones, Marion, Mills, and Page counties.

Betty Nuthall Falls Before Wills' Serves

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 10 (AP)—Helen Wills clinched the Wightman cup for America today, but it took one of the hardest-won triumphs of her career to turn back the challenge of her youthful English rival, Betty Nuthall, and regain the emblem of women's tennis supremacy for this country.

For nearly an hour, while a gallery of more than 8,000 spectators sat thrilled in the big West Side club's stadium, the queen of the world's courts was played to a standstill by the bounding, impetuous rush of the 18-year-old English girl. Expecting a one-sided victory, the crowd was startled instead by one of the most dramatic battles of Miss Wills' career as well as one of the biggest upsets of the tennis season.

Queen Helen won, finally, by scores of 8-6, 8-6, applying the winning touch in identical fashion in each set, but for 56 minutes of slashing action the American was given the hardest battle she has had in three years.

Hunting and fishing licenses in Johnson county now total 838. The total of auto licenses issued for the year 1929 have reached the number of 9,042.

4-H Clubs on Aug. 14 Give Variety Show

Program, Exhibits Will Attract Township, County Folk

At the 4-H club show at the pavilion Aug. 14 and 15, a diversified program will be the attraction. The exhibits from all over the county will also be a feature.

The show opens Wednesday but the day will be given over to preparing the displays and the arrangements of booths, while the concluding day, Saturday, will be devoted to clearing the grounds.

Clubs from the entire county will assist with the program by presenting demonstrations, a style show, musical and dramatic sketches.

Awards of money and ribbons will be presented for prize stock. Some special awards are available from companies who are indirectly associated with the work of the clubs.

The Chicago live stock exchange is giving a trophy cup for prize baby beef. The Chicago Producers Commission company will award two medals. The gold medal will go to the best all-around baby beef club member while the silver medal will be presented to the best all-around pig club member.

The township clubs which have an active part on the program are: Jefferson Jolly Juniors, Washington Happy Girls, Oxford Worth White, Sharon Hustlers, East Lucas Golden Riders, Scott, Selon Four Leaf, Newport Wide Awake, Jefferson and Monroe Home Makers, West Lucas Golden Thread.

Premont, Lone Tree, Blue Bird of Hardin and Clear Creek, and Big Grove and Cedar clubs.

August Month for Coal Bids

City Also Soon to Let Paving Contracts

Opening of bids and letting of contracts for paving of streets and alleys, and letting the coal contract for the city hall are the important items of business to come before the city council tomorrow night.

The bids for both the paving and the coal will be opened Monday afternoon at 2 p.m., and the contracts let at the regular council meeting at 8 p.m.

The paving program includes Duquette street from Burlington to College street; Clinton from Benton street to Lafayette street; and Lexington avenue from River to Park street; Governor street from Kimball road to Dodge street; and Kimball road from Whiting avenue south.

The alleys to be paved are in blocks 30 and 69 in old town addition.

The paving will start Aug. 15, and according to contract will be ready for use before Oct. 1. The coal contract will be let for 1,000 tons of coal more or less, to be delivered in two batches, Sept. 1, and Jan. 1.

Husband Must Pay Wife, Two Children Monthly for Support

Judge R. G. Popham yesterday conducted a hearing for Emory S. Simon, who pleaded guilty to desertion of his wife and two children. Simon was arrested Friday in Waterloo.

The judge ordered him to pay $28 per month for the support of his wife, Edna Simon, and their two children, Ray and Earl. He was released on bond of $1,000, but in case of failure to comply with the order he will be placed in jail.

Graphic Outlines of History

The First Brick House in America

The home of William Penn, built around the year 1685, was the first house to be constructed of brick in America. This house was entirely characteristic of Penn himself. Every detail of it was meticulously planned, as was the whole town of Pennsylvania that he laid out.

It is reassuring to know that capable hands will relieve you of all responsibility when the time comes. Our service is most complete and within the means of all.

THE ROADS

Motorists driving to Chicago over No. 6 and U. S. No. 30, Lincoln highway, should turn north at Geneva, Ill., two miles on route No. 22, to St. Charles. Here follow the new 40 foot highway, a straight road, just opened to the junction of No. 5 and U. S. No. 20, just west of Melrose Park. From here follow No. 5 and U. S. No. 20 and Washington boulevard into the loop, Chicago.

Booklets Describe Currier, Eastlawn

Sixteen page booklets similar to those issued for the quadrangle have been published about Currier hall and Eastlawn. These bulletins, which will be sent to prospective students who request information about rooming conditions, have been made attractive through use of paper in shades of blue.

The pamphlets, which are largely pictorial, contain exterior views of both homes, as well as interior views of typical study rooms, dining rooms, and living rooms.

A written explanation sets forth the advantages, facilities, and customs of residence in either dormitory. Government of the halls is explained as well as social privileges.

Miniature Houses, Unhealthy Vs. Healthy, Teach Hygiene

By LAURINE MUSSER

The wondrous house that Jack built would grow pale with envy if by chance it should meet its 1929 rivals, the Healthy and the Unhealthy homes that the visiting nurse, Marcella McInerney, made for the better homes exhibit last winter and which are now being displayed at the Henry county fair at Mt. Pleasant.

Healthy home is constructed of fine stucco oatmeal for its walls. Its roof is tiled in halved oranges topped by a splendid chimney, a pint of milk. The interior decorating has been along the line of good food too, for the draperies at the windows are of long green string beans. The window frames themselves are outlined in raisins.

One approaches the house along a path made of rice on either side of which grows a luxuriant urn of spinach planted in red apples.

Bright orange carrot window boxes adorn the front of the house. These are filled with such nourishing products as cauliflower, rhubarb, onions, celery, and parsley.

A graham cracker door opens into the living room whose motto may well be, "eat greens and keep in your teens," or "eat 14 carrot soup and be worth your weight in gold."

A near neighbor of this modern home, which is rapidly taking its place in most cities, is the bad example of the Unhealthy house.

A shellacked exterior with windows bordered in hot dogs is depressing.

The chimney is a crooked tower of greasy doughnuts and leans slightly over the shingled roof of pancakes, the edges of which are curled from the sun and weather.

No inviting yard welcomes the children of this house for the ground is covered with coffee grounds, and the walk to the peanut brittle door is but a rough path of fried potatoes. An old lippy fence of licorice sticks is too weak to keep the dogs out.

There are ornamental trees at the side of the door but these are only sticky lollypops which, plus the garbage can at the corner of the house, attracts many a fly.

Only a few stringy jelly beans flap dejectedly at the windows, posing as curtains.

These miniature houses were prepared especially by Miss McInerney to show the contrast in good and bad diet for children.

After being displayed at Mt. Pleasant from Aug. 12 to 15, they will be taken to the state fair at Des Moines on Aug. 16 as a part of the extension division's share in the University of Iowa exhibit.

SUMMERALL SPEAKS

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Aug. 10 (AP)—General Charles P. Summerall, army chief of staff, in a speech before the annual chautauqua assembly today said that no cultural development of nations could be attained without security from external aggression.

Tire Blowout Kills Rock Island Driver Injures Six Others

WELLINGTON, Kan., Aug. 10 (AP)—Clare Sykes, about 30 years old, of Rock Island, Ill., was killed and six other persons injured near here today in a motor car accident resulting from a tire blowout.

When the tire collapsed the automobile driven by Sykes turned completely around, striking another automobile and then crashing into a concrete culvert.

Mrs. Sykes and two children, a boy and girl, were taken to a hospital, seriously hurt.

N. B. Welty, F. H. Shies and W. C. Smoot, all of Bartlesville, Okla., were occupants of the second car. They were treated for cuts and bruises.

Eastern Stars Have Greenwood Funeral Service at Laurens

An Eastern Star funeral service will be held for Mrs. Maude Greenwood this afternoon at 2:30 at Laurens. She died yesterday at 4:10 p.m. at a local hospital.

The body was taken to the home of Sen. F. C. Gilchrist, Laurens, last night. She is survived by her husband, Mr. E. S. Greenwood.

All local arrangements were taken care of by the Beckman funeral home.

Pirates Split Double Bill With Robins

BROOKLYN, Aug. 10 (AP)—Brooklyn divided a double header with the pirates here today, winning the second game 6 to 3, after the visitors had won the first, 6 to 4. The even break cost the Pirates a game in the losing column and enabled the Cubs, who won, to stretch their margin to seven contests.

First game: R. H. E. Pittsburgh 000 003 201—6 11 0 Brooklyn 001 002 007—4 9 1 Batteries: Petty, Hill, and Henline; Clark, Morrison, A. Moore, and Henline.

Second game: R. H. E. Pittsburgh 000 210 000—3 10 1 Brooklyn 200 310 006—6 11 1 Batteries: Meine, French, and Hargreaves; Vance and Deberry.

Lions Club Holds Swimming Party

Members of the Lions club engaged in a splash party at the Big Dipper swimming pool Friday evening.

The main prizes of the evening were awarded to the Lion who had the largest brood of cubs at the party and in the water. Ed. O'Connor and Carl Strub, having tied, were each awarded a prize.
